

Did Uncle Josh Stash a Fortune? Two Men Committed Murder 12 years ago trying to find it

Twelve years ago today a tiny, self-styled hermit who had once dreamed of making Progress into a thriving city, was beaten and dumped into a cotton patch to die, the victim of two treasure hunters who got life sentences instead of hoarded greenbacks they had sought to take from the old fellow.

And thus sums up the story of Joshua Blocher, a little man with a dream that never came true.

Is there still unbound buried treasure Uncle Josh stashed away? Who knows? Uncle Josh is dead now for 12 years.

Garland Freeman, deputy sheriff who was one of the first to reach the old man's body after it was discovered by the two young farmers, recalled that today — August 11 — is the anniversary of one of the most brutal murders ever committed in West Texas.

It was a hot August afternoon back in 1951. Blocher sat in his ramshackle one-room house and spat at the dirt floor. It was just about that time that he had visitors — the last visitors he ever had.

A few hours later the old man was bludgeoned and left in a cotton field to thresh around in the sand between the knee-high stalks until he had died. But the body of the 80-pound hermit was not discovered until 3 p.m. August 15 after a four-day search.

Discovery of the bloody body was made by Cecil and Clifford Mardis, Young farmers of the community, and a search for the killers was started immediately, a search that eventually put Thomas Livesay and Lester D. Stevens behind bars for the rest of their lives.

Blocher called himself "The Old Devil of Bailey County." Folks who have lived around here for some time, still speak of Blocher as one of the strangest men ever to stalk the Western Plains. Some say he was a character; some speak of him as eccentric, and all agree that he was a rugged individualist, who preferred to live alone.

And all who knew him said he cared little how he looked — or what people thought of him.

He believed Progress would make a city. Accordingly he platted the town out of 160 acres from his farm, but the town didn't grow. Blocher never forgot his dream; and he blamed the town's dwarfed size on people in Muleshoe and Farwell.

It's said that he became so bitter against Muleshoe, six miles away, that he didn't allow his mail to be delivered here; instead he walked four miles into Lariat to pick up his mail. Incidentally, he would not accept rides.

The little old house in which he lived was a one-room, cluttered shack just off Highways 84-70. He was a "picker-upper," one Muleshoe man said in recalling Uncle Josh — "he picked up everything he could find." As a result, his yard was a cluttered mess of bits of this and that which Blocher picked up. Atop the shack was a faded sign "This is Progress."

Inside the shack were more piles of junk, rodents and insects and buckets or rainwater. Around 300 lots appear on the original 1932 plat of Progress, and Blocher named the streets. He sold lots in town to people who paid him a small sum each month. These sales eventually led to the hermit's death.

Folks began to say that old Josh had a lot of money stashed away. The amount was vague, but it was "lots of money," depending on who told the story.

That's how Thomas Livesay and Lester D. Stevens came to hear about this rumored buried treasure. They organized what they called a "Bailey County Treasure Hunt," they told some friends. Josh was the treasury keeper they had in mind.

And it was four days later that the Mardis brothers found Josh's battered body in their cotton field, six miles from Progress.

Clues were few; two sets of tire tracks led to and from the spot where he was found. Signs indicated Blocher had been beaten about the face and neck and dumped into the field from an automobile. Officers surmise he threshed around for a long time before finally dying.

The search for the killers started with the old man's shack. He had only 13 cents in his possession when found. First search of the shack turned up an additional $190, stuffed into a fruit jar. And there the solution bogged down; two months went by and during that time lots of people were questioned.

Then one day Wiley C. Alexander, a detective lieutenant with the Amarillo police department, received a tip. The tipster said he had overheard talk by the wife of one of the men, and one man had been hiding in a garage ever since the murder.

A checkout revealed the two men had been absent from their jobs on the day the murder occurred.

So, on Oct. 1, Lester D. Stevens and Thomas Clifford Livesay were arrested. Both signed statements. Each named the other as the man who had done the actual beating.

After August 24, you can go to jail for three days for giving a "hot" $1 check.

