FARMERS GET HELP MAKING WORK SHEETS

New Farm Program Is Not Compulsory, Says Agent

All farmers, including those who are share croppers, tenants, operators, or owners of farms in Foard County, now have available the services of community and county committeemen and county agricultural agents to assist them in preparing work sheets under the new National Agricultural Conservation Program, says John Nagy, county agricultural agent.

Committeemen now are helping to make out work sheets and are aiding individual farmers in planning their farming operations so as to conserve and build their soil and qualify for grants.

A farmer is under no obligation to fill out a work sheet nor to perform in line with the program, but he may have the advantage of learning how his farming operations could be adjusted to qualify. However, a farmer must fill out a work sheet if he is to be eligible to apply for a grant.

The program is designed to benefit all persons engaged in farming including share-croppers, tenants, operators, and owners. Each can contribute to the program by familiarizing himself with the conditions and by engaging in a soil building program on the land which he, himself, farms.

Local committeemen will aid each farmer in determining his soil depleting acreage base, and necessary and proper practices in order to qualify for payments. "As the Government is sharing with farmers the expense of improving the fertility of their farms," said Mr. Nagy, "farmers should be prepared to furnish committeemen with necessary information and to co-operate in every way possible."

City Lake Capacity Is Increased by One And One-Half Times

Work on the Crowell city lake and the spillway was recently completed and the raising of the pump-house equipment and the machinery was finished last week, according to C. T. Schlagal, mayor.

A Works Progress Administration project furnished most of the money and labor for raising the dam and spillway. The dam was raised approximately three and one-half feet and the spillway three feet. Mr. Schlagal estimated that the work would increase the capacity of the lake by about one and one-half times. Work on raising the pump-house equipment and machinery was done by the city.

The lake as it is since it has been completed will carry a water supply sufficient for the town until it grows considerably, Mr. Schlagal said.

Johnny Gamble and Henry Ross were the federal supervisors of the project and H. D. Nelson was the city supervisor. The original estimate for the project was between $5,000 and $8,000, most of which was borne by the Federal Government.

WOMEN'S CLUB TO SELL SEALS FOR CRIPPLES

B. E. McGlamery, district representative from the Texas Society for Crippled Children, who was in Crowell Saturday, inaugurated a seal selling campaign to be sponsored until April 1 by the Business and Professional Women's Club. The Rotary Club will assist in the campaign.

The money derived from the campaign will be given to the society to aid in taking care of crippled children whose parents are unable to give them medical aid. The seals are to be sold by members of the two organizations. The seals are one cent each. Mr. McGlamery left $15 dollars worth of seals with Mrs. Henry Borchardt, president of the local women's organization.

"Since September 800 children have been helped by this organization," Mr. McGlamery said. "The normal increase of crippled children is 1,200 per year from disease, birth and accident; and most of them the parents cannot help." The organization takes crippled children over 16 years of age and trains them for a trade. Three crippled children of this county have been helped and four over sixteen have been taught a trade. The crippled children are taken and placed in hospitals and skilled doctors who are specialists in their line treat them. The Texas Society for Crippled Children is "An organization of men, women and children drawn together through their common desire to give the crippled children of the state an equal chance with other children." Its purpose is "to bring the greatest good to the greatest number of crippled persons in Texas by providing for all of them."

Fitzgerald, pastor of the Baptist Church, will deliver the sermon at the service Sunday morning.

An electrical storm and a light hail accompanied the shower Monday night, but no damage was reported in the county. The rains in the last week have benefited the crops considerably in the county, and reports are that the wheat crops of Crowell and vicinity are far better than any found in adjoining counties.

He gave a glimpse of the need of missionary work in the African field and of how eager the natives are to receive help, physically and spiritually.

Rodeo, Parade and Memorial Service To Be Main Events

Bombs Will Announce Official Opening of Foard County's Greatest Birthday Party

Foard County's Forty-fifth Anniversary Jubilee in observance of the county's forty-fifth birthday will be held in Crowell Monday and Tuesday, April 27 and 28.

Plans for the two-day celebration are complete, according to George Self, general director; and Eli Smith and Russell Beverly, the committee appointed by the Farmers' and Business Men's Association to direct the celebration.

The Program

To announce officially the opening of the celebration huge bombs will be exploded beginning at 6 o'clock Monday morning.

