BOYS URGED TO APPLY FOR CCC SERVICE EARLY

Many Vacancies Made; Requirements Have Been Modified

Any boy in Foard County who is between the age of 17 and 24 years, unmarried and a citizen of the United States and wishes to enroll for Civilian Conservation Service should place his application with the local office as soon as possible. H. E. Thomas, head of the local relief office, stated Wednesday. The boy or his family is not required to be relief clients before he can apply for CCC service.

"The quota for Foard County is set by the number of applications made at the Crowell office and it is thought that all of the boys who apply within the next month will be accepted, because of the unusual large call for this enrollment period," Mr. Thomas said.

A call for approximately 11,000 white and 1,200 colored boys to be enrolled into the corps during October has been issued by Sam R. Johnson, director of the Texas Relief Commission, to the various County Welfare Boards. This number far exceeds any former enrollment and will give almost all boys in the state an opportunity to enroll if they are unemployed, 17 to 23 years of age, and whose parents or themselves, due to financial limitations, are not in a position to secure or provide comparable training. Full strength of the Texas corps is 16,000 white and 1,700 colored, and due to discharge of volunteers reaching the age of 24 completion of the maximum enrollment of two years, replacements will be necessary.

Heretofore, rules did not allow boys from other than the groups receiving or eligible to receive public assistance be accepted, but (Continued on Page Four.)

The occasion was made possible through the co-operation of Crowell merchants. About 75 F. F. A. and 4-H boys and guests were present.

The group was addressed by Judge Claude Callaway. He stressed the importance of these two organizations to a community and the opportunities in training offered to the boys. Judge Callaway also congratulated the boys and their leaders for the progress they have made.

In the afternoon, games of football and softball were played. A horseshoe pitching contest was held and Grady Graves and Francis Todd were victorious. A small prize was given to the winners.

Pease Dam Plea Is Heard in Washington

Texans interested in flood control work on the Pease River appealed to the Board of Army Engineers Tuesday, Aug. 24, to order a detailed survey of the stream with a view to building a dam eight miles northwest of Crowell, according to a dispatch from Washington on the above date.

A delegation headed by Senators Sheppard and Connally asked the board to override an adverse report issued June 16 by a division engineer after a preliminary survey. Accompanying the Senators were Representative W. D. McFarlane, Graham; W. H. Wright, Vernon, general manager of the Pease River Flood Control district, and R. H. Nichols, Vernon publisher.

Sheppard said construction of a dam on the river would create a lake 17 miles long and 85 feet deep, storing 390,000 acre feet of water drained from 2,425 square miles. Estimated cost of the dam would be $2,226,000.

McFarlane said if the board acted unfavorably in the request, he would seek congressional authorization next year of a detailed survey.

WILDCATS IN THIRD WEEK OF WORKOUTS; WILL SCRIMMAGE IN ELDORADO, OKLA., FRIDAY

Crowell High School Wildcats are rapidly getting into shape for their first game Friday night of next week with the Floydada Whirlwinds after two and one-half weeks of work-outs under Coach Grady Graves. The squad will settle down Monday to its last week of practice before the first game and try to smooth out the rough spots in the offensive and defensive play.

Scrimmage at Eldorado

The Wildcats will close the third week of work-outs with a scrimmage with the Eldorado High School squad at Eldorado, Okla., Friday afternoon. Coach Graves plans to take as many of the boys as possible to give them the experience.

In the scrimmages this week, Charles Branch has been showing up well as a back, and proved to Wildcat fans that he is just as capable in the backfield as in the line. Coach Graves has great hopes for this gridman and in Branch, he has a utility man who will probably see lots of service in both the line and backfield.

Reserve Strength

Hugh Solis, Leroy Gibson and A. Y. Olds are reserve backs. Solis, most experienced man of the three, has good possibilities and without a doubt will see service in the backfield this year or at one of the end positions.

Elmer Nichols and Jack Bailey are reserve tackles and Whitley Mitchell and Charles Clark will be replacements as ends. Other reserve linemen are Reid Thomson, Murrell Diggs, Carl Connell and Murphy Solis. The boys named above reported for their first fall workouts at the opening of the practice sessions and are the Wildcats of future years.

Scrimmage With Margaret

Strength of the squad was given its first test Friday in a scrimmage with a team of Margaret all-stars. The Wildcats scored three touchdowns, gaining more yards from scrimmage and completing more passes than the heavier Margaret players.

