Cotton Crop Great!

A cotton crop that didn't look too promising in late summer and early fall is continuing to surprise area farmers and ginners with a harvest that is much better than expected.

With cotton strippers running in the fields into the night, farmers are now bringing in what looks to be another bumper crop for Garza County.

At Hackberry Gin, Morton Smith reports that 15,435 bales have been tagged in to date and of that number, 12,800 have been ginned. Smith expects to get in around 500 more bales for a total of around 16,000 at the end of the season. At Hackberry the gin has been running both shifts since October.

In Smith's opinion the harvest is much better than expected - spectacular, in fact. He classed the qualities, turnout and grades as spectacular and the seed as high quality.

The yield has been running from one-third bale an acre to two bales an acre.

At Graham, Noel White agreed that the crop was very good and much better than he expected it to be in August and September.

Graham Co-op has ginned 4400 bales to date and are about one-half through.

At Southland Gin, Jay Gray reports that 3000 bales have been ginned out of what will probably be a total of 4000 bales at the end of the season.

Gray says the cotton is the best quality he's seen in quite a while.

At the Southland Gin the yield is averaging around three-quarters of a bale to an acre.

STRIPPING IN HIGH GEAR - Cotton stripping in Garza County is just about finished, with a better than expected crop headed for the gins. This cotton Bud Sparlin's place east of Post was being stripped this week by Dicky Wallace and Delwin Fluit.

Austin Company Seeks Local Cable Franchise

by Lonnie Welborn

A cable company from Austin, Mission Cable, is attempting to purchase the local franchise from Cablevision of Texas, it was revealed at Monday night's City Council meeting when a representative of the Austin company, Bill Kiper, vice president of Mission, appeared before the Council with the franchise request.

David Hilton, spokesman from Cablevision, which has agreed to the purchase, was also present at the meeting to introduce Kiper, who asked that the Council transfer the cable franchise from Cablevision to Mission.

Any decision on the cable transfer was deferred until the Council received financial information on the company and information on the company's owners.

Kiper agreed to forward the requested information as soon as possible to City Attorney Harvey Morton who will study and evaluate the situation.

When asked by City Council member Jan Crawford about the possibility of a raise in cable rates if the franchise went to Mission, Kiper said that he "saw no immediate increase in rates."

Frank Goodwin from GTE also appeared before the Council for the second reading of the General Telephone franchise. After the first reading of the franchise, it was gone over by Harvey Morton and some changes made.

The franchise was approved on Monday night's second reading.

A recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Board to rezone a 3-acre tract on 15th Street from R-1, single-family dwelling, to R-2, multi-family dwelling was approved by the Council. However, Council members approved the rezoning for multi-family dwellings, only, excluding all further uses permitted in other R-2 zones.

Bob Merrick, of the Planning and Zoning Board, reporting on the findings of the board pertaining to signage in areas of the city, excluding Main Street.

Merrick said that sign ordinances as they now stand would be difficult to enforce and that the present ordinance could be deleted and a new sign ordinance, written by the Planning and Zoning Board after a great deal of research, adopted in its place.

No decision was made on the sign ordinance and Council members voted to refer the matter to Harvey Morton for further review before the next meeting.

An Emergency Management Ordinance was on the Council's agenda, concerning procedures that would go into effect in case of an emergency.

Mayor Giles McCrary requested that City Manager Bob Turner review the Emergency Ordinance and come back with a recommendation.

