Summer is over. A tinge of autumn is in the early morning air and the chatter of school kids again is heard. However, school life will continue for about one-third of last year's graduating class of Post High School. Four boys of the class attended summer school at Texas Tech: Don Shirley, Rex Everett, Harold Storie, and Holmes McLish. COTTON CROP TO BE SMALLEST IN TEN YEARS

The agriculture department at Washington Saturday forecast a 1945 cotton crop of 10,062,000 bales, the smallest since 1934.

Last year's crop totalled 12,230,000 bales, while those for the ten year 1934-'43 period averaged more than 12,000,000 bales. Saturday's forecast was 108,000 bales smaller than was indicated in last month's prediction, attributed to excessive moisture in August in the eastern sections of the cotton belt.

The department said the yield of cotton per acre was indicated at 267.2 pounds this year compared with 293.5 pounds last year and with a ten-year average of 231 pounds.

The department said the extreme lateness of the crop in northwest Texas made an early frost more of a hazard than usual.

Locals Move Into Last Week Of Seasoning

The Post Antelopes moved into the last week of preparation for Friday night's pre-conference game with Lubbock Cowhands. The starting whistle will sound at 8:30 o'clock at the Antelope stadium.

Coaches J. L. "Lefty" Sollis and Superintendent Ranson have been busy all week plugging up defense holes and working the backfield in strong offensive formations.

The Antelopes look fine for the Cowhands tussle, said Sollis this morning. Local fans and members of the Antelope Booster club were pleased with the showing made by the locals when they tangled in scrimmage with Snyder boys last Friday night in an "open-house" affair for the public. The locals offered strong defense against the heavier Snyder team and showed prospects for a satisfactory offensive for the season. Outstanding in performance Friday night was David Buster, right tackle, and Lynn Ranson, right end, who held tight in their positions. George Hester, the shifty little fullback, demonstrated his ability in passing and did a nice job of lugging the ball. Junior Malouf gave promise of developing into a good punter.

The coaches say that plenty of work has been on schedule this week. Defensive formations and tackling practice have taken up a greater part of the practice sessions, but some work has been brought in on offense, and a few new plays were dished out by the mentors.

Friday night's game is expected to be a thriller. The Cowhands are looked upon as strong competition for the Antelopes.

Start the season right by seeing this first game and make it a point to see all the games.

More Canned Goods To Be Available Soon

Now that the postwar era has become a reality with the downfall of Japan, citizens of Garza county can look forward to dramatic developments in canned foods, many of which were first packaged for the armed forces, according to W. C. Stolk, vice-president of the American Can Company.

Mr. Stolk said that the approximately 400,000 cans of food opened annually by residents of the county undoubtedly will be largely increased with the arrival of the new postwar items. It will be no trick at all, he said, for a housekeeper to put together a three or four course meal by making use of the canned foods she should shortly find on grocery shelves.

Among the new foods he listed are such items as canned hamburgers, canned bacon, seafood cocktails and salads in cans, as well as a long list of meats new to a can, among them chicken stew with dumplings, beef and gravy, pork with apple sauce, ham with raisin sauce and boned turkey.

JUDAH'S CONCERN FOR HIS FAMILY

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—How shall I go up to my father, and the lad be not with me?—Genesis 44:24.

The family is the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But the home is just as sacred as ever in His sight, and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of real men.

The family comes before us as we continue the study of Joseph's life. As we study it we bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned to death by their own words.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27), and who had apparently finally come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life.

That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested.

I. Courage (v. 18).
Easy rears the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and fearless.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-20).
We have become so accustomed to accomplishing things by the use of words that we are in danger of substituting speech for action. Even in times of sorrow or need we send a well-worded card or telegram, and regard our mission as accomplished.

Words have their place, but there comes a time when they must be coupled with intelligent action. Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, such as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

III. Self-denial (vv. 30-33).
One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother. He says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman." Well and courageously spoken!

IV. Love (v. 34).
Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had filled in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 10:24, II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we in intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own. Concern for family will pay rich dividends, especially in those days of broken homes and distorted personal relationships. Love will do more than anything else to hold us together.