Most of the first morning of the Jubilee will be dedicated to the registration of Foard's old-time pioneers and to guests of the celebration. Registration will be done by several stenographers under the direction of Mrs. Oscar Boman, chairman of the registration committee. It will take place on the west side of the square. The guests and old-timers will be presented with a badge showing an old covered wagon. Blanks will be filled in giving the name of the pioneer and the date that he came to this county or to what is now Foard County.

Basket Lunch

At 11:45 a. m. of the first day of the anniversary celebration a basket lunch will be spread on the street south of the court house for visitors and guests. Four tables, reaching from the intersections of that street with Main and the street running north and south along the east side of the court house will be built and there the basket dinners will be spread. The street will be roped off so that there will be no traffic on that street.

The home demonstration clubs of the county and the Thalia and Crowell Parent-Teacher organizations have acted as committees to see that all the families of their respective communities bring "well-filled basket dinners."

Chuck Wagon Dinner

About 200 old-time cowboys will be given a real chuck wagon dinner at noon of the first day on the corner by Old's Feed Store. The chuck wagon and twenty-five members of the Wichita Falls Chuck Wagon gang will be here to be in charge of the dinner. Only those who have special invitations will be served at the chuck wagon. Those who are real pioneers of Foard and who are cowboys will receive invitations to this affair.

Pioneer Parade

Beginning at one p. m. sharp the huge parade will take place. It will begin its formation at 9 o'clock in the morning. It is to start its formation at the north end of the street running north and south, east of the court house. The parade is estimated to have about 200 entries in it and will probably range about one and one-half miles in length. It will be led by two pioneers who will be flag bearers.

Every civic organization, every school and home demonstration club and every business institution has been asked to prepare a float for the parade. Committee members have not asked that those who have not yet made definite plans for an entry to start preparations at once. The parade will march on the main business and residential streets of Crowell. All the contestants and rodeo officials will take part in the pioneer parade.

Every car that is to be entered in the pioneer parade must be decorated.

Rodeo Performances

At 3 o'clock Monday afternoon the first show of a four-performance rodeo will take place in the Crowell High School football stadium which has been converted into a rodeo arena. The rodeo is being promoted by Herman Greening and Bax Johnson, and part of the money taken in at the rodeo will be applied on the stadium's debt.

Fifteen hundred dollars in prize money will be given the 150 contestants which are expected to compete in the wild west show. John Lindsey of Byers will be the clown and he and his trained mule will appear in all four performances which will be held at 3 and 8 p. m. on both days of the Jubilee. He recently appeared in the San Angelo rodeo and is scheduled for shows at the Texas Cowboy Reunion at Stamford July 2 to 4.

Opal Woods of Ringwood, Okla., who will do trick riding, trick roping and "broom busting" in the rodeo, is the world's champion girl trick roper. Judges for the rodeo are C. H. Featherston of the F-Bar ranch west of Truscott and a Texas Ranger; C. R. Elliott, Knox County sheriff; and John C.

Seimon, arena director for the Texas Cowboy Reunion.

Two rodeo performances will be held each day of the Jubilee. Entries are to be made at Kerner Service station to T. F. Hughston as soon as possible. They may also be filed with Bax Johnson or Herman Greening.

Lloyd McBee, accompanied by his wife, Blanch McBee, of St. Louis were engaged today by the rodeo promoters to perform at the rodeo. They came to Crowell direct from St. Louis and will be here until after the Forty-fifth Anniversary Jubilee.

McBee won the trick riding championship at St. Louis in 1934. They will have with them at their performances their special trained "well-filled basket dinners."

Every person who was here in 1891 or before, regardless of his or her age at that time, will meet on the west side of the court house Monday morning, the first day of the Forty-fifth Anniversary Jubilee, at 11 o'clock to have a group picture taken. "If you were only six months old and here at the time of the county's organization or before that time we want you in the picture," G. D. Self, general director of the jubilee, said. Another picture will also be taken of all those who are here and voted in Foard's first election in 1891.

ed horse which has appeared at the leading rodeos of the nation.

At a pre-showing they did several trick riding stunts that have never been seen in this part of the state. They promise to be outstanding among the features of the rodeo.

Novelty, cold drink, cushion and other miscellaneous concessions at the rodeo grounds have been let by the rodeo committee. The Thalia Parent-Teacher organization, the Girl Scouts, the Margaret Home Demonstration Club and the Cemetery Association will be in charge of part of the concessions.

Memorial Service

A memorial service will be held in honor of Foard's pioneers, both the living and the dead, Tuesday morning beginning at 10 a. m. It will be held in the Methodist Church. Several songs by quartets and the congregation will be sung. Rev. G. S. Hardy of Clarendon, pioneer Methodist preacher of this section, will give the invocation and the benediction.