Versatile Backfield

The Crowell eleven stopped the line play of the heavier visitors and intercepted a number of passes. The elusive Wildcat end slipped through the line for nice gains on a greater portion of the plays,

Assembly Program

A brief program in the high school auditorium, beginning at 9 o'clock, will officially open the new term. All pupils, with the exception of those in the primary grades, are to assemble in the auditorium at this time. School patrons are extended an invitation to attend the exercises in the auditorium and to visit the class rooms.

ROTARY CLUB

Since he had moved to Texas he had decided the geography was wrong, but after making this trip through the western states to Washington and Oregon and back through California he had changed his mind again and has decided the geography he studied when a boy is about right.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin.—On the eve of two or more special sessions of the 45th legislature, called primarily to raise more tax money, there is accumulating evidence throughout Texas that with the passing of the depression emergency, the people of Texas are inclining strongly toward a return to sanity in government.

Legislators have been home and talked with the home-folks. They have been reading the home newspapers. An able senate committee, with Holbrook of Galveston, Collier of Eastland, and Stone of Brenham, has been doing a yeoman service in digging into governmental waste and extravagance, and will have some pertinent recommendations to make to the legislature.

Col. Ernest O. Thompson, a leading candidate for governor this year, has sounded a bold note by declaring that no new taxes are needed, and claiming that a little encouragement to new industry will develop business, and thus yield more revenue from existing imposts, than the strangling process of hiking existing taxes or thinking up new ones to drive business away.

Committee Is Convinced

The senate investigating committee has found some surprising things about appropriations for the departments, in a hurried inquiry. Apparently, many members of the legislature, voting for the biennial appropriation bills during the final rush of the regular session, did not even know what was in the bills.

"I have found out enough to know that I am not going to vote for any new taxes. We can largely wipe out the deficit by cutting expenses and by diligent effort in collecting delinquent taxes," said Sen. Stone. He cited one department whose expense jumped from $5,000 to $70,000 since 1930, without any additional duties imposed on it by statute.

F. A. Trawick, who has been seriously ill for several days, is much better at this writing, also J. L. Farrar, who is in the Veterans' Hospital at Muskogee, Okla., is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Mooney and Estine, and Marvin London of Montague, constituting a committee studying rural school aid, who favor a 4 per cent oil tax and increased natural resources levies. Then there are members of the pension liberalization bloc, who are committed to raising some additional pension revenue.

Stone Suggestion Sen. Albert Stone has conceived a clever scheme to divert the "heat" from the pension partisans from the state to their local county officials. He advocates legislation to turn over the state's share of all delinquent taxes collected during the biennium to the old age pension fund.

Similar expressions from Sen. Collier, of Eastland, Reps. Vernon Lemons, Rainbow; Rawlins Colquitt, Dallas; Merritt Gibson, of Longview, and others indicate the widespread sentiment. Even Rep. Herman Jones, of Decatur, author of the franchise tax bill last session, which was defeated, now says "We don't need as much money as we thought at first."

"WE HEAR"

By W. E. HURD

Big Guns Start Rumbling

Burkburnett is aiming at the district championship again this year and they should because they humbled the teams of this district to hang up the belt in the Bulldog kennel last season and they have many of their veterans back, although W. E. hears that Carl Cook, honor guard of the Burk eleven, moved to California this week. This team went into regional finals in 1936.

Burk gives credit to Crowell; Iowa Park, who has four letter-men, eleven squadmen and a new coach, Mr. Smith; Throckmorton, Chillicothe and Archer City for their 1937 prospects and gameness to remain in the melee to try to defeat them this year. It must be remembered that Seymour will place a team on the gridirons of the district that will make the going tough for the teams they will meet.

The Burk scribe says that Crowell is a threat and is the team listed as the favorite to upset the Bulldogs—if that is done this year. W. E. will not go as far as present to say that the Wildcats will turn the trick but he has faith in the local boys and does say that the Crowell eleven will give the Burk lads a scrap that will be worth the price of admission to see.

