REAL TEST MADE OF WATER SUPPLY

No Shortage Has Been Realized, But Supply Will Be Augmented As a Safeguard

When the city water works were installed the test well was not utilized, the general opinion of those having the matter in hand seeming to be that this would be unnecessary, but in order that there may not be a shortage, it has been thought wise to add the water of the test well to that which is stored in the reservoir, which will increase the supply by several thousands gallons per day. This can be done by building a concrete curb around this well high enough that the surface waters conserved by the tank can be excluded from the well, and a pipe run from this to the reservoir, which will carry it when full, or nearly full, by gravity force.

As stated above, this is to be done as a safeguard against any shortage that might be experienced when more water is wanted than at present. So the tank will be lowered so that the test well can be curbed and turned into the reservoir.

Several days ago a real test of the water supply was made when added to the amount the 100 customers of the city have been using, something like 35,000 gallons per day were used in watering the courthouse lawn for four or five days in succession. The entire courthouse block was practically irrigated for those days in order to save the lawn. The results of that irrigation is now seen in the beautiful green coat of Bermuda that carpets the ground all over the courthouse block. This made it necessary to pump water into the 75,000 gallon standpipe more frequently than ordinarily, but even then no shortage of water was experienced. Nobody was asked to use less amount of water, no limit was placed on its use by any home in Crowell and everybody had all the water that was wanted for 24 hours a day. But that test did indicate that an increased supply would not be inadvisable, for naturally it may be expected that more water will be used as the town grows and additional drafts are made on the supply.

When we come to consider the facts here pointed out, we feel that Crowell is fortunate in having its present water supply. Quannah has experienced a shortage, and actually limited its use to the home for domestic purposes. Even Vernon, where practically the same amount has been used per capita as at Crowell, found it necessary to increase the supply. During the very hot months, such as we have been having, of course, more water is used than ordinarily. It must be used liberally on the lawns and shrubbery if they are preserved. It is to place our supply where a shortage is improbable under any circumstances that the test well is to be utilized. If it is found necessary after that to develop more water there seems to be an abundant amount under the surface that needs only to be lifted.

Tourists Register

Since the tourist camp ground has been provided with a couple of neat rooms there have been on an average four or five cars every night stopping here. It was suggested last week that a register be placed at one of these, or left with W. B. Wheeler, the nearest oil station owner. This was done and Mr. Wheeler has given the matter all the attention he could and while not all have registered, a number have done so. The list as registered follows:

W. G. Dickey, Elkhart, Texas; G. E. Cutler, Oakwood, Texas; E. M. Ladd and wife, El Dorado, Ark., bound for Los Angeles; W. P. Cox, Celeste, Texas; E. C. Cox, Leonard, Texas; D. F. Goss and family of Seymour, Texas; W. H. Peters, McLean, Texas; Lewis Cavith; R. O. Ham, Commerce, Texas; T. H. Haystil, Commerce, Texas; J. T. Kirk, Waxahachie, Texas; P. P. Curvey, Waxahachie, Texas.

All of these are well pleased with the accommodations Crowell had provided for the tourists, and said we have the best dirt roads they ever saw. Mr. Ladd of Arkansas, especially, complimented us for the camp ground and praised the people and the town.

J. W. Stovall, who has been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Dow W. Tate, in Crowell for about six weeks left Wednesday for his home at Bardwell.

PASTOR PREACHES ON GOOD CITIZENSHIP

It was a subject timely in its application to present needs which the pastor of the Methodist church chose for his sermon last Sunday morning, that of "Good Citizenship."

Do unto others as you would have others do unto you—the golden rule—was made the basis of the argument. The preacher pointed out that people can not be driven to practice the golden rule. There is no kind of legislation that is effective enough to lead men to that practice, but it must come through the influence of the church. Here he showed that separation of church and state would be an unhappy condition, effecting the character of citizenship. The pastor did not mean that the church is to be connected with the state in the sense of exercising dominion over the state, but in the exercise of its influence for good, and that influence must be extended to the state through the individual character of the citizens. So there is no such thing as the separation of church and state in that sense without hurt to both. "The heart of the Gospel and the heart of good citizenship are one and the same thing," said the pastor.

The logical conclusion might be reached, then, that if Christianity fails to increase the quality of citizenship it fails to accomplish its purpose. It is not understood that Christianity is merely something that man may possess that gives him a permit into the heavenly kingdom when the final end of life is reached. To seek it with that aim, it seems, would be gross selfishness. It is that something that frees man of selfishness. It rescues him from himself and turns his energies, his thoughts and his purposes towards achievements that aim to benefit others. That is Christ-like. That is what the Savior did. That would mean the highest type of citizenship, considered from the motive view point. Briefly stated, Christianity is that which fits one in purpose for service. It is that which purifies the material. Education makes proper construction of the material for the most efficient service. Citizenship is the product.

RUNAWAY TEAM PLUNGES INTO AUTO

The Only Two Occupants Sustained Painful Bruises; Automobile Is Badly Damaged

Mrs. Will Roberts sustained painful injuries when the car in which she was riding Wednesday afternoon was struck by a running team in the street near J. H. Olds' feed store. She was not seriously injured, however, but evidently had a narrow escape. Henry Gribble who was driving the car escaped with minor injuries. The top of the car was practically torn to pieces.

Mrs. Roberts had come to town that morning in a service car and while here wanted to go to Lee Ribble's to get some peaches, and no service car being available at that time she got Mr. Gribble to agree to drive her out there and they had just started when the accident occurred.

The accident was caused by a boy's dashing by a hitched team on a horse, which frightened the team, causing the horses to run.

