Odd Bits Salvaged By The Editor

We experienced a bit of irony Sunday night as we watched the Emmy awards being made in Hollywood, New York and Washington by means of our T. V. set.

The irony was that a bunch of the Emmy winners must not have been good enough for us, for we were not acquainted with them. A raft of the nominees, too, were the shows that prompted us to flick the button when they came on.

In fact, we were not acquainted with the CBS courtroom drama, "The Defenders," which was the top winner with five awards. It kinda sends us hunting for another program.

The two that were somewhat acquainted with were Shirley Booth's second time winning bossy maid, "Hazel," as the best series actress, and Don Knott's bumbling deputy Barney Fife in "The Andy Griffith Show," best actor in a supporting role.

Another one that was foreign to our thinking and viewing was the one that was named program of the year. It was "The Tunnel," NBC's controversial documentary showing East Berliners digging their way to freedom beneath the Berlin wall.

So it would appear that it was well they didn't select us to choose the winners. We have a sort of lop-sided viewpoint on T. V. shows, anyway. We'd rather hear the clatter of horses' hooves in a western than the voice of a most talented opera star singing in Italian or some other foreign language. We enjoy most quiz shows, and can do without a lot of the corny ones. When the Beverly Hillbillies come on, we usually get the admonition to turn to Perry Como, which is probably the better show.

Noticed, too, that President Kennedy also received an Emmy during the presentation. We're all for that! He must have needed an award of some kind to bolster his ego following the decisive defeat of his wheat program on Tuesday of last week!

Local farmers really got after their wheat during the week end. County Agent Joe Doby reported Monday that combines ran far into the night both Saturday and Sunday nights, and offered the prediction that the major portion of our wheat crop would be in the elevators within the week. But alas and alack! Rain clouds dampened the atmosphere Monday night and brought another temporary halt to the harvest.

It's very seldom that we get through a wheat harvest without rains, so farmers can just look for a period of anxiety during this period of the year.

Two local golfers are the envy of some and the objects of jeers and jibes from other members of the Munday golfers. These two, Goodson Sellers and Joe Morrow, have acquired contraptions for motoring them over the golf course, while others still have to depend on their lower extremities for ambulation.

Goodson's job is a motor scooter which he has lovingly named the Blue Goose. Joe has a low-slung, four wheeled contraption that we hesitate to describe or name. Anyway, he almost sits flat on the ground to scoot along. If you get what we mean, and he's careful not to run over any prickly pears!

The Blue Goose, it seems, got skittish as a young colt last Sunday and gave Sellers a tumble. Reports are that Goodson was going over a bunker, gave the machine more gas when he thought he was cutting the fuel off. The scooter went one way and Sellers another.

The jibes he's receiving from the hot-footers indicate that they believe he should discard the Blue Goose and go back to the tried and true way of traversing the fairways.

Anyway, with their riding apparatuses, these boys manage to get in at least a third more holes in an afternoon than the others!

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Burnison visited their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Anderson, Linda, Deborah and Judy, in Clovis, N. M., from Saturday until Tuesday.

JUST FOR A DAY

By Bunny V. Norvill
 If it was left up to me to say, I'd say, "Stop the world for a day."
 Stop every clock, train, truck and car,
 And let everyone see what and where they are.
 Let them see just how fast they had begun to move
 And travel along in the groove.
 Stop the world just twenty-four hours,
 And flood it with self-seeing showers.
 For one whole day, let things stand still,
 And let there be not time to kill.
 Let them see what it is like when the future is gone,
 When time itself will cease to move on.
 Perhaps, in this one day, they would learn,
 That for them, there is plenty of time to burn.
 This is just supposing, though.
 This isn't the way it will go.
 Time will continue to move on
 Until every living soul is dead and gone
 And I am not one who should make the plans
 For the world and all in it, are still in God's hands.

"Best kind of
Johnson Grass
is brown
Johnson Grass."

