DOMESTIC SUGAR INDUSTRY FACES SERIOUS CRISIS

Philippine Product Made With Cheap Labor and Duty Free Called Menace.

Chicago.—Rising flood of Philippine sugar entering the United States duty free has confronted the domestic sugar industry with the gravest economic crisis in years, according to W. L. Petrikin, president of the Great Western Sugar company of Denver.

"In view of the resolution introduced by Congressman Timberlake of Colorado to protect the domestic industry against the increasing invasion of Philippine sugar by permitting not more than 500,000 tons annually to enter free," said Mr. Petrikin, "Philippine Commissioners Gabaldon and Gonzalez have attempted to convince congress that the domestic industry is not menaced by unlimited imports of duty-free sugar from the islands."

"The statement of the commissioners that from 1923 to 1926 the annual average export of sugar was 390,000 tons is entirely misleading. They neglected to state that between 1925 and 1926 Philippine exports to the United States increased 90 per cent and that between 1918 and 1927 exports have jumped from 90,537 tons to 473,974 tons, a gain of more than 400 per cent."

"A 200,000-ton limit on Philippine sugar imposed by congress in 1900 was discontinued in 1912. Between 1900 and 1927 sugar imports from the islands had increased more than 1,100 per cent as compared with an average increase of 115 per cent from our other chief sources of supply, including Cuba, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Louisiana, and the domestic sugar beet industry."

"Over-expansion in tropical countries has confronted the domestic industry with the gravest crisis in years. Domestic sugar companies have recently found it difficult to make ends meet. Continuation of unlimited duty-free imports of Philippine sugar would be not legally deemed as an integral part of the United States, may ultimately wipe out an income to our continental farmers of $100,000,000 annually and a large investment in factories."

U. S. SHOWS WAY IN NEW FIELD OF EDUCATION

Home Study Method of Training Adult Workers Gains Universal Acceptance.

Washington, D. C.—America leads the world in adult education with more than 200 international home study schools within its borders and tens of thousands of students scattered in every civilized country of the globe.

The idea of education by correspondence, which originated in the United States thirty-five years ago, has gained such universal acceptance that today the enrollment in this country alone in home study schools is equal to three times the combined rosters of the nation's colleges and universities.

Men and women students taking home study courses in business, the arts, sciences, trades and professions now number more than 2,000,000. It is shown in a survey made public by Dr. John S. Noffalger, secretary of the National Home Study Council, 820 Seventeenth St., Washington, D. C., while the number of college and university students total only 954,000.

The home study movement, with its more than 200 correspondence schools, is one of the nation's major industries today, not only from the standpoint of numbers but from the tuition fees received. Home study courses are one of the big factors in the spread of knowledge of the English tongue. One correspondence school alone has on its books students from 65 countries, including 3,841 students in the Philippines, 500 in Alaska, 150 on the Isle of Cyprus, 1,200 in Mexico and Central America, 200 in China and Japan, and 600 in Australia and New Zealand.

The home study movement is slow but sure, and is a new era of education.

"Sweetest Job" in United States Held by Mary Virginia Bromberg

Washington, D. C.—Miss Mary Virginia Bromberg has the sweetest job in America. She has been made secretary of the newly formed Domestic Sugar Producers Association with headquarters here, which represents a combined yearly output of 2,500,000 tons of cane and beet sugar. She is the only woman executive in the organization which is composed of the U. S. Beet Sugar Association, American Sugar Cane League of Louisiana, Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association, and Association of Sugar Producers of Porto Rico. This country is producing about 1,000,000 tons of beet sugar annually which returns American farmers $55,000,000 for their best crop.

The National Home Study Council, composed of the leading correspondence schools has installed a new ideal into home study education by the adoption of a rigid code of business ethics. By bringing education into the home, it is making it possible for the man without a few years of schooling to advance in his work by study after work hours with the expectation that he will get his marks on his pay envelope. It is a new era of education.

FOOD PRODUCT ADDS TO FARMER REVENUE

New York.—Margarine is a food product of peculiar interest not only to the country's housewives but to 5,000,000 producers of live stock in the nation.

To the home manager it represents an economical way of shifting down the food bill. From the live-stock raiser's viewpoint, increased consumption of margarine means additional revenue, since certain fats of beef cattle and hogs are worth more when used in the manufacture of margarine than for any other purpose.

The production in the United States of 242,654,038 pounds of uncolored and 11,501,925 pounds of colored margarine for the year ending July 30, 1927, meant millions of dollars more revenue to farmers than if no margarine had been produced. Margarine is primarily an animal product in the making of which oils made from the choice fats of beef and pork are used. These are combined with small quantities of the highest grade of refined peanut, cottonseed and coconut oils and blended with milk salt and some "lean" butter to produce the finished product.