And Roger Gorrell, Bailey county attorney, says a crackdown will be launched to enforce the new law which has more teeth in it than any hot check law ever passed in Texas.

The new check law goes into effect just at a time when hot-check giving is reported on the increase throughout West Texas. At Plainview a hot check crackdown is sending a steady stream of bogus check writers through county legal processes, the Herald says.

Lubbock County Attorney J. M. Mann points to the new check law in the same category as drunk drivers when convicted.

Gorrell points out that drunk drivers now must serve a minimum of three days in jail upon conviction, but the new hot check law establishes no minimum; it simply requires a convicted check writer to be sentenced to jail and also to pay a fine.

The county attorney here says a "number" of hot checks have been turned over to him lately for legal action. He indicated hot check passing is on the increase.

The three-day jail sentence for passing worthless checks applies only to defendants for their first offense, misdemeanor violations, for checks under $50. The second offense may draw a minimum sentence of 30 days in jail and a fine.

and in the case of a third offense, Gorrell pointed out, the violation becomes a felony for prosecution by the district attorney with provisions for a prison sentence ranging from two to 10 years.

Gorrell says the new law actually places more responsibility

By RAY MARTIN

Mississippi has just wound up a heated political campaign, and W. B. McAdams brought me a stack of newspapers from Kosciusko, Miss., which indicate just how heated the campaign was down there.

For instance, this Kosciusko Star-Herald (which was founded in 1866, by the way) tells of one rally at which 58 candidates spoke. They had four candidates for governor, all of whom were segregationists. I read ads by all four and frankly had difficulty seeing any difference in their platforms.