CHILDRESS WORKS FOR LEE HIGHWAY

Joins with Tulia in Working Out Plans for Northern Route

According to recent dispatches published in the daily papers Frederick, Vernon, Crowell, Paducah and all the other towns west of the route of the proposed highway as far as Clovis, will have to get up and go after it if they get the Lee Highway. There are some other people after the same thing that we are after and in our judgment it is going to be determined largely upon the interest manifested by those along the route as to who gets it. The following is a press dispatch which came from Childress, dated Aug. 3:

That the Lee National Highway will permanently be designated through Childress county may be an established fact in the near future, if the plans go through that are being worked out at Tulia today.

J. E. Swepton, county judge, has been selected by the towns and counties on the Childress route to arrange a meeting and draw up plans for securing the road, and he has set this conference at Tulia today. Altus and Hollis, Oklahoma, will have representatives; Childress, Estelline, Memphis, Newlin, Turkey, Parnell, Lakeview, Tulia and points from there to Clovis and Portals, New Mexico, will be represented, and a solid organization is to be perfected for the purpose of working hand in hand with the State Highway Commission, in the hope of designating the route in the 3 per cent or 4 per cent class. If such a designation is secured from the State Highway Commission, connecting with a similar class in Oklahoma and New Mexico, the definite routing of the Lee Highway through Childress seems certain.

J. W. Mitchell, J. Ralph Lee and T. Paul Barron represented Childress at the Lawton convention, and it is understood that at least one of these men will attend the conference at Tulia, with possibly other representatives of the Childress Chamber of Commerce. Details of the future work will be worked out today, and the Chamber of Commerce will then act on the recommendations of the committee.

Aged Citizen Passes Away

After several weeks of suffering, much of which was intense, on August 6, Elisha Thomas Kirkman died at his home here.

Mr. Kirkman was born May 12, 1839, in Todd County, Kentucky, being 83 years, 2 months and 24 days of age at the time of his death.

After having grown to young manhood in his father's home he enlisted in the army of the Confederacy October 6, 1861, at Russellville, Ky., and served until the army disbanded in 1865. He fought in the battles of Shilo, Hartsville, Stone River, Jackson, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Rocky Face Gap, Resaca, from Resaca to Atlanta at Peachtree Entrenchment and Utoy Creeks, at Jonesboro and in the mounted engagements. He was one of the McMinnville Guard during March and April, 1863. He was taken prisoner near McMinnville and held for two months when he was exchanged at City Point, Virginia. He was wounded at Resaca May 14, 1864.

Mr. Kirkman was married January 14, 1878, to Miss Elizabeth Gotcher at Sherman, Texas. To this union were born five children, two of whom preceded the father to the other shore. He is survived by his wife, one son, Frank, who is temporarily making Crowell his home but who has homestead property in New Mexico, two daughters, Mrs. C. E. Banister, Cleburne, and Mrs. Clyde B. Graham, Margaret, Texas.

Mr. Kirkman came with his family to this country, which was at that time Hardeman County, in 1885 and remained here until his death.

Mr. Kirkman had always been a healthful, active and industrious man until disease gripped him some four months prior to his death. He always took an interest in matters pertaining to the development of the country and kept up with the affairs of the government.

The deceased was converted some ten or twelve years ago and united with the Methodist church. During his last days when he realized that death was certain he expressed himself as being prepared for the end

SALE OF SWINE PLEASES BREEDERS

Average Price Was $39.95; Large Crowd Attended and Sale Was a Success

Of course, Blevins & Ferguson Bros. did not get quite as much for their hogs as they really ought to have brought, but in view of the fact that money is a little tight and cotton prospects not so good as they were a few weeks ago, they feel that the sale of their Poland China sows and gilts Monday was a success. The 38 of these sold at an average of $39.95, the highest priced one bringing $75.

They had a fine bunch of hogs and as stated above sold fairly well. The auctioneer, who was from Oklahoma, stated that this was the best sale he had witnessed this summer. This means much when compared with the sale of Poland Chinas by long standing and experienced breeders in other portions of the State and in Oklahoma.

Mr. Blevins, who has the personal supervision of the business, is encouraged to go forward and will go into the markets soon to purchase sows of the best blood lines for the further improvement of the breed. They already have one of the finest boars in West Texas, and with an improved herd of sows, such as will be purchased, they will have one of the best Poland China seed plants in West Texas.

TAKES EXCEPTIONS AND SAYS UGLY THINGS

Two of the candidates who were defeated for state offices in the primaries are Bob Henry for United States Senator and W. A. Johnson for Lieutenant Governor. It must be very painful to them to be turned down by the Ku Klux Klan, whose cause they so valiantly espoused. Mr. Henry was an avowed member and assumed authority as its spokesman over the state but he did not get the Klan vote. Mr. Johnson was one of those fellows who said "I am not a member, but—" and he always availed himself of the opportunity of battling in to give the Klan his endorsement and all the free advertisement he could in his paper. He even admonished his townsmen to "stand hitched" when the Klan paraded the streets of Memphis. That meant nothing else but to submit to the will of the mob. Mr. Johnson was the first candidate in Texas to make the Ku Klux Klan an issue in Texas politics. The dear Klan turned Mr. Johnson and Mr. Henry down. Why? Because the Klan was afraid its endorsement of these men would kill the Klan as dead as heck. Now, we wonder what these defeated candidates will do about the Klan.—Foard County News.

Over in Foard County they have a K. K. paper that is evidently trying to outdo the Dallas News over the K. K. K. in Texas. The paper is the Foard County News, and it is run by two fellows with loud smelling names like Kinsey and Klepper. We don't know whether their ancestors came from Heidleburg or Limburg, but the names smell very much like sour kraut and limburger, and sound much like the Knights of Columbus. Not a week passes that the little sheet is not in eruption about the Ku Klux Klan. No doubt there is a reason. The Herald is not the mouthpiece of the Klan, but when the organization gets through investigating the reason, we will guarantee the public will understand what it is.—Hall County Herald.

