SATURDAY IS LAST DAY TO FILE SHEETS

Deadline Extended to May 23; 625 Farms Under New Plan

Saturday, May 23, has been set as the closing day for taking applications of farmers for participation in the government Soil Conservation program, according to information received by County Farm Agent John Naggy.

The sign-up was originally scheduled to end May 7, but was extended 16 days by government officials. About 90 per cent of the Foard County farmers who signed AAA contracts last year have filed applications in the new program, Mr. Naggy said. Foard County had about 625 AAA contracts. The government credits this county with 830 farms.

Payment in the new farm program will be made for diverting acreage from soil depleting crops to soil conserving crops. In explaining the program features, Mr. Naggy stated that sudan grass had been classified as a soil conserving crop, regardless of its use.

Land diverted from cotton acreage and planted to sudan grass, cowpeas, alfalfa or sweet clover may qualify for a soil conserving payment at the rate of five cents per pound on the adjusted yield of cotton on the diverted acreage. In addition to the soil conserving payment, a soil building payment may be received amounting to $1 per acre on the diverted acreage if recommended soil building practices are carried out.

Sorghum, sudan grass and millet are classified as soil building crops and will be paid for at the rate of $1 per acre when seeded on crop land between Jan. 1, 1936, and July 31, 1936, if all the crop is left on the land or plowed under.

RESETTLEMENT MAKES LOANS TO FOARD FARMERS

22 Mules, 20 Horses to Be Purchased in This County

Dealers are selling a million and a half dollars worth of farm machinery to Texas farmers who have received loans this season from the Resettlement Administration, according to information received by A. W. Burkett, county supervisor. Mr. Burkett estimated that $1,400,000 of this is being spent by the 29 families who have received loans in this county.

"A still larger amount is being spent for horses and mules," Mr. Burkett said. "In Texas as a whole, it is estimated that 20,000 mules are being bought, and 5,000 horses and mares, at an average of $55 a head, which means a total of $2,125,000 being paid out to producers and traders in work animals." In this county, he said 22 mules and 20 horses and mares have been bought, or will be bought.

The supervisor said that these purchases would seldom have been made unless the money had been loaned by Resettlement. Every farmer receiving a loan had to present written statements from banks or others that they had refused to make the loan.

"Yet these borrowers have proven their ability and willingness to repay the loan, in practically all cases," the supervisor said. "They may not have been good risks for banks or other agencies, but Resettlement has helped them work out plans which have put them back on their feet. Many of those who were on relief last year, unable to obtain credit of any kind, are now being financed by private individuals or agencies, after having received a new start from Resettlement."

It is estimated that clothing and groceries being bought in Texas, as a result of Resettlement loans, total as much as the amount spent for work stock, and that physicians and pharmacists will receive more than $200,000.

"The average borrower is being allowed $12 this year for medical expenses, which he would not have been able to pay for, without this loan," Mr. Burkett said.

Another $300,000 is being invested in 10,000 cows, 890,000 in 10,000 hogs, $27,500 in 40,000 hens, $20,000 in household equipment.

More than two million dollars is being spent for seed, food and fuel, but those who were in the (Continued on Page Five)

CAST WILL GIVE DRAMA AGAIN SOON

Play Is Given Here at Auditorium Last Monday Night

Crowell, along with Quitaque and Childress, were selected to present plays at Dallas during the National Folk Festival at the Red River Valley regional meet held at Memphis Tuesday night, May 19.

"Memories," a short one-act play written and directed by Mrs. I. T. Graves, head of the speech and dramatic departments of Crowell High School, was given Tuesday night in Memphis as Crowell's entry in the regional meet of the National Folks Festival.

The national meet will be held at Dallas during the Centennial. The festival begins June 14 and ends June 21. The winners of the Memphis meet are qualified to enter the national meet.

The play is to be presented at the Crowell High School auditorium before it is to be presented at the Dallas meet. An admission charge of 10c and 25c will be made. The money taken in will be used to help defray the expenses of the cast in taking the play to Dallas.

The play which was presented at Memphis by the Crowell cast was presented in the school auditorium here Monday night following a piano recital by the pupils of Mrs. S. T. Crews.

The drama opens with a song, "Home on the Range," by a double mixed quartet. Several cowboy ballads are sung by the quartet as they are grouped around a piano in the home of an old pioneer couple.

After the singers leave the stage, the little granddaughter asks grandmother to tell a bedtime story. The capture by the Indians and the re-capture by the white people of Cynthia Ann Parker is told the little girl by her grandmother.