In the countries of Europe, margarine is much more of a recognized food than in America. The average Dane eats 17½ pounds of margarine annually; the Norwegian 3½, the Swede 15.23, the German 12¼, and the English 11¼ pounds. Per capita consumption in the United States is only 2 pounds yearly.

WHAT'S NEW

Scientists have found that in order to distinguish an object the eye must remain in a stationary position about a seventh of a second.

Dr. Damant of Munich, Germany, has invented an apparatus which will offset the worst attacks of "seasickness" after one to three inhalations.

Two Indiana inventors have patented a heating burner that is claimed to burn raw oil without smoke or odor and without requiring pressure.

A Frenchman has invented a device that makes a phonograph record repeat descriptions of articles displayed in a show window when persons stop to look at them.

New Triumph of the Egg

Here's another triumph of the egg—a culinary triumph.

It's called "hard-boiled" eggs and is guaranteed to melt the hardest masculine heart, when served with its proper accompaniment, a delicious white sauce.

The white sauce is easily prepared by the home manager and here do most of the grocerwork at the "Gold Standard" dish proper. In making the white sauce you melt two tablespoonfuls of butter or margarine in a saucepan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and cook until the mass bubbles. Combine with this one cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper, and cook for a minute or two until the starchy taste has disappeared. Care is required to prevent the sauce from being lumpy.

One and a half cupfuls of this sauce is sufficient for Goldenrod eggs for five persons. The eggs are prepared in this fashion: Chop the whites of five hard-boiled eggs coarsely and mix with white sauce. When very hot pour over five pieces of hot toast. Press the egg yolks through a sieve and sprinkle thickly over the creamed toast.

Prepare himself could do no better.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1927-28 by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1927, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 18

A question that is always difficult to decide arises when the opponents have made a bid that you feel sure you can defeat and yet you have such great help for your partner's bid that you feel sure you can go game at his bid. Shall you double and play for the penalty or shall you help your partner's bid and try for game?

The correct solution of this question is very difficult at times, but as a rule is governed by definite facts. When you are sure of game, don't double unless sure of at least 200 points. When you are sure of a rubber game, don't double unless sure of at least 300 points. These values may vary at times but as a rule they are the proper rules to consider when you have a chance to double your opponents or go game. The following hand is a good example:

Hearts—8, 6, 5, 3, 2
Clubs—J
Diamonds—K, Q, 7
Spades—J, 8, 7, 3

Z

Answer to Problem No. 19

Hearts—10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 4
Clubs—none
Diamonds—7, 5, 4, 3
Spades—K, J, 8, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2

Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt, bid one heart. A bid three spades, Y four clubs and B four diamonds. Z now bid five clubs, A five diamonds, Y six clubs and B six diamonds. Z doubled and all passed. Z opened the king of hearts which B trumped in A's hand with the trey of diamonds, Y playing the five of hearts. B now led the deuce of spades from A's hand, trumping in his own hand with the six of diamonds. On this trick, Y played the seven and Z the ace of spades. What deductions should B make from the bidding and the cards played on the first two tricks and then how should he plan the play so as to make six odd?

This is a very interesting problem, because it can be solved if the deductions made by B after trick 2 are those which are the most likely to be correct. Let us take them one by one.

1. A and B hold eleven diamonds. Y and Z hold two between them. As Z doubled "Six Diamonds," it is likely that he holds both, viz., the king and deuce, and that Y is void in the suit.

2. Z played the ace of spades on the first round of the suit, although a trump had already been played by B. It is therefore a singleton, and Y holds four spades.

3. Z bid "One Heart." He, therefore, is likely to hold five. He would have re-empted if he had bid six. B has six hearts and A none. Y therefore has two.

4. Z's hand must therefore contain one spade, five hearts, two diamonds

The old woman's house was not only conspicuous in location but in appearance. The thatches of this island were rectangular, sharp roofed, sided with woven tat, narrow doored. But this hut was oval and open—vaguely the architecture of central Polynesia.

The girl stooped to enter, then drew back in one of those sudden apprehensions that still beset her. Who knew where Ponape Burke would strike? This house seemed safe; might indeed be safer than the mission. But yet—

She peered in; saw only three old women. No one could be in hiding, none approach without being seen. Z

Palmyra entered, advanced toward the central post, glanced interestedly around.

Suddenly, something dropped past her eyes, and the three old women hurled themselves at her.

So unexpected the attack from such as these, in an open shed such as this, at almost the settlement's busiest and most public spot, that the girl was caught unready. And before she could move a muscle, cry out, her throat was compressed

—a terrible, choking pressure. She fought for breath. Then, her arms pinioned, came relief and a fierce warning: "No 'peakey'!" At the moment of the onfall her guide, still behind her, had dropped round her throat a fibre loop, a brutal tourniquet with which she could, instantly, be strangled into silence—or death.