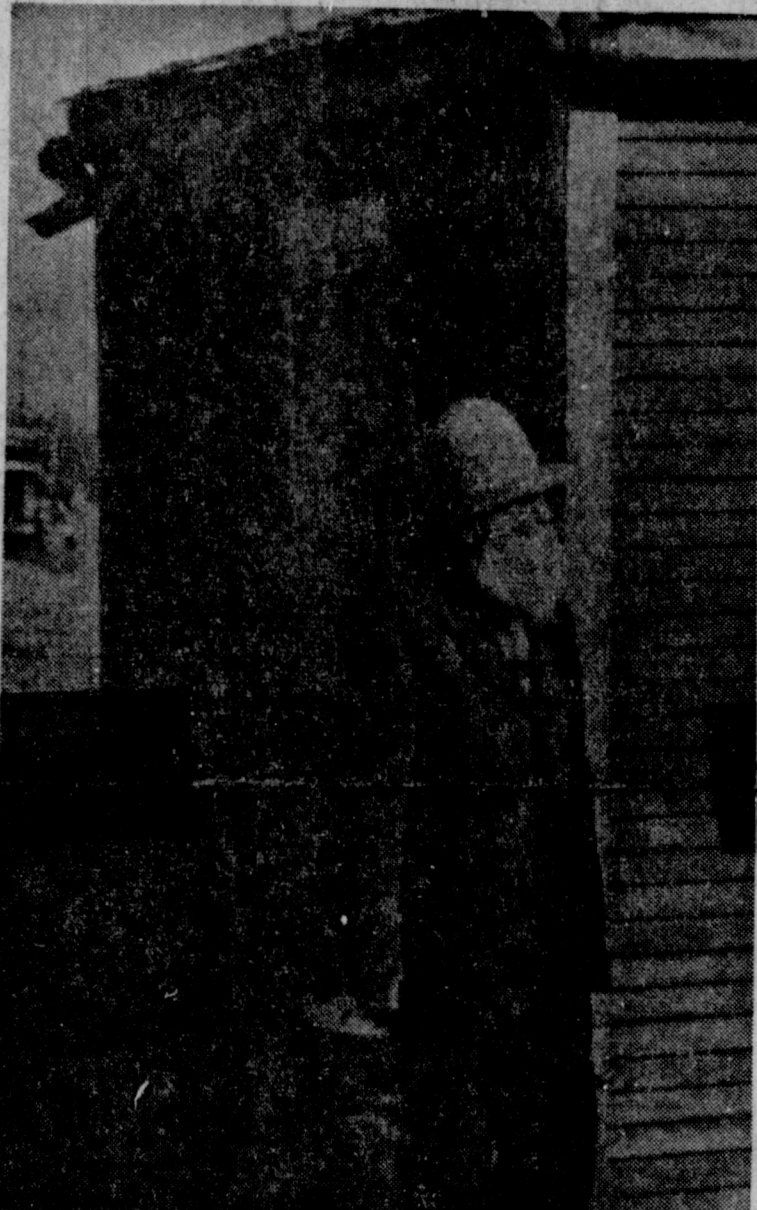

The editor had this to say in his editorial: "The Democrats had better select a good man to represent them for the Republicans will be after their hides in the general elections in November." And he adds this laconic comment: "This is something new, for Mississippi and will be interesting to watch. Haven't heard too much from our Republican friends lately, but know that they are just saving up their ammunition for the coming battle."

Then there was the ad of one Carroll Gartin, a candidate for lieutenant governor which said boldly "Carroll Gartin is strong opponent of KENNEDY REGIME." Which certainly shows something or other; there was a time when a candidate who opposed the U. S. Democratic leader would have been committing political suicide.

His ad said, among other things: "I shall not vote for John F. Kennedy for president of the United States in 1964; and I shall not vote for Robert F. Kennedy for president of the United States in 1968; and I shall not vote for Ted Kennedy for president of the United States in 1972. As a matter of fact, Carroll Gartin will not vote for any combination of the Kennedys for any office which they seek at anytime hereafter."

Right off you get the impression, somehow or other, that Mr. Gartin is not very fond of the Kennedys.

And another gubernatorial candidate, Paul B. Johnson, now serving as Lieutenant governor of Mississippi, took a vigorous going at J. P. Coleman, one of Kennedy's opponents by calling him "the Kennedy candidate," and Johnson wound up his ad in the Star-Herald with: "Your vote for Johnson is your own personal ans-

Jaycees Say 'Thanks'

Muleshoe Jaycees Friday extended their thanks for support given the organization during the recent Fun Fiesta. The statement said:

The Muleshoe Jaycees thank the people of Muleshoe and surrounding area for their help in making last week's Fun Fiesta a true success.

The cooperation we received enabled us to carry out one of the many projects designed to make our community a more pleasant and desirable place to live.

The Jaycees sponsored the Fun Fiesta for the benefit of the Library Building Fund. Our contribution is only a small portion of that fund.

We hope that others will see this important need and help Muleshoe attain a new library.

Evening Ceremony Read For Miss Juanita St. Clair and Lee Myers

Juanita Jane St. Clair became the bride of Lee Ivan Myers in an evening ceremony read Friday, August 2 in the Muleshoe Church of Christ. D. L. Thompson, minister, read the double ring service before an altar centered with a tall white pedestal bearing large baskets of gladiolas and greenery tipped with coral and tied with coral satin bows. Two sets of candelabras with 14 candles each and baskets of white gladiolas trimmed in coral flanked the altar.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John W. St. Clair, Route 4, Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Myers, Route 4, Hereford.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length bouffant gown of bridal satin. The Chantilly lace bodice featured a scalloped neckline and long, pedal point sleeves. Accented the back of the gown were two large satin roses from which cascaded a Watteau train. Her fingertip veil of imported pure silk illusion was held to a tiara of pearls and crystal beads. The bridal bouquet was a Cymbidium orchid surrounded by white carnations from which fell clustered streamers. She wore an old locket belonging to her mother, her dress was something new, her crown was something borrowed and wore a six pence in her shoe.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Jay Birdwell, Littlefield and bridesmaids were Mrs. Truman Layman, Earth, and Mrs. Freddie Savage, Hereford. Junior bridesmaid was Alice Myers, sister of the groom.

The bride's attendants were attired in coral street-length dresses of silk shantung fashioned with scoop necklines, short sleeves and sheath skirts.

Their headpieces were of coral net. They each carried a white fan made of Chantilly lace embroidered with coral.

er's Day will be observed, Saturday, August 10, at the Eastern Star Home in Arlington, with a Silver Tea, and the addition to the Hospital will be dedicated.