Duck Creek Soil Conservation District News

(By Jack Martin)

Earl Lancaster, district co-operator, whose farm is in the Conservation Group 42, is a firm believer in proper management of crop residue. On part of the land which he had in combine maize last year he cut the stalks with a stalk cutter immediately after combining. Then, using two twenty-eight inch sweeps he plowed out the stalks, plowing just deep enough to kill them. This operation left all of the crop residue on the surface of the soil. He left the ground in this condition until it was listed in the spring. The difference in yield between land treated in this manner and land treated otherwise is obvious. Mr. Lancaster estimates that this land will produce at least 30 per cent more grain than adjacent land that was not managed in this way.

According to experiments, land that has a good cover of crop residue will soak up water from three to seven times as fast as will uncovered land. It also reduces evaporation, and wind erosion.

Governor Urges President to Lift Building Ban

Governor Coke R. Stevens is urging President Truman to lift the restrictions from home building by private industry to solve the housing problem and thus serve a two-fold purpose: provide housing facilities for many who are without adequate accommodations and afford work for thousands of people in Texas.

It seems that every town in Texas, large or small, is being affected with a housing shortage. It is hoped that the recommendation made by the governor will be heeded and soon.

New Government Ruling Requires Grading Of Meat

A new government ruling requires that a farmer grade his home-produced meat or have it graded when it is stored in his freezer locker, according to a news release from the Texas A and M College Extension Service. Roy W. Snyder, Extension Service meat specialist who also operates a freezer locker for the Texas A and M College, explains that currently all meats must be graded in order to be sold under the proper ceiling prices. And since some of the meat might get into commercial channels, the locker plant operator must grade the meat as he breaks the carcass. Once meat has been divided into retail cuts, grading becomes most difficult.

If a farmer cuts up and packages his own meat to be sharp frozen and stored in his own locker for his own use, he need not grade it or surrender ration points for it. But if he takes any meat from his locker and sells it, he must collect ration points for the meat according to its point value and turn these in to his local War Price and Rationing Board, Snyder explains.

Christmas For G. P's Overseas Begins September 15th

Warnings to get Christmas packages off to men overseas within the next few weeks throws many a person into an advance stage of pre-Christmas jitters. Most men want food from home. Experience last year taught us to use canned food if at all possible, or at least, it is essential to pack the foods in tight metal containers. Reports from servicemen indicate that food not sealed in cans was usually moldy, infested with insects, soaked in oil or water, or dried out and old. Also it was found that foods ordinarily carried were better than unusual foods. This will be even more important this year with the bulk of the packages going to the Pacific where the climate and distance of travel will be harder on the packages.

When sending food to the servicemen, it is best to send a variety of things unless he has asked for one specific food. Some women planned a menu of this order: 1 can turkey, 1 can cranberry sauce, 1 nuts, 1 plum pudding. Another sent cheese, pickles, and crackers at one time. A meat, a vegetable, a fruit, a relish and a sweet which go together well might make a whole meal.

If you don't have a pressure cooker, get in touch with your neighbor and ask her to cooperate with you in canning favorite Christmas food—but do it now.

Thanks to the Duckworths

The Dispatch force was greatly pleased over a gift of dahlias from the Mrs. Duckworths. Mrs. Duckworth cut the gorgeous blossoms from their garden early Tuesday morning and stopped by the office to arrange the attractive bouquet. Included in the arrangement were flowers of blood red, salmon pink, sunburst yellow and an unusual bloom of white sprinkled with red.

Mrs. Duckworth was en route to visit other friends and bestow upon them some floral sunshine. In her large flower basket she had two dozen of the giant dahlias.

Sugar Production Next Year Expected To Be Greater

The U. S. Department of Agriculture holds up the mirror to the world sugar situation and predicts that production for 1946 probably will be somewhat larger than this year. Notwithstanding, this will be insufficient to meet unrated demands at current prices for sugar.