The play ends as the vocalists sing "Memories." Other songs given during the presentation were, "Cowboy's Dream," "The Chisholm Trail" and "The Last Roundup." Ragsdale Lattier plays the role of the grandfather, Miss Jim Lois Gafford is the grandmother, and Billie Billington is the granddaughter. Members of the double quartet are Mrs. A. F. Wright, Miss Doris Oswald, Mrs. Hub Speck, Wiley Ellis, Eli Smith, Sam Mills, Ebb Seales and John Rasor. Mrs. Arnold Rucker accompanied the double quartet at the piano.

The Childrens play which was also one of the winners, portrayed a porch scene illustrative of pioneer and cowboy life. It also brought in the first railroad of the county.

The entry by Quitaque, the third play selected to be shown at the national meet, was a scene on the old F Ranch. Much action typical of frontier life, dancing and fiddle music characterized the Quitaque play.

Other towns represented by entries were Clarendon, Turkey, Matador and Memphis. W. C. Davis, superintendent of the Memphis schools, was chairman of the regional meet of the Folk Festival. Mrs. I. T. Cole, chairman of the Folk Festival in Amarillo who is working out of Dallas, was the judge of the Memphis meet.

Antipathy for Snakes

Man's antipathy for snakes is a very strange human trait. There are those who believe this universal dislike dates back to the Garden of Eden when the serpent induced Eve to entice Adam to eat the forbidden fruit and that from then onward men have been waging war on them, giving them no quarter. Scientists do not agree with this ancient superstition. They claim that if the trait were hereditary babies would fear and dislike snakes. Instead, babies and children are not afraid of them until they learn it from their parents, and which occurs early in life.

Congratulations, Seniors

There is connected with high school graduation a significance found in no other ceremony. It is a step never to be repeated by the high school senior. It is significant in that it marks the termination of four years of preparation for life or higher education.

In spite of the fact that it concludes high school it is appropriately termed "commencement." The graduate is placed at the threshold of life. He is placed at the beginning of life. He is "on his own."

We congratulate you, Centennial Seniors of Crowell High School, on your accomplishment. We wish for you during your life's undertakings, good luck, success and happiness.

SOLDIER BONUS

World war veterans will begin to receive bonus bonds on June 15, according to a news dispatch from Washington, which will be one month ahead of the time originally calculated for the payment of the bonus. Bonds covering the 3,500,000 applications will be put into twelve postoffices on June 15 and it will be possible for veterans to turn their bonds back to the postoffice on June 16 and receive a check cashable anywhere on June 17 in all major cities of the United States. Outlying districts will not be so fortunate but the bonds will be received within a very short time.

The cash value of the bonus bonds will be in the neighborhood of two billion dollars and the money will be distributed to every nook and corner of the United States. They will bear interest at the rate of three per cent until due, non-transferable, and can be cashed at the postoffice any time prior to the date of maturity. It is estimated that at least one-half of the bonds will be cashed at once and the substance spent for one thing or another immediately. Probably another one-fourth will be cashed within six months and the remainder will be held by veterans for investment, etc.

Many schemes are already being hatched up to strip the veterans of their share of the bonus money and they should be very careful in the manner it is used. Perhaps there are many who need it to pay up back debts and buy useful and needed things for the family. Where this is true, no doubt the money will be spent, and it is right that it should be spent, but it would be a wise thing for every veteran to save at least a part of his bonus.

The spending of the bonus money will put lots of new money into circulation from the densely populated areas to the far corners of the United States, regardless of how and for what it is spent.

ARE PARTNERS

The district manager of a well known department store writing in a magazine of national importance says: "The successful retailer and the local newspaper are partners—whether they like it or not. Each partner is dependent on the other. In retailing there are three things that count: 1. The merchandising—the right merchandise, at the right price. 2. The store—the room, the set-up, the organization. 3. Some medium by which the merchant can inform the people in his trade territory about his merchandise and its price. That is, his local newspaper. He further states, "A program must be planned. It is not enough to be right on the first of these two. With modern merchandising conditions as they are, it is absolutely essential that the merchant have a well planned advertising program—that he consider his advertising as a definite part of his selling program. And that he have a medium that will carry his advertising to his potential customers."

"We would not give two cents for a town in which to do business that did not have a good newspaper—a live, wide awake, aggressive advertising medium with good trade territory coverage."

"It is a matter of no small importance to a retailer—this local newspaper problem. The merchant should be interested in the newspaper's advertising prestige, in its circulation and everything pertaining to it. The merchant should be extremely careful of the copy he runs—that it be truthful, that he doesn't shout 'Wolf! Wolf!' when there is no wolf—so that the newspaper, and all its advertising, will have acceptance in the minds of its readers."

"This partnership that the merchant has with his newspaper is no one-way street—it is just work both ways. The retailer needs the newspaper. The newspaper needs the retailer."