J. H. Hamblen, pastor of the Vernon Methodist Church, in one of the main addresses of the program, will pay tribute to the living pioneers of the county. Mrs. N. J. Roberts will give a talk as a tribute to the pioneers who are now dead. Henry Ferguson will tell a story. The pioneers present will be given an opportunity to talk.

Street dancing and square dancing will follow each of the rodeo performances. Music the first day will be furnished by the Light Crust Doughboys of Fort Worth, Falls Aviators of Wichita Falls, and Propps Merry Makers of Seymour. The second day's music will be given by Propps' band, the Aviators, and the Bird Brand Cowboys of Dallas.

Many displays of relics, old pictures and documents have been placed in the show windows of the business houses of the town. It (Continued on Page Five)

TRUSCOTT NINE TAKES OPENER FROM CROWELL

The Truscott baseball nine trimmed Crowell 8 to 3 here Sunday in the season's opener. The visiting team launched a six-run rally in the eighth inning to break up a pitcher's duel, and bag the match.

Henry Moss, centerfielder for Truscott, was the afternoon's sensation with outstanding fly catching and a home run in the eighth with the bases loaded to bring in four of the six runs in that inning. Eubanks of Truscott led the hitting with three singles out of four trips to the plate.

Although Crowell got 13 hits to Truscott's 11, Abbott kept Manager Hellingworth's squad's hits scattered so that they were never able to push more than one run across at one time. H. Green, who started the game for Crowell, pitched jam-up ball for seven innings, but weakened in the eighth and after allowing one run and getting two more on base and three balls on the batter retired in favor of Cook. Cook walked the man to fill the bases and a hit by Moss which got away from Ashford went for a home run and cleared the bases for four runs. After another run Graves relieved

Came in Ox Wagon

WALTER W. NICHOLS

Walter W. Nichols, who has lived on the same place in the Black community for forty-five years, came to this section in 1885 with his father, John Nichols, and grandfather, John Teague, in a wagon drawn by an ox team, when he was 14 years old. These men hauled lumber from Harrold and built a 14x14-foot house on land about one mile south of Sloan Springs. They "batched" during the winter and the next year Mr. Nichols and Mr. Teague moved their families here from Wise County, still using ox teams. Four years later they sold this land to Bob Sloan and moved to the Black community and in 1891 the Nichols family settled on the place where Mr. and Mrs. Nichols now live.

Mr. Nichols was born in Wise County May 20, 1872. He was married to Miss Josie Jackson in 1900 and they have three children, John and Sherman, who are married and live in the Black community, and Tom who lives at home.

Letters

From Bob Hightower (Farwell) "Received your invitation to 45th Anniversary. Am coming unless something happens to stop me. I wasn't at Crowell at the organization, but landed there Jan. 2, 1932. Left there Sept. 3, 1916."

From Lon Robertson (Tobe, Colo.) "Thanks for your kind invitation to your celebration April 27-28. I regret, however, that I shall not be able to attend."

From A. F. Barkley (Spearman) "Invitation received with thanks. What a great time I would have if I could only be present, but I deeply regret my inability to be there. "A little item of interest perhaps to some is that my father, O. G. Barkley, is now living with me, and will be 95 years old next July, and was a member of the commissioners court from the Thalia District at the same time Uncle John Wesley was a member of the court, whom I see by the paper will soon be 95 years old. My father, brothers and myself, came to what is now Foard County in 1889 and settled north of Wichita River in Knox County, so we were living there before the creation of Foard County."

From Mrs. J. T. Truelove (Bloomington) "It makes me very happy to receive an invitation from my old friends to attend the jubilee. I'm one of the early settlers. I moved to Foard County in September, 1891. I find it impossible to attend but I wish for all those who will attend a happy get-together."

From Mrs. Ora Oates Woods (Pomona, Calif.) "We received our invitation to the Jubilee. Also a wonderful copy of The Foard County News of April 9th. Have read every word and enjoyed the pictures of those old pioneers so much as I know most every one personally. "Although I was young in years, 9 to be exact, I had the honor of being with my sainted father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Woods, who lived between where Crowell now is and North Beaver before the old-timers of Foard County."