To the average reader it is evident that our friend, Mr. Johnson, is very uncomfortable under the circumstances, a fact which the News failed to take into consideration when it printed the paragraph which touched Mr. Johnson off. We thought he was big enough man to stand the truth, which we admit is rather plain, but since he does not make any effort to show that the News has not told it just like it is, we can not be expected to "put on the soft pedal," as he no doubt would have admonished. We can't understand why Mr. Johnson would get mad at what the News says unless it was because it stated that the Klan was afraid it would die if Johnson and Henry were mounted in the saddle. Candidly we believe that, and we do not doubt but that most everybody else believes it. We give the Klan credit for having better judgment than to allow Johnson and Henry to ride anywhere else except on the tail of the outfit. That's where

Methodist Church Notice

Sunday School at 10 o'clock, M. S. Henry, Supt. You ought to be in some Sunday School if you live in or near Crowell. I think most parents love their children and want to see them have an equal chance with other children in the world, but every Sunday you allow them to be out of some Sunday School. You are robbing them of an opportunity that will have an influence to help them build character. I heard a criminal court judge say once that out of eight years experience on the bench he had never sent a man to prison who had had the advantage of a Sunday School when he was a boy. Some parents say "my child does not want to go to Sunday School and I don't want to make him. It might turn him against the church." You make him go to school, you make him take medicine when he is sick, and do a thousand other things you know he ought to do regardless of what he thinks. It's my private opinion that it is about time some parents in this town were waking up to a sense of their responsibility. Then there is another class of people, Crowell, members of the different churches that go to church once every two or three months. If some one was to ask your nearest neighbors what church you belonged to, they could not tell them. Yet, you say the church is a great institution and we could not get along without it. Of course some of you don't like the preacher. Well, if you would go to church often enough to get acquainted with him, you might like him better. Carry him and his family home with you some Sunday, feed them up on chicken and you will like them better. I am not going to charge the other preachers of the town anything for this paper, but I am sure when they read it they will say "Amen," because I know they have the same kind of folks I am talking about. If they haven't, I sure would like to trade some with them. Ah shucks, come on to church next Sunday. Everybody come—let's break the record.

Sunday morning subject, "Preparedness." At the evening hour, "The Test of Christianity."

W. M. MURRELL, Pastor, P. S. We are going to clean up the church yard this week, run the bears out and burn the grassburns. Come and see how it looks.—W. M. M.

MYSTERY ABOUT WOMAN'S ABSENCE

Officers Are Making Every Effort to Get Trace, But Have Had Little Success

The disappearance of Mrs. Nona Bell from the home of her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Olds, Sunday night is still a mystery, and the officers have made little headway in getting a trace that would seem strong enough to work on.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell have been making their home for some time at Mr. Olds, and at the time of her disappearance Mr. Bell was away. She was not missed until early Monday morning. Some of her clothes were found in the bed room where she is supposed to have slept part of the night.

The officers have found slender threads on which they are working, but as yet they are at sea and must necessarily work with a great degree of uncertainty on the case.

The above are all the known facts the News can give in regard to the matter, and so far as we know, they are all anybody can give.

they were, side by side, as the "critter" emerged from the campaign. And the Foard County News can't help it.

As to the nativity of our ancestors, we might say they were Americans, but what does that have to do with it? But note the strained effort of the former Governor (?) to try to say something funny about the smell of the names and its sounding like Knights of Columbus. Neither of us ever saw a Knight of Columbus, so far as we know. Then again our friend speaks of the News as a "little sheet." We accept the words in their application to this publication as correct, but we may add that it seems to be big enough to twist the tail of one wrecked politician sufficiently to convince him that it is here. Again Mr. Johnson says he is not the mouthpiece of the Klan, a fact which everybody knows from the position he has been occupying with reference to that organization, as above pointed out.

FATE OF ORIENT IS STILL UNCERTAIN

Inspection Trip Confirms Statements Made by Officials That Business Has Gone

That the Orient must have more business seems to be the remedy for its present situation. This is the decision of Clarence L. Gurnors, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission and Clyde M. Reed, of the Kansas Utility Commission, whose inspection of the road was ended last week when their trip over the entire line was completed and after they had procured information relative to the conditions under which it has been operated, the amount of business, etc.

They discourage the idea that any other railroad company wants the Orient. According to their statement, other company would have the road as a gift. One of the handicaps, as pointed out by Mr. Reed, is the fact that the road has no connection with any seaports, and can only start long distance shipments to their points of destination and must depend upon other roads to deliver these. It is pointed out that the big competing lines have this advantage over the Orient. For instance, the Santa Fe can handle the Kansas grain crop better and make more speedy shipment because of the fact that the crop is delivered to its destination by the Santa Fe. It must, therefore, be maintained by the local business along the line, for the most part at least.

Additional assistance is being sought for the Orient in the reduction of taxes, in what is called a differential rate, and by a more equitable division of freight.

The closing paragraph of a lengthy article in the Dallas News of Aug. 7, by the staff correspondent of that publication sums up the matter in these few words:

The Orient is up against it, but the management and the State Commission officials are hopeful that by some means it will be enabled to keep alive and finally come into the glory of achievement that was hoped for it in the beginning. Granting of a permanent differential with a rate about 95 per cent of the standard line rates that will be asked of the Interstate Commerce Commission will help. So also will the road be benefited by a more equitable division of freight revenues on hauls in which it participates. These two forms of relief will be sought with diligence. In the meantime the men along the line are enlisting in the service to bring about tax reduction and a greater volume of traffic. After a while some stroke of railroad genius may finish the links as yet unforaged that lie between Topeka, on the Gulf of California, and Wichita, Kan., 1,687 miles away. That would mean tidewater, industries, mines and even more resourceful agricultural sections. For the world at large there would be rapid transit from the west coast of Mexico to the centers of the United States and for the poor old Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad there might be then plenty of the food that keeps railroads alive—traffic.