The Chapter voted to send messages of cheer and to visit the elderly citizens who are in the Rest Home here.

Many lovely and useful gifts were received in the Kitchen Shower, for the Hall. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by Olene Watts, Margaret Epting and Mary Hunt.

Convention Plans Made By Lowerys

In this era of rising prices, it's hard to meet expenses from day to day. But if you think you have a problem, consider the dilemma facing Elmer Boyd Lowery, Muleshoe. He has to plan for conventions every year without straining the budget and not just for himself, but for the entire family.

Mr. Lowery, presiding minister of the Muleshoe Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses, will serve as a delegate to an eight-day international convention of the religious group, scheduled for the Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif., September 1-8. Attending with him will be his wife Wanda, and their children Vickie, age 12 and Sherry, age 7.

"Arranging our affairs to attend a religious seminar of this type requires planning all year long," Lowery said, "and to be able to afford it, you have to watch your pennies."

"Convention of Jehovah's Witnesses are an annual affair," he said, "and since we learned about the Pasadena assembly several months ago we have been busy planning our budget for the trip ahead. It will be a spiritual boost for the whole family."

Lowery said the convention program will feature comprehensive Bible lectures, reports from foreign lands and analysis on the worldwide work of the religious which will demonstrate to the delegates advanced teaching methods.

Convention officials have revealed that "0,000 persons, representing the Western United States, Central and South America, Canada and Islands of the Pacific are expected to attend. Other assemblies to be held include 21 other occasions in Europe, the Near East, Asia, Australia and the Isles of the Pacific."

"Completing plans to attend the convention is the task of ministers all over the world," Lowery said, "and it represents a major sacrifice for many of them. But the need for instruction on applying Christian principles to our daily lives is essential in these crucial times and this convention will contribute much to enrich our lives and teach us the importance of spiritual values."

"The results of such a program to each individual make all the sacrifice well worth while," he said.

The four studies for the coming year were given during the morning session. "The Christian Mission in Southern Asia" was taught by Mrs. Wayne Blount and Mrs. Larry Jarrett. "The Changing City Challenges the Church" taught by Mrs. Luther Kirk, Amarillo. "Introduction to Three Spiritual Classics" was given by Rev. H. B. Coggin, Tulsa and Mrs. Don Davison, Lazbuddie. ### Day Camp For Brownies and Girl Scouts Concluded Here Friday

Day Camp for Brownies and Girl Scouts concluded Friday after five fun-filled days for the girls and their leaders. The campsite was located on the Houston Hart farm west of Muleshoe under the shade of giant elm trees. Seven tents served as additional shelter and shade for the group. The cooking area was in the center of the tent circle and huge pots were used on open fire for preparing food. One of the most unusual experiences while camping out was unexpected callers at 4 a.m. which created quite a stir. Seems the pigs from a pen some distance away decided to go calling. They were soon detected by mothers and all the camp was alive with mothers and scouts attempting to drive the rooting animal away from camp. But each time, they would return to investigate further. Finally, they built a bit fire in their fire pit and this was no to their callers liking, so they sought cooler places to root. Other incidents brought laughter such as air mattresses delating during the night, one scout fell into the camp water bucket for an unexpected dip and swimming at the city pool during the mornings was also on the fun calendar. Lessons in camping and cooking were given and periods of crafts conducted. Rice, beans, peas and pop corn dyed with many bright colors were used in making companion pictures. The colored items were glued on plywood to form an Egyptian man and woman and fighting roosters. Each girl Scout made one of the pictures. Brownies made puppets and other things during the craft periods. All the jars of beans, rice, peas and pop corn were dyed by Mrs. Richard Puckett using Tempera paint and dry dyes to obtain the many colors needed to make the pictures bright and gay. Day Camp began Monday with the Brownies meeting first and the Girl Scouts Camp started Tuesday. Mothers served as sponsors and maintained a first aid station at the campsite. Eleven Girl Scouts and approximately 35 Brownies participated in the annual event.

