New approach to pricing of drugs

groups to flock to Austin and attempt to kill or water down legislation introduced by State Sen. Jack Ogg at Houston that would require physicians to prescribe drugs by both the trade name and generic name.

Senator Ogg, who was chairman of the interim study committee relating to public health care as a House member in this past session, says the legislation he has introduced as a senator is a "relatively new and innovative approach to the pricing of drugs.

There is no question that citizens in this state are paying 20 to 200 per cent in excess of what they should be paying for prescription drugs," the senator said.

He says that while he recognizes and certainly acknowledges the quality of medicine, every unbiased opinioned and report reflects that there is not that much difference in qual-

This is legislation that many people in this state, particularly the elderly and those on fixed and low incomes, badly need if they are to be properly treated in the future," said Senator Oga.

We share the senator's opinion. A survey released just last week in Houston by a public consumer group shows the extreme range in prices and the amounts of money that Texans can save if they were able to have prescriptions filled with generic or chemical equivalent drugs. Under the present law, doctors are required to have a brand name prescription the brand name at astronomical rates.

The Houston lawmaker says that once the public becomes aware of the prices they are paying and the mark-up on brand name drugs, he thinks they can put more pressure on the lawmakers in Austin than special in-

The Ogg plan, which is a combination of plans offered in California and Massachusetts Massachusetts was the first state to pass a generic drug law), not only requires the prescription be written with the brand and generic name, but also that prices be posted in various places showing the prices by the generic name and by the brand name.

The Houston senator points out that his legislation is not a blast at the pharmacists nor at the doctors, but at the large brand name

The "Pharmacist Association of Texas has already stated that they are in support of the bill," Senator Ogg said. "I have heard of two or three isolated situations of medical doctors who claim that they will fight the bill, but I believe the average medical doctor in Texas is too interested in the welfare of the patient and in keeping medical costs down to fight

Anyone who is open minded and unselfish can readily see that this is a bill that would benefit all people, particularly the very poor and those on fixed incomes.--CD

This editorial is being written Monday, which is a day ahead of the Post Anteiope-Denver City and Post Doe-Slaton basketball

The reader will know by the time he reads this editorial how the two games came out, of course—and both were crucial contests. If the 'Lopes won, they have the inside track on the District 5AA championship, providing, of course, that they can beat the Slaton Tigers next Tuesday night on the Tigers' home

If the Does won Tuesday night, they are tied with the Slaton Tigerettes for the district championship, with a playoff game necessary to determine the district representative in the bi-district playoff game

If the Does lost to Slaton, they are eliminated from championship contention, and the season is over for them. But, win or lose, what a season it has been for the Does and

If Coach John Alexander's Antelopes lost to Denver City Tuesday night, they're still not out of the title race, since if Denver City should lose its final game to Slaton and the Lopes beat Slaton, Post and Denver City would be tied for the second half championship, with a playoff game necessary, since the same two teams tied for the first half title.

Of course, you won't find all those things on the short form. But you'll find enough to confuse you. If people didn't, H. R. Block would have been in some other line of business long ago.

BUT, THEN, IF figuring your income tax confuses you, there is this consolation: it apparently confuses the experts, too.

Using the same set of facts, a reporter for a Philadelphia news-paper asked six commercial income tax preparers to figure his federal taxes. They came up with five different answers.

THE REPORTER THEN asked

"So I turned to my wife," the reporter said, "whom I drafted to represent the average, 'non-expert' citizen who figures out his own taxes. After three hours at it, she came up with still another figure."

THE REPORTER said the IRS knew from the start what he was up to but was off in its initial closely-sudited effort and later oplied the "correct" figure. The IRS taxpayer assistance bureau. on the other hand, made a num-ber of errors, he said.

THIS IS THAT time of year when the Internal Revenue Service starts telling you how simple it is to fill out your income tax return, after having sent you a mail box full of complicated forms-all done up in one compact bundle that, on the surface, looks simple

To help confuse you, they've even made the simplest form shorter this year than it was last yearso right off the hat they've mixed up lots of people by sending them a different looking form than the one they made out, or tried to make out, last year.

I've NOTICED THIS year that the IRS has not repeated its statement of last year that the short form is so simple a fifth grade student could fill it out properly. They probably changed their mind on that after a fifth grade teacher had her pupils try to fill out one of the short forms. Few of the pupils got past the words "joint return," and those that did soon ran into something else that stumped them.

