JOSEPH

And Joseph was brought down to Egypt; and Potiphar, an officer f Pharaoh, captain of the guard, bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelites. . .

And Joseph found grace in his sight, and he served him; and he (Potiphar) made him overseer over his house, and all that he had. . .

And it came to pass after these things, that his master's wife cast her eyes upon Joseph; and she said, Lie with me . . . and he fled, and got him out.

The illicit love of Potiphar's wife, and her revenge when the the young overseer refused to betray the trust of his master, is the most widely remembered episode in Joseph's career. It has been the theme of plays and novels, and the cynical writers of all ages have scoffed at the young man's scruples and by their scoffing condemned themselves. For the story of Joseph is the finest single story in the Old Testament.

His father's favorite, and therefore the scorn his brothers, he made trouble for himself by the strange wisdom of his dreams and by his "coat of many colors," his father's "Behold this dreamer cometh," they sneered, and forthwith they cast him into a pit, and smearing his coat with the blood of a kid took it home to their sorrowing father with a lie.

A commonplace age is always suspicious of dreamers. But what continent was ever opened, what railway built, what great discovery made, without their help?

He whom a dream hath possessed treads the invincible marches; From the dust of the day's long road he leaps to a laughing star; And the ruin of worlds that fall he views from celestial arches, And rides God's battlefield in a golden and shining car.

The dreamer may ride in the golden car at the end, as the poets inform us, but he treads a long hard path in the beginning. The Ishmaelites bought Joseph when his brothers removed him from the pit into which they had cast him, and he tramped beside their camels down the dusty trail into Egypt. By sheer brains and force of character he won his way into Potiphars employ:

And he (Potiphar) left all that he had in Joseph's hand; and he knew not aught he had, save the bread which he did eat.

Joseph's life stretched out before him with the fine promise of success when the passion of a woman intervened, and evil days descended. "Behold this dreamer cometh;" unlock the prison door and let it

In prison who remembered him? Potiphar's wife, perhaps, with a sinister smile at his scruples. His guilty brothers, like enough, with a lessening prick of conscience until they almost persuaded themselves they had forgotten. But the people whom he had benefited did not remember him.

What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES.

What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache.

Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Do they interefere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends?

You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal

You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.