Returns from Howard Payne

Prof. D. W. Tate returned last week from Howard Payne College where he had been taking work this summer looking to an A. B. degree. He spent ten weeks of very profitable work at that institution and did more by far than he had anticipated on doing. Mr. Tate will easily get his A. B. degree next summer with a few weeks study.

We are so proud of our RED STAR stove, and our customers to whom we have sold them are so proud of them and tell us "that I would not take anything for my RED STAR," "It cooks better than any stove I ever tried, or, it cooks equally as good as my big coal range."

We can not but sing its praises for we know that when we sell a RED STAR to a nice housekeeper we have given her the very best merchandise it is possible to give her, and she is grateful to us and proud of her purchase.

It has always been the policy of this store to carry the very best goods in every line that it stocked, and when a new line was to be added from time to time to add the very best on the market. So about three years ago now we were looking about for a good oil stove. After careful investigation we picked the RED STAR Detroit Vapor Oil Stove, took one to our own home immediately on arrival, have used it every day since, convinced ourselves that we were offering the very best that money could buy, and started out to sell them. We have succeeded in selling a large number in the face of the worst kind of competition and opposition, of which it is not necessary to mention, but suffice it to say, that each and every customer to whom we have sold a RED STAR stove is pleased with her stove. Some are really loud in their praise and voluntarily solicit their neighbors to buy the RED STAR when they buy a new stove. Next week we will tell you about another fine stove we sell—the SUPERFEX.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since. I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments. If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too. At all druggists. E 85

THE FOARD COUNTY NEWS

KIMSEY & KLEPPER, Owners and Publishers

Crowell, Texas, August 11, 1922

At the north end of the Pease River bridge is a large board which was placed there by Quanah business men, it is supposed, for it bears cards by several of the business men of that city. The business men of Quanah are to be commended for their enterprising spirit in going after trade outside of the Quanah territory, but the ridiculousness of their judgment is apparent if they expect the people of Foard County to quit good roads and travel over a cow trail to get to Quanah. These signs stand at the end of the good road and that good road leads towards Crowell. The offer they make to pay bridge toll is no inducement to our people to travel 15 miles over such roads as Hardeman County offers the public. Besides, the trading public will find just as good bargains in Crowell as they will find in Quanah, as all very well know. Our suggestion would be that if Quanah expects Crowell people, or people from any portion of Foard County to do very much trading with them they will have to get in line with Foard County and build a road from Pease River to Quanah. Every fellow who rolls off of Pease River bridge into Hardeman County begins to have unkind feelings towards that county for its backwardness in road building. Then how can they expect our people to get to Quanah with a good taste in their mouths? The bad roads in Hardeman are a force that will counteract business men's advertisements, because of the fact that effective advertising is based on good will.

Seldom a day passes now that the big dailies don't contain something about the Orient railroad and its problems. It seems that significance of the Orient's present situation reaches beyond the seven hundred and twenty-five mile strip of territory crossing Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. This very interest shows that the road is something more than a mere local convenience. A little observation will reveal some interesting facts in this connection. In the first place, its length is practically one-fourth the width of the United States, and its service through this length is virtually unduplicated. This length is also measured through some of the best agricultural land in each of the three states mentioned. This is especially true of the Texas segment of the road which hearts the productive center of West Texas from San Angelo to the Oklahoma line. The immense grain crops of this section and the great West Texas grazing and ranching industries make the Orient an indispensable commercial route—indispensable to both local and interstate business. Take down your old map and trace the Orient through Texas from Chillicothe to San Angelo and on through its prospective extension from San Angelo to Del Rio and see what a wonderful territory it serves and you will be bound to conclude that the Orient is here to stay despite present wobbly conditions, all prophecies to the contrary.

Repair work and other improvements on the High School building are nearing completion. Much improvement has been made on the inside appearance of the building and two new rooms have been added, one to take care of the unders and one to accommodate the crowded condition of the high school. The auditorium is being fitted up to take care of the eleventh grade and study hall students. The added neatness and comfort of the building are expected to enhance materially the grade of work for the ensuing term.

Considering the present crop prospects as being somewhat uncertain and the money situation, Blevins and Ferguson Bros. did mighty well with their Poland China Hog sale Monday. About $1500 worth of good hogs were sold, and a large portion of it stays in Foard County. That fact indicates that our people are interested in the purebred swine business.

The Lee Highway will come by Crowell if all who are interested in the route coming this way work hard enough for it. That means that we must show this to be a better proposition than the people can show the upper route to be. We have competition in this matter and that competition is not going to be easy to overcome. Every town along the proposed route ought to organize a Lee Highway Association whose business it would be to look after this matter and keep in touch with every movement that is being made to put the road through here or any other territory.

FEMININE USE OF PROFANITY

Census Taken at Girls' Seminary Cannot Be Taken as Positive of Iniquity.

It has long been the fashion at colleges and schools to take a census of graduating classes to determine such vital facts as these:
 What is your favorite flower? How tall are you? Do you smoke? Are you a prohibitionist?
 At a girl's seminary a recent inquiry was more sweeping. To the interrogation, "Do you swear?" 200 of the 215 girls answered yes.
 But admitting that they swear is not proof that these feminine lips do utter oaths. So at least says the law in New York state, writes "Griant" in the Philadelphia Press.
 "Four or five people must hear you swear, not a second or two, but for about five minutes—that's the law in North Carolina.
 "Down in Alabama they don't expect a man to swear from the housetops, but the law says that if three or four persons hear you just once, good-night!
 "In Tennessee it is not necessary to repeat the offensive words when a culprit is indicted for swearing.
 "I saw on the veranda of a country club 17 women, of whom 12 were drinking an intoxicating liquor and seven were smoking cigarettes.
 "But if that census at the girls' seminary is an index, more women swear than daily with John Barleycorn or Lady Nicotine."

