

THE O'DONNELL LYNNE COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY, AUGUST 22, 1930

Saturday, August 23, is the date of the Democratic Run-Off Primary in the State and County Offices. There will be three county offices listed on the ballot: Sheriff, Collector, and Assessor. Six of the state offices are on the ticket: the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General, Commissioner of Agriculture, and Railroad Commissioner.

State Races
Perhaps the race that will attract greatest attention in the state is that of the candidates for the governor's chair between Ross Sterling and Mrs. Ma Ferguson. Both gubernatorial aspirants have had the last week in "stumping" in Texas in an effort to swing the vote according to Clint C. Smith, this section of the state to their advantage. The race that will attract greatest attention in the state is that of the candidates for the governor's chair between Ross Sterling and Mrs. Ma Ferguson. WOMEN'S NATIONAL AIR DERBY AT LUBBOCK DEDICATED NEW 640 ACRE MUNICIPAL AIR PORT YESTERDAY

THOUSANDS OF SOUTH PLAINS FOLKS CROWD NEW AIR PORT AS PLANES COME IN.
Several thousand South Plains folks were in Lubbock yesterday, Thursday, when the National Women's Air Derby stopped there about noon.

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce gave $500 in lap prizes to the contestants that flew into Lubbock. Coming this way, the flyers followed a combination of the southern and the northern routes from coast to coast. The map shows the route the flyers followed from Long Beach starting August 17, to Chicago, August 25. The inset pictures show C. F. Lienesch, Western manager of the Air Derby; Gladys O'Donnell, chairman of the contact committee; and Red Fugh, holder of the world's speed record for women, who is one of the contestants; and Clifford W. Henderson, general manager of the National Air Races at Chicago, of which this race is a part.

PARTY ON WAY TO DALLAS IN CAR WRECK
Local endurance fans had a thrill Tuesday morning when four home-town boys, T. A. Greenwood, Newman Caddell, Woodrow Barber, and Red Fugh, stepped up and off for seventy hours on stilt. The contest started at six o'clock, the boys setting the stopping time at six o'clock Thursday afternoon. H. Smith, local business man, is managing the affair. Drug stores of the town are furnishing drinks, grocery stores and bakery eat and cigarettes and Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co. a shelf on which the boys drop themselves for short naps. Quite a crowd congregated Wednesday afternoon soon after they had found a way to lean on a pile of lumber and sleep, and watched them snooze.

ENDURANCE ASPIRANTS TAKE TO THE AIR
Only two of them are still in the game. Young Greenwood fell after thirteen hours up, and at one-thirty Wednesday morning Barber decided it was all bunk and went home. The boys are having fun, the town is enjoying the progress of the contest, and at five o'clock Wednesday the two were still going strong.

Mr. Baxter is well known all over Texas in the newspaper field, having been connected with a large number of daily and weekly publications in the Lone Star state. The index was given Mr. Baxter to the South Plains.

Both Chides Represented at Friday Morning Speaking Here DUEL OF WORDS

Senator Woodward Speaks For Sterling—Coons For "Ma"

Between five and six hundred people gathered on the west side of the square Friday morning at 9:30 to greet Ross Sterling and party as they passed through O'Donnell on the way from Tahoka to Lamesa. The party halted for about twenty minutes to address the crowd that had gathered to hear the aspirant for the governor's chair.

Woodward Speaks
Senator Woodward of Coleman made the opening speech for the Sterling aggregation; predicting Sterling to be the next governor of Texas and saying "Jim" and "Ma" till the "World looked level".

Hurls Issues
The Senator hurling many issues to the Ferguson supporter from the Ferguson's public record and challenged him to endorse them before the people of O'Donnell who had gathered there and dared Coons to deny the charges.

EDITORS RENNY PROTEST

In a resolution adopted at the recent national convention held in Milwaukee, the National Editorial Association again went on record in opposition to the government's long-standing practice of supplying printed envelopes to competing parties with private printers. The resolution said, in part:

"Government encroachment in the field of business as represented by the sale of printed envelopes, we again deplore and once more unreservedly condemn. We pledge ourselves to renewed, persistent and continuing effort to correct this, until it shall at last have come to an end."

After suffering from this unfair competition by the Post Office Department for half a century, it is not surprising that the idea of government operation of business enterprises finds little favor among the small town publishers and printers of the country.

