Third in a Series:

Fighter Bombers Loaded with Nuclear Weapons

By Wesley W. Burnett

Throughout the first day the commotion continued, and in the late afternoon, it became obvious that the maintenance people could not meet the deadline to load every fighter aircraft with the nuclear bombs.

No matter how strong the order from the wing commander, there were several aircraft that just flat couldn't be moved out of the hanger until serious maintenance work was completed.

Several times during the day the "red" phone buzzed, and the colonel would explain the delays to the NORAD command post.

Then he would ask for another status report from the maintenance officer.

Meantime, the pilots were being briefed in what is termed "Top Secret Sensitive", which means the only people allowed in the briefing room were pilots and commanders.

What they were told I never was allowed to know. But when they were seen later, they showed signs of obvious concern.

Late in the evening, a select group of pilots were picked to remain on duty, while the others were allowed to go home for the night...with the instructions to carry their two-way radios, stay in their flight gear, and keep their pistols strapped on.

Support officers were allowed to leave also, but to report immediately the next morning, and to be at home, ready to report sooner if necessary.

The maintenance and armaments people, officers to airmen, labored through the night to complete the task of loading the dangerous nuclear bombs on the F-106 supersonic fighters.

As some of us were walking to the parking lot, we turned to view the scene on the flight-line...the tow-trucks pulling the ominous looking bombs across the concrete to waiting aircraft.

We knew only too well what they were hauling, and how dangerous the whole mission was...one accident and the possibility of a nuclear disaster could engulf the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

It was too frightening to think about...we went home and sat in front of the TV hoping to find some glimpse of why we were doing what we were doing.

Wives of pilots had more questions than could be answered...we were ordered not to talk about the alert to anyone.

We sat and watched...then reported to duty again the next day...and the next and the next.

Mayor Giles McCrary Receives Service Award

Giles McCrary, Post Mayor and South Plains civic leader, has been awarded the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center (TTUHSC) School of Medicine Dean's Distinguished Service Award.

McCrary was presented the award by School of Medicine Dean J. Ted Hartman during the Annual Awards Convocation June 4 at Texas Tech University.

"Mr. McCrary has been instrumental in the development of emergency medical services for the South Plains...his contribution has been invaluable," said Hartman.

Born in Fort Worth, McCrary has been an oil operator and rancher in Post since 1958. In 1968, he was elected mayor of Post, a position he has held since that time. He is director of First National Bank of Post, director of South Plains Association of Governments (representing Post and Garza County), director of Texas Tech Museum Board, chairman of Texas Association of Mayors, Council Members and Commissioners, and director of West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

McCrary has been recognized by Who's Who in Notable Americans of the Bicentennial Area, Who's Who in Personalities of the South, Who's Who in the Southwest, Who's Who in Texas, Men of Achievement and American Biographical Institute Book of Honor.

Health care for the citizens of the South Plains has been a major concern of McCrary's. He is a certified Emergency Medical Technician and was responsible for establishing the Post Volunteer Emergency Medical Service. For several years he served on the statewide Emergency Medical Services committee. He is director of South Plains Trauma Society, Lubbock, and director of South Plains Perinatal Society, Lubbock.

McCrary was instrumental in establishing the South Plains Emergency Medical Services and is chairman and executive committee member. He is an advisory council member of Emergency Medical Services, Texas Department of Health Resources, and is chairman of the Texas Tech Medical Foundation.

Cotton Picture Does An About-Face

The previously gloomy cotton picture has done an about-face due to the government's PIK (payment-in-kind) program and an increase in domestic usage.

Whether or not this price strength will continue, however, depends a lot on Mother Nature, says an economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

"Despite about a 40 percent cutback in cotton acreage due to farmer participation in PIK and the acreage reduction program, cotton supplies will still be plentiful this fall if good weather prevails," says Dr. Carl Anderson.

"The market price may drop to near the loan rate at harvest time, so farmers should consider forward contracting or hedging in the futures market some of their crop during periods of market strength," suggests the economist.

"The market will be especially sensitive to weather developments during the growing season."

The 1983 cotton crop shapes up this way. Farmers will likely plant a little more than 8 million acres, and yields will likely be higher than normal because farmers are using their best land and have fewer acres to care for, so they can manage them better.

