POLITICAL CANDIDATES TO PEAK IN JOE BAILEY COMMUNITY FRIDAY NIGHT

Candidates for political office, giving their campaigns in aggressive style, will hold forth at Joe Bailey Friday evening in a regularly scheduled meeting date. The program for district officers are expected to be presented in addition to county and precinct candidates. With the primary just one month away, voters are being approached by candidates every day, effort made on the part of office seekers to inject interest in, or her, particular campaign. "mud-slinging" of any nature has been manifested in any way, the matter has been kept to this date. Practically every speech made by candidates at office has brought forth mere formal solicitation. Crowds most generally are made larger at the speakings should any bitterness be manifested on the part of some candidate and a "pour-it-on-em" attitude adopted. The schedule of meetings, all of which will be held at night, are as follows: Joe Bailey, Friday, June 17. Wells, Tuesday, June 21. Edith, Friday, June 24. Joe Stokes, Tuesday, June 28. Magnolia, Friday, July 1. Midway, Tuesday, July 5. Redwine, Friday, July 8. T-Bar, Tuesday, July 12. Dixie, Friday, July 15. Wisdom, Tuesday, July 19. O'Donnell, Thursday, July 21. MODERN ETIQUETTE

1. Is it all right to have a fruit centerpiece on the dinner table?
2. What is the difference in the pronunciation of "fiance" (masculine) and "fiancee" (feminine)?
3. When a young man and a girl are attending a party, which one should suggest that it is time to go home?
4. How may one announce a wedding engagement?
5. Is it proper for a man to ask permission of a girl before introducing another man to her?
6. When one has been drawn into conversation with a person, is it correct to shake hands when parting?
7. How should invitations to a formal affair be recalled?
8. May one use a piece of bread in the fingers to wipe up gravy or jelly from the plate?
9. Must one greet each fellow worker on arrival at one's place of business?
10. If the bride has a stepfather should the wedding invitations include his name, or just the mother?

Answers

1. Yes; the proper bowl or plate heaped with select oranges, apples, peaches, pears and grapes is very effective. 2. There is no difference; both are pronounced fiance, e as in me, first a as in ah, second a as in say, accent last syllable. 3. The girl. 4. By sending a notice to the newspapers, or sending engraved announcements to relative and friends.

5. Yes, when possible to do so. Sometimes an introduction is unavoidable, where one has not the opportunity to ask the permission of the hostess. This is not usually done, but there is no fixed rule. 7. If formal invitations have been issued, a printed card should be mailed, giving an explanation for the invitation. 8. Never. Nor should one hold a piece of bread with the fork and slide it over. 9. Although it is not necessary, it is the courteous and tactful thing to do. 10. The invitation should be read, "Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Lee request, etc." 11. Because Lee is the woman, in her high-heeled slippers, and when it is too dark to see her foot hold clearly, it is likely to trip. 12. She refers to your preference as to lemon, sugar, and whether you like your tea strong or weak.

 that although would be saved in

 McCraw was generally believed

PRODUCE STAND IS STREAMLINE STYLE

Rickety Stations Are Not Business-Getters.

By W. C. Harrington, Farm Engineering Specialist, Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Streamlining has hit the farm produce stand. Instead of the haphazard heap of vegetables under a scrawny sign, the farmer is now putting up well-designed buildings, landscaping the grounds, and going after business in a businesslike way. The day of the rickety farm produce stand is done. Roads are smoother, cars are faster, and the farmer who wants to keep his share of the driver's business is changing his old stand to meet the new conditions.

The following are listed as the most important points for consideration in laying out the farm produce stand for this summer's business:

The station should be visible for several hundred feet so that prospective purchasers may recognize it and make necessary decisions in time to do it. The highest approach should be level for several hundred feet in either direction. Highways divided by parkways are often less desirable for the location of a station than where there is no separation. Stations located near crossroads or slight curves often enjoy a larger number of customers because of the slowing down of cars.

The building should be suitably attractive and designed, with simple color schemes unmarred by miscellaneous advertising signs are most desirable. Shade trees, nearby shrubbery, and a suitable lawn often make an attractive stopping place, but they should not interfere with parking or visibility. The site should be level, with ample parking space so arranged that traffic will not be interrupted. Ease of exit is particularly important. Attractive signs should be erected in a conspicuous location. Dark Silk Sheers of Dress-Up Type season to top these lovely sheer gowns with bewitching hats colorful as they can be, to offset the dark tone of the sheer dress. The little straw pillbox with its gay little veil and flower accent which lady wears does just that.

For hot summer afternoons nothing looks cooler and feels cooler than a black chiffon dress with inter-positions of fine black lace to give it an air of lady-like charm. You will love the dress shown to the right. Its carefully detailed workmanship imparts an air of distinction that is of unmistakable appeal to women of discriminating taste. The lace yoke with its square neckline and cunning lace-embellished sleeves is highly flattering while the slenderizing vertical lines of the lace insert endow this model with special grace. And now comes the piece de resistance—a Watteau hat that is all roses and lilies and delicate green leaves.

