AN EDITORIAL

The need arises in Crowell from time to time for furnished apartments for rent.

Recently, according to the Crowell Booster Club, fifteen families with an oil company tried to locate in Crowell for a stay of at least three months, but found nothing available in living quarters.

According to information from the same source, last week fifteen families with a road contractor, were turned away with nothing available.

With the added possibility of oil activity in the county during the coming months, it seems that people owning rent houses, apartments, etc., could furnish them and more than pay for the cost in added revenue.

Ninety per cent of the incoming people require furnished apartments. The Crowell Booster Club has an able secretary, W. B. Carter, who keeps a listing of all unrented apartments available to the public.

By listing yours with him free, it could possibly be rented on short notice.

The need for these places is now, and anyone who has any ideas about how this problem could be solved, should report to the officials of the Crowell Booster Club.

Accurate Wire

To assure accuracy in wine manufacture, particularly in the smaller diameters, many wire producers use diamond wire drawing dies. These dies are made moulding the diamonds in a Monel disc under heat and pressure. The diamonds are then drilled and finished to drawing size, which may be as small as three ten-thous-andths of an inch. Monel is used as the setting because it resists the corrosive effects of oil and lubricants employed in wire draw-

A late Hoover Commission report deals with the problem of government owned and operated commercial businesses. One section of it is devoted to the shipbuilding and repair yards run by the Navy, and to the law which makes it mandatory for the government for granted. to build the first and each succeeding alternate vessel of the types it authorizes. This can be waived only in rare cases, when the President decides that the stipulation is not consistent with the public interest.

In the Commission's view, this "represents a destructive intrusion into the private shipbuilding industry of this country." It Navy could not produce sufficient shipping to meet our needs, and we would have to depend primarily on private yards. Yet, it continues, these yards "lack the construction and repair activity needed to maintain their capacity, skills and mobilization utility," and are in a "distressed condition."

The Commission refutes this, and offers the opinion that the work can be done as well and possibly better in private yards. Its solution to the problem is to allow private in a private industry. The bill for shipbuilders the right to bid on an all-powerful state is paid for all vessels the government buys, in the precious coin of freedomnot just some of them.

Finally, the report states that the unnecessary intrusion of government into business injures "the very system upon which our future security and prosperity based." Once burned, twice shy, the saying goes. And it seems to work pretty much that way with people who have had actual day day experience with government regulation and control of their lives. Such people appreciate to the fullest traditional American freedoms which many of us take