In speaking of money lotteries being used in some communities this writer has the following to suggest in its place, a thing which, he says, would cost advertisers much less and get definitely greater returns: "It would be a regular issue of a newspaper containing good, big, forceful display copy from the leading retailers of the community. This will bring folks to town to spend money, will build business permanently and will, in our humble opinion, build circulation for the newspaper also."

The police judge in California, who remitted the fine of a man whose car was tagged for parking overtime when he told the judge that he followed his wife because he didn't want her to buy any more furniture, probably had had some experience in buying furniture at a dollar down and dollar-a-week store.

That two-year old baby boy in New Orleans who can drink beer all day and smoke a big black cigar, according to his mother, is a very accomplished youngster. It takes most boys twenty-one years to learn to smoke a cigar and some never learn to like beer.

We've always heard of "gold bricks" but never saw one and probably never will, yet the Government mints are turning them out now and they are worth $14,000 and contain 400 ounces of gold each. One brick would satisfy us.

Oil Supply in Doubt

Geologists have learned many things about oil, but they cannot determine the exact extent of the world's natural oil supply. It is frequently predicted that this supply will last only a few years longer. But set deadlines are passed and the natural oil continues to flow.

The department of agriculture says the recent extremely mild winters are responsible for the spread of certain plant diseases.

LOCAL TEAM BOWS TO NINE FROM MOUNDS

Score Is 14 to 12; Bell Makes Debut; Lasts Seven Innings

The Medicine Mound nine trounced Crowell 14 to 12 in a wild baseball fray here Sunday to even a two-game series with the Hardeman County squad.

Both teams pounded the pellet for many hits and were aided by errors to chalk up runs by the dozens, although the game was full of thrills as each nine took turns about tying the score and forging ahead.

William Bell made his pitching debut for Crowell Sunday by pitching effective ball for seven innings, but weakened in the eighth and received non-too-loyal support from his mates, and was relieved by Rogers after allowing five runs.

Bellamy went the route for the visitors but experienced considerable trouble in the first and eighth innings as Crowell pushed three and four runs across during the two.

Graves and Ashford of Crowell led the hitting with four safe singles. One of Ashford's went for two bases. Junell, new squadman who played right field, chalked up three safe hits in his first game. Brooks, left fielder for the Medicine Mound boys pounded the agate for three hits in four trips to the plate.

Crowell started the scoring rampage in their half of the first inning with three tallies. The visitors retaliated in their portion of the second frame to tie the score, and it remained 3 and 3 until the fourth when Manager Hollingsworth's men again drove a scorer across.

Medicine Mound again knotted the count but the local boys again untied it in the fifth with a couple of tallies to make the score 6 to 4.

In the sixth the Mounds boys got another to narrow the margin.

It was in the eventful eighth that Medicine Mound went wild for five runs on three hits. They were aided by errors and a base on balls. At the end of the first half of the eighth Crowell was lagging 10 to 6, but the locals coupled four hits with a stolen base to knot the score 10-all.

At the beginning of the ninth with the score tied the Mound boys started a batting and scoring rally that was stopped only after four runs had been scored. The Crowell pitcher hit a batter and an infielder made an error to aid the visitors in their scoring.

In their half of the ninth the Crowell boys started a rally which fell short of tying the score by two runs. Hits by Graves, Norman, Ashford and Cook produced only half of the needed number to tie the count. The game ended with the score 14 to 12 with Crowell on the short end.

It was Crowell's third loss since the opening of the schedule. The local nine goes to Paducah next.

Strawberries greet us from all the grocery shelves now, and we just long to take them home with us. Strawberry shortcake is still the favorite way of serving strawberries.

We can use some of the homemade biscuit dough that we keep in the refrigerator to save us work. It would perhaps improve the dough to add about two tablespoons of sugar to the two cups of mixture. Hull and wash the strawberries and mash them partially with granulated sugar, and let them stand in the refrigerator about half an hour before putting them on the biscuits, just before serving. Serve your shortcake with rich cream, but do not whip it if you want to be up to the last minute in fashion. Strawberries should be stored in your electric refrigerator just as they come from the store until you are ready to use them.

Besides the universally liked strawberry shortcake, there are many other delicious ways to serve them. I think that to serve them in some uncooked form is more interesting, and we can save the recipes which call for cooked strawberries and use canned ones when we can't get the fresh.

Here is a fresh strawberry pie that you might all enjoy:

Strawberry Luscious
 1 qt. of strawberries
 3 egg whites
 3/4 cup granulated sugar
 1 cup cream, whipped
 Beat the egg whites and sugar gradually to make a meringue. Place in the bottom of a baked pie shell. Add all the berries (which have been cut in halves about a dozen). As a rule berries do not need to be stemmed any more. Place the whipped cream on top of the berries and use the remaining half of the meringue to garnish the top of the pie. Have the ingredients thoroughly chilled when the pie is completely chilled, place it in an electric refrigerator for half an hour before serving.

