Volunteers make Taba'na Yuan'e great success

by Wes Burnett
A slew of volunteers, assisting the Post Chamber of Commerce, completed another successful Taba'na Yuan'e ceremony on a wintry, blustery and cold morning.
Weathering the usually stiff pre-dawn breezes this time of year, "Chief" Frank Runkles and volunteers offered visitors from as far away as Michigan the authentic Plains Indian ceremony of "Sunrise Wind."
Among those volunteers making this event possible were Bryan Williams, Zoe Kirkpatrick, Kent Kirkpatrick, Kenneth LeBlanc and Lubbock's Explorer Post 140 and its leader John Cory.
Chamber of Commerce director Bryan Williams specifically praised the efforts of LeBlanc for his support to "Chief" Runkles and to Zoe Kirkpatrick "for her participation and loaning of the authentic teepee, plus her study and research on the ceremony and compiling a complete set of instructions for future reenactments," Williams said.
He also expressed appreciation to the Chamber of Commerce directors, sponsors and secretary Dru Ann Laws; The Lubbock Avalanche Journal, The Post Dispatch and radio stations KFYO and KLLL and television stations KLBK, KCB and KMAC.
Other volunteers helping make the event a success included Jim Wells, S. Rafe Foreman, Cliff Laws, Becky Warren, Robert Shannon, Charles Hardin, Barbara Hardin, Case Hardin, Linda Waldrip, Larry Waldrip and Giles McCrary.
The Chamber of Commerce estimates approximately 150 people attended the ceremony, most of who were visitors to Post. Those staying for breakfast were treated to Indian legends as told by members of the Explorer Troop.
Post was treated to regional publicity once again, getting newspaper, radio and television exposure, demonstrating one more example of the can-do attitude so typical of its people.

PHS drama department presents one-act play Saturday

The Post High School drama department will compete Saturday in the U.I.L. One-Act Play Zone Contest here as host school, presenting "I Never Saw Another Butterfly."
PHS drama department's Candace McConnell explains that the contest will be held in the Primary Auditorium, beginning at 1 p.m.
"All shows will run back-to-back throughout the afternoon," McConnell says.
"According to U.I.L. rules," she adds, "no one can be admitted after a play cast has taken the stage. Each play has exactly 40 minutes to perform and set up. Striking the stage may only last 10 minutes."
"She extends an invitation to everyone in the community to attend the competition, which is open to the public at no charge."
"We will be the final school to perform," McConnell reports, "at approximately 3:35 p.m. It is very important to our young people to have an audience of supporters, especially at our home site," she emphasizes.
"I Never Saw Another Butterfly" is a collection of drawings and poems from Terezin Concentration Camp. The time of the play is 1942-44 and the story is a memory play of a young girl named Raja Englanderova, who survives Nazi Germany and the holocaust.
The story is told through the eyes of children and by a young perspective of life in the camps. As a tribute to her heritage, Raja's beloved family and all of the special individuals she encounters along the way.
Her number never called, she continues to teach the young children of Terezin as her honor to carry on the tradition of her teacher, Trena Snykova.
Cast and crew members of the PHS One-Act play are Sara Hodges, Dalyn McDougle, Shelly Haney, Lynette Graham, Radley Nichols, Sara Hudman, Amanda Richardson, Jamie Feagin, Darren Wood, Jim Riley Simpson, Amber Harp, Amber Little, Tonya Harp, Salli Bush, Mia Mitchell, Rubie Perez, Kelly Line, Jenny Martensson and Cody Collier.

How about the 1923 and 1955 baseball teams?

by Wes Burnett
In the continuing saga of historical Post High School baseball teams, this week I heard from Jimmy Redman, who reminded me that the 1955 PHS team was noted for its achievements. He rattled off a few names of team members, including Bobby Cowdrey.
Yesterday we received a call from Sharon Hagy of Lamesa who has in her possession a 1923 PHS annual, including the baseball team of that year. Well, I called back, but she wasn't in, so we hope to give more details on this revelation later.
Who knows when this list of former baseball teams will end.

Vets given first chance to bid on forfeited state land

A catalogue listing 407 tracts of forfeited state land reserved exclusively for bids from Texas veterans is now available from the Texas Veterans Land Board (VLB) by calling 1-800-252-VETS. Bids will be opened on April 28, 1992 at 1 p.m.