JAKE WAS SEVEN CENTS OUT

Satisfied If It Was All Right, But the Situation Did Not Exactly Please Him.

The neighbors said that Jake Newton was strictly honest but "pretty snug."
 One morning as he was having his sheep sheared he found that one of them was missing. "It must have jumped the fence and gone into Leslie's lot," he said to himself and immediately walked over to Leslie French's pasture, picked out a sheep that resembled his own and, after a tussle, got it home and had it sheared.
 A few days later Jake discovered his missing sheep dead in his pasture. He lost no time in seeking his neighbor. With profuse apologies he returned the sheep and the fleece and explained the whole affair.
 "Oh, that's all right, Jake," Leslie replied. "Don't let it trouble you a bit."
 "You're sure it's all right?" Jake asked anxiously.
 "Sure, sure, Jake. Anyone is likely to make a mistake."
 Jake drew himself up. "Well, it ought to be all right. I had to pay seven cents to have that sheep sheared."—Youth's Companion.

Artist Works With Wood

In the Vosges mountains there lives an artist named Spindler, who produces the most entrancing compositions not in paint, but in wood alone. First he makes the sketch, and then with infinite patience and care he cuts the veneer and glues it to a backing and then welds it all in a press. Since Mr. Spindler never uses anything except wood in its natural color, he has to know a great deal about trees. In his workroom he has pieces of every kind of wood found in Europe and many pieces from other countries. He pictures clouds, rain, and everything that an artist can picture with paints. Some of his veneer takes him hours of study and fitting, and some of it is as fine as a hair. Mr. Spindler has wood of every shade of yellow, red, brown, black and white. He has almost all the shades of green also, but he finds the blues hard to get.—Columbus Dispatch.

Just then Cecile came back to the room, looking flushed and twirling a big diamond on her finger.
 "Girls, I have changed my mind. It is possible and right to wear a mask. Mr. Morris says he asked me to be his wife because he thought me a sweet little thing, not too priggishly pedantic."
 "Here! Here!" yelled Maud, at the top of her lungs. "And you graduating from Sanders' theater tomorrow with a magna cum laude and final honors to Latin and French, all covered in three years and a half! You deceiving little blue stocking!"

Mrs. G. C. Rector left Thursday of last week for her home at San Angelo after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Wallen. She received a telegram that her husband was sick.

D. M. Ferebee was here from Vernon Saturday, the first time, he says he has been to Crowell in a year's time. Mr. Ferebee should make his visits more frequent. If he does not Crowell may grow out of his knowledge.

L. I. Saunders contracted and began the first of the week a five-room bungalow with bath and sleeping porch for T. B. Klepper. It is located two blocks northeast of the court house and will be completed by the 15th of next month.

PROBLEM IN MASKS

By CAROLINE H. WILSON.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate

"How utterly absurd," exclaimed Cecile, impatiently tossing her book onto the table.

"Why, what is absurd, and what are you reading, anyway?" asked Florence.

"The Masquerader," and it is preposterous to suppose that the wife of one man could mistake the other man for her own husband. It is ridiculous, I say."

"Oh, I don't know," said Florence. "I agree with Cecile," exclaimed Verona, a Western girl, and a pupil of Sargent's gymnastic school. "Some trick of speech, some mannerism, or peculiarity of deportment, would surely give one away."

"That's so," chimed in Rachel. "Just look at this room full of girls, for instance. No two of us are alike. Mary calls everyone 'my dear' and exclaims 'Oh, grief!' every time that anything goes wrong. Florence's pet expression is 'Gummy.' Cecile is generally mute. Maud could be identified anywhere by her laugh, and I suppose I have my share of peculiarities."

"Then Florence talks all the time and when no one else will listen to her talks to herself."

"Well," added Maud, coming to Rachel's defense, "you just try being somebody else, as Mr. Loder did, and you will notice these things."

"Gummy!" exclaimed Florence. "I have just the idea!" Then she paused. "Yes, I have it."

"Well, what is it?" asked Cecile, interested to see if anyone could solve the problem that had perplexed her.

"We will have a stunt show at dinner tonight, and impersonate each other. Then we will see if it changes Cecile's mind as to the possibility of Loder taking the place of Chillicothe snuggly."

"Agreed. We have half an hour to dress," said Maud. "So let us fly to our rooms."

It was planned that Maud was to take the part of Cecile, the quiet one, and the youngest of the college house family. Maud, the boisterous tomboy, who was fully 5 feet 9, was struggling into a shirtwaist of Cecile's. A short skirt, which came nearly up to her knees, completed the ludicrous effect.

Cecile, in her room before the mirror, had a very woe-begone countenance.

Florence came into the room laughing uproariously, perhaps rather overdoing the part of Maud. Maud, the tomboy, came in silently and slipped into Cecile's place. Her lips were tightly compressed to restrain from laughter.

That meal was a merry one. Florence, imitating Maud, who was always quoting Shakespeare, presumably to air her knowledge of Professor Kitzledge and his English two-class, amused everybody.

Mary talked on every subject dear to a freshman, "cuts," "quizzes" and "summonses to the dean."

Rachel, trying to be Western, flattered her a's, rolled her r's, talked about cowboys and branding cattle, and finally waxed eloquent on woman's rights. Verona, vainly trying to disguise her Western mannerisms, talked enthusiastically about the latest exhibition of pictures by a Spanish artist—in Boston.

"Well, one might for a very short time, if he was physically like the one he was impersonating. But I think it would be deadly wrong even if it were possible."

"Well, I still think it was right. Think of the relief to Chillicothe's wife. And think of his power in Parliament, which Loder more than sustained," said Florence.

"A gentleman to see Miss Cecile," announced the maid at the door.

"I consider it an awful overthrow to the novel," said Maud, "but we've seen ourselves as others see us, at any rate."

Just then Cecile came back to the room, looking flushed and twirling a big diamond on her finger.

