Former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, who was 75 years old on Jan- For District Judge: uary 27, is said to have become deeply religious of late. In his exile at Doorn, Holland, he lives a most austere life, with devotional exercises For Sheriff and Tax Collector: occupying much of his daily routine.

According to reports, he reads the Bible the first thing in the morning and has religious services at 8. The afternoon is largely devoted to the reading of religious books, while the evening is marked by a season of For Trasurer: prayer

He attends services at a local church with unfailing regularity, an odd feature of which is that he writes many of the sermons which the pastor VANCE SWAIM (Re-election) many of the sermons which the pastor afterwards preaches to him.

All this is in striking contrast with the characteristics which the world saw in the rather arrogant war lord of a few years ago, although Wilhelm always professed to be on friendly For terms with the Deity. An American admiral once got in bad by satirizing the then Kaiser in a poem called "Me and God," in which Wilhelm was represented as claiming a partnership in which he gave the Almighty second place.

Anyway, the Kaiser is a good boy now, and at the age of 75 is not likely to further endanger the peace of the world.

FORTY YEARS IN WILDERNESS

THE FOARD COUNTY NEWS

The distance from Egypt to the Promised Land is no longer than the trip from New York to Buffalo. Moses might easily have led his people over the route in a few weeks, instead of which the wanderings occupied forty years. Guided by divine wisdom, he saw the necessity for a long period of isolated discipline. They were slaves when he started with them; they were an organized self-governing nation when, at length, he climbed to the pinnacle of Mount Pisgah and looked across into the Promised Land, which he was permitted to see but not to enter.

So Moses, the servant of the Lord, died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the Lord.

And He (the Lord) buried him in a valley in the land of Moab, over against Beth-peor; but no man knoweth of his sepulchre unto this day.

How well he had done his work was immediately apparent. Joshua, whom he had chosen to succeed him, took hold without a hitch and completed the journey into Canaan. He, too, was a man of vision. As a young man, he had been sent by Moses with eleven others to spy out the Promised Land. Ten of the twelve came back with a faint-hearted report.

It is a land that eateth up the inhabitants thereof; and all the people we saw in it are men of a great stature.

And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, which come of the giants: and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight.

Thus you can always get a majority vote to do nothing to take no chances. But there was a minority report. Joshua and Caleb, without minimizing the difficulties, protested stoutly that the land was fertile and worth fighting for. They brought back samples of fruit to prove their contention, but it was a long time before the people had the courage to move on.

Joshua was a soldier and was much needed for the work which Moses had left to be done. He led his people across the Jordan, engineered the successful attack upon Jericho, the walled city of the unfortunate people who happened to be in possession of the Promised Land, and conducted a triumphal campaign which was about as savage as any war could be. Finally, his work completed, he called his people together for a farewell address of great dignity and power "Behold, this day I am going the way of all the earth," he told them; and with that he laid aside his arms and died.

Comes now a picturesque succession of leaders, called Judges, with whom we can tarry only a moment in this rapid survey. There was a woman, Deborah, among them, whose stirring battle-hymn is one of the first recorded poems. There was a keen fighter named Gideon, a shrewd strategist, who equipped his slender force of three hundred men with chariot lights and trumpets and attacked at night.

W. N. Stokes In Race For Re-election As 46th District Judge

Judge W. N. Stokes today authorized publication of his formal announcement as a candidate for reelection to the office of Judge of the Forty-sixth District Court, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries.