Refrigerator Crust
 1 cup Graham cracker or wafer crumbs
 3 tablespoons powdered sugar
 1/3 cup melted butter
 After rolling the crumbs, measure and combine with melted butter and sugar. Blend ingredients until mixture holds its shape. Press into a 9 inch pie plate, press firmly until 1/8 inch thick. Chill the electric refrigerator for firm.

SAVE COSTLY REPAIRS TO YOUR HOUSE WITH PAINT

It is now possible for the people of Crowell and Foard County to paint their homes, inside and outside, on the monthly payment plan. As BPS dealers in Crowell, we are now able to offer our customers the Patterson-Sargent Budget Payment Plan, which will make it possible for them to secure a cash loan at a low rate of interest on the monthly payment plan—no down payment or mortgage required. The labor and cost of material are financed in one operation. You not only have the advantage of the monthly payment plan but there is no better paint on the market than BPS.

We sell you the paint—you select your own painter. If you are interested it will be a pleasure for us to co-operate with you and your painter and make arrangements so you can take advantage of this plan.

Protecting your home and buildings from decay is certainly a wise procedure and paying by the month for your painting and decorating is as consistent as paying for an auto, refrigerator, etc.

Questions Fired at Texas Pension Head

This is the second of a series of questions that the people of Texas are asking. Orville S. Carpenter, state pension director, answers them frankly and to the point:

Q. How many people are there in Texas past the age of 65 years?

A. Over 300,000.

Q. Definitely, if Texas gave each one of these $30 a month, would the Federal Government pay half of it?

A. No.

Q. If each of the 300,000 received assistance, where would the money come from to pay the bill?

A. It could come only from the taxpayers of Texas.

Q. Could we pay everyone past 65 years of age $30 per month if we desired and were willing to do so without the millions that the Federal Government will contribute?

A. No, we could not because the Old Age Assistance Amendment to the Texas Constitution provides for payments not to exceed $15 per month per person.

Q. Then $15 per month would be all that we could pay if we gave everyone past 65 years of age assistance without the help of the Federal Government?

A. Yes.

You Can't Get Away With Illegal Rackets

(Fake accident racketeers are an insidious threat to every honest business and every individual. The following is one of a series of articles describing some of the tricks of the racketeers. Watch out for them yourself.)

Hoist-Hitter
A hoist-hitter is someone whose speciality is falling out of elevators.
One day a girl operator of an elevator in a large department store became uncomfortably aware of a man with a black moustache eyeing her while the elevator made several stops. Finally he got off. The elevator had stopped about an inch below the floor level. The man tripped and fell.
The operator stepped from her car, and called for the store detective.
"He took a flop on purpose," she said.
The man who had fallen, Jack Clinto, protested his innocence and evidently convinced the detective. A day or so later the girl was dismissed.
She obtained another elevator job in a theatrical office building and she didn't forget the man with the black moustache. What she didn't know was that meanwhile the officials of the Index Bureau System maintained by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters all grew suspicious of Jack Clinto.
One day, into the building where the girl had found new employment, walked the black-moustached man, accompanied by a male companion. They got into another elevator. Quickly the girl went to the starter, told him she'd take that car. In it, beside the two men, was a movie cameraman. At Scientist on Sunday, May 24.

The Golden Text is: "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul" (I Peter 2:11.)
Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "This I say then, Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would. . . . If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit" (Galatians 5:16, 17, 25.)
The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sooner or later we shall learn that the fetters of man's finite capacity are forged by the illusion that he lives in body instead of in Soul, in matter instead of in Spirit" (page 223.)

Texas Legends and Folklore

By Olive M. Johnson, Director of Speech Arts North Texas State Teachers College

The Legend of the San Saba Mine
Texas is the land of legends, with a most unusual history and romantic tradition. Six flags have claimed her. Every section has a stock of legendary lore, left by Indian aborigines, French explorers, Spanish conquistadores and monks—legends of pirates and freebooters, of filibusters, of cowboys and rangers, of settlers and pioneers. These are not only "twice-told stories" but tales told many times. "Some one told it to Grandfather, he told it to Father, and Father told me." Oral tradition; true legendary lore! Like the stories of Grimm and Andersen, these tales were built from repetition upon very slight beginnings.
There are few localities in Texas that do not have legends of lost mines. The most remarkable of these is that of the San Saba Mine, sometimes called the Bowie mine. The Lipan Indians, according to the story, had wrested the mine from the Spaniards and stored the billion James Bowie cultivated the friendship of the Lipans and gained the confidence of their chief. He lived among them; he was adopted into the tribe; finally they revealed their treasure to him.
The amazing quantity of gold seemed to turn Bowie's head, for he left the tribe, hurried to San Antonio, and organized a force to wrest the treasure from the Indians. He met the Indians at Calf Creek, McCulloch County, in one of the most brilliant fights of early days. There were 164 Indians and only eleven whites. The Texans had one man killed and seven wounded; the Indians had eighty killed and many wounded. Bowie was the only white man who knew the secret of the mine. Before he could resume his quest, he fell at the Alamo, carrying his secret with him; and through the years, countless Texans have striven in vain to find the lost San Saba mine.