FRANKLY SPEAKING

By REV. J. FRANK PEERY

(An informative opinion) "LET'S GO HOME"

Recently I read a little quip in the New York TIMES: "To stay young, mingle with young people." Then, it added, "To age fast, try to keep up with them!"

Maybe, this is why some of us are members of the 68 club — bald, bifocals, bridgework, bulge, bunions, and blisters. Maybe and the big maybe is that we need more adults in the 68 club. Young people need adults and adults need young people.

With the disquieting statistics that are now being released in connection with juvenile crime, it's about time some of our young people grow up and some of adults grow young. In Texas alone the juvenile crime rate is increasing seven times faster than the population. Forty per cent of the Texas jail population is less than 24 years old. Texas annually has more murderers than any other state.

Americans exhibit a remarkable ambivalence toward crime and criminals. Officially, we abhorred, crime nevertheless provides the theme of much entertainment. Seventy-five per cent of the paper backs carry the theme. TV sets are in a state of "listing" many hours each day due to crime shows. Crime is news and it sells newspapers. (The LONDON OBSERVER of July 7, 14, and 21 did not have a single word about the Ward-Keeler case; Every major U. S. paper carried a full report of the sordid tidbit and papers sold.)

We must know and understand that as one of our credos every individual is important to his creator. The great old evangelist Charles Spurgeon once said: "God has not time to make nobodies." God loves the individual. He hates the crime but loves the criminal. A crime against man is a crime against God. Can a crime be committed that does not hurt or involve another?

Frankly Speaking — I grow rather weary hearing the old worn out record, "It there any hope for the younger generation?" I believe the vast majority of youth are still sound at the core. O. K. — build more youth centers and ball fields, and cultural centers to keep them sound. I doubt it. Let's build back the home with God right in the center. Then keep the line open between home and church.

Communism — Part 11

Mao, Khrushchev Disagree On Who's To Call The Shots

(Second in a five-part series.)
By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

If the Chinese Communist leaders make it plain today that they detest Nikita Khrushchev, that is nothing new.

Peking's leaders never cared much for Stalin, either. And Chinese don't like Russians. The cement of communism is too weak to hold them together.

Conflicts between Russians and Chinese go back for centuries. The violent verbal dust storm kicked up over questions of ideology hides far deeper quarrels.

"If ever there is a final split between the Russian and Chinese Communists," an old China hand told me years ago in Southeast Asia, "it will not be over ideology. It will be over domination of Asia. It is not in the Chinese nature to accept outside domination."

The Czars were determined imperialists and colonialists, often at the expense of the Chinese. Much of what is now Soviet Central Asia was taken from northern China by the Russian Czars.

300 Years of Clashes
Russian-Chinese clashes dot the history of the Manchu Dynasty since the first Russian ambassador was accredited there in 1675. After the Bolsheviks seized power in 1917, there was a brief fever to free subject peoples. It burned itself out quickly. The Russian Bear soon was clawing about for more honey.

The Chinese Communist Party (the KCT, or Kung Chan Tang) was born in 1920. It was wholly a creature of Moscow, dominated by the famed Mikhail Borodin, agent of Stalin's Comintern, and a man named Nguyen Than — later known as Ho Chi Minh, the Red master of North Viet Nam.

Stalin ordered the Chinese Communists to join a national front with the Kuomintang headed by Chiang Kai-shek.

In 1927, the Chinese announced discovery of a deep plot to deliver China into Communist hands. Chiang broke relations with Moscow, sent Borodin packing and purged Communists from the Kuomintang.

Soviet troops mobilized near the Chinese border, occupied several Chinese towns, and made threatening gestures. Still weak, China capitulated.

Revolt against the Soviet Communists stirred inside the Chinese party. Pro-Moscow elements tried to seize the party. Stalin ordered proclamation of a Soviet Republic of China. This was done at Kiangsi in 1931, with Mao Tze-tung as chairman. But Mao later undertook his famous "long march" from Kiangsi to Yenan, there to set up a capital and prepare for the revolution — developing his party out of the reach of the Comintern's long arm.