The women, fearing Van might soon arrive, prepared to take their prisoner immediately away.

At first Palmyra thought this impossible. But now she made a discovery. Thought the thatch was so notoriously to the forefront as to seem above suspicion, the high wall of the police compound ended directly opposite, the trader's a three-foot lops. This path, she recollected being told, ran back for half a mile, a mere passageway between the wall and the mangrove swamp upon which she had looked down from her mission window. And the mouth of that hidden path was no more than twenty feet distant.

Until an arm had been given the people would be unostentatious. The French trader across the way had locked up his place and gone out to breakfast. The native passersby were coming in detached groups. Palmyra's captors need wait only until no one was near. Then, closing round her, they could whisk her across, screening her with one or two of the ever-present umbrellas, raised either against a shower or the equatorial sun.

But almost at the moment of the sortie there came an interruption. One of the old women, stooping down to glance out, discovered the girl's father and mother and Constance Crawford approaching—already close. Panic ensued. If her captors had not been dangerous before, they certainly were now.

The prisoner would have screamed. Unconsciously, she extended her lungs to take in the necessary air. But, on the second, that fibre cord cut deep into her flesh. Gasping, she was thrust under the mosquito net; thrown flat, head on bamboo pillow. Two of the hags followed her into the netting, sat pressed against her on either side. These snatched off her hat and veil, threw over her a covering. Meanwhile the crone who had lured her here had taken a machete and seated herself on the patch of grass before the house.

Within the house, Palmyra's two guardians had begun a low-voiced singing. She perceived herself as a sick woman. These two kindly old souls sat inside the net to comfort her, while, before the hut, a third waited ready to answer solicitous inquiry. And any commotion of struggle which might catch the transient eye would be taken for a round of that massage which is the native's cure-all.

Her captors had taken impish advantage of that trait in human nature which causes man never really to look at a thing in plain sight.

She was intensely alert. At the slightest opportunity she meant to scream, to fight. Since her escape from Burke she herself had carried a small automatic pistol. At the first chance she'd use it.

Now, however, she saw Van Buren Butzer approaching, and sank back again. The others had not known Van did know. But just as the trio had strolled away and the newcomer almost reached the house, here, unexpectedly was the man Martin. He ran up to Van. Excitedly he spoke.

"Say, mister—Your lady Van drew back stiffly. "Miss Tree is in this house, he said. Martin was vehement. No, that she wasn't! Outw natives had her. Hurrying her away, Van stared incredulous, yet alarmed.

"I got it straight," cried Martin. "There's twenty of 'em or more—all with guns. And they're running her for the Pueliko Rocks."

The stranger now took the initiative. "I'll warn the Japs," he said. "You run for the mission. Remember—the Pueliko Rocks."

But at this moment here came John Thurston. He was

A real fighting Irishman has come to America. William Thomas Cosgrave, President of the Irish Free State. Diffident, keen light blue eyes, soft voice, iron will and a lion's courage. That is a picture of the Irish President, for whom fear does not exist, not even the only fear admitted by his relatives, the Celtic chiefs of Gaul, who admitted that they feared one thing, that the sky might fall on them.

If you asked, "Can NOTHING be more powerful than SOMETHING?" you would get no serious answer. But how do you explain this fact, announced by German science and proved by convincing experiment? A hollow magnet is more powerful than a solid magnet.

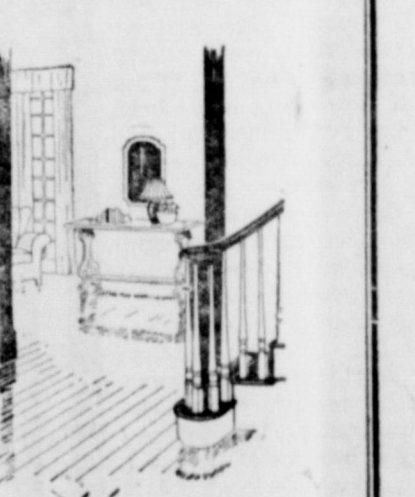

The absence of magnetized metal inside the magnet increases its magnetic strength. A magnet containing four hollow lamellae has as much lifting power as one containing nine solid lamellae.

Everything is possible in chemistry and physics, now that atomic construction and the horrible power and speed of the tiny electrons have been added to human knowledge. But that hollow magnet news is a thing to puzzle science.

Van now came sauntering up and Palmyra indicated this place.

"Come on," she invited. "My old lady is taking me for look-see for ve'y fine Pingey-something mat."

Several drops of rain fell.

Van agreed. "But there's a squall coming," he said. "I'll run back first for umbrellas."

As he turned away she hesitated, unexpectedly afraid at being left alone.