From Mrs. J. T. Truelove (Bloomington) "It makes me very happy to receive an invitation from my old friends to attend the jubilee. I'm one of the early settlers. From W. A. Cox (Wynewood, Okla.) "Gladly accept your invitation to be present and partake of the chuck wagon dinner on Monday, April 27. John Vaughan will be with me. We plan to be there at high noon Monday if nothing unforeseen happens. I deem it an honor and an opportunity to be one of the old boys."

From Mrs. J. T. Truelove (Bloomington) "It makes me very happy to receive an invitation from my old friends to attend the jubilee. I'm one of the early settlers. Foard, the man for whom the county was named, and Cynthia Ann Parker, famous local historical character, will not be available in time for the celebration, no memorial service will be held in the afternoon of the second day, as was previously planned.

Many Invitations Sent

Special invitations to Foard's pioneers and old-time ex-residents have been sent to about 600 prospective guests. A big majority of this number will be here for the Jubilee, according to members of the invitation committee.

Both the invitation committee and the general directors have expressed the fact that everybody is invited to attend Foard County's birthday party whether they receive a special invitation direct from the invitation committee or not.

A landing field is being prepared for any visitors who might come by air to the Jubilee. A plot of land one mile southwest of Crowell will be marked off with flags so that it may be located easily from the air.

Any supplies that may be needed for the ships while they are here may be obtained through Jack Spots and will be delivered to the field.

To add color to the celebration both men and women of the county have adopted the regalia of the pioneers of the 80's and the 90's. The man's first requirement is whiskers. The men of the county have allowed their whiskers in whole or in part free growth until after the closing day of the affair.

The "blue bonnet" has been selected as the official head dress for women of the county. The style and color of the dress is left to the taste and choice of the individual, but she has been asked by the women's dress committee to don the attire of the pioneer woman of 45 or 50 years ago.

Ample drinking water will be furnished for the visitors to the Jubilee and benches will be provided for the comfort of those who attend what is to be Foard County's greatest celebration.

Loud speaking equipment will be used so that announcements and addresses may be heard by all of Foard's guests. Courtesy cars will be available for visitors who wish to be taken about the city. The courtesy cars will be designated by stickers on them so that they may be easily identified.

A housing committee is canvassing the town to find rooms for the visitors who will spend one or more nights in Crowell.

The town has already donned the celebration colors to be left up until after Foard's contribution to the Texas Centennial Celebrations. The entire business section and the court house is decorated with flags, banners and drapes of brilliant colors.

Many special guests will be in Crowell Monday and Tuesday for the celebration. Famous cowmen, cowboys, business representatives and other distinguished guests have informed the committee of their intentions to attend the celebration. Adjutant General Carl Nesbitt will personally represent Gov. James V. Allred who could not come, due to previous engagements.

The Crowell Boy Scouts will be in uniform to help officiate at the celebration.

RIVERSIDE H. D. CLUB

To be well-dressed one must feel beautiful as well as look beautiful. Miss Myrna Holman said in a demonstration on "Color" at a meeting of the Riverside H. D. Club at the home of Mrs. Luther Marlow April 14.

In selecting most becoming colors one must consider the color of their hair, eyes, complexion and weight and height. A person should not wear colors that tend to bring out sallowness in the skin should there be such color in it.

The club voted to have a float in the Crowell 45th Anniversary Celebration and the president appointed a committee, Mrs. J. S. Ray, Mrs. Shirley McLarty and Miss Bonnie Schroeder to make arrangements for the float.

THALIA 4-H CLUB

"The buttercup is really a primrose," said Miss Myrna Holman at a meeting of the Thalia 4-H Club Friday morning, April 17.

"The buttercup, daisy and many other kinds of flowers are miscalled something else," she said. The club charts were checked to determine which members were to receive pins at the Jubilee. Those to receive pins are Zelda Scales, Alma Lee Townley, Maxine Fleisher, Savannah Gamble and Anna Lucy Bray.

The next meeting will be held at the Thalia High School May 1.

ASSEMBLY

The Home Economics II Class sponsored children's style show Friday, April 17. The Home Economics girls made the garments worn for this occasion.

Dorothy McKown, Mildred McGinnis, Edith Hutchenson, and Juanita Brown's garments were chosen as winners, although they were not given places at this time.

SENIOR DAY

The Senior class is eagerly awaiting the morning of May 2 when they will journey to Carlsbad Cavern for the annual Senior Day. Superintendent Boles of the Carlsbad National Park has granted the Seniors special permission to visit the cavern free of charge.

The students will be accompanied by Mrs. Clyde McKown, Mrs. J. R. Allee, Mrs. Marion Hughton, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, and Henry Black.