THE CHRONIC LIVE WIRE

Civic pride and a conscientious performance of community duties characterize the best business men and citizens everywhere. But anything, no matter how commendable on general principles, may be run into the ground.

We have in mind what we have termed the "chronic live wire." He is always a "good fellow," always a "booster," always full of pie and enthusiasm and always with a grand scheme that won't work. He gladly plays the part of community savior because he is willing to neglect his own business, if he has any, in order to serve on innumerable commissions, boards and committees supposed to be for the promotion of mass prosperity and uplift.

Nearly every town has such a character. He means well and is fairly useful to everybody and everything, excepting himself and his own family. He is a living example of local patriotism run to seed.

Unfortunately, he becomes so thoroughly wrapped up in optimism that he loses his sense of proportion and often ends in personal bankruptcy, through his ambition to be a public benefactor.

Many of us have passed through that stage and some have survived, but hundreds have ruined themselves through trying to carry the entire community burden.

REPUBLICANS IN TEXAS

Much talk is heard today from the Ferguson reporters that if Sterling is elected, the O. P. of Texas will have a walk away in putting in a Republican Governor.

The same song—both time and words—are on the air from the Sterling camp, should Ma be our General Election candidate.

editorial from "The Texas Weekly" in which Peter Molyneux expresses his opinion of the subject: "The Republicans, judging from the utterances of some of them, apparently are hoping that Mrs. Ferguson will be nominated and are openly declaring that if she is nominated a Republican Governor will be elected. Some of them are even saying the vice-presidential candidates nominated the vote is likely to be so close that Republican success in November will be certain. The wish is the father of the thought, of course, in all such expressions. We do not think that Mrs. Ferguson's nomination will mean anything more than a Republican Governor, and no matter how close the vote may be it is certain that Mr. Sterling's nomination will mean a Republican Governor entirely. We take little stock in the idea that Mrs. Ferguson would be beaten by a Republican for the reason that believe that if she cannot be beaten in the Democratic primary she cannot be beaten at all. The percentage of Democratic voters who are unalterably opposed to "proxy" government is not great enough to beat her in the primary, and the percentage of voters who would be willing to vote the Republican ticket to beat her will be great enough to elect a Republican, to accomplish her defeat in November. As to the idea that Ross Sterling could be beaten by a Republican all that we can say is that it seems rather far-fetched. Nobody else can poll the Ferguson vote but Ross Sterling. We pledge ourselves to renewed, persistent and continuing effort to correct this, until it shall at last have come to an end."

After suffering from this unfair competition by the Post Office Department for half a century, it is not surprising that the idea of government operation of business enterprises finds little favor among the small town publishers and printers of the country.

URGES PLANTING OF GRAIN FOR WINTER PASTURE

W. W. EVANS, Dawson County Agent. Planting of winter wheat, rye and barley for fall and winter grazing by South Plains farmers is being urged by W. W. Evans, agricultural agent for Dawson county. With the operation of the powdered milk plant at this section, the need is felt for dairy cattle to keep up a steady flow of milk to supply the factory's market. Evans said, "Experiment and station records and the results obtained from many farmers indicate the best time to sow winter wheat, rye or barley is during August and September," the county agent said. "Experience teaches that grain may be sown between cotton rows and in grain fields or on any available land that later on will be used for pasturing. The seeds may be dusted in early, having all of the advantage of early fall rains. During the fall, labor, teams and tools are available for this work. Later in the season harvesting grain and picking cotton crops may occupy the time of the farm hands and prevent the planting of these catch crops. The cheapest milk is produced from pasture, Evans said, and fall and winter grazing on small grains add succulence to the dry feeds in the winter. Wheat and barley may be sowed at the rate of one half to one bushel to the acre and rye at the rate of one peck to three bushels per acre. A grain drill proves better results than plowing with a cultivator or harrow as the shall seeding of these grains often suffer or are frozen out by dry freezing, Evans stated. "Another means of providing succulent feeds for winter and spring use is the pit silo and the trench silo. Pit silos may be dug from ten to twenty feet in diameter and a depth should be twice the diameter. Grain sorghums may be cut and blown into the silo, reserving by this means a natural succulence and retaining complete food value. "Trench silos are ditches wide enough to admit trucks or a wagon and team and may be from four to eight feet deep and any length desired. The usual method of making trench silage is to pack loosely closely with heads to butts, filling all air spaces possible by cutting the heads. When the trench is filled it may be covered with loose waste matter and then covered with dirt. This method preserves the feed for future use when grain or forage is not available," Evans explained. "In the pit silo or any circular silo the silage must be cut in lengths not exceeding 12 inches and it should be very spindly from bottom up." In silage heats and partially cooks the grain and fibrous parts and it makes excellent dairy feed, maintaining a regular milk flow. Dairy silage relies on silage. Although silage does not add to the food value it retains the nutritious value in the plant.