But as she moved forward a Japanese policeman, saluting benignly, reassured her. And she saw every step brought her nearer those two representatives of the civil and the moral law, which lay at anchor beyond the wharf, the Okayama and that Iju Ran which is the latest, perhaps the last, of the Morning Stars in which the American missionaries have carried the Word.

Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Fritz entertained the Thursday Club, and the club husbands on Thursday evening of last week.

The home was attractive with cut flowers and a delicious buffet luncheon was served. Madeline Fritz assisted in the entertainment with piano selections.

Those present were Messrs. and Mmes. Fred Broach, T. G. Bengue, C. R. Elliott, Fred Warren, Leland Hannah, G. R. Filand, H. V. Standley, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Smith, Mrs. R. E. Alexander and Miss Grace Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Davy Are Honored.

Members of the Diversity Club entertained on Thursday evening of last week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Loveless, honoring Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Davy, who were to depart the latter part of last week for their new home at Terrell, Texas.

Four tables were arranged for "84" and despite the fact that the winners were supposed to progress there was one group that did not progress throughout the entire evening—starting in at the foot table and remaining there—by reason of the fact that they failed to win a game. Those who established this non-progressive record were Mesdames W. H. Chapman and W. P. Farrington and Messrs. E. Duval and F. O. Campbell. (Now, we may be assassinated for telling this, but we want to keep the record straight.)

After a number of games were enjoyed delicious refreshments consisting of sherbert and cake were served to the following members and guests: Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Atkeison, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Borden,

B. Y. P. U. SOCIAL

On last Friday night the Senior B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church was entertained at the home of Miss Ozella Brock. The members were divided into groups, each representing a neighboring town. Contests between the towns filled the evening with much merriment. "Goree" won over the other towns by two points and Mr. W. F. Henderson, mayor of Goree, was presented a wonderful "climbing monkey" as a grand prize.

Delicious refreshments were served to the following members and guests: Nina and Lucille Collins, Maxie and Rita Dingus, Lorene Parker, Christine Burton, Eurus, Cordie and Clarice Morgan, Grace Hutchens, Dessie Hammack, Virginia Curry, Maggie Keel, Evelyn Curry, Fay Edwards, Lois Bowden, Oneita Blanton, Ilene Bowden, Ozella Brock, Lois Langford, Leona Keel, Gladys Hutchens, Inez Counts; Messrs. Marvin Warren, Leonard May, H. D. Warren, Earl Clayburn, Welton Parker, Chandler Hughes, Ray Washington, Walter Counts, George Hammock and W. F. Henderson; guests were Bob Notestine, John Hager and Bond Bradford of Rute, Lee Williams, Clyde Morton, Ruby Manuel and Elton Busby

When brewing tea, put a lump of sugar in the teapot. Then if the tea is spilled on table, it won't stain the cloth.

Eggless, Milkless, Butterless Cake

Boil one cup brown sugar with 1 1/4 cups water, 1 cup seeded raisins, 2 ounces sliced citron, 1-3 cup lard, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon and 1 teaspoon nutmeg about 3 minutes.

Cool, and 2 cups flour and 1/2 cup baking powder and 1/2 cup milk. Bake in a greased loaf pan in moderate oven about 45 minutes. Cover with white frosting.

How to Boil Cracked Eggs

You can cook cracked eggs without losing any of their whites if you add a teaspoon of salt to the water in which you boil them.

Enameled Pans

Enameled pans can be cleaned by scouring with crushed eggshells and soapy water.

Keeps Vegetables Green When Cooking

A lump of sugar added when boiling green vegetables helps them to retain their color and is just as effective as the use of soda.

To Keep Fruit

In keeping fruit, let it be spread out in a light, airy place, no two pieces touching. If piled together, or if stored in a dark, dark place, it will decompose quickly.

To Clean Grimy Furniture

Dirt and spots that have become firmly fixed on polished or painted furniture yield easily when rubbed with a cloth wrung out of warm (not hot) water and soaped well with yellow naphtha soap. Dry quickly, rub with soft flannel—and see how clean and new the furniture looks.

Removes Scorch Stains

In most cases scorched spots will disappear from the cloth if the spot is rubbed with fresh bread crumbs.

Takes Ink Stains from Hands

When the fountain pen leaks—don't worry. Rub the stained fingers with a sulphur match, then wash with soap and the stains will disappear.

To Brighten and Protect Rugs

To bring out the color of rugs and carpets, brush them up with a mixture of a cup of vinegar to a gallon of water. For general sweeping, dry salt scattered on the carpet also helps to preserve colors and to check the ravages of moths.

To Remove Mud Stains

When fabric has been splashed with mud, allow the spots to dry thoroughly, then brush off as much mud as possible. Cover with a mixture of salt and flour and keep in a warm dry place for a day or so. Shake and brush carefully.