KAMPUS KLATTER

While reciting the six tenses in Spanish II, Peggy Cooper made the mistake of saying "perfect past" instead of a "past perfect." Mary Green quickly rose and said, "You are entirely off, no one has a perfect past."

Mary Elizabeth was asked to write a 200 word theme. She wrote: "My father bought a new car, and it busted going up a hill." The other 180 words were what he said walking back to town, and it would be best not to mention them.

Henry Black has been ailing, and when he went to the doctor he was told: "You are running a fever because your mustache is taking all your energy."

Misses Patton, Patterson, and Cogdell must have heard some man say: "I want a wife like my mother was," because they came to school dressed like an old-fashioned maiden who loved to cook and sew for a "beeg, strong man." Mrs. Sloan didn't have to dress up, she caught Lewis long ago.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the realization that he need not expect any immediate financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with a promise which city he must reach from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a "cross-country" auto party on a "share expense" basis. Five others, Hal begins his journey. Four of his companions are girls: Barry Tafford; middle-aged Mrs. Kerigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and a nondescript individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's self-withdrawal annoys him. To Kerigan he takes to at once, but he is unable to shake her feeling of uneasiness. He trusts Crack. Hal's intimacy with Kerigan ripens. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal directed to Kerigan's room, instead of his own. The meeting seems to soften her apparent unfriendliness and they exchange kisses. In the morning she resumes her attitude of aloofness. Hal has a feeling that she is indifferent to him. At the check stop, he tells Barry that he loves her. She only answers that she mustn't love him. In a peaky (the story is laid in prohibition days) Crack brutally insults Kerigan. Hal forces him to apologize abjectly, and his feeling of enmity and disgust toward Crack is intensified. Next day Barry promises she will tell him, that night, of the shadow of despair that hangs over her. Motherless, she tells him, a girl, in her pride for him, had a feeling of adoration for her father. He had urged her to marry a man many years older than she. Without any real feeling for the man, but trusting her father, she did so. On his deathbed her father secured her promise to stick to her husband, "no matter what happens," for ten years. Her husband tells her he had evidence of a dishonorable man in her father's life, and she had had been the price of her husband's silence. That was four years ago, and she is adamant in her determination to keep her promise, though she acknowledges her love for Hal.

Las Vegas was, and when Crack told her, she looked grimly familiar with impositions and supposed that if anybody was in a great hurry, the others would have to keep on, too. "Who-who-who's in a hurry?" John asked her out of sudden perplexity. "Don't ask me," said Mrs. Pulsipher. "I am," said Hal quietly. Sister Anastasia, her faintly worried eyes smiling a little at Hal, said: "Because I asked, Mr. Ireland told me we would be in Los Angeles tomorrow. Perhaps he believes I must be there then. It is not necessary. It would be better to stop this afternoon and rest. We are all tired—Mr. Ireland especially, I think." Hal denied it, but the nun's gentle diffidence persuaded Mrs. Pulsipher he was showing a nobility which he certainly hadn't room to feel. Then Kerigan pointed out that if they stopped for the night at Saint George, at the bottom of Utah, there was little more than four hundred miles left to Los Angeles and they'd be there tomorrow anyway. Hal glanced at Barry, saw her remote in her own disturbing thoughtfulness, and gave in. Even as he spared a silent "I'm your little meddler" for Crack's gratified quiet beside him, he knew he could not come too quickly to the dispersal of those clouds in the precious bravery of Barry's eyes. The prospect of the short afternoon lifted a zesty in the car again; and the presentiments of coming ill withdrew a little to wait for Hal just beyond the fringes of sense. Barry was in the front seat where he could make sure of her clear, living reality whenever the need touched him. And, with Kerigan cheerfully joining them from behind, they welcomed together the impersonal things of the route. They talked about the good names, and what the dickens you could do with them besides taste them in your mouth and your fancy; Spanish Fork, on the road behind; and from Kerigan's map, Hurricane and Enterprise, Gunlock and Solitude, Searchlight, Orderville, and Antimony. From the back seat John Pulsipher wistfully ventured, "That's kinda beautiful out there?" and Mrs. Pulsipher said, not quite so severely as she might have, "If they think it's pretty, they can see it without you telling 'em." "No harm sayin' it," said John gently. "No harm keepin' quiet, either," said his wife. "Why don't you then?" said John, with the quick air of throwing a snowball and the h—l with the consequences. Before Mrs. Pulsipher could summon a retort, the nun's soft, reverent voice said, "It is very beautiful."