Women who regard the dark afternoon sheer as indispensable in the summer wardrobe have had the task of selection made easy in that through versatile styling these are types for every individuality included in this season's showings.

If you would have an ensemble that is tunable to any occasion, add these items—a pleated cape-wrap to match the skirt, a bolero of the same sheer to wear over a bodice top made decollete for formal affairs, and your dressmaker design a fanciful waist, puffed sleeves and full skirt for afternoon. Of course to carry out these manifold combinations it is assumed that the pleated skirt be so fashioned as to be easily detachable.

HELLO EVERYBODY.

Now this is the story of an adventure that almost any one of us might have got into. Anyone who has ever ridden on a railroad train has taken a chance on finding himself in just such a terrifying situation. As luck would have it, it happened to Fenton Barrett of Shaker Hollow, South Salem, N. Y. And, boys and girls, I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am very glad it happened to Fenton Barrett, and not to me.

Fenton Barrett is an actor. He had just finished a run in a successful musical show on Broadway not long before he starred in the thriller he is going to tell us about now. When the show closed, he went south to Hollywood, but he hadn't been there long when he got a wire telling him to come back to New York and start rehearsals in a new production.

Fenton left that night for Washington, and in Washington he got aboard the train for New York—the train that was to carry him smack into the most thrilling moment of his life.

Fire Started in the Wash Room.

It was a hot day, the first of August, 1928. Fenton decided to ride in the smoker where he could take his coat off and be comfortable. Usually the smoker is up front, next to the baggage car, but in this case it was the last car on the train.

The train bowed along over the countryside, without any interruption, and without any hint of the drama that was to come. It was getting on to the third car when the train porter came in and began cleaning up the car. Fenton was sitting in the third seat from the front, and was watching the porter idly as he moved about. The train was coming into

The Whole Wash Room Was Roaring With Flame.

Elizabeth, N. J., and the porter, with a large bundle of old newspapers, had just gone into the men's wash room.

"That porter," says Fenton, "had been in the wash room only a few seconds when suddenly he came leaping out into the aisle. As he did, I saw the reflection of flames on the highly polished door. The porter made a desperate attempt to close the door, but by this time the whole wash room was roaring with flame, and he was beaten back."

Fenton jumped to his feet. He was one of seven men in the car including the conductor and porter. Before he could get out of his seat, the flames were almost on top of him, and he had barely time to grab his coat and brief case and dash to the rear of the car.

Couldn't Stop the Blazing Train.

Meanwhile, with all the windows open, the blaze spread through the car like wild fire. As Fenton reached the rear of the car he looked back, just in time to see the conductor reach for the signal rope to stop the train. The rope was blazing, even as he grabbed for it. As he pulled on it, it snapped in two. Their only way of communicating with the engine—the only means of stopping that speeding train—was gone.

"We all crowded back to the rear platform," says Fenton, "and divided three on each side. The porter had climbed over the iron gate and was hanging to the back end of the train for dear life. By this time half the car was on fire, and with us in the last car and the train doing sixty-five miles an hour, it certainly looked bad."

"One of the passengers became hysterical and the conductor had a hard time trying to keep him from jumping off the back end of the train. We were all choking and almost overcome by smoke and the fumes of burning paint and varnish. I felt myself getting panicky and dropped to my knees and put my nose to the floor, trying to get a good breath of air."

The fire was all through the car by this time—streaming right down the aisle and shooting out the door onto the iron platform. Fenton felt something move beneath him. It was that iron lid which covers the end of the train, and he had barely time to get up and run. They squirmed around until they could get it up, and then they crowded down onto the steps.

All Jumped at 30-Mile Speed.

The porter screamed to them not to jump. The flames crowded them harder now, and Fenton was kept busy dodging broken glass and tongues of fire that licked back at him through the rear windows. The heat was so terrific that he made up his mind to jump soon, rather than be burned.

And then—the brakes went on. The train started to jerk and slow down. It slowed from sixty-five to fifty to forty. When it was going about thirty, Fenton jumped, and the rest of them followed.

"I was thrown up against the bank," Fenton says, "but I wasn't badly hurt. A few scratches and bruises—but I was too glad to be off that burning car to pay any attention to a little thing like that. The train went on for half a mile before it came to a stop, and we ran and caught up with it. By that time, the car we had been in was just a red-hot steel frame. Not a window or a seat left. And they were having quite a time trying to disconnect it from the rest of the train because the steel was so hot the brakemen couldn't touch the couplings. We got into another car, I fell into the seat exhausted, for it was then that I first realized what I had been through."

as a pinch hitter, back in 1925, he hasn't missed a game in which the Yankees have been involved. The closest any player in history has come to his record was the 1307 consecutive game mark set by Everett Scott between 1916 and 1923. Gehrig had Scott's record beat back in 1923.

In addition to his consecutive game record, Gehrig has broken seven major-league records and tied one other. Among his records are these: Most consecutive years, 100 or more games—12; most consecutive years, 150 games or more—11; most home runs with the bases lead—20; most years, 150 or more runs batted in—7; most years, 300 or more total bases—12; and most home runs, 100 or more runs driven in—12. The record he tied was Babe Ruth's mark of having scored 100 or more runs 12 seasons in succession.