"Spring Trips North Again This Year--"

Spring is generally regarded as a time of repairing and re-stocking. Spring housecleaning is the housewife's inventory of her household needs—and there are always roofs to be repaired and fences to be fixed.

Perhaps that's the reason spring has come to be regarded as the biggest merchandising season of the year. The merchants recognize it as such, and their stocks are never better or more complete than in the spring.

Right now here in Munday the store windows are reflecting the new merchandise for spring. And by simply passing through the front door into our business houses, you can see that the windows are only a reflection of the complete stock.

A visit to our stores will convince you that Munday merchants have stocked everything for your needs.

Plan to spend a day just visiting the stores here in Munday and looking over the new spring merchandise. It will be worth your while.

Vacation

Vacation time! What a varied assortment of mental pictures those words suggest. Perhaps as many and as varied as the widely divergent taste of humanity. The picture ranges all the way from gay sailboats, dancing over shining waves and tossing up sparkling sprays to quiet, cozy nooks in the heart of a forest. To others there appears the restful hammock under the apple tree while a fascinating book and singing birds make happiness complete. Laughing tourists in splendid autos are seen speeding along the smooth roads, or carefree picnickers are spreading their lunch on the ground near a mountain brook. Fashionable resorts are as alluring to one group as the simple camp life to another company of vacationists.

It has been ironically said that we go away for a change and a rest, but present conditions show that porters and waiters get the "change," and the hotels and transportation companies get the "rest." Nevertheless, it is a vacation. A time everyone looks forward to. After a long rest a person is supposed to feel better and be better able to work. Let us hope that the students of Munday High School come back to school in September better prepared and more capable of doing bigger things.

Monday morning Mr. Rhodes presented sweaters to the basketball boys who had not received one in football. The others were given felt basketballs with the figure "28" on them. Those receiving sweaters were Truman Mann, Arch Vassar, Sebern Jones and Nolan Phillips. Those receiving basketballs were Truman White, Elton Busby, Joe Aycock and Paul Pruitt. We were very proud to see our boys receive these tokens of honor.

Seniors

The Seniors took a rest last Wednesday afternoon and journeyed to Broach's tank where we spent the afternoon. I believe after all is said and done that the trip was very beneficial, for as a result some poets have been awakened.

Here are some samples of their poetry:
 "The Seniors worked hard, but when grade day came to pass, they couldn't find their grades with a magnifying glass."

The Seniors worked hard and made the grade. But the one that carries the pencil has changed the ones we made.

It's here—"Cheer Up Chad." Here's the best one. April 18, a day never to be forgotten, by Evelyn Curry.

Oh, say! Shall we ever forget the day, when the Seniors decided to play we play.

Oh, Gits' and Euby's cars we did pile, and really there was no use for style.

Out to Broach's tank we did spin, a happier bunch there could never have been.

Snapshots! two of them we did drink, and pictures, a dozen or more we made.

And then some wise Senior said, "I think it's time to return," of course we weren't afraid.

We returned to the school house our spirits still running high, but dear old Mr. Standley our report cards did us deny.

The Seniors, next morning we were happy and gay until Mr. Rhodes to us did say, "Shall I tell it? It doesn't seem quite right."

But those F's surely take the joy out of life.

Once they said, the Seniors did not have pep, the Seniors got peppy and almost lost their rep.

A very downhearted bunch are they, and if you listened closely you might hear they say, "Forward, turn forward, oh time in thy flight."

And help us to remove those "F's," so we may graduate right.

 Annie Matt cast her lot with us in 1924, during her Freshman year. She hailed from Alabama. What part did you say? Oh, yes. It was Cuba—Cuba, Alabama. Since then we have all learned to love her, and can't bare to think of the time when we shall be parted at the close of this Senior year.

Annie Matt is a real sport, a good student and an excellent joker. She keeps the class laughing most of the time with her jokes and wise-cracks.

Annie has always been a good English student and has excelled most of the class along this particular subject. She was joke editor for "The Roundhouse" last year and is class reporter this year, as you have seen, she has made a great success.

Annie Matt possesses one of the most pleasing personalities in school and liked exceedingly well by the entire student body. Annie is planning to attend college at C. I. A., Denton, Texas, where she will prepare to be an old maid school teacher, until she can do better. She says since most school teachers get married before many years, she believes she will try her luck. Well Annie here's wishing you luck and success throughout your future life.

The Senior section is looking a little vacant lately because of the illness of several students. Arch Vassar has been absent over a week now with the flu. Better get well and hurry back, Archie.

Annie Matt Tate has the flu and has already missed several days.

Ruby Myers came up missing Monday morning. She has the flu, too.

Martin Proberd is still absent from our ranks, however, he is on the road to recovery and we will be looking for him back before long.

Mildred Gunn missed several days of school last week also. She had the flu, too. Catching isn't it?