Solomon's Ring
The wonderful ring of Solomon was thought to endow him with the faculty of learning the secrets of the world, with all of its wisdom, in some mysterious way.

Home Made Varnish Used to Finish Floor

A mixture of lubricating oil, kerosene, paraffin, and vinegar was used to refinish their living room floor according to Misses Bernita and Rosalie Fish, members of the Vivian H. D. Club.
A worn rug was removed and the entire floor refinished. It had been varnished around the edges of the rug, but had worn off.
The walls of the room were of painted beaver board with strips covering the cracks. These strips were removed and the room, walls and ceiling, were papered with a paper of conventional design. The paper was pasted directly over the beaver board.
To complete the changes, the glass curtains were washed and the draperies cleaned in gasoline. Bernita and Rosalie say they did all the work and that the result is a much improved room.

VIVIAN 4-H CLUB

The Vivian 4-H Club girls are lucky to know the majority of the 36 flowers, which were demonstrated by Miss Myrna Holman. The club meeting was held at the Vivian school house May 14.
Connie Faye Dishman and Kathelene Farris were two new members.
The next meeting will be May 28.

VIVIAN H. D. CLUB

The Vivian Home Demonstration Club met at the home of Mrs. T. W. Cooper Thursday, May 14, with 24 members and five visitors present, who were Mrs. Fred Diggs and Miss Opal Carroll, Grandma Cooper, Miss Mildred Fish and Miss Myrna Holman.
The hostess was assisted in piecing and embroidering a friendship quilt and also in quilting a quilt. The cleaning demonstration that was given by Mrs. Dora Barnes at Paducah was presented to the club by Miss Bernita Fish.
A covered dish luncheon was served at noon.
Miss Holman gave a very interesting demonstration on "Wild flowers and their legends."
The club voted to sponsor a community-wide social to be held at the school house on Friday night, May 22.
The club will meet at the home of Mrs. Allen Fish Friday, May 29, instead of May 28, which conflicted with the Paducah celebration. The community dress contest will be held at this meeting at 11 o'clock.

WEST SIDE H. D. CLUB

One would think Foard County to be the original home of wild flowers had he attended the display which was brought by Miss Myrna Holman to the West Side Club at the home of Mrs. R. Eubank, Wednesday, May 13.
Mrs. Chas. Bryson and Mrs. R. Eubank were appointed to get snapshots for the scrapbook. Mrs. S. E. Tate and Mrs. E. W. Burrow were added to the scrapbook committee. Mrs. Chas. Bryson was elected as a delegate to attend the Short Course.
A demonstration on salads by Mrs. R. Eubank, Mrs. S. E. Tate and Mrs. E. L. Ribble will be given May 27 at the home of Mrs. Tate. The dress contest will also be held at that time.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the notification that he need not expect any immediate financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which city he must reach from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five others, Hal begins his journey. Four of his companions excite his interest: a young attractive girl, Barry Tafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and a nondescript individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack. Barry's self-withdrawal annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes to at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness. He distrusts Crack. Hal's intimacy with Kerrigan ripens. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal directed to Barry's room, instead of his own. The meeting seems to soften her inherent unfriendliness and they exchange kisses. In the morning resumes her attitude of aloofness, but Hal has a feeling that she is not indifferent to him. At the luncheon stop, he tells Barry that she mustn't love him. In a speechless (the story is laid in prohibition days) Crack brutally insults Kerrigan. Hal forces him to apologize apologetically, and his feeling of enmity and disgust toward Crack is intensified. Next day Barry promises she will tell him, that night, of the shadow of despair that hangs over her. Motherless, she tells him, a girl, in her pride for him, had a feeling of adoration for her father. He had urged her to marry a man many years older than she. Without any real feeling for the man, but trusting her father, she did so. On his deathbed her father secured her promise to stick to her husband, "no matter what happens" for ten years. Her husband tells her he had evidence of a dishonorable episode in her father's life, and her hand had been the price of her husband's silence. That was four years ago, and she is adamant in her determination to keep her promise, though she acknowledges her love for Hal.