CORPUS CHRISTI LADY GLAD TO PRAISE KONJOLA

Old President Eager To Tell What His Medicine Did For Her After Others Failed.

MRS. H. L. DRYER

"I was badly run down and even the simplest foods brought on attacks of indigestion," said Mrs. H. L. Dryer, for more than fifty years a resident of Corpus Christi, Texas, residing at 1317 Ocean Drive in that city. I bloated terribly after meals and suffered severe belching spells. Constipation was a source of constant worry and I had severe pains in my abdomen after meals. I was unable to sleep at night.

"I have taken Konjola but a week and I can say that every ache and pain in my stomach is gone. I can now rest well at night and eat what I wish without any of my former miseries. I have never used a medicine like Konjola and although I am 68 years of age I can do plenty of work. I am more than glad to pass my praise for this medicine on to others.

A VICTIM OF HARD LUCK

We have just read again a real and absolutely true hard luck story. It concerned a young man who was handicapped to begin with by being awkward, homely and almost unloved.

Then he went into business with a worthless partner; failed and spent 17 years in paying off his debts. In the meantime he was engaged to a beautiful young woman, who died.

Nothing daunted, he ran for Congress and was defeated. An effort to obtain a government appointment ended in failure.

At one time in his life he contemplated suicide, but soon recovered his iron nerve and pressed on.

When Science Studies The Cow's Stomach

Modern Feeding Methods are the Results of Experimenting to Find the Proper Combinations.

Editor's Note—This is another of a series of articles on dairying written by the well known national dairy and poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis, Mo.

The expression is frequently used that we are living in a laboratory age. Nearly everything we eat and wear and use must first go through several experimental stages.

A few years ago, I visited the factory of a well-known high-priced automobile and was told that every part of the engine was inspected every forty-five minutes during the process of manufacture.

Recently I visited a well-known State experimental station. As we went through one barn I was shown a new-born calf and informed that within twenty-four hours it would not be alive.

The average public is not aware of the fact that similar methods have been employed for years in the study of the care and feeding of cattle.

It is a fact that this is a more complicated procedure than the digestion of a cow in reality has been. Therefore, it is very necessary that the cow be quiet and comfortable during the period when she is transforming her food into milk.

In the year 1915 Isaac and Michael Katz opened at 8th and Grand Avenue, Kansas City, an ordinary corner drug store.

Then came the World War. Prices started to advance on many commodities. Merchants were forced to put war stamps on many items.

The Messrs. Katz had always in mind to run good stores, and their slogan was to "run them well," and it was almost impossible to take care of the crowds.

Then another store was opened in Kansas City, Kansas, only a short distance from the store of the Messrs. Katz.

Roy Elmo Everett is several pounds bigger this week than last, all because he had a birthday last Friday.

In order that he might celebrate it in proper style, his mother asked a number of his friends for an afternoon's fun.

PARTY ON SEVENTH BIRTHDAY YVONNE WESTMORELAND HONOREE

Little Miss Yvonne Westmoreland was the recipient of many good wishes as well as many dainty gifts last Thursday afternoon when a party celebrated her seventh birthday.

After a number of games, the small guests were ushered into the dining room where amusing bear place cards directed them to their places at the table. A lovely cake decorated with candles was the center of attention. After being sliced and the tokens found, it was served with ice cream to the honoree and the following guests:

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS HAS PICNIC MONDAY

Mrs. Boss Johnson's Sunday school class recently decided to celebrate the birthdays of the members with a party or a picnic. Gifts to be simple and inexpensive.

On Monday evening the class celebrated the birthday of three members, Kitty May Garner, Woodrow Barber, and Mrs. Wilma Burleson, with a picnic at the lake north of town.

BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR SISTERS TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Little Misses Elizabeth Ann and Helen June Gantt celebrated their ninth and sixth birthdays Tuesday afternoon at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Grady Gantt, when a number of their little friends were invited to help with the festivities.