ORTHO has a low-cost chemical that does Johnson Grass up brown. And makes your oil spray a lot more effective.

There's nothing better than seeing Johnson Grass turn brown and die. And nothing worse than seeing it still on the rampage, after you've knocked yourself out trying to kill it.

Best way out of that bind is to add ORTHO C-56 Johnson Grass Control to your oil spray. You'll see these weeds "curdling like buttermilk" before you've even finished the field. Because C-56 has a special chemical that soaks away the tough waxy hide of Johnson Grass. So your kerosene and fuel oil can get into the plants and kill 'em from the inside, roots and all.

And C-56 is a powerful weed-killer in its own right. It's so effective, in fact, that you can use just one gallon for every 99 gallons of oil. So effective it can put down Johnson Grass in any stage of growth. Even when it's blooming. Even when stems are toughened by drought. Yet it won't sterilize your soil (when used as recommended).

C-56 works best, though, when the young shoots are 4 to 6 inches high. That's when they're most vulnerable. And that's why it's a good idea to talk to your ORTHO Dealer early in the growing season. He'll show you the ORTHO gravity-fed sprayers. (Spot sprayers that make weed-killing like shootin' fish in a barrel.) Best of all, he'll show you how a small investment in C-56 can result in a whole lot of perfect Johnson Grass. All of it brown, shrivelled and dead.

Even with a 15-25% infestation of Johnson Grass, the cost of 4 weekly sprout and 3 late seedling applications of C-56 plus oil is only about $11.00 an acre

WEATHER-RESISTANT INSECTICIDE:

New Bidrin® Insecticide penetrates cotton leaves, kills insects from the inside out.

Control lasts 7 to 21 days—rain or shine.

Bidrin® Insecticide is a remarkable new cotton insecticide with systemic action. It kills chewing insects like weevils on contact, then swiftly enters the plants and makes them deadly to sucking insects.

Inside the leaves, Bidrin is shielded from rain and sun. Result: each application will consistently give you 7 to 21 days' control of lygus bugs, spider mites, thrips, fleahoppers and aphids.

Now, with powerful new Bidrin, you can control a wide range of early and mid-season cotton insects without worrying about weather. Reason: Bidrin not only gives you the contact action of ordinary insecticides but systemic action as well.

Systemic action means Bidrin gets inside your cotton plants, where it can't be washed off by rain or broken down by sun.

Once Bidrin is inside your plants, you practically eliminate weather as a cause for re-treatment. Your cotton stays protected, even though wet ground keeps you from applying ordinary insecticides. You keep down costs and insure a fast, vigorous start for seedlings and faster growth and early protection of squares.

Insects controlled

New Bidrin® Insecticide controls thrips, fleahoppers, lygus bugs, spider mites and aphids with both contact and systemic actions. Because Bidrin is an organic phosphate insecticide, it controls resistant as well as non-resistant cotton insects.