Located in 128 counties (with the majority in North, Central and East Texas) the tracts, known as Type I properties, range in size from five to 80 acres.

The VLB will finance the full amount of all winning bids. There is no limit on the amount loaned or on the number of tracts that an individual can bid on. However, eligible Texas veterans are limited to one land purchase in the sale.

"Texas veterans should take advantage of this sale if they are in the market for land to use for recreation or as an investment," said Garry Mauro, who serves as chairman for the VLB. "Since these tracts have never been offered for sale by the board, this sale gives Texas veterans an excellent opportunity to buy good land with 100 percent financing."

Mauro noted that setting aside new forfeitures exclusively for bids from Texas veterans is a long-time VLB policy.

"The land program is a Texas way of saying thanks to our veterans," Mauro said. "It's only fair that they should get first shot at these tracts."

Tracts not sold in the April sale will be offered to both veterans and non-veterans through local real estate agents.

Eligible Texas veterans will receive a 7.99 percent interest rate with a 30-year assumable fixed-rate loan. A $25 non-refundable fee for each bid submitted is required.

The sale will be by sealed bid only, with a minimum bid set on each tract. All bids must be received by April 28 at 1 p.m. Bidders need not be present at the bid opening in Austin.

Details of the sale and a description of each tract can be obtained by calling the VLB toll-free 1-800-252-VETS.

Americans forced Congress to do the right thing

by Congressman Bill Sarpalus
The justified anger of the American people once again focused on the U.S. House of Representatives last week and forced the Congress to do the right thing -- that is to make a full and total disclosure of every Member of Congress' involvement in the banking scandal.

It is shameful that it takes the righteous indignation of the American public to force the Congress to do what any high school civics student could have told them that they would ultimately have to do anyway -- that is face up to the hard, cold, embarrassing truth that once again this body has abused the public trust.

As everyone knows by now, the House of Representatives voted unanimously early on Friday, March 13 (an appropriate day for some) to disclose the list of the 24 most egregious abusers of the House banking system by March 23 and the remaining list of 321 Members who had written checks on insufficient funds during the preceding 39 months that covered the period from July 1, 1988 to October 3, 1991.

As I disclosed on October 4 of last year, I am on the latter list. Sometime during July of 1989, I made a mistake in balancing my checkbook. The result was that in the next 30 day period, I had three checks that hit the bank and the funds were not there to cover them.

I was embarrassed then. I am embarrassed now. I do not do business that way. Mostly, I regret my embarrassment I have caused to the people of my Congressional District, who also do not do business that way.

Mine was an innocent mistake. True, I was never contacted by the House bank and told that I had an overdraft. I certainly could have transferred money from my savings to have prevented this from happening.

But, the bottom line is that the responsibility to make sure there was money in the account every time I signed a check was mine, and mine alone. I accept that responsibility and trust in the people of the 13th Congressional District to make the distinction that I simply made a one-time, human error, rather than being one who systematically abused a privilege -- a stupid privilege that should never have existed in the first place.

The so-called House bank has been around for 153 years. It was established at the behest of the Treasury Department in the 1800s. The paycheck of every Member of Congress has been deposited in these accounts ever since that time.

When I came to this body, I was told that was where my paycheck would go and that I would have an account there that would allow me to draw on that paycheck. I was never, ever told that I could draw monies from that account that were not there.

In reflecting on the events over the past five months, I hope that had I known such a system existed that I would have questioned it and fought to have the system changed. The fact is that many Members of Congress -- particularly the newer Members -- were not aware that this unseemly privilege was being allowed.

In fact, those of us who maintained the positive balances -- in my instance for 32 of the 33 months that the audit covered -- were financing the deficit spending of those who abused this system. I could have had my money in a commercial bank, thrift or credit union, making me money, rather than helping support the deficit personal spending of my colleagues.

I intend to spend more of my time urging this body to wake up and look at the real world. I do not believe the American people are mad about the fact that a lot of Members of Congress had a lot of overdrafts. I don't even think that most people are upset that the House bank existed when they understand that the funds were not taxpayer money.