Many dainty and appropriate gifts were received by the honorees. Games were played on the lawn before the refreshment hour. At the end of the afternoon ice cream and cake and all-day suckers were served to Perry, Willie Joe and Norman Joy Hubbard, Mary Louise and William Edward Singleton, George Gray, Erma Joe, and Kenneth Earl Allen, Lena Mae Singleton, Dorothy Allen Phillips, Billie Rayburn, Erine and Pete Dowell, June Marie Gibson, Yvonne Westmoreland, Adon Hancock, and Leona Holman.

A yearly sum is donated to the Salvation Army by the association here to save them effort in going to each business house with their tamborines asking for donations. Mrs. Williams said. That arrangement is satisfactory to both the business men and to the charity organization.

LAMESA ORGANIZED FOR RELIEF OF POOR AND NEEDY

By Vic Lamb

The Lamesa Mutual Aid Association in Lamesa is an organization which has as its membership prominent business men here and which takes the place of the Community Chest in other cities. The association is run on the same order as the Chest in larger cities, according to Mrs. H. E. Williams, president. Mrs. Williams secures as many members for the association as possible and from each she collects a monthly donation for charity.

"This system is a protection for our business men, should a needy family arrive in Lamesa and start canvassing the city for donations, it is referred to the Mutual Aid Association for aid instead," the president stated.

"We handle hundreds of worthy cases yearly," Mrs. Williams said, "and the association has an expenditure of over $1,250 yearly. We cooperate with the churches, clubs and the county in taking care of the sick, widows, orphans, destitute families and maternal cases."

There isn't a single day in the year, she said, when she doesn't have a call for charity work.

"Sometimes I am called in the middle of the night to find a bed for a hobo or to get a doctor for someone who isn't able to bear the expense. Our organization has a standing account at grocers, cafes and hotels to take care of the needs of some of our cases. We never give charity unless we investigate into the case. It is very seldom, though, that we have anyone try to get funds from us who are not entitled to aid."

The investigating committee for the Mutual Aid association is composed of W. A. Crawley, chairman, Dr. J. C. Lovelless, O. B. Norman and L. E. Hanson. The members of this committee counter sign checks written by Mrs. Williams.

"During Christmas our association plays Santa Claus for families in the county that are too poor to give their children much. Last Christmas we distributed baskets to ninety-six children. They were given clothes, candy, fruit, nuts and fireworks. The churches in Lamesa helped us to fix the baskets, donating money to defray expenses and also donating some of the goods.

"Occasionally we have cases where husbands leave their wives with children. We also have widows who are unable to work for themselves and who have no relatives to provide for them. Last winter I made trips all over the county nearly every day, seeing that my cases had plenty of coal for warmth. Winter is when I have my hardest jobs. At that time it is necessary to provide my cases with extra clothes, fuel and more food. During the snow last winter I had to move a family out of an old freight car here. There were three children and the husband had run off and left his wife. They were in need of clothes, food and fuel. Oh, among the voters and bring his administration into disrepute.

Some of the falsehoods stated are: First—That Mr. Sanford has refused to serve a warrant which he has in his possession, he had no warrant for this man until Tuesday night August 19th and it will be served at the first opportunity.

Second—That a few of the defeated candidates claim a double cross in the last primary. This is untrue, as no man will say that Mr. Sanford used his influence against any candidate in the last primary. This is all hearsay propaganda.

Third—We state that his son has been acting as deputy constable which is a matter of record.

Fourth—That he is dilatory in the performance of his duties, as a matter of fact there have been more arrests and convictions during his administration than any four years prior to it.

We believe that according to democratic principles Mr. Sanford should be elected for his second term to the office as Sheriff.

If you are for prohibition, talk prohibition and live prohibition, then go to the polls Saturday and vote prohibition by electing Mr. Sanford Sheriff of Lynn County, as Mr. Sanford stands for law enforcement and good government.

GUEST OF HONOR

David was never so excited. He had never been the guest of honor at any banquet. Once his father had been invited to give the little satisfaction to him.

David began helping himself to dishes which were put close to him. He had never tasted such delicious fruit.

"I have come quite unprepared to make a speech," he began, "but since you urge me for a speech I will not refuse."

"Our honored guest," he continued, "is going to see half of the world, my friends. It is no small trip, do you see the world—and sooner or later he will see it all."

"Before he is really off on his journey we have gathered together here to give him a banquet. Perhaps he has never heard of us. Few, if any, know of our actual existence. They see the result of our work, of the order we keep, but they do not know about us."