Thus 1983 production could reach 9.5 to 10 million bales, estimates Anderson.

"Of course, bad weather in the U.S. as well as in China or Russia could change the situation drastically and reduce the 1983 cotton supply," he notes.

While the U.S. is trying to cut back on cotton production, Russia and China are attempting to increase production, says Anderson.

Thus, prospects are good for foreign production to remain fairly high during the coming crop year.

The 1982 crop in China reached a surprising 16.5 million bales, up three million from the preceding year.

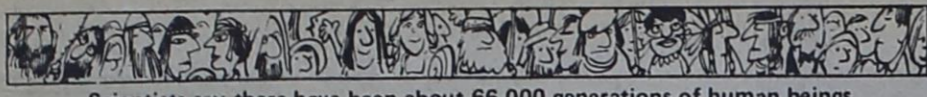

Production in 1979 was only 10.1 million bales.

"Overall, the export market this year is likely to be somewhat soft," believes the economist. "However, a pickup in the U.S. economy could improve domestic usage."

While the market's current strength offers some hope for cotton producers, demand could stagnate later in the year, depending on weather conditions and the outlook for the '83 crop, notes Anderson.

Scientists say there have been about 66,000 generations of human beings.

Driver Escapes Serious Injuries

Jack Rylant, 19 year old oil field transport driver for Hill and Hill escaped serious injury in a one-vehicle accident approximately 15 miles northwest of Snyder at the intersection of Farm Road 612 and U. S. Highway 84 shortly after 9:30 a. m. Tuesday.

Rylant sustained a fractured shoulder and sprained ankle along with abrasions in the accident and was released from Garza Memorial Hospital following an overnight stay.

The late model GMC transport rig lost its brakes as the rig was traveling down hill east bound on 612.

Rylant attempted to turn the truck onto the four lane highway but the rig, fully loaded, slid across the highway and slammed into an embankment on the east side of the main highway before overturning.

Personnel from AID ambulance in Snyder, the Fluvanna Volunteer Fire Department, Post Jaws of Life and the Post EMS Ambulance service were all called to the scene of the accident and took approximately 45 minutes to rescue Rylant from the demolished rig with the Jaws of Life.

The minister of Old St. Paul's Church, Scotland, found many thick volumes of Death Records, and lives of people reduced to a single scrawled line, a name, and the date the person died.

"The only noteworthy thing about these lives," he concludes, is the fact that they died. That is the only thing recorded about them."

"You cannot go to a library and find their lives written down. What despairs me," observes Richard Holloway, "is their unremembered living."

In I Kings 17 and Luke 7, the deaths of two undistinguished men are remembered, only because both of them were brought back to life by the life-giving power of God.

Life is stronger than death.

Life can enter that which we have called "dead" and give it new life. And we have no business calling "dead" what God can bring to life.

The Presbyterians of Post gather each Sunday morning to celebrate that "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." And to seek His Way for our living.

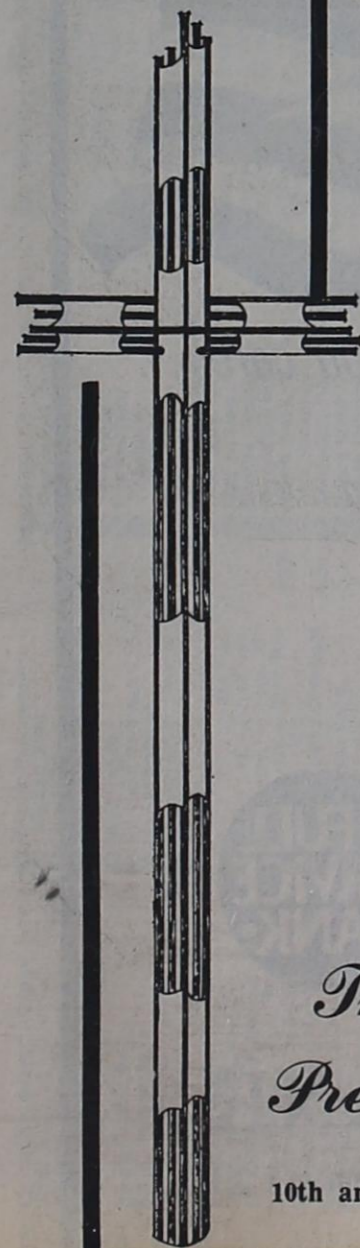

We invite you to join with us in celebrating that every day is Easter: every day God can surprise us by touching that which we have given up for "dead", and calling it to "new life."