Check Safety To Make The Holidays Bright

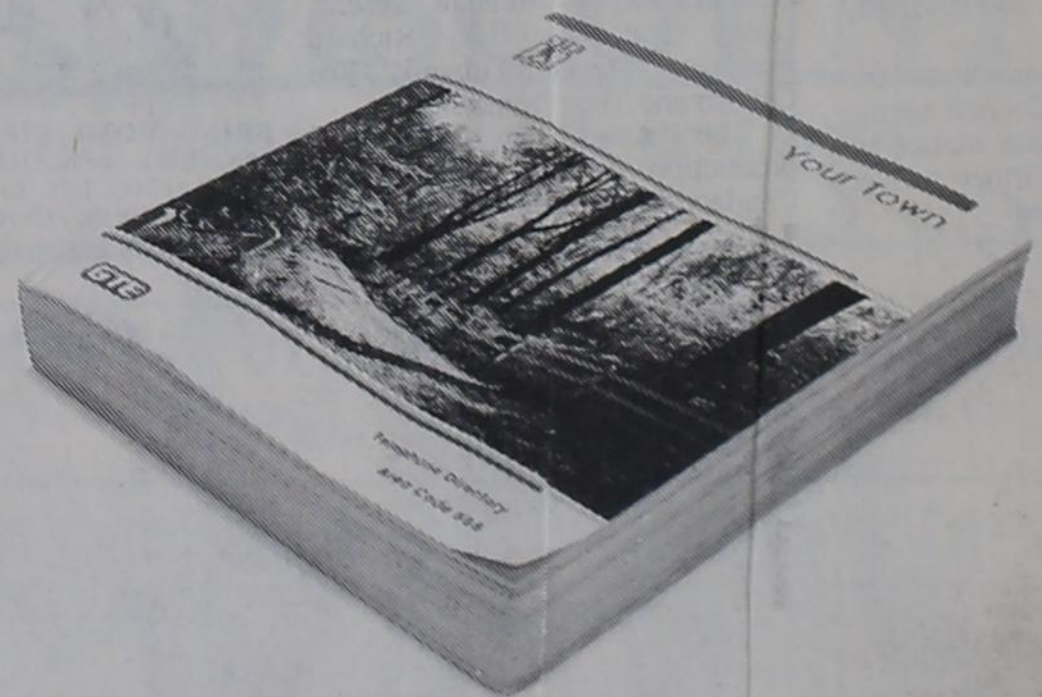

- Before hanging strings of lights, spread them on the floor and check for frayed or bare wires, cracked insulation, loose connections, and damaged plugs or light sockets.
- Check extension cords for wear or damage and don't run them across walking areas.
- Test lights before putting them on the tree. Unplug them before making repairs or replacing bulbs.
- Overloading circuits with too many lights can cause fire. Follow manufacturer's instructions about the number of lights allowed on one circuit.
- Choose a fresh, green tree, trim its base and keep it in plenty of water. If the needles are brown and break off easily, it could be a fire risk.
- If you buy an artificial tree, make sure it has been tested for flammability by Underwriters Laboratories (UL).
- Place your tree away from the fireplace or other heat sources and out of the traffic pattern.
- Never string lights on a metallic tree. Light strings with damaged insulation can electrically charge a metallic tree. Instead, shine unattached colored floodlights or spotlights on the tree.
- Always turn off lights before leaving home or going to bed. You'll save money and be safer, too.
- Never use lighted candles on a tree or near evergreens. And don't burn evergreens in the fireplace.
- Do not use inside lights on the outside. All outside lighting equipment, including lights, cords and plugs, should be waterproof and made for outdoor use. Also, hang sockets downward and don't leave a socket empty.
- When hanging lights on the rooftop or in tall trees outdoors, stay clear of electrical lines. Make sure you or your decorations don't come in contact with them.
- Should you receive a CB radio or television this Christmas, let a qualified serviceman install the CB base unit or television antenna for you. This delicate job is best left to the professionals.
- Be sure electrical toys are tested for safety. Look for the UL mark.

Family Focus

For teenagers, the holidays emphasize the classic dilemma of no longer being a child, but not yet completely on their own. Because events are so family-oriented, teenagers find themselves in conflict with parents if they want to spend time with their friends.

It can really help if parents will try to imagine or remember what it's like to be a teenager. For example, the holidays can have a magical quality that makes a Christmas Eve date seem so romantic to a teenager, when parents would rather have just the family together.

The process of growing-up and becoming independent doesn't stop during the holidays. The teen may want to exert his or her independence by going places and doing things with friends, while parents may be wishing for "the good old days" when their child was excited just to bake cookies or decorate the tree with the family.

Teenagers may also be embarrassed by the reminders of their childhood that surface during the holidays. Having a stocking or a favorite ornament may suddenly become "babyish". Family traditions may again become important to the teenager in a few years.

How can parents and teens work together to have an enjoyable holiday? It's not too difficult, if parents will acknowledge that their teens are growing up.

Start by discussing some ground rules in advance. When can the teenager plan to date or be with friends? When is the whole family expected to be home? When can friends be invited over or involved in family activities?