"There are those with still higher ambitions who keep the lines of counties and towns straight. There are some of them here at this banquet."

"There are also here to tell of our service to mankind."

"Here, here," they shouted.

"Yes, here," said the speaker. "Here we are to tell of our service to mankind."

"I am the Boundary Gentleman who keeps the United States from running off into the Pacific. The United States is still young and you know night run off—and the Pacific ocean is no place to run into very far."

"You have heard it said that the United States is bounded on the east by the Atlantic, on the west by the Pacific, on the north by Canada and on the south by Mexico. We four chief Boundary Gentlemen of these parts attend to that business."

"We see to it, gentlemen, that a honored guest that the United States doesn't get lost down in Mexico, or doesn't creep up into Canada or get drowned in the Atlantic ocean—though the Pacific has a larger bathtub."

David thought that was a trifle funny and chuckled a bit but as no one else did so he thought perhaps it was a joke the Boundary Gentlemen often made. And no joke was very funny when heard too often.

"The Boundary Gentlemen," continued the speaker, "of Colorado are that Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and even Oklahoma do not overstep the bounds."

"You may not see us when you travel, honored guest. But we are doing our work just the same. And so it is all over the world."

What Am I? I have one leg, and just one eye. And in and out I quickly fly. Answer—A needle.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas. To the Sheriff or any Constable of Lynn County, Greeting:— You are hereby commanded to summon G. A. POOLE, by making publication of this citation once a week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, to appear in person at a certain term of the District Court of Lynn County, to be held at the courthouse thereof in Tahoka, on the 22nd day of August, 1930, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on Feb. 6th, 1930, in suit number 2222, before said court docket, wherein Etta Poole is Plaintiff, and G. A. Poole is defendant, said petition alleging: suit for divorce on grounds of cruelty; that Plaintiff has resided for 12 months in Texas next before filing this suit, and in Lynn County at least six months, as bona-fide resident aforesaid, that said parties were married to each other on Oct. 4th, 1923; that said parties separated in person on March, 1929, and have not since cohabited; that about 2 years prior to said separation Plaintiff commenced a course of cruel treatment toward Plaintiff, and failed and refused to support Plaintiff, which said treatment increased in severity until said separation. That Defendant without cause abandoned Plaintiff and their children in March 1929, and without plaintiff knowing of such intention, leaving them in destitute circumstances; That two children, a boy 5, and a girl now 2 years, have been born to these parties, and by reason of the premises Plaintiff alleges she is a proper person to rear and educate and have custody of them and that defendant is not the proper person therefor. Plaintiff praying for citation by publication, and by reason of the premises and matters in said petition contained of record heretofore, for divorce, and for custody, rearing, and education of her said children, and for costs of suit, etc.

YOU ARE FURTHER COMMANDED to serve this citation by publishing the same once each week for four consecutive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in a newspaper published in your county of general circulation as the law provides.

HEREIN, fail not, but have you before said court on the first day of the next term thereof, this writ, with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

WITNESS, Truett Smith, Clerk District Court, Lynn County, Texas. Given under my hand and seal of said court in the city of Tahoka this 4th day of August, A. D. 1930. (Seal)

Truett Smith, Clerk District Court, Lynn County, Texas.

HE NEVER KNEW HATE

There has been published the autobiography of H. Rider Haggard, the English novelist whose vivid tales have entertained and charmed millions of readers throughout the world. This autobiography was written several years ago, but Haggard stipulated that it should not be published until after his death.

The author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She" and forty-odd other stories reveals a versatile and kind personality who recently had adventures in various parts of the world.

Perhaps his most striking passage is that in which he says: "I have seen many lands, I have known many emotions, all of them, I think, except that of hate."

What a fine thing it was to be able to say that! How many of us have known all the emotions except hate?

TEETH BECOMES 'EARS'

Through an invention recently exhibited by Dr. Frederick Bedell, professor of physics at Cornell University, a great many persons who are supposed to be deaf can hear music satisfactorily through their teeth.

Briefly described, the apparatus used is a special phonograph receiver, terminating in a metal disc against which one end of a stick of wood is placed, the other end being held tight between the listener's teeth.

The sound vibrations pass directly to the auditory nerve through the eardrums have been destroyed. Of course, destruction of the auditory nerves themselves would forever preclude hearing, but many cases of deafness result merely from defective eardrums. In such cases Dr. Bedell's invention would make hearing possible.