"What do you think about them? About the help you can give her? About the way you can bring her to her happiness, as well as yours? About the honor and conscience and courage that's in her even to try to fight a thing—she'd go to hell to get? No! You think about how unfair she is to you. You think you ought to walk in and wipe out twenty years of her father in a week, with the honor of a last promise to boot. You think she ought to see that your happiness is all that counts, all that makes the world fit to grow little apples in."

"She puts up with that—for the only reason under God's sky there could be for putting up with it. And you drive ahead between your blinders till you drive on to the last edge of the one thing she hoped to keep you out of. And when that one thing happens too, what do you do? Like a shot. You leave her to stew. You let her kill her own heart so that you'll go on your way; and you go on it. Go on it with your head full of the most important thing in the world, a fundamental of all decency outraged, all good in everything ended—because you, you were made to look like a fool for a few days in another man's little mind. Ireland, you ought to lie down on that floor and die."

Hal's teeth were clenched terribly upon red anger, curling shame, panic; and he turned so that Kerrigan shouldn't see those things stinging into his eyes. For an instant he thought he could keep his voice unshaken—in a cool, ironic smoothness, that would wither Kerrigan. "So she had it happen," he said; "she had Crack catch me there—so that I'd be free, so that I'd— The urgency of his despair came thick into his throat, and he broke off.

Kerrigan's stillness filled the room—cruel, steady, incriminating; and Hal had to keep his scalding vision on him so that something shouldn't snap in his head, a signal for madness. The brown eyes watching him could never have been warm, never friendly, never merciful; frozen in accusation, personality was gone from them—even the personality of contempt. Dread braced itself hard in Hal as Kerrigan rose, a judge at Doomsday, with the extinct cigarette far from incongruous in the corner of his merciless lips.

"Vain," he said quietly; "Vain, stuck-up, self-indulgent, flabby, without faith except in the importance of money. Why did I think you weren't so cheap?"

The last word lashed Hal to his feet, and it took all his quivering strength to force definition upon the thick words that came of themselves: "Kerrigan, you're a liar. A G—d liar! And if you were young— Something was strangling him inside his throat.

It was as if torture, finally released upon him, came to full impact upon the numb obstinacy of his faculties, with a tautly balanced rocking to show that something must plunge massively away in the next second. Hal found his desperate voice again, and in a quick-anger he cried at Kerrigan: "You're right. It's true—every rotten word of it's true."

He went to Kerrigan, took his big arms above the elbow, and sank his forehead awkwardly to the bulky shoulder. "Heaven forgive me," he said in the calm of an exhausted breath. "You, Colonel, you've got to forgive me, you— He rolled his head a little against the shoulder for want of any words, then let it rest there.

In a moment Kerrigan's hands came up under Hal's elbows and moved them gently. "I'm glad you didn't like it any better'n I did," he said, his voice low, untriumphant—deeply comforting around an odd sort of humility.

Like a divine intercession to spare them both an impasse of embarrassment, the telephone bell broke into startled clamor, and Hal went to it without looking at Kerrigan. It was Sister Anastasia —ready now to go.

"You'll call Barry up, Colonel," Hal said quickly. "To be sure she's there. You'll keep her there, do anything, tell her anything to keep her there safe till I can get to her, till—Hal's voice lowered to a pitch of bitter shame—"till I can kneel in dirt to her."

Kerrigan nodded, saying hurriedly, "Yes, but move, get back soon's you can."

"Six hours outside," said Hal, glancing at his watch. "Back by midnight sure. And, Colonel, look—do anything, anything to me, but don't ever talk to me like that again, will you?"

"D'you spec I could, even if I ever had to?" he said softly.

When Hal got to the place where Sister Anastasia was waiting, he felt he was somehow serving Barry in disciplining himself to the nun's service.

Anastasia's eyes were reticently animated. She said:

"I did not know when I telephoned you, they've told me there is a train to Santa Barbara in twenty minutes; and they've given me money for my ticket, from my brother."

"Ah, but sister," said Hal in sincere reproach, "I was so happy to take you myself. I want to."

"I was 'appy, too," she said, keeping her eyes from him till she had said it. Then, looking up at him with tranquil sureness. "But she is not 'appy—not at all. You can do something for her—now, tonight—instead of taking me on this long journey."

"But at least I may take you to the station—see you on the train."

He touched her arm to turn her toward the car, and she got in.