The writer of "Punts and Passes" column in the Burkburnett Star, stated that he was in Crowell last week and that some of the ardent Wildcat fans told him that the fans here were ready to make the Burkburnett fans feel at home and were ready to do anything to make them enjoy the occasion until the game started, then it would be very sad for the Burk fans. Crowell fans seemed to really think that the outcome of the game would make them tearful. The writer also says that it is up to the team and a loyal bunch of fans and that every ably bodied Bulldog fan should be in the Foard County stadium when the whistle blows for the game.

You Are Welcome

An invitation is extended to the Burkburnett fans to attend the Bulldog-Wildcat game, which will be played here Nov. 19, and W. E. hopes that the prediction made by the Burk writer will be true. A loyal football fan, who backs his team to the last ditch and believes that his team will win, is a man to be admired.

As W. E. stated above Burk fans are welcome in Crowell and if their team wins we will pat them on the back and tell them that Burk has a good team, but, in order to make the occasion more pleasant for the visiting fans, in case they lose, we might even furnish handkerchiefs (or at least napkins) for the sad occasion.

Crowell fans know that Burk will have a very strong team this season, but they also know that the Bulldogs will have to meet several strong teams and will have to fight their hardest every inch of the way.

What Have We Here?

Coach Muse over at Chillicothe has found a 204-pound back, Wayne Streety, and this much "beef" will be a thorn to the other teams of the district, including Burk, providing he can "deliver the goods." Chillicothe is planning for a successful season this year. They have good prospects for their squad, a new gridiron, lights, stadium and five of their conference games at home. The Eagles of 1938 should be very strong because so many of this year's squad will return and may be they will get back to their high standing of former years next year—if they don't this season.

But the Eagle eleven for the coming season is one that will have to be respected and it will take a good team to defeat them, due to the fact that they have experienced men and a 204-pounder in the backfield that should be able to tear a 154-pound line to pieces, if he is good, but W. E. has always heard that a big man can be stopped and it is known that Crowell has players in the line and backfield whose greatest delight is making "shoe-string" tackles, to say nothing of the other six teams.

It is a violation of the law to use government mail sacks for purposes other than mail.

Astaire and Rogers Do Dance on Roller Skates at Rialto

As a novelty number for "Shall We Dance," Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers show their versatility by dancing on roller skates, as well as a number of straight away flying feet numbers. In addition to these dances, Fred Astaire does a beautiful ballet number with Harriet Hoctor. Six new song hits appear in the picture, namely, "Let's Call the Whole Off," "Slap That Bass," "Beginner's Luck," "They All Laughed," "They Can't Take That Away," and "Shall We Dance."

The story has that same comedy which is typical of all Astaire and Rogers pictures and Edward Everett Horton with Eric Blore supply plenty of comedy.

"Shall We Dance" appears at the Rialto tonight and Friday.

"Man" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, September 5.
The Golden Text is: "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them" (Genesis 1:27.)
Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God" (Romans 8:16.)
The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Man is the family name for all ideas, the sons and daughters of God" (page 515.)

Two Minute Sermon

(By Thomas Hastwell)

By the Sweat of Thy Brow: When Moses led the children of Israel through the wilderness, God used the opportunity that the journey of forty years provided, to teach the Jews many things necessary for them to know as a nation. One of the things he taught was the necessity of industry. Each morning, though the manna was given freely from heaven, it was necessary for the head of each house to gather enough for his family for the day. There was no other plan. The head of each house was required to work each day for that day's bread. It emphasizes, it seems to me, God's regard for industry in man. I recall as a boy that my father, who was endowed with habits of tireless industry, often said to me: "There are many instances in the Bible where God promises to forgive a sinful man, but nowhere does he hold out any promise to a lazy man." I have often thought of that and have never seen it denied. The quality of industry in a man is indicative of the presence of many other fine basic qualities. There is no place in God's plan or man's scheme of living for a lazy man. "By the sweat of thy brow thou shalt eat bread," was not pronounced as a curse, it is the mark of a man, and such men indisputably bear the stamp of God's approval. The lazy, shiftless man is not only an abomination in the sight of man, but I verily believe in the sight of God as well.

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER

By Kathleen Norris

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER X — Distracted by the event between Quent and Serena, she wraps up the children's lives and tearfully awaits a Christmas. While Vic is in the unbearable situation with Magda, Serena boldly calls Magda had told her she is willing to be patient as long as Serena at her own best.