An idea advanced in connection with the new device is that the special transmitters might be placed near a radio or phonograph, or even attached to the seats of a talking picture theater. The deaf listener could provide himself with the necessary wooden stick and "listen in" at his pleasure, using his teeth as normal persons use their ears.

There would even be some advantage in this procedure. The listeners would not be annoyed by the irrelevant remarks and alleged wit of "back seat" auditors.

LET A LITTLE SUNSHINE IN

Ordinary Sunlight a Vital Factor in the Development of Chickens. What the Ancient Waxed Blinded as a Duty, Science Proves To Be Truly Deserving of Re-ference.

Editor's Note—This is another of a series of 52 stories on poultry raising written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The entire series will appear in this paper. Our readers are urged to read them carefully and clip them out for future reference.

The ancients of many races worshipped the sun as a god. For centuries it has been used as a symbol of purification, and even in Christian churches today we find our children singing, "Let a Little Sunshine In." Until comparatively recently, however, it was not suspected that there was a real benefit in fact, in this symbolic reverence for the sun.

Now, science tells us that the ultra-violet rays of the sun perform at least two very important services for humanity and for animal life generally. Certain harmful germs cannot survive in the presence of these rays and certain chemical processes necessary for proper physical development cannot proceed in their absence. Perhaps the most important service rendered in this way is the aid given to the growing of bony structures inside the body. This is particularly important to poultry raisers.

We hear a lot about vitamins these days. No one seems to know just what they are, but quite a lot is known about what they do and that is the important thing. Of the four known vitamins, Vitamin D is the one needed to transform certain mineral elements found in bone and eggshell. This important vitamin is manufactured directly in the bodies of fowls by the direct action of the violet rays in sunshine.

This is one reason why I am always insisting on open front poultry houses and plenty of range space for fowls. Every possible means should be employed to expose their bodies to the helpful action of sunlight. Of course, this does not mean that they may not seek shade on extremely hot days. Too much of anything is bad. Even in the shade, in some cases, the ultra-violet rays can reach the fowls in sufficient measure to continue their good work. Chicks that get plenty of sunlight will not develop "leg disease" or rickets, and soft shell eggs will be rare among hens of whom the same thing is true.

Not the least of my reasons for so ardently sponsoring the open front type of house previously mentioned in this article is the antagonism of sunlight to unwelcome bacteria. Here again we find the ultra-violet rays responsible. They can penetrate many substances which will not admit other light rays, but they cannot go through ordinary window glass, consequently, if it should be come necessary to close up any part of the front wall space ordinarily intended to be left open, use a glass substitute over a portion, and thin white muslin or cheesecloth over the balance. This will admit the ultra-violet rays and considerable fresh air.

Before going very far with including hen houses, however, it is well to remember that the less hens are pampered, the better-off they will be. Pity for fowls is pity misplaced. Cold, fresh air that has been purified by sunlight is always preferable to the warm, stagnant air usually found in a closed house. Besides, it must never be forgotten that the closer a house comes to being enclosed on all sides, the more it is excluding the indispensable elements that only sunshine can provide in full measure. It should also be remembered that there is less sunshine in winter than at any other time, so all the more reason for taking the fullest possible advantage of what is available.

Finally, we must not overlook the fact that, without sunshine, all of the food products so necessary for bodily development and egg production would be valueless if not nonexistent. It is quite plain, therefore, that the value of plain, everyday sunshine is something we cannot afford to take for granted. It is a big, important subject and for that reason I shall be glad to go further into it with any poultry raiser sufficiently interested in writing me in care of this newspaper.

RED CHAIN Egg Mash

PUTS IN THE EGG BASKET

WHAT OTHERS PUT ON PAPER

A fair feeding test of RED CHAIN is the best way to clear up conflicting claims about egg mashes...Talk is cheap—and anyone can find nice words in the dictionary. On paper most feeds claim "more eggs at less cost"—but RED CHAIN actually does what others claim to do! Don't buy your egg mash for what it does on paper—buy it for what it puts in the egg basket...Feed RED CHAIN to your own hens and see the difference between claims and results. It is the unequalled quality of RED CHAIN Egg Mash that makes it the cheapest egg producer—regardless of price.

The Handsome Man

W.N.U. SERVICE

"I'd rather help the secretary get his way about the garage," said Roberta a little, and turned to go. The plump cupable hand of Lady Sandilson fell lightly, but compellingly on her niece's shoulder. "No need, Sir George can always find his way about."