Adding to the complexity of even this year's short income tax form are the "Revenue Sharing" blanks to be filled in on the reverse side of a short form, which, admittedly, was longer last year, but didn't have anything on the reverse side that you had to pay any attention

THE IRS PEOPLE might not have taken into consideration the fact that all many people know about revenue sharing is that it's a bunch of money the government sends back to the states, counties and cities for them to wrangle over what to do with-as they are doing in Lubbock.

Even the chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Service is plugging for a simpler income tax law and a simpler income tax form, as least insofar as the elderly and Behlen is a life member of the National Federation of Music Clubs and enters competition on the individual basis. He holds nine swards in the "Parade of American Music" and five awards in the National Music Week contests.

Behlen is an accomplished musician who plays many other musical instruments, including guitar, concertina, harmonica and organ. He has been playing folk music since he was a small boy and began making dulcimers several years ago as a hobby. However, it soon grew into a full-time business.

The dulcimer was first made in Germany in 1518. They are now made in various shapes and sizes with from three to eight strings. Behlen has had several of his Southern Highland dulcimers on display, and explained how different woods are used in the construction to get desired tones and volume. The modern rock music performers are now using dulcimers in their bands, and many are made by the Slaton man.

He and his wife hold open house every Sunday afternoon. People of all ages visit to see his many musical instruments and to enjoy playing folk music together.

LISTENING POST

One picture is worth a thousand words!" Being a word man myself, I hadn't really appreciated how true the old saying was. Writers and readers both carry on a shameless love affair with words. The passions in a book can often be more real than life itself. An author can get so carried away with his (or her) words that they become more real than reality. I once heard Ayn Rand interviewed on television. Her philosophy of Objectivism is the spine and soul of her novels. She is very serious and earnest about it. Yet people are sometimes puzzled for they wonder if real human beings ever act the way Miss Rand would like them to act.

She was asked to name some individuals who measured up to her philosophy. She replied, "John Galt, Hank Reardon and Howard Roark". This answer might not startle you, but it startled me. All three are heroes in her novels. I strongly suspect that in her mind they are just as real and alive as flesh and blood men. And quite probably she would get along better with them than her live acquaintances, for after all, she formed them and made them flawless in the first place.

But back to where I started, as powerful as words may be and as convincing as a story, or a book, or a newspaper article might be told - the mighty picture will still be more persuasive. Just the other day, the Library Board saw such a picture. It was a rough drawing by David Newby of a possible floor plan for the completed libr-

HEART

How often I've heard it said, in our present building, gazed at the walls, tried to pierce the solid masonry and imagine what the whole library would look like.

Being a word man, I've had difficulty seeing it. Not that I ever doubted it could be done, or would be done. The wonder of faith is that it allows us to believe in that which is not seen, and surely our library is the fruit of faith if ever there was one!

Now, suddenly, we have a picture. Small, proportions not too precisely indicated, just the haziest suggestion of what reality will one day be, but a picture at last. The board was unanimous in its excitement of this pencil drawing. It was confirmation that our hope was not foolish, our plan not doomed to defeat. Here was a real library that could be ours, a library that would be an asset to the commun-ity and one that could provide first-rate library service to Post and Garza County.

Ask me now about the new library, and I can see it. Not as clearly as I will see it, but I can still see it, And I'm pleased. Before the year is out, you will be too! Yes, one picture is worth ten thousand words, it will do more for you than all the library columns ever written in the Post Dispatch. But better even than the picture will be the new library itself.

Don't take my word for it-come and see.

Boy Scouting Today Celebrates Its 63rd Birthday!

America's Boy Scouting movement offers an exciting educational experience for growing boys, pointing the way toward a life of fulfillment as a man.

Post for a majority of Scouting's 63 years has been closely associated with the movement—and remains so today.

As long as we have interested adults to provide leadership, enrolling boys in Scouting is no problem.

On Scouting's 63rd birthday we salute the local leaders who make this community's participation possible.

Affirmative action, of course, is even riskier. Thus:

A motorist lost his temper when he found a meter maid beside his parked car, writing up a ticket that he felt was unjustified.

First, he refused to accept the ticket. Then, when the meter maid tried to put it on his windshield, he blocked her path and deflected her arm.

A court concluded afterward that these actions, added together, did constitute the offense of obstructing an officer.

This does not mean, however, that a policeman has to be treated with kid gloves. Reasonable remonstrance is within a citizen's rights.

In another case, while a man was being placed under arrest in a tavern, his wife informed the police-with vigor-that they had no right to take him away. Still, she did not interfere physically with the arrest. Nor did she use threatening language.

Haled into court for obstruct ing an officer, the woman was found not guilty of any offense. The court said:

"Policemen are no more exempt from criticism than cabinet min-