"Girls, I have changed my mind. It is possible and right to wear a mask. Mr. Morris says he asked me to be his wife because he thought me a sweet little thing, not too priggishly pedantic."

"Here! Here!" yelled Maud, at the top of her lungs. "And you graduating from Sanders' theater tomorrow with a magna cum laude and final honors to Latin and French, all covered in three years and a half! You deceiving little blue stocking!"

Some people say that the Dallas News made the Ku Klux Klan an issue in Texas politics this year. Don't think so. It became an issue because the Klan got to be a political organization. It was so in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Did the Dallas News make it an issue in those states?

HOW TO SELECT THE LAYIG HEN

By F. W. Kazmeier, Poultry Pusbandman, A. & M. College of Texas

Now is the ideal time to select the good from the poor layer. Remember that it is no secret. It is a task that anybody can learn to do. Study the following brief description of a good layer and a poor layer and go out to the yard and put it into practice. You will be surprised at the great results.

The trap nest is of course the most reliable way of selecting the layers, but farmers are too busy to use trap nests, hence the development of culling hens by external characteristics.

We have gone into many flocks and culled out 50 to 60 per cent of the entire flock and the balance laid as many eggs as the entire flock. Some of our kind friends have taken the trouble to confine those we culled out as poor layers and fed them everything they could think of to make them lay, but without results. We are merely telling this to show the merits of the system. It is not 100 per cent perfect but it will do wonders when worked on the average flock of Texas farm hens. It might also be well to state here that it will work equally as well in mongrel or ~~some~~ Red Docks, with the exception that among mongrels it may cull out a discouragingly large number. It takes courage and back bone to cull ~~the~~ Red Docks a piker, but get out there in the yard and isolate the poor layers and route them to the market. We have been instrumental to cull out many a Texas hen that old and grey from age was considered more or less of a fixture on the farm. They went to the butcher because they had passed their time of usefulness. The first step in culling is to get rid of some of the old timers. Those that you received as a wedding present about twenty years ago. In this connection it is well to know that after a hen has passed the two year mark, she ceases to be profitable from the market-egg production standpoint.

We believe that a hen that lays 150 to 200 eggs must look and act entirely different than the hen that lays only 60 to 100 eggs; and there are more in the latter class than in the former.

The good layer molts late, say in September, October and November. The poor layer molts early, some of them are already molting. The later and quicker they molt, the better layers they are. There are of course a few exceptions to the rule, but they are so few and far between that it is not worth considering them. Keep the worn and ragged hen that doesn't seem to be able to find time to stop laying long enough to shed her plumage.

Among yellow shanked varieties like all Leghorns, Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes, Anconas and others, we have observed that the individuals with the most faded, palest and the most bleached shanks are the layers while those with the brightest yellow shanks, beak and skin are the poorest layers. When you see a hen with pale shanks, bleached beak, and in the case of Leghorns, white earlobes, they are good layers. The reason for that is, that the hen in laying eggs needs coloring matter with which to color the yolk of the egg and she takes this out of her shanks, feet, toe nails, skin, earlobes, beak and eye ring. The more eggs she has laid, and the more recently she has been laying, the more bleached these parts appear; while the opposite is true in the case of the poor layer. She did not lay many eggs, did not require so much yellow pigment and hence left it in the parts mentioned and the story tells the extent of her performance during the year. The color of their shanks gives them away. Bright, yellow shanks mean laid few eggs and quit sometime ago. Pale shanks indicate heavy egg production and probably still at it.

The above characteristics, like most indications are only applicable in the case of hens in the fall of the year and not among pullets or at any other time of the year. It is necessary to bear this in mind.

A constitutionally strong bird, and one that is seldom sick, and passes through the molt quickly and easily is a much better layer than a hen that molts slowly and develops weakness during the molting time.

A hen that does not go broody often and soon starts to laying again, is a much better layer than one that goes broody often and is broody for a long time and hard to get to laying again. The good layer does not waste much time on the nest playing. She recognizes that the modern hen only lays eggs and lets the incubator do the rest.

A hen with a nervous disposition, and a hearty eater is a good layer. The good layer at feeding time appears more friendly and eats great working all day, eating, drinking and laying; she will be the first off the roosts in the morning and the last on them at night. She is a working hen. She does not loaf on the job half of the time. She goes to roost with a full crop because she knows that the egg is made at night, and she must be prepared for it.

The comb and wattles of a good layer are of good size; soft in texture, fine, warm, and bright red in color. Not so in the case of the poor layer, her head-gear on the other hand has shriveled up, turned pale in color and in many cases covered with white scales.

The eye of the good layer appears large, prominent, also bright, clear and active; it almost appears to snap at you. She looks intelligent. The poor layer has eyes that are shrunken, dull, listless, small in size, and sometimes, especially in the case of old hens are half closed by large drooping eyelids. The good layer invariably has a sparkling, bright, clear, large and protruding eye. Keep her. Sell the kind with the shrunken eyes.

The face of good layers appears bright red in color, in the case of poor layers it appears pale and sickly. In the case of poor layers the face is more filled out and presents more of a masculine look.

The good layer has a good capacity between the lay bones. The pelvic bones from two to three fingers apart. These bones are thin, flexible and pliable. The distance between the ends of the lay bones and the end of the keel bone is even greater than ~~the~~ the ends of the lay bones. This is what we call capacity. In the poor layer these bones are much closer together at this time of the year, sometimes so closely together that it is impossible to get a finger between them. The abdomen of a good layer appears large and always is soft and pliable. Sell the hen with a hard and small abdomen.

The hen that lays persistently in the fall of the year is generally a good all the year round layer. The hen that lays well in October is an exceptionally good layer. Her kind deserves a place in the breeding pen.