"Sir George! Sir George—who? Sir George Alan Edward Sandilson," said her aunt smoothly, as she blocked her niece's way of escape, and gently nudged her kitchenward. "Is it not wonderful that your father should go into his service such a grand young man?"

Roberta looked at her warily. "What's your last name?" she asked. "Sandilson."

"He doesn't look a bit like you, just—Aunt Aggy."

"Indeed, no! How could he? I'm only his stepmother. He's the living image of my late husband, Sir Stephen Sandilson of Sandilbrae." The title said nothing from Lady Sandilson's announcement.

Her niece stood spellbound in the doorway looking at her. This dumpy little woman, whom she had thought just a cook-housekeeper, who was indeed the housekeeper now by her father's authority, what did she mean by meddling off titles like that? "Who are you?"

"Your father's sister," said Aggy with quiet composure, "and also Lady Sandilson."

Roberta looked from her aunt to her father. Her father nodded. Without a word Roberta took the tray and went out of the room.

"I've taken the first trick," declared Robert MacBeth, sinking back among the pillows.

Aggy looked at him, closed her lips, nodded, and went towards the kitchen. As the door between the kitchen and the hall closed, Roberta turned questioning to her aunt. Lady Sandilson smiled at her.

"Rob's my brother and your father is well no quarrel, but we'll not be quarreled over neither."

"Let's get this straight," Roberta said. "Are you on my side or father's?"

"Both, and if you'll follow my advice you'll give in to him. Humor him and he's yours, and surely Rob's very easy to humor. You made a mistake in managing him today. You told him what you were going to do before you did it."

Roberta looked at her speechless, so angry that she dared not open her mouth.

"Aye, the money might better come from pills or pork or groceries. The gentry would swallow it and a stranger in Sandilbrae easier than they would Rob."

"Leave me out of it," Roberta flamed. "Don't you think for a moment, I'll—"

"So far from it," her aunt declared vigorously, "that I'm just fair upset to see that you share the feeble weakness of the MacBeth family."

"What's that?" snapped Roberta, noting with surprise the professional manner in which Lady Sandilson pared the potatoes.

"They're just slaves to beauty, the whole clanjamfray of them," declared her aunt solemnly, "and you're as bad as the rest. Watch what you're doing, lass! You're hanging that loaf something awful."

"This isn't Scotland where there's hard scrubbling to get bread—and a man," Roberta told her with scorn.

"Why there are heaps of good-looking men over here. Your Little Beauty isn't in danger."

"So you say," said her aunt. "Time will tell. It's as well, Roberta, not to boast until you've tried out your strength."

"Fudge! I'm not reduced to poor Scots my father has to find jobs for." She disregarded the sudden warning look her aunt gave her, and continued, emphasizing her point with the bread knife. "He's good looking enough to make some girls lose their heads but I'm my father's daughter to this extent that the man who tries to make an impression on me will have to have something more than an angel face, big eyes, pretty hair and staid six feet."

"Six feet three." From the doorway Sir George gravely corrected her. "Your sentiments are mine, Miss MacBeth. Let's stick to them."

CHAPTER IV

Her father had automatically cut off the greater part of Roberta's allowance, when her aunt became housekeeper. Roberta had had a stormy interview, in which her father had told her that she was not willing to keep house she would not be paid for housekeeping. He had explained to her, in his business voice which was calm and devoid of any feeling whatever, that Lady Sandilson had offered to do without payment, but that of course he would not permit.

"I recognize," he said, "that it is a job to run a big house. I recognized it when you tried it. That's why I increased your allowance, and that's why I reduce it now."

"Fried!" Roberta flashed out passionately. "I did it!"

"After a fashion," her father told her, "but you didn't put your mind on it. You disliked it and you didn't do it very well. Witness your pulling out yesterday, and leaving a crippled man alone without a servant to attend to him, or to the unexpected guests who arrived."

"Guests should not come uninvited and unexpected all the way from bonnie Scotland," said Roberta sippantly. "Neither should relatives come without warning. Lady Sandilson took that chance when she came here dragging Little Beauty with her."

"You don't like him, do you?" asked her father, ignoring the rest of her speech.

"I haven't bothered my head about him," Roberta told him angrily. "He's your guest, or employee, not mine."

"Just so. Well, he's not to be made to feel himself in the way."

Looking at her his face softened. "There was a time, Roberta, when you would have come to me and talked it over."