What people are mad about is that so many Members of Congress were knowingly and willfully writing checks when they did not have money in their account. All of a sudden, the American people can say, "Hey, this is exactly what you are doing with our tax money and budget. You are spending money that we don't have. You are writing hot checks on my account to the tune of $200 to $400 billion dollars each year."

The Congress deserves to be held to a higher standard. We are the custodians of the nearly $1.5 trillion in revenues the public entrusts to us each year. We and the President are jointly responsible for writing these $200 to $400 billion in hot checks each year. We need to understand, that is what the American people are really upset about.

It is time for the Congress to clean up its act. Americans will continue to hold the Congress in low esteem and criticize our pay and perks, until such time as this body shows it has the ability to balance both its personal and public checkbooks. The public should not be satisfied until both checkbooks are totally balanced.

Critical need for organs fuels LifeGift organ donation center's new public education campaign

In an effort to help close the growing gap between the thousands of people waiting for transplants and the organ donors needed to save those patients lives, LifeGift Organ Donation Center has launched the most far-reaching public education campaign at a time when the need for organs has never been more critical.

"Be an organ donor ... it's the chance of a lifetime!" was designed to help battle the myths and lack of understanding about organ donation. LifeGift the federally designated organ procurement organization that serves 101 counties in Southeast, West, and North Texas, is joining 37 other donation centers across the country in this nationwide effort to bring the public a unified message.

LifeGift President Rebecca J. Davis, who served on the national committee of the Association of Organ Procurement Organizations (AOPO), that developed the campaign, said, "Americans were getting too many confusing messages about organ donation. This straightforward, upbeat campaign addresses the most often misunderstood issues surrounding organ donation and emphasizes the importance of signing and carrying an organ donor card, and making your wishes known to your family."

Ms Davis said campaign brochures discuss, for example, the fact that signing an organ donor card will not affect the care you receive at the hospital. They state that major religions support and even encourage organ and tissue donation and that open casket funeral services can still take place after donation. "In addition," she said, "it is important to understand that the organ transplant system is fair, run by a national computer that matches patients awaiting transplants according to need and availability." "Of course," she said "there is no cost to the family for donation to occur."

Ron Ehrle, Regional Director of LifeGift of West Texas, said, "Currently, there are more than 39 people in the West Texas area alone  waiting for a heart or kidney transplant. Because of the shortage of donors, many of these patients will die before organs become available. We are hoping that as a result of this campaign, the community will better understand donation and the desperate need for donors, sign their cards and talk to their families. Thousands of people are living healthy, productive lives today as a result of those who gave the gift of Life."

Mr Ehrle said that in September, 1990, a new Texas law went into effect that recognized organ donor cards and signed drivers' licenses as legal means of consent. "That law was a step forward for organ donation and patients' rights," said Mr Ehrle. "Now, our task is to make those in our community aware of the right to determine what happens to them in the event of sudden tragedy. This campaign is a step forward toward our goal to make organ donation standard and routine."

For more information about organ donation and to receive a free brochure and donor card, please call LifeGift at 800-633-6562. * Be an organ donor it's the chance of a lifetime!

This ANN That

My wonderful grandson celebrated his second birthday recently and I, fortunately, was able to be there to see the celebration well-done. It was fun to watch him as he coaxed one of his great-grandfathers to help him open the difficult packages. He is already eager to open the present, pull the gift out, and go on to the next box. It doesn't take long for kids to learn about "things."

At the tender age of two he will soon join the ranks of the child television watchers and will begin to be influenced by what he sees there will begin his education in consumerism. I hope his parents will be able to teach him to not want everything he sees there. But, as a whole, we Americans seem to do a great job of making "I want" consumers out of our children at an early age.

From the time they begin to watch television, young children receive messages about products directed to them. Children's advertising about toys, cereals, foods and beverages and other items can trigger a strong response in them when they visit the store or restaurant. Parents should recognize that the "I want" syndrome is a direct response to the advertising messages children have learned from television and does not necessarily reflect what the child actually wants. Many children thing they want an item they see advertised on TV, but when they get it, they never play with the toy and it just sits on the shelf.