To get winter layers hatch from hens that lay in the winter time. Remember that it is only possible to breed eggs into a hen and only possible to feed them out. Many culls you can feed hard boiled eggs and they refuse to lay. It is not in them to produce eggs. No amount of feeding them will make such hens lay.

Among pullets the early maturing pullets are the best ones to keep. The cockerel that crows very early in life is a good one to select, if you are interested in breeding for increased production.

Remember that the hen that lays less than 100 eggs is not very profitable. A hen that lays 140 eggs produces a profit of about 40 eggs or its equivalent in money. It pays to cull and cull all the time.

A few hours spent in culling is a good investment.

CALOMEL GOOD BUT AWFUL TREACHEROUS

Next Dose May Salivate, Shock Liver or Attack Your Bones

You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.

Coffee House and Inn.

The coffee house and the foreign mail service were both young things together. When coffee was the new beverage and the London coffee house tables were the regular rendezvous of those who talked big business in the days of clipper ships, the foreign mail service to all continents was just beginning and ship's mail pouches hung in every coffee house of any importance.

Letters for far ports, for Africa and those lonely single settlements that were the outposts of the white man a century or so ago were generally not sent through the national postoffice, but carried to the coffee house to await the sailing of the first ship. Matters of marine insurance were settled over a cup of coffee, too, and talk of crews and cargoes and consignments and concessions were heard at the tables. In brief, big business began over a cup of coffee.

MADAM CROW; MR. FOX

MADAM CROW was on the limb of a tree by the cornfield trying to make out whether the raggedy-looking figure in the field was a real man or a scarecrow.

She was well hidden by the leaves of the tree, and her bright eyes and quick twisting head took in everything for some distance around.

Now, it happened that Mr. Fox had been foolish enough to come that way in broad daylight, and was running along the top of the stone wall not far from where Madam Crow was perched in the tree.

There was no reason for her to give anyone warning that Mr. Fox was around, for there was no one in sight but Madam Crow, who had rather a bad disposition and a sharp tongue, so when she saw Mr. Fox she gave the call which means to all who hear it, "Look out, Mr. Fox is nearby."

Mr. Fox heard it, for his sharp ears hear things that his eyes often fail to see, and he knew that his plan for reaching the stray hen that he was sure to find in the field beyond was spoiled.

He knew that the farmer would hear it and run for his gun or call to Mr. Dog, and they would be on the lookout.

So he dropped to the ground on the side of the cornfield and hid under some bushes, but he kept his eyes open to see where the call came from.

He had not long to wait, for presently down flew Madam Crow, satisfied that the figure was only a scarecrow, and to show her scorn she alighted right on its old, battered "You gossiping old tell-tale." Mr. Fox, poking out his nose enough to let Madam Crow see "why did you interfere in my affairs? I never harm your family. I don't care if you do not." Madam, "you are a bad fellow, feel that it is my duty to tell you when I see you. I do not like the farmer's cluckers."

"Oh, dear, no; of course you do not like them, but you are the farmer's corn."

Madam did not answer. She down, picked up some corn and she went with loud caws at Mr. Fox's anger.

But Mr. Fox was not through. Madam Crow. He watched her straight to her home near the top of a tree, where she had made a nest lined with wool and hair, and Mr. Fox smiled to himself as he trotted to the home of his friend Coon.

Mr. Fox did not want that nest, he was sure Mr. Coon would be interested, and that was why he had for Mr. Coon has a trick of taking the nest of a crow or a hawk and is prowling about among the trees and he is such a good and cunning climber that a nest high up among the slender branches is no bother to him to reach.

When Mr. Coon heard of Madam's nest, he smiled, too. "It is just where I am planning to go about tonight," he said, "and if I Madam at home it will not matter for I shall sleep there just the same." Poor Madam Crow sat on a bough of the tree the next morning in the early dawn, and Mr. Fox was passing, called out, "Good morning, Madam Crow, you look as if did not rest well last night. I wonder if my friend, Mr. Coon, got you out of your nest?"

Madam stretched out her neck, opened her bill and spread her wings in a threatening manner, she thought better of it and flew with loud caws to the cornfield to get her wrongs and her anger by having a good breakfast.

But Mr. Fox did not feel any prier for having made Madam Crow uncomfortable; in fact, he was lying cross as he trotted off home, that is usually the way when tries to get revenge.

Cool Nights Improve Cotton

Since the hot days have ceased and cool nights set in the cotton crop shows a decided improvement. While course, it is hurting and needs moisture badly, it is not gone by any means, and should it rain within the next few days it stands a show for making a fair crop. Early feed is practically made while most late feed badly injured. Crops here are better, according to reports, than in most places in this portion of Texas.

GREAT MAN'S SON FORGOTTEN

Lafayette's Boy, Named for George Washington, Was Once a Refugee in This Country.

The Century company says that comments provoked by "Sword of Liberty," recently published by them, impressed them with the fact that the average American seems never to have heard of George Washington Lafayette.

It seems strange that his story was not exploited during the wartime resurgence of enthusiasm about Lafayette and his noble friendship for this country; yet how many Americans know that Lafayette had a son named after his fast friend, General Washington, or that the boy was at one time a refugee in this country?

The story is part of the background of the account of two revolutions—American and French—contained in the book. Following the earlier phase of the French Revolution, during which Lafayette was so immensely popular, and after the hostility to his moderation had developed which drove him into exile, he sent his son to America, to the care of the American George Washington for whom he was named.

It was his boy, according to the authors, Frank W. and Cortelle J. Hutchins, who, on returning from America, dug up from the garden of the Paris residence where they had been buried, the two swords given to Lafayette by the American congress and the French republic in recognition of his services in the two republics.

This Georges Washington Motier de LaFayette was born in 1779; he was therefore but thirteen when he fled to America in 1792 and his distinguished father to the neutral territory of Liege. —The Argonaut.