The Comintern ordered Mao's party to unite with Chiang against the Japanese. Ostensibly it did as was told. But it worked from behind, undermining Chiang, and by 1942 Mao was strong enough to defy the Russians.

Mao moved against Moscow's puppets. He threw out Wang Ming and other pro-Soviet elements.

Stalin Felt Double-Crossed
Stalin was angry. He told a Yugoslav Communist leader at the time he had ordered the Chinese comrades to give up their insurrection because it had no prospects. He seemed to feel Chinese Communists had double-crossed him.

But the Chinese Communists pushed on to victory in late 1949. Stalin summoned Mao to Moscow to sign a mutual assistance treaty. Mao was obliged, among other things, to recognize the final separation of Outer Mongolia — first a Czarist then a Soviet satellite — from China. This has rankled ever since in the Red Chinese breast.

The Korean War and Chinese intervention in it brought clear indications of new Chinese-Soviet strains over influence in Asia. The strains persisted after Stalin's death.

Early in 1956, Khrushchev, in a speech to the 20th Soviet Communist Party Congress, blasted the image of Stalin and sent a

Crossroads for USA

The scope and undertow of the present crisis over civil rights and liberal versus conservative politics is something very easily underestimated or missed entirely.

The dangerous thing about the present situation is that it contains pent-up conservative and moderate sentiments which have enjoyed little authoritative expression on the federal governmental scene for decades.

Only in the eight years of President Dwight D. Eisenhower's presidency did the moderates gain a degree of respectability. The conservatives were outmaneuvered and squelched in this period, for the most part however.

Thus the present civil rights crisis goes deeper than just civil rights. The Goldwater-for-President boom reaches far deeper into the political psychology of the nation than civil rights.

For the first time in our history the United States is confronted with an enemy of enormous power who can shatter our cities and undermine and undercut our way of life.

There is, as a result of this constant threat over the past eighteen years, combined with the suppression of conservatism and the stifling of the conservative voice in national government for so long, an urgency that amounts to almost a compulsion

IT'S THE LAW
in Texas

RIGHT OF WITNESSES
By far the most vital people in our system of justice are witnesses. Every one else in a trial exists to hear what they have to say.

Our courts need witnesses. A jury to find the facts. The judge to apply the law. The lawyer to tell his client's story.

Chances are you worry about stepping up, taking an oath, and telling your story in court.

On some rare occasions you could be called upon to testify about something affecting your own standing in the community.

As a witness you too may have the right, for example, not to testify against yourself in somebody else's lawsuit or crime trial.

If you are ever in such a bind, consult a lawyer of your own choice on what to do. The lawyer who called you to testify has a sworn duty to protect his client, not you. But your lawyer is sworn to keep what you tell him secret and to advise you in your own interests within the law.

Wise lawyers tell their witnesses to obey 12 rules:

1. Go to the place (say, the scene of an accident). Check your memory before you go to court. People forget and get caught up on details. But if you check what you saw and heard you are on solid ground.
2. Visit a court. Hear how other witnesses testify. It will help you see your role on the witness stand.
3. Wear clean, conservative clothes.
4. Don't memorize your story word for word. That is the surest way to sound bad. But think of what you saw and heard.
5. Listen to the questions you are asked with care and answer thoughtfully.
6. Give a simple, direct answer.

in your own words. Don't be rushed.

7. If you err—and people often do—correct yourself at once. If you can't remember some detail, say so. Don't bluff.

8. Tell the truth. Don't figure which side you may help. Don't identify yourself with either side.

9. Stop when the judge breaks in, and don't try to sneak an answer in before he can stop you. What you might say could end in a "mistrial."

10. Keep cool and don't sass back.

11. If they ask you: Certainly, you have talked to other people—the lawyer, for example; and yes, you may be reimbursed for certain of your expenses incurred in attending the trial.

12. Remember, without witnesses our law would fail to do justice. If you are called, be a good witness.

(This newsfeature, prepared by the State Bar of Texas, is written to inform—not to advise. No person should ever apply or interpret any law without the aid of an attorney who is fully advised concerning the facts involved, because a slight variance in facts may change the application of the law.)