The Children's Television Act of 1990 limits advertising during children's TV shows to 10.5 minutes per hour on weekends and 12 minutes on weekdays. By controlling the television viewing time of young children, parents can reduce the amount of commercial messages they receive. Parents can also lessen the impact of the commercial message on children by not having the child accompany them to the supermarket. If you must shop for food with a young child, make sure the child has been fed before shopping. And avoid the aisles that promise temptations to youngsters.

Another trend is toward licensing of cartoon characters to appear on many products designed to appeal to children. Licensing forges a psychological link between a product, a favorite movie, TV show, or character and the child according to Consumers Union. Licensing encourages the purchase of an item for reasons unrelated to the product. But, the item with the favorite image draws children's curiosity. And, when parents agree to buy the items, they find they pay a higher price than they would for items that don't bear the image of the licensed characters.

Parents themselves will recall certain licensed toys were favorites in their childhood. But what is different today is the intensity of the marketing effort. Ten years ago, worldwide sales of licensed products were $10 billion. By 1989, they had topped $64 billion. Helping young children overcome the temptations of advertising is not an easy task. By limiting the amount of money for such purchases, and engaging the child in deciding between two choices will develop consumer skills that last a lifetime.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

McClendon honored by scholarship

Colleagues of the late Texas Tech University Professor Wendell Eudell McClendon recently established an endowed scholarship fund in his memory. McClendon, 54, of Tahoka, died February 14.

McClendon, who joined the faculty at Texas Tech in 1984, was an assistant professor of French. At the time of his death, he was trying to establish the Texas Tech Zola/Naturalism Center in the Rare Book Room of the University Library. Texas Tech has the only library outside of France with microfilm copies of French author Emile Zola's manuscripts.

According to Diane Wood, associate professor of French, the scholarship drive will serve as a living memorial for McClendon.

"He was the kind of person who was not afraid to get in there and get the job done," Wood said. "Everyone who knew him had nice things to say about him."

At Texas Tech, McClendon served as a faculty senator from 1988-1991. He also served as director of first-year French classes including supervision of teaching assistants. McClendon had developed the syllabus and lab materials for first-year courses since 1985. Prior to coming to Texas Tech, McClendon was an instructor and an assistant professor at the University of Oklahoma from 1968-73. He also was an assistant professor at Glamorgan Polytechnic from 1973-74. McClendon taught French, English and Spanish at O'Donnell High School from 1976-84.

McClendon received his bachelor's degree in French in 1964 from Texas Tech. He received his master's and doctoral degree in French in 1966 and 1972, respectively, from Indiana University.

Anyone interested in making a contribution to the fund can send a check payable to the Texas Tech University Foundation, Box 41081, Lubbock, Texas 79409. In the check's memo space, donors should make note of the Wendell McClendon Scholarship Fund.

Seven 17th District residents to work in Washington, D.C.

by Congressman Charles Stenholm

Seven students from the 17th district have been selected as Washington, D.C. interns and page nominees for the coming year, according to Congressman Charles W. Stenholm (D-TX).

Two students were selected for the Omar Burleson Congressional Intern Program and two college students were selected for the LBJ Intern Program. They will work in the Congressman's office during the months of June and July. Both programs are in their twelfth year.

The June interns are Chad Alfred of Abilene and Tamara Jo Burnsed of Big Spring. The July interns are Zachary Stone Brady of Abilene and Jessica S. Oman of Avoca. Lynanne Walker, a senior at Abilene Christian University, was selected as an alternate. The interns were selected from a group of ten finalists who went through personal interviews in Abilene, with a selection committee chaired by Raymond A. McDaniel, Jr.

Chosen for nominations to the Page School are Lien Lea Cox of Stamford, Natalie Michelle Sattawhite of Decatur and Jerilyn K. Freeman of Roscoe. The alternates are Brian Christopher Stephens of Abilene and Glenda Faye Evans of Cross Plains. The page nominees were selected from a group of ten finalists who also underwent personal interviews with a selection committee in Abilene.

The interns will work in the Congressman's Washington D.C. office. They will participate in the day-to-day office duties as well as observe Congressional committee hearings, U.S. House and Senate proceedings and Supreme Court sessions.

Alfred is a freshman at Abilene Christian University majoring in History. Burnsed is a senior at Texas Tech University majoring in Agricultural Communications. Oman is a Junior at Texas A&M University. She is majoring in Animal Science.