In a statement received by the A and M College Extension Service, the U. S. Department of Agriculture forecasts that Cuban production may be slightly larger next year since the drought which reduced the 1944-45 yield appears to be broken. The outlook in Europe suggests a gradual increase in sugar beet production in the years ahead, and a similar increase normally would be expected in the Philippines. Re-

New Tips Offered For Utensil Grips

According to an excerpt from "Handy Household Manual" by Jack Creamer, new kitchen utensils are on the way, but it will be some time before you'll be able to discard the old, battered ones for new, unknicked ones. Meanwhile, if you've been planning to toss away an old pot lid that has its knob, try giving it a new grip with a wooden spool, two buttons and a hairpin or a cork. An empty wooden spool makes a sturdy handle, if you'll push a bolt up through it from the underside of the pot lid, and screw a nut on the end that sticks through the top of the spool. So will two buttons and a hairpin. Slip one button on the hairpin, and poke the hairpin up thru the hole. Slip another button over the top of the hairpin, and bend the ends of the pin over to secure it. Cork knob? Push a sharp, pointed wood screw up through the hole of the pot lid, and twist a cork onto it. Use a bit of lacquer to finish the new knob to match your other utensils.

Gems Of Thought

There is a choice in books as in friends, and the mind sinks or rises to the level of its habitual society.—Lowell

The question of compulsory peacetime military training is simple when analyzed. Any consistent person who believes in fighting to protect our country should believe in being prepared to protect it whenever it becomes necessary.

Happiness consists of not being too particular.

LIVING WITH THE ATOM

Americans, large and small are taking the atomic age in their stride. We seem to be accepting it as we did many other unusual things in life. We are beginning to make jokes about it and exploit its commercial possibilities. Puns are putting in an appearance, puns of such a nature as to make any self respecting election break loose from its orbit and run for cover.

The atom will inevitably appear in a popular song, if it hasn't already. Equally inevitable will be a lot of pictures of bathing beauties, pin-up girls and other curvy creatures, captioned "Atomic Blondes."

One cafe has brought out an atomic bomb cocktail, price 75c, and positively only one to a customer.

The sober fact that one atomic bomb is more than sufficient for 50,000 customers is beside the point. For today the atom bomb is a catchword as well as a terrifying, mystifying result of man's wisdom. It has caught the public fancy, and so long as it holds that fancy it will help sell merchandise, from cocktails to adventure stories.

It isn't that Americans do not realize that the harnessing of atomic power is no joke. It isn't that we are completely irresponsible and senseless. Rather we are showing realistic courage.

The bombing of Hiroshima was one of the stiffest, most sobering jolts that the world of thinking men ever received. Yet a couple of weeks later we Americans were making jokes about it. And perhaps that is just as well, yet we need hope and courage and

READING & WRITING
 BY Edwin Searver AND Robin McKown

Ever since the days of Delilah, beautiful women have found ways to get information from the enemy. Some years ago, the Japanese government sent word to Germany that they had need of women of the white race to serve in their espionage service. In 1935, a German family by the name of Kuehn landed on the Hawaiian Islands. The father was a scientist. There was also his beautiful daughter Ruth, who was known in Germany to have been on very intimate terms with Goebbels.

The family had already established themselves socially, when an ultra modern beauty parlor was opened in Honolulu. With its expert staff, and its permanent and facials comparable to those of Fifth Avenue, it was quickly a sensation among the women of the Islands. But it was most appreciated by Navy wives, American girls living far from metropolitan luxuries. The place became the clearing house of all Hawaiian gossip. Women discussed who was in town, who was leaving, furloughs, assignments, ships' arrivals and departures.

The well-liked manager was Ruth Kuehn. The story behind this story, and many others besides will be found in "Spies and Traitors of World War II" by Kurt Singer.

John Steinbeck's "The Red Pony," illustrated by Wesley Dennis, is the Book-of-the-Month Club's new book-division.

The war between censors and correspondents is legendary. But in Normandy, Robert J. Casey relates in "This Is Where I Came In," he had the unique experience of working with a censor who told him, "I just figure that our main job here is to get the news back to the United States. All we're supposed to do is keep vital information from the enemy." "I had never heard a censor express such revolutionary ideas before, and I said so," writes Casey. Then he asked the censor how come he'd never come across him in civil life, since he used to run into hundreds of newspapermen. "The censor stared at him wide-eyed. 'I never worked on a newspaper,'" he said. "I'm a chemical engineer."