She liked her terribly, don't you like her, turning the other way, she said, "It isn't that!" Quent impatiently. "If it was just her, it wouldn't matter! I like her. I don't suppose she's met a man in ten years hasn't fallen for her. A man like her doctor—she tells me she's one of the big men at the hospital in New York." Quent asked her to marry him when she was only fourteen. And the doctor had been in any mood but that of a sword blade in the air.

"It isn't what I feel for Quent, hearing nothing, after a moment, 'It's that I can't see any sense in her.' but about Spencer?" Victoria simply after a silence. "She did you say?" "That she love Spencer?" "That was a funny thing, she told me." Quent told the whole story of Magda had told her daughters before; the story of the woman wheeled into the room on the promise of love to follow, Spencer, and Ferdie, and all the other men from these beautiful women were to prove false, had said to "love enough for two." "It's as sorry as I am," Quent finished.

Quent was silent for a while, then he said, "I feel that temperately: to feel that something must be done." "Quent sent her a startled look, Lord, Vicky, she can't this way, you know. Her life there is simply hell, that's it. Morrison never has appeared her, he's completely up in his own troubles, that has she to live for." "What do you want to do, Quent?" Vicky asked at last, in a quiet, expressionless voice, her dark rumpled head was in his big hands; he spoke slowly. "I don't know. I told her today thought you'd jump at taking a couple of the kids off for a while—France, maybe—we'll close up this house..." "The world was tottering about when he heard the hurricane blowing in her ears, breathed the earth-shaking dust, felt the earth shake." "I mean leave some of them in the house with nurse and take the others off to the country." "His tone was dubious, irritated. He was still turning his hair with restless fingers. "We could make some arrangement," he said. "What I don't see is what you're doing here slaving yourself for the kids, when—when you've changed so. There's three people being unhappy, and a little common sense would be satisfied. This is as much a surprise to you, Vic, it came to me like a bolt, the other day, when I said to myself, 'What if I never met her—she actually never met me—she actually never met me—she actually never met me.' She felt that way about me, and I'll keep still!" "You take you day, Serena—go ahead! Take a year, take two years. Flatter him, and meet him for lunch, and take his presents, and hate me. Hate me because I won't give you your way. But in the end I'll win!"

Victoria and Violet Keats sat on the Hardisty lawn on a hot spring afternoon and discussed, with limitations, their husbands and children, their homes, servants, and friends, their lives generally. The long Saturday had been spent by Violet and her own quartette of youngsters with the Hardisty troop; now it was late afternoon, and the problem of getting Kate, Duna, Bunty, and Babs Keats amicably separated from Gwen, Kenty, Sue, Dicky, Bobs, and Madeline Hardisty was like an uneasy under-current to the women's talk.

this word. But at least it seemed to be no shock to Quent. He said, with a half smile for the first time, "She says she simply hates the word. She is divorced once, and the idea makes her sick. I suppose it makes any decent woman sick."

"Whatever you decide to do, Quent," Victoria said, after a moment, standing up as an indication that the conversation was over. "Count on leaving me here with the children. I couldn't leave any of them—it would only mean expense and trouble for you. I'll stay here—I'm glad we've talked about it, anyway, and I think I'll go to bed. Good night."

"I think you're a tremendous sport to take it this way. Let me talk to her—she'll work it all out," Quent said. The library door closed; there was no other answer.

"He's a genius, of course," Vicky said to herself, against the surge of pain in her heart, as she went slowly upstairs in the big house that of late had seemed so wintry and desolate. "He's a genius, and geniuses have times of not knowing what they're doing or saying!"

"All Right, Serena," She Said Half Aloud.

Everyone says that Quent is in a class by himself—he's temporarily out of his mind, that's all! She looked across at the Morrison house; it's tiled Spanish roof and balconies, it's oaks and peppers were brightly lighted by the cold January moon.

"All right, Serena," she said half aloud, apostrophizing the dim light that shone in the window she knew to be Serena's window. "All right—wait for him to telephone. He will. He said five minutes ago that he'd empty the ashtrays and lock the doors, and that always means he's going to telephone you. Let him tell you he's had a talk with Vicky, and she was surprisingly sensible," and say, "Ah, lover, then maybe we can begin to play tomorrow!"