The page nominees, if selected by the Page Personnel Committee in Washington, D.C., will attend classes for high school juniors as well as run legislative errands and deliver messages on the House floor. They will answer to the Director of Page Services and will not be working in the Congressman's office.

Cox attends Stamford High School and is the daughter of Wilbur and Lien Hoa Cox. She has been nominated for the fall 1992 semester. Sattawhite is the daughter of Melvin and Teresa Sattawhite. She attends Decatur High School and has been nominated for the spring 1993 semester. Freeman attends Roscoe High School and has been nominated for the summer 1993 semester. Her parents are Jerland and Linda Freeman.

The remaining intern finalists are Kristin Leigh Boyd, Heather Denise McDaniel and John Stewart Suttle of Abilene; Kirk W. High of Haskell; and Laci Murdoch of Jayton.

The other page finalists are Wendy Lea Huckabee of Bronte; Jim Allen Lemons of Colorado City; Amanda Kelley Roaten of Brownwood; and Joanna Sue Wallace and Jason Douglas Zollinger, both of Ranger.

Finding fabulous flowers on the road

Wildflowers get thousands of Texans and tourists on the road each spring, looking for the most spectacular stands of bluebonnets, phlox, coreopsis, and many more varieties. To help in this search, the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) begins its Wildflower Reporting Service again this week.

Every week, workers in all 24 highway districts note stands of blooming flowers and, via computer, share the information with other TxDOT offices. Wildflower seekers can call TxDOT's toll-free travel information hotline (800/452-9292), department headquarters in Austin, one of the 11 Texas Travel Information Centers, or the nearest district office for directions to the best places to see flowers.

The program is one way the department tries to make driving a more pleasant experience for Texas travelers. Through vegetation management, landscaping, and propagation of native plants, TxDOT experts cooperate with nature to prevent erosion, minimize "highway hypnosis," and keep Texas highways some of the most beautiful in the world.

Waste pesticide collection

Farmers and ranchers in the Texas South Plains and nearby West Texas counties set the pace during Texas' Second Waste Pesticide Collection program. Producers who lined up March 5 at the O'Donnell Co-Op Gin turned in some 80 tons of the 197 tons of agricultural waste pesticides collected at four sites across the state.

The Texas Water Commission, Texas Agricultural Extension Service and Texas Department of Agriculture sponsored the four collection days on February 24 in Edna, February 27 in Elsa, March 2 in Munday and March 5 in O'Donnell. More than 270 private pesticide applicators, representing approximately 800 Texas farms and ranches, took part in the free, no-questions-asked collection effort.

About 10,000 clean, properly rinsed metal and plastic pesticide containers were turned in at the four sites. Collected by the state's contractor, SCT Environmental, Inc., they will be used exclusively for the manufacture of recycled pesticide containers, TWC said.

At O'Donnell, producers began lining up at the gin yard well before the 8 a.m. starting time. The line was terminated at 3 p.m. and unloading of trucks in line at that time continued until 5:15 p.m. Producers from as far away as Amarillo and Stanton brought materials to O'Donnell.

More than 750 drums of chemicals were collected at O'Donnell. At the other sites, 559 drums were collected at Edna; 558 drums at Elsa, and 325 drums at Munday.

Bringing jobs to Texas

by Gov. Ann W. Richards

Team Texas won the gold medal in economic development in Arlington last month.

While General Motors was forced to make painstaking cuts in its operations, the Arlington plant emerged a winner. Not only will the Texas GM plant remain open, it will expand its operations in the coming year. The net result could be more than a thousand new jobs for Texas.

During the crucial decision-making process, Texans rallied to keep our Arlington plant open.

At stake was far more than just the 3,800 jobs provided by the Arlington GM plant. Statewide, the auto plant pumps about $816 million into our economy and means at least 7,849 jobs.

In order to be successful, we had to rely on those traits that are the watchwords of the New Texas; teamwork, innovation, efficiency and inclusion.

Our success truly was a team effort. Plant management and an unparalleled workforce, city, county and state officials all pulled together to keep those good GM cars rolling off the assembly line.

Made in Texas by Texans.

Arlington Mayor Richard Greene was unrelenting in forming a coalition that told the Arlington story to GM. Plant manager Art Hester and the United Auto Workers, represented by Dave Perdue and Carl Tillery put together a plan that displayed Texas workers as the most productive in the world.