It was true. To her, as a child, her father had been some one great and powerful, whose coming meant gifts and fun, circuses, party clothes and treats tantamount. To be with her father, to walk beside him, silent or chattering as his mood permitted, to travel with him, to go to his office and see him monarch of all; to be made much of and to be admired by him and his friends, was as near heaven as this earth could give to Robert MacBeth's little daughter.

It was different now. Now she wanted to arrange her own life, be happy in her own way, and here her father, once her greatest ally, to whom she ran for advice and suggestions, was decidedly in the way.

"Don't you feel like going over your plans with me?" Her father had been studying her downcast face.

She shook her head. She was oppressed with a desire to climb into his lap, to put her head against his shoulder as she used to do, but she would not yield to it. So across the gulf of the years that separated them, they looked at each other helplessly.

Helplessness became a state that Robert MacBeth was unaccustomed to and declined to accept. He said peremptorily: "Well, when you want me I'm here, my girl, and meantime what shall we do to make your aunt's visit pleasant?"

"I think you can manage that between you without my help," snapped Roberta.

"Just as you like. I thought it might amuse you to engineer it. Sir George will be a bit of a sensation here, don't you think?"

"I don't know. He doesn't interest me in the least."

Her father's face expressed a not too polite incredulity. "Since when?" he asked.

"Since I first saw him."

"Why?"

"Oh, I don't know. He's good-looking enough, but he has no—" she felt her father's amused eyes upon her and buried it out, "no sex appeal."

Her father shouted with laughter and, mortified, Roberta withdrew. She had seen Sir George coming from the library as she fled to the summer house, while her father still roared with delight over her last speech.

Would he tell Sir George? Roberta's face burned.

It was little less than marvelous how Lady Sandilson took hold of the housekeeping. Roberta, anticipating the terrible awakening her aunt would have when she encountered the usual American housekeeping difficulties, had so far been disappointed. Lady Sandilson knew, none better, how housework should be done, and she saw that it was done in just that way.

She knew that in Roberta she had an enemy rather than an ally. Therefore she asked her brother, casually, how much his household bills amounted to on an average and being told, and shown the bills for the last few months, she had interviewed the new cook, stated the limit within which the bills were to be kept, promised her a bonus for any saving, and wiped that worry from her mind. She knew she had an ally in the new cook now, had made a possible saving for her brother's purse, and later, when she knew more, she could be more drastic.

Lady Sandilson, like most Scots of her class, was careful rather than mean, and provided well for both family and servants.

She was busy working out her plans and adjusting herself to this vastly different life, with its vastly different needs, that she found herself plunged into. She was likewise very much concerned about her brother. It was her opinion that Rob was far too young a man to be crippled in this manner and she was planning an energetic campaign in which she meant a barrier to any plan that took him from home just now.

Sunshine flooded the terrace, his island was steeped in beauty, yet Robert MacBeth shook his head as he spoke to his sister:

"It was a mistake to tell Roberta your title."

"It would have been a bigger mistake to make a secret of it," said his sister, "and Roberta's no easily fooled. If you had tricked her she would have been just wild. She's red-headed."

"I don't recognize her at all," said Roberta's irritated father. "Six months ago when she left school, you wouldn't have wanted to know a sweeter or better mannered girl."

Robert glanced at his sister. "You're daft, Aggy! She's a mere child. She's popular enough with the boys, but there's no man. At least there's no one in particular, that I know of."

"It's the one you don't know that counts. She has something up her sleeve. What is it?"

Robert MacBeth shook his head. "She hates the island," he admitted reluctantly.

Aggy looked about her and sighed. "It's a bonnie place. But you never can tell about young people."

There was a pause.

"Was there nothing Roberta ever asked you to let her do, Rob, and you refused?"

IT'S WISE TO CHEVROLET CHOOSE A SIX

Announcing a new production record

2,000,000 Chevrolet Sixes now on the road

Since January, 1929, Chevrolet has produced and sold over 2,000,000 six-cylinder automobiles—nearly five times as many as any other manufacturer has ever built in an equal length of time.

These 2,000,000 buyers have chosen Chevrolet because it offers many desirable qualities not obtainable in any other car so low in price—

—the smoothness, silence and flexibility of a modern six-cylinder valve-in-head engine—the greater comfort and roadability of a modern, full-length chassis—and the style, safety and distinction of bodies by Fisher.

Yet, despite these fine car advantages, the Chevrolet Six is unusually economical. Its gas, oil,