"But from now on it's my will against your admirable little-girl innocence, Serena. He'll never get free of me, for I'll never consent to it. He'll never marry you while I live, and I'm not going to die! I'm going to be right here, and after a while you'll give in because there's nothing else for you to do. You belong to him now—and I know it, while he was telling me how strong you were, how controlled you were! You're his now, you've had all you're going to have from him—the rest is all mine! I'm the wife, and my children, and I can wait. I'll know it all, and I'll keep still—I'll be pitied, and women will hint things to me, and I'll keep still!"

"You take you day, Serena—go ahead! Take a year, take two years. Flatter him, and meet him for lunch, and take his presents, and hate me. Hate me because I won't give you your way. But in the end I'll win!"

Victoria and Violet Keats sat on the Hardisty lawn on a hot spring afternoon and discussed, with limitations, their husbands and children, their homes, servants, and friends, their lives generally. The long Saturday had been spent by Violet and her own quartette of youngsters with the Hardisty troop; now it was late afternoon, and the problem of getting Kate, Duna, Bunty, and Babs Keats amicably separated from Gwen, Kenty, Sue, Dicky, Bobs, and Madeline Hardisty was like an uneasy under-current to the women's talk.

"I suppose you couldn't leave them all with us, Vi?" "What, all four of them?" Violet ejaculated. "I couldn't leave one. Mother's birthday tomorrow." "I'd forgotten that—although I sent her flowers." "Did you really think to send her flowers, Vic?" "I did, and a book." "You're charming, and she really loves you, and always has," Violet said, touched into a rare display of feeling. "I don't know why you worry so about this baby of yours," she added, going back to earlier talk. "He may be just slow. Duna was terribly slow; he didn't walk until he was nineteen months old."

Violet looked down at the yearling baby in her lap.

"Marty's not slow," she said gently. "It's more than that, Vi. My own boy!"

The last was murmured to the child, who looked up at her with smiling blue eyes. Small and relaxed and secure, he lay in her arms. He never fretted, he did not seem sick, but this littlest of the Hardistys had only been loaned to her for a while, and his mother knew it.

"Quent think so?" Mrs. Keats asked abruptly. "You've had another opinion?" "Knows so," Victoria spoke mildly, but her whole body was taut with a sign.

Violet was silent.

"Isn't it strange?—this little fellow means more to Quent than any of the others did. He's always loved them as soon as they got interesting, but only this one from the very start!"

"All men are like that," Violet put into the pause.

"Martin he adores. It's strange," Vicky mused. "He'll come home next after night and sit holding him. He used to say Marty understood him; he doesn't say that now, he doesn't say anything."

"I feel so badly for Quent," Vicky presently continued.

"For Quent?" Mrs. Keats' tone was sharp and quick. She apparently reconsidered what else she might have added, and when she spoke again her tone was milder. "I feel sorry for you, my dear," she said. "I think you're a remarkable woman, Vicky."

"Oh, thank you," Vicky answered gratefully, with a little flush.

"And so does everyone else," Violet persisted. "And sometimes there is someone I'd like to talk to!" she added, significantly.

Vic's eyes laughed, but there was a glint of warning in them, too.

"Because I adore Quent—we both do," Violet proceeded further. "We both do," she repeated, trying to open a door.

"Quent's a genius," Vic said simply, closing it once and for all.

"How'd he like Germany, Vic?" the other woman asked, abandoning her other lead.

"He had a remarkable experience. He stayed with the Von Hoffmanns and almost worked himself to death. But he said it was a wonderful experience."

"He got home last week, you said?"

"Last Saturday. He looks thin, older, somehow," Victoria said. "Ah, here they all come!"

Panting, breathless, exhausted, the children now emerged from cover and flung themselves about on the lawn. They ranged from Kate Keats and Gwen, sixteen years old apiece, to Madeleine Hardisty, who was four. Brown, tall, handsome children in white shirts and tan shorts, they glowed, sparkled, shone with the beauty of bright eyes and clear skin, flashing teeth and tumbling masses of rick soft hair, firm young legs and arms. They had had luncheon on the lawn today; had had two swims of indeterminate length. Now Susan's brilliant thought was that the Keates should stay to supper, and that they should make it a picnic. Victoria considered this temperately.

"But Aunt Vi says that tomorrow's their Gran's birthday."

"But couldn't we go home on the train after dinner? Duna'd take us; he could take us the way he did the circus day?" Kate Keats pleaded eagerly.