Involve your teenager in some of the adult responsibilities for the holidays. Depending upon his or her interests and skills, put the teen in charge of the baking, the gift-wrapping, assembling toys for younger siblings or whatever. They can be a tremendous help and have a sense of accomplishment, too.

Create some new family traditions or activities that acknowledge the teenager's status as a young adult. Perhaps it's transferring something special that used to be done by a parent to the teenager, such as setting up the Christmas tree or reading the Christmas story.

You may want to let the teen give a holiday party for his or her friends. Or you may wish to encourage his or her participation in a community service activity, such as collecting food for the needy.

You can have a happier holiday season by helping you teenager bridge the gap between wanting the joy of a child's Christmas and wanting to feel like an adult who makes decisions about Christmas.

PHS Varsity Girls Win Seagraves Championship

The Post High School varsity girls' basketball team won the championship trophy at last weekend's Seagraves tournament, clipping Whiteface 31-27 in the final contest Saturday.

"I feel we gained a great deal of confidence in winning the championship trophy at Seagraves," coach Bill Gordon comments.

"As the games progressed, I could see our confidence level grow as a team.

"I feel the main key to the win in the championship game was the fact that our defense became more aggressive as the game progressed.

"It was evident that we wore down a physically bigger and stronger team in the second half with our aggressiveness.

"I want to praise those girls who came off the bench and contributed enormously to our win Saturday - Kendra Williams, Reshea Hair and Dustin Cash for their defense; Dana Morris for her scoring and hustle and Crystal Clay for her rebounding.

"I can't leave out the girls who started the games at Seagraves - Shal Sneed who has such a big heart both on and off the court and the seniors - Angela Graves, Margaret Wynne, Kim Wulfjen and Traci Tannehill, who provide leadership on the court and on the bench," Gordon adds.

8th Grade Boys Lose to Cooper

The 8th grade boys' basketball team was edged 30-26 by Cooper Monday evening.

The team led 10-8 at the end of the first period and led 17-13 at halftime, a cold third period put the team behind.

"The kids are playing well right now, a cold shooting third quarter where we were outscored 10-2 was the difference," coach Fred Postell observes.

"We have lost two starters to the no-pass, no-play rule and the other team members are stepping in and doing a great job."

"The players are doing a great job offensively most of the time and our defense will get better," the coach adds.

"I am extremely proud of our players," coach Fred Postell comments, "they showed a lot of desire."

"I am very pleased with the defense, we played great man-to-man defense throughout the entire game, allowing only five points to the half and only seven through three quarters," the coach adds.

Texas Main Street Project Director Talks About Post

(Continued from Page 1) to work to bring about growth and prosperity as one of the reasons Post was designated as one of the five Main Street cities for 1987.

"The community leadership was ready. They had admitted that times were bad. They had been hit with a triple whammy - the oil situation, the loss of a major industry and the Texas recession - and we all admitted that," she explained.

The fact that the people of Post were ready to go to work was recognized by the people who choose the Main Street cities.

"It's a surprising thing," Reed said, "but the group that does the designating finds out these things. They can find out - usually they know - when a community is ready to roll up its sleeves and go to work. Post was ready."

In the morning planning session, which was well-attended by members of the Main Street Advisory Board, the PMA, the Chamber of Commerce, the City of Post and PEDC, the general discussion centered on Main Street plans, but there was also time to discuss "Pride in Post" and what that meant to those attending.

"We talked about what people were proud of, and some people are very, very proud of the rehabilitation of the buildings downtown.

Others are very, very proud of Founder's Day; the way it has grown and the attention it's receiving," Reed said.

"Everybody talked about the different aspects of the project they were proud of - one person said they were proud of the 'infectious enthusiasm' brought to the community by the process the project is going through," she added.

She also added that there were people who were proud of the Main Street landscaping program - that it had come this far. "There's a lot of anticipation for the work to get started."

According to Reed, the spirit is still here that she saw on her first visit to Post.

"Oh, I saw that same spirit today in the planning session we've had - I saw again that openness. Nobody was really hiding anything or talking around problems. We were talking about what we were proud of, but we were also saying there were things we had to conquer, things we had to do, solutions we had to find."

At the meeting, Reed brought up the subject of how many vacancies there were downtown. However, she changed the word "vacancies" to "opportunities" and found there were 13 "opportunities" in downtown Post.