CHAPTER XI

Olive marched proudly up the stairs, the girl in his arms a dead burden.

The rifle fire, as was to have been expected, had brought the villagers running from their huts. Scarcely had the brown man marched out of the sea than these Micronesians were swarming down. Excited voices filled the air. "O-lee-vay—O-lee-vay—O-lee-vay!"

So this, then, was where he could bring her; the home of his people, the place of his own abode.

Here were people moving about; brown men, yellow men, white men; the last in white clothing and white shoes, with white pith helmets pulled down over their noses to keep out the glare of the white sand. And here was even a white woman, who popped her head out a window like a cuckoo out of a clock.

And there, most astonishing of all, not five feet away and as real as life itself, stood John Thurston.

And he gazed at her sorrowfully and said, in the strangest voice: "Palm Tree! Oh, oh, Palm!"

It was not until fifteen hours after the brown man had restored Palmyra Tree to the world of the living that she once more opened her eyes. Then, in a half-waking fright, she reared herself up with a cry of "Olive!"

The next moment she found herself in her mother's arms.

When she roused again, several hours later the Crawfords were at the bedside with her mother and father.

Palmyra sat up abruptly with the question: "Where have they got Ponape Burke?"

The four looked from one to another hesitantly.

At her first awakening the girl had been told how the Okayama had brought her people into this harbor on the search.

"You, you don't mean—" She paused, incredulous. "You don't mean the gunboat was right here when I came and didn't steam out to catch him?"

She saw that this unbelievable thing was true. Unexpectedly, she sprang to her feet. "Where's Olive?" Her voice rang sharp, frightened.

But Olive himself was asleep. Her father began to explain. "The Pigeon of Noah is an American vessel."

"And there's been so much friction between Japan and America," interjected the mother.

And Commander Sakamoto was sure if he seized the schooner on the high seas it would get into the American papers wrong and stir up more misunderstanding and ill will.

"So, my dear," finished Constance Crawford, "you were sacrificed to the ends of diplomacy. The Jap, finding you safe, decided the lesser evil was to let Burkescape."

"Dr. Crife's just had a long talk with Olive," said Mrs. Crawford. Dr. Crife of the mission was their host.

The girl exclaimed in astonishment. "He can, he can talk to him? He can understand him?"

He seemed hardly to believe. So utterly, with her, had the brown man been beyond reach of words, it had seemed no one, with Ponape Burke gone, could ever bridge that gap between Babel's most diverse languages.

"And to think," cried Constance, "they got the letter all wrong. Made us believe poor Olive, who was being so wonderful, was a villain."

The color flooded Palmyra's cheeks in the intensity of her interest.

"But this particular pastor couldn't explain clearly," said the father, "and the Jap, misled by your name, didn't understand at all. What Olive really writes is to beseech, in Jehovah's name, that whatever friends get the letter hurry with arms and many boats to a named island there to help him save—"

"Dr. Crife says there's absolutely no question about that word 'save,'" put in Constance. "Help him save the high chief young lady Palmtree."

The girl settled back among her pillows. Tears welled into her eyes. "It was enough that I should have wronged him," she said. "It is unthinkable you all should have been guilty of this crowning misconception."

She shifted uneasily, lay for some time in silence, gazing through the window.

"If they hadn't bungled the letter," she said at last wearily. "I should have been spared much. And if you hadn't let Ponape Burke escape, I shouldn't now be in danger still."

At last Palmyra could talk to Olive.

After all these days and years and centuries of silence, they two, by the intervention of Dr. Crife, had been made articulate.

She learned that the brown man served Ponape Burke in a debt of gratitude; the saving of his life. He had for this white rascal a sort of love, but no sort of respect. Great souls must, of their nature, suffer petty tyranny. And Olive—often, according to his lights, regretting, disapproving, always palliating—followed the despicable little Ponape.

She learned that Olive had not known Burke meant to abduct her. And she found that in the beginning he had thought it, not an abduction, but an elopement.

Only when the schooner got under way did he perceive that this was no adventure of Palmyra's own choice. Only when she did not soon begin to smile through her tears as many a native girl might, have done, did he realize how terrible to her the situation.

Olive's first thought was that the girl would feel safer with a weapon; so that she might possibly need one. As he bared not give her the knife in daytime, he had dropped it through the sky.

When the Japan gunboat passed them so cruelly by, Olive had been as eager as she to attract attention. But he had known the distance too great.

As regarded Jaluit he had not gone there because it was so obviously the place he should have gone. Burke was sure to try that lagoon first.

This much Dr. Crife could read for her:

Incarnate there before this islander's eyes on the Rainbow, she had been not unlike a goddess; a being—as indeed she was—from another world. A high white princess, called for the stately life-giving palm and crowded with hair of flame, she had condescended to him with blankets when a brown creature was in misery with that most terrible of things—cold.