"Oh, no, it's too much of an imposition, Vic!" Violet said.

"It's no imposition at all," Vicky assured her. She looked up over the baby's head and her eyes widened, although she did not smile. "Here's Quent!" she added.

There was a general swarm of children toward him, accompanied by the usual deafening uproar, and Quent came up to the women with the younger members of his family hanging on him like limpets. Violet Keats thought he looked older indeed; there were touches of silver in his Indian-brown temples, and he seemed quieter, somehow; more like the old remembered Quent; she liked the expression of his face. He was genuinely happy to see her; kissed her in the old brotherly fashion; they had not seen each other since his return from a three months' visit to Germany. Violet questioned him about it, and he sat holding the delicate little Martin very gently in his big hands, and sometimes kissing the top of the baby's dark fluffy little head. The question of the Keates remaining was presently raised.

"Next year—gosh, I can drive, Uncle Quent," Duna Keats said manfully. "But gosh, Dad doesn't want me to until I get a license."

"But look here, Vicky," Quent said, with his face brightening. "I've got to go to San Francisco and see a patient tonight; a woman we operated on this afternoon. I told them I'd be in about ten. Why not let me drive these rough-necks in with me, if their mother's willing?"

The ensuing wild pandemonium of the lawn in the spring sunset presently resolved itself into definite picnic plans. The children were to use the grill behind the old cow yard.

"Good to get home, Quent?" Violet asked.

"Yes," he said quietly, unsmilingly. "It's good to get home."

"The Child in the Corner ... NEEDS GOOD LIGHT, TOO!"

IT IS unfortunate that so many West Texas school rooms were built without consideration for "the child in the corner". Too often he or she is surrounded by blackboards that give off no light. Crowded conditions make it impossible to seat every child where ample light is obtained from outside.

It is safe to predict that school rooms of the future will be constructed so as to assure students the maximum light provided by nature. But, meanwhile, it is impractical to re-build the present facilities. Hence, it is highly important that artificial light be used to give EVERY child an opportunity to develop under normal circumstances.

Home lighting problems have been solved by the student lamp. Installed today, the I. E. S. student lamp is a guarantee of ample light conducive to sight conservation when your boy or girl begins the forthcoming school term.

Nor can the most scientifically constructed school room, depending upon nature alone, provide sufficient light on gloomy days during the winter school months. Children are required to read on cloudy days when light is reduced to less than 10 foot-candles.

This company has developed a school lighting system that is economical. It is designed primarily for "the child in the corner". At the same time, it throws no major burden on school trustees—responsible for school finances. Inquire at our local office for free estimate.

Crowell Garden Club Will Open Calendar Oct. 8

With Mrs. H. K. Edwards as president, Mrs. O. R. Boman as vice president and Mrs. Marion Crowell secretary and treasurer, the Crowell Garden Club will open its 1937-38 calendar on October 8. The programs have been outlined by Mrs. L. A. Andrews, Mrs. Hubbard Brown and Mrs. R. L. Kincaid.

The Garden Club has, for projects and aims for the year, three things, a shelf of garden books and magazines, a fall flower show and a city park and playground.

Our garden month by month, local experiences in planting and legends, and lore of flowers, constitute the course of study and the meetings will be held on the second Friday of each month from October to June.

At each meeting garden queries will be asked and answered. Exhibits of cut flowers will be on display each time and these will be judged.

Study subjects include "Hedges and Vines for Foard County," "Bulbs for Foard County," "Evergreens in Foard County," "Native Trees and Shrubs," "Roses and Their Care," and "Wild Flowers in Foard County."

A very important phase of the work is the study of the proper garden methods to pursue each month, such as when and how to prepare the soil, what to plant and when to plant it for best results, insect control, fertilizing, landscaping and pruning.

The Garden Club is affiliated with the State Federation of Garden Clubs. Much work has already been done in the two years of the life of the Crowell Garden Club and with the foregoing outline, another profitable year is in store.

Frank Flesher and Mrs. J. A. Stovall.

Mrs. Tom Russell was elected president for the coming year. Mrs. Lewis Ballard was selected as secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Walker P. Todd as publicity chairman.

The class is to sponsor a lecture which will be given by Rev. E. L. Yeats at the Methodist Church Sept. 16. The lecture will deal with Rev. Yeats' recent trip to Old Mexico. The proceeds of this lecture will be applied on the church debt.