The workers at GM Arlington went the extra mile to prove their commitment to keeping the plant productive and profitable.

From the state level, Cathy Bonner at the Texas Department of Commerce helped forge an innovative, non-traditional plan to keep GM in Texas. We came up with a plan to show how government, industry and labor can work together to sell American cars.

We did not create a plan to compete with another state. We crafted a win-win strategy. Our plan is good for Texas and good for GM. Our focus was on showing GM how Texas can be a partner in its competition in the international marketplace.

What we accomplished in Arlington should not be forgotten. In fact, it must be cited as a textbook example of how government should respond in times of crisis.

The Arlington experience underscored something that most Texans have long suspected: Texas workers are second to none.

Not only are our citizens the best workers in the world, corporate America is eager to hear about what we have to offer. As governor of this state, I have the unique opportunity to make our sales pitch to business leaders across the country.

For that reason, I will spend the final two weeks of March on an economic development tour of the United States. Along with the Department of Commerce, I am going to take the Texas message to corporate America.

From New York to California, I'll be meeting with representatives of manufacturing, high tech, biomedical, energy and communications firms.

As the first woman governor Texas has had in more than 50 years, I have inherited a certain national notoriety. While all that attention has been a headache at times, it is a blessing when it comes to promoting Texas.

And I intend to take full advantage of that notoriety to sell Texas. As we proved in Arlington, we have much to sell.

What we can bring to Texas is jobs.

Loans to aid farmers

U.S. Senator Phil Gramm has announced that farmers in Garza County are eligible to apply for low-interest emergency loans to help recover from damages and losses to crops due to the freeze, high winds, hail, and excessive rainfall which plagued much of Texas during 1991.

Due to early freeze, high winds, very cool weather and excessive rainfall between June 1 and November 6 of last year, farmers in Cottle, Foard and Wilbarger Counties are eligible for the loan assistance.

Due to hail, high winds and early freeze between October 25 and 31, 1991, farmers in Howard and Scurry Counties are eligible for the loan assistance.

For those who cannot obtain credit through normal channels, the U.S. Farmers Home Administration will make loans available at below-market interest rates to family farmers.

In addition to the above counties, 20 other Texas counties have been named as contiguous counties and therefore are eligible for assistance.

Department of Insurance News

Texas insurance regulators will vigorously enforce a federal law giving new Medicare enrollees the right to buy Medicare supplement -- or "Medigap" -- insurance regardless of the condition of their health, the Chair of the State Board of Insurance said today.

"I'm sure that insurance companies understand this law and will obey it," said Claire Koriath, the Chair of the Board.

"To avoid any misunderstanding, I want everyone to know that we will not tolerate any attempt by any insurance company to deny any Texan this hard-won fight. Complaints will be investigated, and appropriate action will be taken."

The Texas Department of Insurance will issue a bulletin notifying insurance companies of their responsibilities under the new Medigap law.

(Medicare supplement insurance often is called "Medigap" because it is designed to fill some of the gaps in Medicare coverage, including certain required deductibles and copayments).

Koriath said Texans entitled to buy Medicare supplement policies under the new "open enrollment law" should complain at once if rejected by any company.

Complaints should be addressed to: Texas Department of Insurance, Claims and Complaints (111-1A), P.O. Box 149104, Austin, Texas 78714-9104.

The new law, passed as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (OBRA 1990), took effect on November 5, 1991.

It requires insurance companies to sell you a Medigap policy if you are 65 or older and apply within six months after enrolling in Medicare Part B -- even if you have health problems that would have disqualified you in the past.

This six months is called your Medigap insurance "open enrollment" period because purchase of a policy is open to you, regardless of your health.

The counties affected by early freeze, high winds, very cool weather and excessive rainfall are Archer, Baylor, Childress, Dickens, Hall, Hardeman, King, Knox, Motley and Wichita.

The counties affected by hail, high wind and early freeze are Borden, Dawson, Fisher, Garza, Glasscock, Kent, Martin, Mitchell, Nolan and Sterling.

The FmHA, which will supervise the loan program, is charged with providing aid to the farmers and ranchers in order to assist their economic recovery from natural disasters.