Olive was not in love with Palm Tree. One does not consider oneself privileged to fall in love with a goddess.

But from the deck at her feet, intimately yet afar, he had gazed up at her—fascinated.

If Palmyra now knew how Olive felt toward her, she was far from knowing how she felt toward Olive.

And if her only difficulty with Van Buren Rutger had been a reluctance to give him pain, she found every difficulty with John Thurston.

Van himself had made things easy.

Returning to the mission at a late hour the third night he had come upon Olive prowling about with a rifle. "Ponape is not dead," the brown man had explained simply. But that which others looked upon as a touching manifestation of devotion, Van chose to regard with suspicion. "Sakamoto shall know of this," was his comment.

Palmyra had been so incensed that, there and then, she had broken the engagement.

Van's dismissal placed him in that position wherein a weak man not infrequently lacks moral courage to turn upon his real rival. He must find an easier target for his resentment. Thus Van, without in the least preceiving why, remained amiable toward Thurston, but developed an ugly spite against this man of darker skin.

But if Palmyra had freed herself of Van, she could not free herself of that which withheld her from Thurston.

Back there in the canoe, in her moment of revelation, she had yearned to meet him once more, face to face, that she might tell him the truth. But now that, astonishingly, she had awakened into the old life, she found herself quite unready to step up to him with any such confession.

She would to love John Thurston; she did love John Thurston. But between them was the brown man Olive, and leering from behind his elbow, the face of Ponape Burke.

Concerning Olive she tried to justify herself on the ground of gratitude. Never had a girl more reason to be grateful. Was it not natural she should be eager to take him presents, to sit in his house questioning, to find herself hour by hour more curious concerning him, more interested in him than in any other living being?

Oddly enough—or rather, naturally enough—it did not come to her for some time to ask whether she might be in love with this brown man. Then the idea struck like an unexpected blow. She was stunned.

At first she put the thought from her in abhorrence. But in the still hours of the night it came back again and again. Could she indeed be in love with Olive? Was it possible for an American girl, under any circumstance whatever, to fall in love with a man of darker race?

She shuddered to think others might believe this thing of her.

She avoided Olive, kept to her room. She struggled to analyze her emotions, to weigh them dispassionately. And, honestly grieving, she was at least able to say of herself that, in no sense, could she be accused of loving him.

Not for long did she find the answer. Then it came like release from a prison cell. She was in love, not with Olive himself, but with his attributes.

She wanted to love John for the true manliness that was his. But, alas, those splendid qualities the two possessed in common seemed the personal qualities of Olive alone. She remembered how he had gone after the shark with knife—and conquered.

The sun was less than an hour high when Palmyra, as she had done for several mornings now, descended the windward stairway down to the harbor, to the street of the town.

Island life was already astir. The girl was addressed by an old woman.

"Pleasy you," said the woman in English, "you come for look at a see ve'y fine Pingelap mat. You like too much for buy."

She would have refused, but now she caught a glimpse of Van approaching. Several times he had trapped her into painful interviews. But this morning she could use the ancient dame, as a gaping listener, so keep Van silent.

"Where is your 'ouse?" the girl asked tentatively. The thatch toward which the woman pointed stood conspicuously. Immediately against one side was the water and a small wharf of coral fragments by which the traffic of the town went to the anchorage. As close on the inland side was the road and, opposite, the trading establishment of a white man

Overtake the "72"?

If CHRYSLER "72" were merely more beautiful—if it were just an average good value—it would deserve no special consideration from the buyer.

But it clamors for his consideration and demands his attention by reason of a gauge and proof of greater value which cannot be escaped.

All cars today seek to approximate Chrysler "72" performance by patterning after Chrysler engineering. But after three years of striving, how close are they to the "72" today? No closer than they were three years ago.

As they have struggled to approach, Chrysler "72" has pulled away and gallops around and past them with more than the ease of the old original Chrysler sensation-car of 1924.

There may be pocket-book reasons for choosing cars of lesser price than the "72." There simply cannot be a valid reason for paying as much or more for any car other than the "72."

A SINGER'S GIFT

In memory of her two sons who were killed in the World War, one fighting for Germany and the other for America, Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, world-famous singer, has given her $230,000 estate at Grossmont, Cal., to disabled veterans of the war as a rest home.

A native of Austria, Madame Schumann-Heink has spent most of her mature years in America as an operatic and concert singer, and only recently retired. Two years ago she made her reappearance with the Metropolitan Opera Company at the age of 64. She was loyal to America during the war and became an American citizen.

No singer of her time has been more highly esteemed, not only for her consummate artistry, but also for her splendid character and charitable disposition, which is so well illustrated by her recent magnificent gift.