Hal made her say the words over again in his head, not to find out how their simplicity gave him valor, but to feel the warm stimulant of that simple gift, to fix in his heart new and certain strength. In his impulsive assault upon Barry's captivity he would have Sister Anastasia's blessing. He had been a fool to let that foreboding hour before dawn dog his infallibility so far through the bright day. He was master of himself; he was somewhat master of beauty, of events, of spaces even wider, clearer, more superbly colored than the incredible nobilities that stood there defying the sun. He could blend the savage temper of such a red, ancient cliff with the pure, devout acquiescence of Anastasia's heart, and make will an instrument to discipline his stars. Hal, in helping the clerk up with the luggage, made sure that Barry had a room to herself. And after supper, calm in his assurance of strength, he didn't bother her going upstairs with Sister Anastasia. Later he would find her, when the others were in bed and the little hotel was quiet. Through the plate-glass window—a proscenium upon the street for the rank of oak-and-leather rocking chairs in the lobby—Kerigan saw a "star" of the screen, in a rightly becoming absent-mindedness about clothes, advertised outside the movie opposite. "I could learn to love that little girl," said Kerigan, a sparkle of pleasure in his eyes. "Go?" The friendly shirt-sleeved man behind the ticket window advised them to turn south inside the door, because the south aisle was cooler. So they turned "south," in a room not larger than Frederick Ireland's downtown office; but it wasn't appreciably cooler and a slide blandly informed them that the "star" was coming next week. So after half an hour of gangster routine, they went to stroll in the gathering evening. The wide, treeless main street of Saint George still breathed heat; but Hal pleasantly, almost proprietarily recognized in it the relaxed grace that American villages wear well, after dusk. "Ever drink?" said Kerigan. "No—I know you don't want one; I can always tell when a man's feeling to explain that he doesn't feel like a drink, and it always makes me a little sad." "It's so d—n hot," said Hal apologetically. "And besides—" "Ah, yes, besides," Kerigan murmured. "What time's your audience?" "In a little while," said Hal. "Saying that, and still sure of the sharp invincibility that armed him, he yet felt the hollow, nervous emptiness under his chest, the live, almost chill suspense of the middle that comes in the imminence of great possibilities. He drew breath, and it didn't fill the emptiness. He looked at his watch and stopped, saying, "Now, I guess, Colonel. Pray for me a little, or drink at me, or something, will you?" "I will, sir," said Kerigan gravely. "If you should want company later, my door'll be open and I sleep light. Night, sport — and luck." It was as if he also said, "I wish to God I could help you. And Hal was somehow oddly reluctant to leave him. There was only one light in the lobby, and the clerk was locking a drawer at the desk. He looked up and said, "Your name Ireland?" "Yes," said Hal, over quick, repressed apprehension. "Message for you," said the clerk, and handed him an envelope. He thought he would have guessed it was Barry's hand in any case—the characters frank, large, and fearlessly curved. "Hal," he read: "There's no good in it, truly. Everything you say will only hurt; and if it hurts more, I shall die. Leave me alone, dear darling, for both our sakes. Except tomorrow, in daylight—before it all has to end, Barry." As if he had expected it, he pushed the paper into his pocket, said good night to the clerk, and went upstairs. There was light around Barry's door and he knocked softly. He heard the bed creak, her deliberate footfalls come, her low, resigned voice admit she knew who was there even as she asked, "Barry, you've got to come out," he said. "Hal, no," she said, gently pleading. "Then I'll come in." He pushed the door, and as if she had expected that too, he felt her weight against it. "Don't Hal," she said, less surely; "for the love of heaven, please don't. I'll come out to you—for five minutes." "No," said Hal. "If you come out, there'll be no conditions. And if you don't come out, I come in." "Hal, I'm tired; I've got a headache—please, oh, please, my darling—" "You haven't a headache, and you'll forget you're tired, Barry. I'm serious as death, as sin, as happiness; if you won't come to me, I'll come to you. Do you understand that?" He waited a few seconds for her to speak again; then he pushed the door against her strength until she dropped back from it and he stood inside, closing it behind him. There was no key nor any eye for the bolt to engage, so he left it and faced her. She turned from him as if the room had grown too small, murmuring, "Dear G—d, if you have not given me a way to keep him out, you must want him here." Hal took her arm above the elbow and turned her to him, then held her other arm too and shook her once, gently, to stir the heavy-lidded study that held her eyes. "You believe there is God?" he said.