PARIS MUSICIAN LIKES JAZZ

M. Milhaud, Leader of Polytonic School, Says He May Some Time Compose Jazz Sonata.

Charles Henry Meltzer, well known music critic who has recently returned from a study of the modern European musical world, in an article in the December Forum called "The Polytonic Six of Paris," describes an interview with the much talked of Paris musician, M. Milhaud, as follows:

"Some day," M. Milhaud said, "I may compose a jazz sonata. The jazz form has been quite an inspiration. One may at times hear excellent music in the halls and much bad music is performed in concert rooms. I have told you of my love of melody. By this I mean that in my compositions I try to give equal importance to all the instruments I employ.

"My orchestra, of course, varies according to the nature of the works I write, and I have tried my hand at a good many styles. One form which I am fond of is the chamber symphony. I have turned out four examples of the sort so far, each scored for only a few solo instruments. I have published various piano compositions, among them a set of six which I grouped under the name of 'Le Printemps.' I have made scores for ballets with large orchestras and just now I am halfway through a tragic, lyric drama, named 'Les Euménides.'"

TRAJAN'S SOUL IN HEAVEN?

Prayer of Pope Gregory Said to Have Resulted in Entry of Pagan Into Paradise.

The Roman emperor Trajan was the only pagan, according to medieval theologians, who was received into Paradise. His salvation came about through the offices of Pope Gregory the Great. The pope was one day walking through Trajan's forum in Rome, musing on the emperor's many merits and grieving that so good a man should be eternally lost. He accordingly dropped to his knees and prayed for Trajan's salvation, and presently a voice was heard from on high announcing that his prayer was granted, but that henceforth he must pray only for Christians.

There are several different conclusions to this legend. One of them narates that Gregory, although his conduct was praiseworthy and successful, "broke the rules" by praying for Trajan's soul, and was therefore punished by numerous distressing maladies. Another is to the effect that Trajan's soul was sent back to his body, which was duly baptized by Gregory, whereupon the soul took immediate wing to heaven.

The whole circumstance was one of the knottiest problems which the casuists of the Middle Ages endeavored to solve, for they all recognized the humanity which inspired Gregory's prayers, but could not forget that the unbaptized pagan was, after all, an unbaptized pagan.

Origin of the Compass.

In the reign of the Chinese emperor, Ho-ang-ti, in 2608 B. C., a certain celestial discovered that if a narrow splinter of loadstone, or natural magnetic iron ore, found in Asia Minor, was placed upon a piece of wood and the latter allowed to float in a bowl of water, the iron would invariably point in a north and south direction. This crude device was improved by the addition of a circular wooden card on which 24 rays were drawn. Each one of these lines was given a name, and the whole thing was called a "ting-na-ching," which is the Chinese word for compass. The south point of the circle was dignified with a distinguishing mark, in the same manner as other nations today indicate the north point of their compasses by a fleur-de-lis or an arrow. The Chinese compass of the present day shows only the 24 points given in it 5,000 years ago.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; significance; your lucky day and lucky jewel

JUNE

THE lovely name of June is as suggestively sweet and fragrant as the month which it honors. Of course, there are two explanations of the existence of June and its fortunate possessor may take her choice.

For those who prefer to establish a direct classical connection, June may be said to be bestowed in honor of the goddess Juno, wife of the mighty Zeus, father of the gods. Not only was Juno the feminine ruler of the mythological kingdom on Mount Olympus—and more than often the ruler of Zeus as well—but her splendid physical proportions have set her aside as an ideal of feminine womanhood. Her modern namesakes have a standard of beauty almost unattainable.

However appealing the classical legend may be, the simpler explanation for the bestowal of the name today points to the sixth month of the year. June is generally given to girls born in the "month of roses," though its adaptability to romance has given it tremendous vogue among the fanciful names.

June is, of course, purely English. It has no derivatives or contractions and no translations into other languages which may be said to preserve its identity. Junius, meaning "of Juno," is the only masculine form.

The agate is June's talismanic stone. It is said to give its wearer courage to guard her from danger and to bring her heart's desires. Monday is her lucky day and two her lucky number. The wild rose is her flower.

THREAT THAT IS EFFECTIVE

Ceylonese Creditors Have a Remarkably Effective Method of Enforcing Collections.

The native of Ceylon is an intractable creditor. He possesses an irresistible method of securing payment without recourse to the bailiffs, citations, judgments, duns or summonses which fall like hail about the ears of European debtors.

The Ceylonese creditor betakes him to the house of the man who owes him money, holding in his hand some leaves of the neungala, an extremely poisonous plant, and declares that, unless he is paid on the spot he will poison himself.

The debtor pays up without hesitation. At home he would of course simply laugh in the face of the shoemaker or tailor who made such a threat, and tell him to go ahead; but in Ceylon there is a local law which imposes an enormous fine on anyone who is the cause of the suicide of another. And there is no case on record in which a creditor was permitted to carry out his threat.

The question, however, seems to be whether in the face of an obstinate refusal to pay, the creditor would not be wiser to lose his money than his life.

Colleges Take "Washer Boys."

The large laundries are beginning to revise their price lists in keeping with the return to "normalcy," says the New York Sun, but this doesn't apply to Mr. John Chinaman's laundry. He admits he is getting cheaper soap and cheaper starch, but he insists China boys to do the work are scarcer and higher than ever. Many of the Chinese youths are going to universities and absorbing some of the finer occidental arts, and turn up their noses at pushing a gas iron in a laundry. It's only the old Chinese that will wash clothes, and they work slowly.

So, says Lee Sing, until things get a little more normal and the younger Chinese drop some of their higher educational ideas, he can't see how a laundry ticket can be exchanged for less money.

The Highest Grade of Lumber Service Is Rendered Here

The first and all important thing in buying lumber is quality of material. This is the first step towards economy in building. It reduces labor costs and adds long life to the structure. Why spend money for poor materials that will not last long and never give satisfaction?