PARIS PRAISES RUTH

In popular ballot taken in Paris, Ruth Elder was chosen as one of the first ten "most illustrious women," a rather remarkable tribute to the girl whose plucky though unsuccessful attempt to fly across the Atlantic has brought her world-wide fame.

Among the selected ten, Madame Curie, co-discoverer of radium, was ranked first, Sarah Bernhardt, actress, second; Edith Cavell, executed English war nurse, third; Evangeline Booth, Salvation Army leader, fourth.

Inasmuch as the list evidently included both the living and dead, it may be questioned whether the selections were altogether appropriate, although each of those mentioned has high claim to distinction.

Anyway, it is pleasing to note that the Parisians were more chivalrous toward Ruth than the authorities of a Georgia town who tried to put her in jail on an old charge of taking a clandestine buggy ride with a pet.

POT AND KETTLE

Just now there is going up a terrible wall about lobbyists at Washington, which would indicate that our Senators and Congressmen are being "influenced" against their will by designing persons who would would "sell" them to their hearts' desire.

This is a lot of bunk. In the first place, if a member of Congress has not sense enough or courage enough to farm his own opinions and act upon them.

he ought to resign and go home. Besides, there is no reason to condemn lobbyists for one class and commend lobbyists for another class. Every important group in the nation has its lobbyists in Washington.

The farmers have their lobby, so have the labor unions, the veterans, the prohibitionists, the blue law advocates, the various industries—in fact every conceivable class, either constantly or at intervals, is importuning Congress to do or not do, this or that.

As estimated above, if Congressmen are fit to be Congressmen there is little harm in the long run in having representatives of various groups in Washington to present their views and give information respecting them.

There is little sincerity in lobbyists of one group denouncing lobbyists of an opposing group. It is a case of the pot calling the kettle black.

ADVANCE OF MEDICINE

Dr. Charles H. Mayo, world-renowned surgeon of Rochester, Minn., is quoted as saying that medical knowledge of the underlying causes of disease has advanced more during the last 25 years than in the preceding 25 centuries.

This is a strong statement, but if the doctor had gone back a few years farther to include the discoveries of Waite Reed and others in connection with infectious diseases it might be accepted as literally true.

Recent advances in surgery have been even more remarkable than those in medicine and have been tremendously aided by the X-ray, improved anesthetics and more effective means for the prevention of infection.

There are still many diseases which have so far baffled all efforts to control them, but in the light of the accomplishments of the recent past it is reasonable to expect that these, too, may ultimately yield to human science and skill.

MEETING OF THE COUNTY DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee, at the courthouse in the town of Benjamin, Texas, on the 15th day of April, A. D. 1928, the following proceedings were had, to-wit:

The house was called to order and the purpose of the meeting stated, whereupon Chas. Moorhouse was selected as temporary chairman, and upon motion and second the Chairman appointed J. H. McGee, J. G. Horn and S. B. Maddox, as a committee to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Hon. Sam Anderson, late County Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, and said Committee presented the following report and resolutions, to-wit:

Whereas on the 29th day of October, A. D. 1926, at his home at Knox City Sam Anderson, for many years the Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee, departed this life; and

Whereas by his untiring, honorable, unselfish devotion to duty, firmness of principle, and lovable disposition, he endeared himself to the members of the Democratic Executive Committee, as well as Knox County's citizenship generally; and

Whereas in his death, Knox County has lost a great citizen, an honorable man, his family a loving father and companion, and the Democratic Party one of its best adherents;

Now therefore, be resolved, that we, members of the Democratic Executive Committee, as an expression of the esteem in which Sam Anderson was held, we hereby declare that in the death of him, the party has lost a friend, the citizenship a just and upright man, his family a loving father and counsellor; that we extend to the family of Sam Anderson, our sincerest condolences and sympathy in their bereavement; that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the committee, a page of which shall be dedicated to his memory; that a copy be sent to his bereaved widow, and that each of the county papers be furnished with a copy for publication.

Respectfully submitted,
 J. H. MCGEE,
 S. B. MADDOX,
 J. G. HORN,
 Committee on resolutions.

TO THE VOTERS OF KNOX COUNTY

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for re-election to the office of County Treasurer of Knox county, subject to the Democratic Primaries, and respectfully ask that you give my candidacy your consideration. I do not expect to make a thorough canvass of the county, but will see as many of the voters as the duties of my office will permit, before the election. I wish to thank you for the support that you have given me, and if re-elected, I will serve you to the best of my ability.

The Icyball

Have you seen the Icyball? It is the wonder of the age. Those who have visited our store and witnessed its performance marvel and wonder what's coming next.

On a test made in our store, where the box was opened more than a hundred times a day the thermometer registered from 40 to 45 degrees over a period of 24 hours. Can you beat that with any refrigerating machine?

The cost is so low that no home can afford to be without the Icyball.

We'll be glad to show it to you—in action!