Mrs. P. D. Moseley, Mrs. Henry Hays and Mrs. Adrian Thomson served refreshments to twelve class members and one visitor, Mrs. T. D. Roberts.

B. & P. W. Club Outlines Series of Programs for Year

"Our Town's Business" is the general theme of the course of study of the B. & P. W. Club for the ensuing year. The unique program of community self-study has been approved by the Board of Directors of the National Federation as the national program for 1937-38. They feel that some understanding of the economic factors at work in our immediate surroundings is essential, if business women are to create opportunity and foster security for themselves and for their fellow citizens.

It is stirring to think of 62,000 women working together on such a program. No organization of either men or women has before tried on a national scale to investigate the fundamentals of local business in relation to day by day living.

Every business and professional woman's progress depends upon the business situation, first in her own community, then in her nation, then in the world. Every stand she takes for improving conditions tends to improve her own lot.

With these considerations in mind, the calendar committee, composed of Mrs. Alva Spencer, Mrs. Henry Borchardt and Miss Lottie Russell, has planned a series of programs which promise to be both interesting and uplifting. Social meetings include a costume party, a "Hit or Miss" dinner, International Relations banquet, and others.

Regular meetings of the club will be resumed Thursday, Sept. 2, and meetings will be held twice monthly thereafter.

Mrs. Allee has been a resident of this section for more than fifty years and has been an influential character in the development and growth of Crowell and Foard County.

It also includes estimates of the amount of taxes to be collected for the year ending June 30, 1938. The amount of money to be spent for each item.

This estimated income was based on a county-wide tax rate of $1.29 and 15 cents for each commissioner's precinct, making a total county rate of $1.32 for 1938. This rate is three cents higher than that of $1.32 for 1936 but is twelve cents lower than the county rate of 1935, which was $1.47.

In The News 15 Years Ago

The items below were taken in whole or in part from the issue of The Foard County News of Sept. 1, 1922.

School Will Open Monday

The Crowell school is getting a good start by opening Monday, Sept. 4. This will make it possible to get in four months before the new year, leaving five months after the first. This makes the best division of the year's work that can be made.

Mr. Campbell, the superintendent, has been on the grounds for two months and a half getting matters in shape for the school to start and we believe his time will prove to be very profitable to the school. He has organized his teachers and has outlined the work and is planning for a great school year for Crowell. The people are expecting a good term and we do not expect anybody to be disappointed.

Result of Election

The vote in the run-off election Saturday was larger than was expected, being a little more than 1,100. Mrs. Grace Norris was elected to the office of county and district clerk. G. A. Mitchell, tax assessor and J. R. Coffman, commissioner of precinct 2.

Swallows Cup of Lye Water

By mistake Mr. and Mrs. Dave Thomson's oldest daughter, Miss Mary, about 17 years of age, swallowed part of a glass of lye water. The girl had prepared a glass of water and soda with which to gargle her throat and had put a spoonful of lye into the glass of water in order to break it with the intentions of having soft water to wash her hair. When she took the water into her mouth with which to gargle, she simply happened to get hold of the wrong glass. Her lips, throat and stomach were badly burned.

Kitchens Re-Built and Modernized in Vivian Community

A remodeled kitchen, complete in practically every detail, has just been completed by Myrtle and Naomi Fish, members of the Vivian Home Demonstration Club.

The color scheme for this delightful kitchen is red and white, and red being found in the figures in the paper and rug, the little red-checked memorandum pad, red bias bands on the curtains, and in the hardware on the cabinet and the edges of the shelves which are painted red.

A cabinet about nine feet long and 25 inches deep was built across one side of the kitchen. This is built to the ceiling with three storage compartments across the top, each equipped with shelves. A small window was put in the center and a dish cabinet built on either side of this. Each of these sections have three shelves. The lower section of the cabinet contains eight drawers, two from an old cabinet and six made from boxes and three doors closing spaces equipped with shelves for storing equipment.

The cabinet top is made from one solid section with a small sink in the center.

In papering the walls, oilcloth was used to the splash line and paper above that. The window shade was made from white oilcloth and the Dutch curtains from white with bands of red bias tape. New linoleum was put on the floor and all of the woodwork painted white.

A small but much prized article in the kitchen is a clock for the cabinet.