Gehrig has seen great teams come and go since he joined the Yankees in 1925. Only three men besides himself survive the original team he joined 13 years ago. They are Business Manager Ed Barrow, Earl Cokes, now coach, and Cal Jacob Ruppert, the club owner.

This spring has been Gehrig's most disagreeable in baseball. He reported rather stale physical shape after his longer venture and it has taken him more than usual to hit his stride. His batting was never nifty in the beginning, but he has been belting the ball again lately.

Here and There—

WHEN Hank Greenberg, the Detroit Tigers' first baseman, belted one into the center field bleachers at the White Sox park recently, it was the first time in history a ball had ever been driven into that section. The distance from home plate to the bleachers is 420 feet. Jackombs, one-time pitching star of the old Philadelphia Athletics, is baseball coach at Duke University and Ira Thomas, Jack's battery mate, is a scout for the Athletics. Thomas contends that college baseball is on the upgrade.

Pitching Standouts

WHEN it comes time to pick the pitcher for this year's All-Star Game, Joe McCarthy, who will manage the American league's N. Y. Yankees, is likely to be embarrassed. Not because of overwork.

It is difficult to see how he can leave such mound artists as Bob Feller and Johnny Allen of Cleveland off the staff, and it's even harder to see how he can help picking Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox and Vernon Kennedy of the Detroit Tigers.

Both these latter pitchers have taken a new lease on life. Grove, who overcame a pitching injury that threatened his career a few years ago, has been a sensation so far this year. Kennedy, who came to the Tigers from the White Sox, has never looked better. Grove says he is a far more skillful workman than he used to be. In his youth he was a "mound rat" who pitched alone. Now he is sly and foxy, a master of the art. Kennedy has undoubtedly been improved by Manager Feller, who notes that he has made him concentrate on his every-hand delivery.

Frozen Egg Industry Is Centered in Midwest

The production of frozen eggs and freezing eggs is said to have begun in Kansas about 1900. Today, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, there are more than 200 plants in the business in the United States, with about 90 per cent of the production in the Midwest. The industry which is the leading source of eggs. The output of frozen and liquid eggs in this country now exceeds 200,000 cases annually.

Until about 1921 the large American bakers and makers of noodles, macaroni, ice cream, candy, and salad dressing depended largely on dried eggs from China to meet requirements. Then the use of frozen eggs began in earnest, and today, great storage stocks began to accumulate. So important did the industry become that on April 1, 1927, the Chicago Mercantile exchange made arrangements for both cash and futures trading in canned frozen eggs.

About half of the output of this product consists of whole eggs, and the other half of whites, yolks, and yolks separately. Hotels, bakers and restaurants use frozen whole eggs, and plain and sugared yolks. The whites are used by makers of confections. Mayonnaise and salad dressing makers use about 16,000,000 pounds of plain, sugared and salt yolks and whole eggs each year. Canned eggs are used also by sausage makers and pharmaceutical manufacturers.

Feeding the Pigs

If you feed your pigs too many peanuts or soybeans, you haul soft pork to market and are penalized for it, says a County Agent of the County Home Magazine. Packers know there is not much bacon left after the pork is cured. The soybean-fed hog can be saved from disgrace if the oil is first extracted from the beans. How Much Pullet Eats

It is interesting to know how much feed a pullet will eat so that the feed cost can be figured and financed, says a writer in the Missouri Farmer. At the age of 6 months a pullet will have consumed about 25 pounds of feed. The bigger the pullet grows the more feed she will consume accordingly. In other words, she eats very little feed while a chick, but her appetite knows no bounds when she is about full grown.

Here is a man's point of view on what a styled-up-to-the-moment woman should wear this summer. The renowned French designer noted for turning out tailleurs de luxe designed this classic suit of handsome white tulle with red scarf worn with a jaunty sailor from Rose Valois. The advance style program heralds the white suit with high color as a fashion of outstanding importance for summer.

Teen Age Hats

Those little sailor hats with the ribbons under the chin have a smartness of fellows, especially among the younger girls.

Avoid Daytime Frills on Budget That Is Limited

To achieve planned wardrobe economy women with high style ambitions and low purchasing powers are advised by a New York style expert to forsake daytime frills and to confine their taste for caprice and evening clothes. For daytime wear she recommended a basic scheme for each season, simple two-piece suits that can be worn either with or without the jacket as a casual millinery, and conservative shoes with medium built-up heels. Above all she stressed the need for meticulous grooming, including attention to twisted stocking seams and run-down heels.

Tung Oil Long in Use

Portuguese shipbuilders used tung oil in mixtures to paint and calk their ships and boats. It gradually spread to other commerce. Portuguese spice traders introduced it into Europe in the sixteenth century. The oil began coming to the United States in the late 1800's. When its quick drying and waterproof qualities were discovered, demand for it increased.

The name Austin is of Latin origin. It may be a contraction of Augustine, which has about the same meaning, but it is considered a separate name.