"So we set our goals to reduce that by half this time next year, and now we have to go to work to reduce it. In the third year of a project, that's what you try to get into. You have enough visual change that people can see hope, and can point with pride and invite other people to bring a business to Post."

Now there are goals for expanding the Post Merchants Association (PMA) and doubling the membership this year. The PMA is also planning an advertising program on the highway to say "Slow down, stop in Post and shop."

"Two years ago people were not ready. I believe now they're ready and that's good, that's exciting. I see now that we've been working and we're ready to invite all that highway traffic to stop and visit," Reed explained.

She is encouraged by the fact that the enthusiasm is still there and that Post is ready to do even more.

"In our morning meeting we got into a lot of new areas and discussed new goals for things I don't believe two years ago we were ready to discuss. We're talking about some economic development techniques that are much more sophisticated. Things we wouldn't have talked about in a group two years ago," she said.

Discussing the changes that have taken place in Post, Reed emphasized that the changes were not so evident to the people of Post because they see them everyday. But to an occasional visitor the changes are very evident.

I can see the changes in downtown each time I'm here. One thing I have noticed especially - and I added it to the list of things to be proud of - was the cleanliness of downtown. You've forgotten that two years ago there was clutter everywhere and now people are really working to keep it clean."

As far as scheduling for the project is concerned, Reed feels that Post is where it should be after two years as a Main Street city.

"There are times when some cities aren't nearly this far along in a year and 11 months," she explained, "and Post is very much on schedule."

Future plans are, of course, a big part of the overall Main Street picture, and Reed listed a number of things to work toward.

"We need more building rehabilitation, and in the spring more is planned. Our goal is five. Can you imagine five new facades in downtown Post?," she asked.

Business recruitment is also a big part of future Main Street plans and, according to Reed, "We are working to cut those vacancies down."

"We are at the point now where we're looking at business development - and that's where we should be, going into our third year."

The next visual change in the program will be the landscaping project, which has now been officially jointly funded by the Texas Highway Department and is scheduled to begin in January.

Anice Reed has a lot of praise for Post and the people of Post, the Main Street Project, its director Melissa Cunningham, and all the work going on here.

"This is not a case of somebody doing something for Post. It's Post doing it for itself - and I think that's why you see the pride in it," she added.

City Council

McCrary also discussed with the Council members a request made by Ed Sawyers about the possibility of using prisoners in public service work as a way of working out jail sentences or fines.

This program is normally designed for working people who can work at their jobs during the week and work out their sentences or fines on the weekend.

Bob Turner asked for permission to pursue this idea further by getting more specific information from Ed Sawyers. Any information gained by Turner, would go to Harvey Morton for review.

Present at Monday's meeting were Mayor McCrary; City Council members Larry Mills, Jack Alexander, Jan Crawford, Larry Waldrip and Irene Fry; Wanda Wilkerson, and Turner.

Windbreak Trees Offered

The Garza County Soil and Water Conservation District is taking orders through March 1, 1989 for windbreak trees.

Several types of evergreen trees and various hardwood trees and shrubs are available for purchase.

Price will vary, depending on the type of tree and its size, and are sold in lots of 30 and 100.

Windbreaks properly located and containing the right tree type will provide wind and snow protection for farm homesteads as well as livestock.

One source stated that homestead windbreaks in the High Plains and Rolling Plains showed reduced heating costs as great as 15 percent.

Living windbreaks, or greenbelts, also provide nesting places for small insect-eating birds as well as food and cover for numerous High Plains game birds.

Windbreaks for shelter or wildlife habitat are permitted under CRP contracts.

Advanced planning is very important for the successful establishment of renovation of shelter belts.

The installation of a drip irrigation system for windbreak establishment is highly recommended.

The Garza SWCD wants to help make the tree planting a success.

Technical assistance is available from the USDA Soil Conservation Service in planning and designing windbreaks, drip irrigation system and windbreak management.

Drip irrigation systems and information on installation is available through the Garza SWCD.

A limited number of wildlife seedling packets for quail/pheasant, deer, turkey and squirrel are also available for farmstead planting.

Programs and assistance from the USDA Soil Conservation Service are available to people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, handicap or national origin.

For more information, contact the Garza County Soil and Water Conservation District at 495-2056 or at 210 W. Main in Post.