LET REASON PREVAIL

During the war, the major cost of all production has been paid by the government. There was no competition. There was no question about whether John Jones or Bill Brown could pay the cost price of an article. That situation will not prevail now that the war has ended. John Jones and Bill Brown will be looking for a saw, hammer, stove, washing machine, radio or automobile at a price. If the price is too high, they won't buy it. And the price will be based on the cost of production. Labor leaders can block reconversion at the outset by exorbitant demands.

INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH MAKES INVENTIONS PRACTICAL

With jet propelled planes now a reality, and with the atomic bomb releasing forces beyond the conception of man, who can predict what tomorrow's world is going to be?

To show how industry must meet rapidly changing conditions, says an oil company, take the lubrication of jet propulsion engines. The axle is the only moving part, as contrasted with conventional internal combustion aircraft engine which has hundreds of moving parts where the lubricant must cool, seal, lubricate, scavenge, act as a gear lubricant, and as a hydraulic fuel. In the jet propulsion engine it cools and lubricates only, but it passes through temperatures from well below zero to 800 and 1,000 degrees in a matter of seconds. Lubrication and cooling are accomplished by means of a mist-like spray consisting of 955 per cent chilled compressed air and 5 per cent oil. The spray is directed on the ball bearings at either end of the engine and axle, and is exhausted to the jet.

Modern inventions would be useless if industry was able to solve the technical problems incident to their adoption and use by the general public. And oil has had to solve more such problems than most industries.

One undamaged major Jap ship remained at the end of the war. Maybe there just wasn't any more room in Davy Jones' locker.

wisdom on the eve of this new era.

NOT HALF LICKED—

The state department's 10,000 word bill of particulars of Japanese brutality to American prisoners should be required reading in every American home.

While the report is necessarily skimpy and contains only a fraction of the whole story, it is enough to fix forever in American minds the nature of the enemy we have just conquered.

It is important that Americans read and remember the gist of this sordid story, for it won't be long before pantywaists among us will be rising to make excuses for the Japs. The Japs, they will say, are really a very nice, gentle people who love flowers and little children, and who were misled by their military masters. For such apologists as these, there should be a special chapter dealing with the cold-blooded murder or the almost invariable mayhem inflicted on helpless American prisoners by Japanese civilians.

It is doubly important that we understand the savage nature of the Japanese people and nation, for we owe it to present and future generations of Americans who will some day face these same vicious enemies again if we ever grow careless and permit them to re-arm.

The record shows that the U. S. state department made 240 formal protests to the Japanese government concerning violation of the Geneva convention, which the Japs never signed but which they claimed they honored in the observance.

About the only reaction these protests got from the Japanese government was that the U. S. was carrying on an "atrocity campaign." This silly charge was accompanied by threats to make it even more difficult to send relief to suffering American prisoners.

Adm. John S. McCain, after seeing the surrender ceremony in Tokyo Bay and studying the bitter faces of the Jap dignitaries, asserted that "these people aren't half licked." In that case we'd better be sure we hold them in complete subjection for a least one full generation, until they do decide they lost the war after all.—The Abilene Reporter News

Warning Given About Licenses

State police plan to crack down on the 250,000 Texans who have no automobile driver's licenses, or whose permits have expired, according to information released Monday to the press by the department.

Saying it was not a matter of revenue or red tape, Director Homer Garrison of the department of public safety announced that a vigorous enforcement campaign would be started to "keep people from being maimed or killed."

"The deliberately evasive person is likely to be dangerous, either because of known incompetence or, in the case of many new residents and new drivers, ignorance of Texas safety rules," Garrison said.

"Of those who have expired licenses, probably a considerable number have developed defects or attitudes, or records of traffic violation and accident, that gives them cause to fear examination."

"Of course most delinquents are merely lazy or negligent."

"But whatever the reason, the impressive facts remain that 15 per cent of drivers cause 85 per cent of collisions, and unlicensed drivers figure in more than a proportionate share of them. As traffic volume and fatalities continue to increase, the citizens obligation to comply with regulatory measures likewise increases. We are headed for a toll of ten lives lost daily to traffic in Texas, and it will require drastic action to hold the figure that low when post-war traffic gets into full swing."