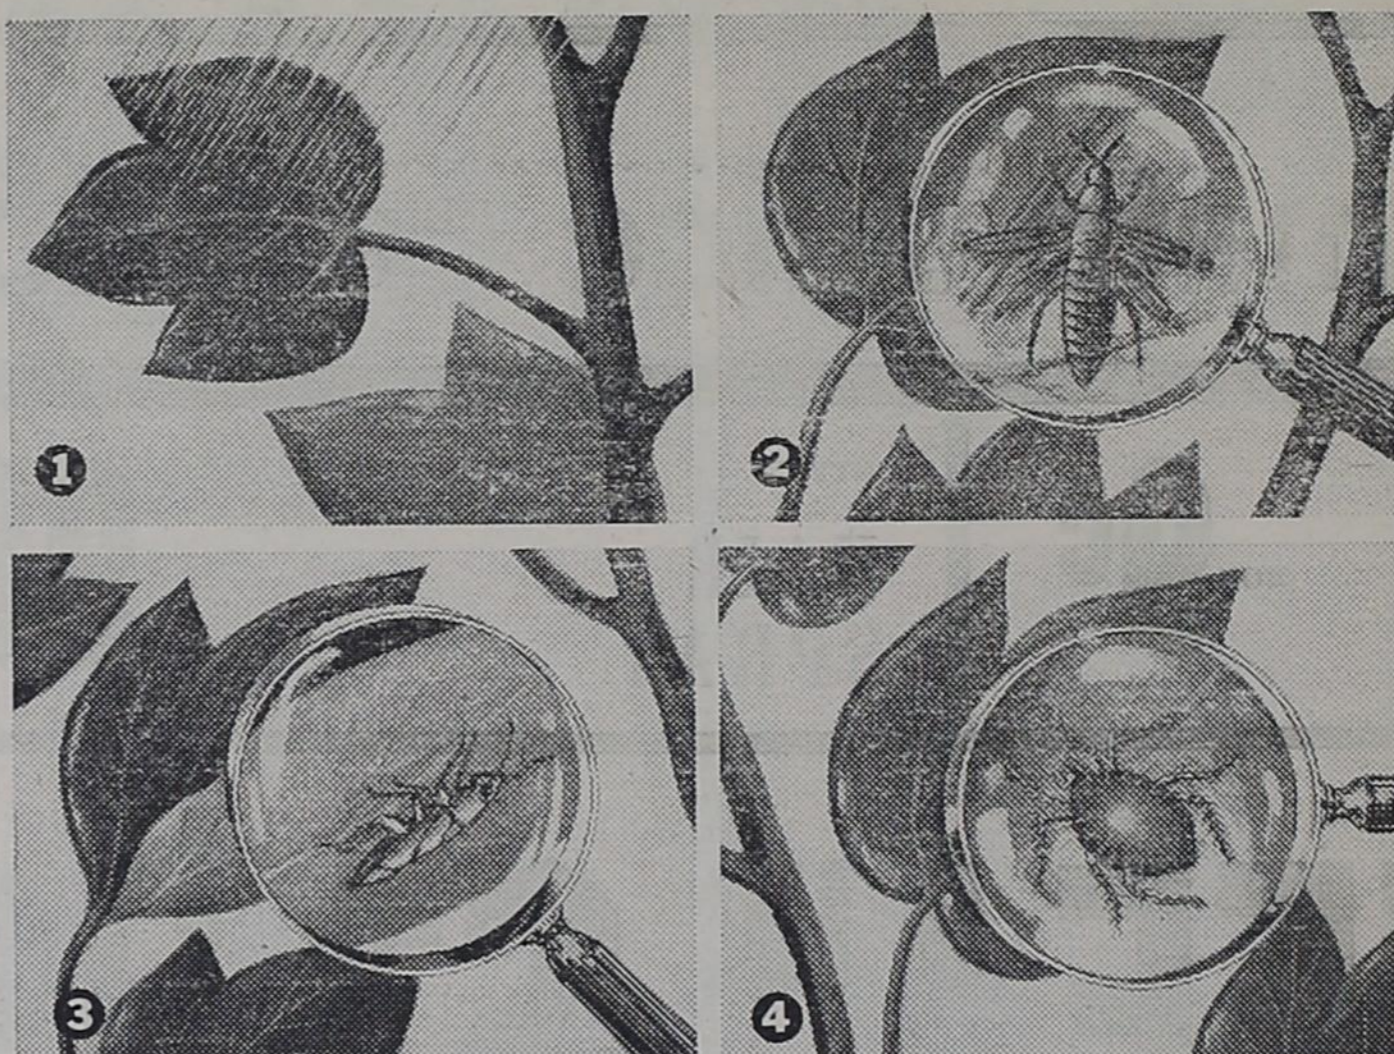

Bidrin also kills boll weevils on contact at time of application.