"Sister," said Hal, after he had started Rasputin into the traffic, "I have been a very great fool, and I have been near to being even a greater one. Now I see things clearly. Sister, I know who her husband is; I know he is evil. It doesn't matter how much I hate him nor how much I am ready to do to get her away from him. What matters is that whatever I do, I should be stronger and happier—for her, sister, and for myself—if you could tell me, as her friend and, I so much hope, mine too, that you also feel I must get her from him. It cannot be wicked to take evil from her life, no matter how it is done, can it? Even if she will not love me now, for the fool I've been and the wrong I've done, I know about that evil and, loving her, I cannot leave her with it, can I?"

Her eyes were on his—full of a frightened seriousness, a deeply fearful solicitude for what he had told her.

"Long ago," she said "when I was a girl as young as she—"

The sound of her own voice, saying that, seemed gently to enforce her silence. Looking at him—her eyes large, articulate in hopefulness, touched too with some longing sorrow—she barely nodded, once, and then bravely said, "You should do something."

Hal burst into the room without knocking, hot for Kerrigan's word that Barry was at her hotel, that he could go straight to her now and humble himself irrevocably, before he went on to whatever else must be done in final swiftness. Kerrigan looked at him as if he didn't believe what he saw.

"She went by train," Hal told him quickly. "You called Barry. She's all right, I can—"

"I can't get her," Kerrigan said, "but she's been here. That envelope—she left it. I've been trying to think I ought to open it."

Hal snatched the envelope and tore it open, and fresh fear ran at his heart as his eyes began to follow the decisive lines.

"I shouldn't write, my darling, but I've got to. Being with you, loving you as I shall forever, has shown me my way out and given me strength to take it. When you get back from Santa Barbara, it will be done and there'll be no good in trying to stop me. You mustn't try. I shall be all right. I'm so tired of trying to decide what's good, what's best. I can't have myself, but I can have myself—free of badness, to remember you and beauty. I can't let you go away thinking I don't love you."

"He will find out soon that you are Frederick Ireland's son. But there will be nothing left to show any connection between you and him. So when you see tomorrow's papers, you must keep quiet."

"I love you. I didn't know it would be so much. Darling, forgive me for what I've done to you, Barry."

And in postscript: "I don't mean suicide. You'll know that if I couldn't break my bargain for you, I couldn't at all. I'm going to end it."

Starting for the door, Hal yelled at Kerrigan: "She's going to kill him. Almighty G—d, Kerrigan, she's killing him now!"

In his terror, Hal still had time to be thankful for Kerrigan's ap-are the Walsh-Healey bill which sets up a little NRA for all government contracts for construction and the Wagner-Elbogen bill for low cost housing for the cities. Many of the friends of labor are disappointed that labor failed to see the importance of cooperating with the farmers to cut down high interest and thus restore their buying power so that the farmers could buy the products the industrial centers now easily over-produce in great quantities.

It is hard for the farmers to understand why the Federal Reserve Banking system furnishes its members currency at actual cost of printing, about 30c per $1,000, which Congress has recognized as a fair charge for such service since 1913; the same system through its members, loans money today from 1/2% to 3/4% to the large industrial concerns, for them to increase production at low cost, and yet this same banking system refuses to recognize their fallacy of charging the farmers and the small business man from 6% to 10% with even higher service rates. It is easy to increase production; the big problem of this Administration and the business world has been and is now to restore and redistribute buying power among the masses. How can we do this, if we refuse to recognize the rights of the little fellow to receive loans and particularly farm loans at low rates of interest? The Bible teaches that all interest is usury, and as such is wrong. Why cannot wealth recognize this fundamental law—money creates nothing and is entitled to only a fair service charge for its use. Why should not the same yard stick, used for measuring monetary service to the Banker and the Industrialist, be allowed and extended to the farmer and the small business man?

Treasury Post Office Appropriations Bill

The House and the Senate adopted the Conference Report on the above measure last Thursday, after spirited debate on the section providing twenty-six and one-half million dollars appropriation for the continuation of the fraudulent ocean mail contracts entered into near the close of the Hoover Administration. The Senate struck out this ocean mail subsidy, but the House conferees insisted upon it being restored and due to parliamentary maneuvering no record vote could be forced so that the people would know what members of the House desired to continue this fraud upon the American tax payers. This is another illustration of why our rules should be amended so that a small number of members can force a record vote. We could defeat such appropriations as these ocean mail subsidies if we could secure a record vote.

Rural Electrification

The House and the Senate on Friday finally agreed on the conference report on rural electrification which legislation passed the Congress several weeks ago. The report as finally agreed to gives preference to municipal and co-operative groups over the Power Trust for extension of such services into the farm areas. Another victory for Senator Norris and the progressive thought in Congress.