Indecent assault

By DAVID A. SELLERS
Copley News Service

Edward is convicted of indecently assaulting a 9-year-old girl. Edward appeals his conviction, contending that the judge improperly kept him from developing his theory of a defense.

Specifically, Edward says that it was illegal for the judge to preclude him from cross-examination of the victim's mother. Edward feels that the mother had "improperly coached" her young daughter on how to testify.

By questioning the mother, Edward had planned to prove that the child testified on the basis of what had been suggested to her by her mother rather than her recollection of what happened. Is this a legitimate reason for Edward to appeal his conviction? How would you handle this case?

The judge explained that he disallowed the cross-examination of the mother because there was no evidence that the mother had any prejudice against Edward.

appeals court also said that the trial judge could have inferred that any mother would be hostile and prejudiced against a man whom she believed injured or assaulted her daughter.

Edward's only opportunity to create any doubt in the minds of the jurors was through his questioning of the mother. The trial judge's total exclusion of this line of questioning prevented Edward from having a fair trial, the appeals court ruled, in reversing his conviction.

100 billion gallons of water used daily

The total amount of fresh water consumed in the United States - that is, made available through such processes as evaporation, transpiration or incorporated into products or crops for subsequent possible withdrawals - averaged 100 billion gallons a day in the United States in 1980, the latest year for which figures are available.

Lawyer for every 18

Since 1950 the number of lawyers in the United States has increased 250 percent, to well over half a million, or one for every 450 people. In New York state the ratio is one attorney for 272 people, in Washington, D.C., one for every 18 residents.

Cataract starts at 35

Senile cataract appears to have an earlier onset in certain African areas than in other parts of the world, with incidence becoming significant in the 40-to-50 age group. A recent report from Nepal indicates that in a certain population group there, cataract apparently starts at about age 35.

The Best of Jim Cornish

City to Start Over

Editor's Note: The following is one of our continuing series of "The Best of Jim Cornish", taken from the files of The Post Dispatch, Jan. 10, 1963.

This newspaper understands that the city must now virtually "start over" legally with its proposed paving project after the city council missed the July 15 paving hearing.

If this is so, maybe the failure of the council to appear at the hearing wasn't as unfortunate as it first appeared.

With paving costs being what they are today, The Dispatch is convinced few property owners involved were prepared to sign up for new paving on the basis of only a three-year payout period, as offered.

Many who want the paving simply can't afford it on these terms.

In the starting-over process, we would suggest to the new administration that they go back over the whole proposition carefully with an eye to getting the annual payments down within the range that more property owners can afford.

This would mean, of course, a longer payout - but a whole lot more paving.

Like everyone else who drives, we would like to see most of our dusty Post avenues paved. But unless a more favorable proposition can be offered, we have serious doubts as to the success of such a paving project. - JC

The same routines were repeated . . . as slowly but surely the F-106 fighter aircraft were brought up to flight conditions and in turn were loaded with nuclear arms.

Primed and ready for attack, it took a good deal of motivation to keep the boredom down after the first week of the alert.

Sensing that there wasn't any real reason at all for the alert, pilots and maintenance crews began to joke and as in most military units, some humor is found in any situation.

I was ordered by the wing commander to daily purchase and carefully read all the daily newspapers available in the area . . . including the L. A. Times, San Francisco Examiner and the San Diego News.

Try as I did, I could find not a single item in any of these prestigious publications . . . and went to the national news magazines in the second week for a hint of what was going on.

Editor's Note: This is a series, which will be continued in Wednesday's Dispatch. The series outlines the world-wide nuclear alert called by President Nixon in October 1969, which was recently made public by Seymour Hersh in his new book, "The Price of Power." Burnett served as an information officer in the U.S. Air Force from 1969 to 1972 at Oxnard AFB, Calif., Kingsley Field, Ore., and Offut AFB, Neb.