How Bidrin works

When you apply Bidrin, it goes to work

How the contact and systemic actions of Bidrin work. When Bidrin is sprayed on cotton foliage (picture 1) it kills boll weevils, lygus bugs, cotton fleahoppers, thrips (picture 2), mites, aphids and other sucking insects on contact. A few hours after application, most of the Bidrin has entered and spread through leaf tissue. Picture 3 shows the result. A plant bug is attacking the underside of a leaf. This insect will be killed even though the Bidrin spray hit only the top side of the leaf. Enough Bidrin remains in the leaf to control spider mites for 3 weeks (picture 4).

immediately, killing weevils as well as sucking insects on contact for a full 24 hours. Cleanup is thorough.

But 24 hours after application, more than half of the Bidrin you applied has entered the plant and is at work inside the foliage, protecting against further attacks by insects and mites.

Bidrin's systemic action stays effective for 7 to 21 days, rain or shine. Then you make additional sprays only if necessary.

How Bidrin lets you tailor your program

Bidrin gives you the protection of systemic insecticides in early control programs. But, unlike systemic insecticides which you must apply at seedling, Bidrin lets you buy only the amount of protection you need each year.

With Bidrin, you don't have to invest in insect control until your cotton is up. It gives you systemic control when and as you need it.

Also, you can use your regular sprayer for early insect control when you use Bidrin. Bidrin is compatible with most other insecticides and herbicides.

NOTE: if you are on an automatic program, apply Bidrin at 7-day intervals.

Where to get Bidrin

Bidrin is available from your local pesticide supplier under many well-known brand names. Check the label or the ingredient statement for the trademark "Bidrin."

Write for more information: Shell Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemicals Division, 119 South Claiborne Ave., New Orleans 12, Louisiana.

Knox Prairie Philosopher Looks Around A Bit and Finds That Small Towns, Like Farmers, Not Disappearing

Editor's note: The Knox Prairie Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Miller Creek comes out in defense of small towns in his letter this week.

Dear editor:
I have heard so much lately about the fear city people have that the farmer will disappear that it was a pleasure to read in a national magazine last night which a salesman earlier in the day wanted me to subscribe to but which I declined on the grounds that some magazines may disappear sooner than us farmers, that the city folks are now worrying over whether the small towns can survive.

As I understood it, the thinkers in the cities have decided that since towns depend on agriculture to survive, and since according to their figures agriculture is going under, the towns will follow.

In fact, some people are so worried about small towns that it wouldn't surprise me to learn somebody in Washington may come out before long with a sort of soil bank idea for town buildings. Leave every third building vacant and put it in the Vacant Building Bank.

Well, I'll tell you, I'm not worried about towns or farmers either. Now it's true that the percentage of farmers has declined, from 50 per cent of the total population 40 years ago to only 8 per cent today, but that's just a bunch of figures.

Take the automobile industry. The number of car makers has dwindled over 500 per cent in the last 40 years. There used to be 25 or 30 car makers, now there are only four or five. Us farmers with 8 per cent of the total population are giants compared with the car makers with about one-millionth of 1 per cent, and I'm surprised there aren't more people in Washington wringing their hands over this situation.

Car makers are like farmers, just a few of us giants are surviving, but the results of our work spread far afield. For example, producing and processing (you want to underscore processing) agricultural products is now an 82-billion-dollar-a-year industry, the largest in the nation.

Reading Club To Interest Youngsters

Area youngsters (primary, elementary, junior high and teenagers) are invited to participate in the "world's largest reading club," sponsored by City-County Library and Texas State Library. Membership is free, Mrs. Don Combs, librarian, announced.

A bright two-color certificate will be issued by State Library to each member who completes 12 books on his reading level prior to the August 31 deadline.

Mrs. Combs said all youngsters in Munday and the surrounding area served by the City-County Library, are urged to register for the event. "Reading is fun, just as the Library Week slogan points out—'Read, the fifth freedom—enjoy it!'", the librarian remarked.