The Calendar

The Senate is still wrestling with the deficiency and tax bills which it will consider this week. Senator Robinson promises to hold night sessions, if necessary, until these two measures are finally passed. This procedure is expected to force the completion of the Administration's program by June 6th. The House will consider private and consent bills on Monday and Tuesday. Conference Reports on Wednesday and the Robinson-Patman Anti-Chain Store bill the remainder of the week.

Tea Celebrates 25th Anniversary Of Adelpian Club

The Adelpian Club celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary last Wednesday with a reception for the Federated Clubs of Crowell at the beautiful home of its president, Mrs. S. S. Bell. Co-hostesses with Mrs. Bell were Mesdames L. A. Andrews, T. B. Burrow, Raymond Burrow and John Roberts. The guests were received at the door by Mrs. Bell. The reception suite was profusely decorated with cut flowers.

A piano solo by Miss Mary Elizabeth Hughton was the first number on the program. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. T. S. Haney, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Sidney Miller. The feature number of the program was a talk on "Gardens" by the guest speaker, Mrs. W. S. Douglas, of Sweetwater, who is state chairman of gardens in the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Douglas based her talk on flower legends and the importance of nature in our lives. She prefaced her talk with the statement that two of the outstanding events in the existence of the human race took place in gardens. The Garden of Eden was chosen for the creation of man and the Garden of Gethsemane for the greatest sacrifice that could be made for man.

She quoted from the great poets, gave many outstanding historical facts and told many legends that were woven around the history of gardens, the love of all people for flowers and the uplifting influence they have on all lives.

The appointments of the dining room had, as a color scheme, the club colors, purple and gold. The centerpiece for the lace-covered dining table consisted of the numbers "1911" in silver, placed on a reflector. This was the year of the club's organization. Gold candles in silver candle-sticks and silver vases holding purple and red flowers added further attraction to the table.

Mrs. Bell poured punch from a crystal punch bowl and the Alpha Junior Adelpians served the punch with sandwiches, cakes and candies from tiered trays.

Favors were sweet peas to which were attached cards with "Adelpian Club, 1911-1936" and were given to the guests as they left the dining room.

Helen Harwell and Oscar Bomar played "Princeton Canon Song," and Mary Jane Turrentine had "The Dance of the Demon" as a solo number.

The closing number of the program was a duet entitled "Hungary" by Hazel Gamble and Mrs. Crews.

Over 100,000 See Rexall Locomotive

The world's first convention train, a hotel-on-wheels, is creating tremendous interest along the route of its 29,000-mile tour of the country. In nine stops in Texas 106,017 persons inspected the exhibits aboard the twelve-car streamlined train.

The convention was attended Monday and Tuesday of last week by Henry Ferguson as the train made a two-day stop at Amarillo.

Built by the United Drug Company to hold conventions of Rexall druggists in 109 towns during an 8-month tour, the train is revolutionizing sales technique by taking the convention to the dealer's doorstep instead of asking him to travel long distances and take several days off from business. The schedule is so arranged that no Rexall dealer need travel more than 100 miles from his store. As a result, more than 95 per cent of the Rexall dealers in the territories already visited have attended the one-day conventions held aboard the train.

Designed especially for convention purposes, the train carries four cars of merchandising exhibits, two meeting cars accommodating 300 delegates, a cafeteria diner from which lunch and dinner are served, a comfortable lounge car, two cars for dancing, and its own orchestra, the Rexall Ramblers under the direction of Jack Fay of Boston.

Ancient Skis

Like the wheel and the canoe, no one knows what primitive genius first conveyed the idea of the ski. Centuries back fair-haired Norsemen skimmed down the steep slopes of their native mountains on wooden runners they called skis or skees. (Our word ski of the same origin.) In Switzerland they have been used by experts for many years, and schoolboys in Japan have been jumping and sliding about the Japanese mountains on skis for many years.

MAKES COLD BY BURNING KEROSENE

SUPERFEX

Requires no electricity Uses no running water Operates on kerosene

MAKING ICE from oil heat may sound like some sort of a miracle, but in thousands of homes all over the country Superfex Refrigerators have proved over a period of years that "coal oil" may be used to make modern refrigeration of the most economical sort. Not a miracle, but certainly a most important blessing to rural homes.

This amazing refrigerator actually provides plenty of cold for keeping foods fresh, freezing ice cubes, and making frozen desserts, simply by burning a small amount of kerosene!

The new 1936 models offer adjustable shelves, ample food storage space, porcelain lining and dozens of other features that save time, work and trouble. And, if you wish, you may purchase a Superfex on easy terms. Ask for free home demonstration.

Owners operate about two hours each day! Simply light the convenient burner. That's all you have to do—they go out automatically; but Superfex keeps right on working. It gives you twenty-four hours of more refrigeration with no lighting. Superfex gives you modern refrigeration in its most economical form.
