9,000 Water Main Extensions To Be Government Cotton Yield Estimate Placed at 14,291,000 Bates

COTTON ADVANCES $8.50 A BALE ON YIELD FORECAST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Despite a drop in the indicated yield of cotton per acre and "widespread" infestation of boll weevils the department of agriculture estimated today the crop would reach 14,291,000 bales, 1,136,000 more than the final figures for last year's harvest. On strength of the forecast the New York cotton market showed an advance of some $8.50 a bale.

Noting that indices of boll weevil presence were for a lesser number than last year, the cop reporting board observed that the danger of weevil damage was "fully as great" because of death shoring the crop to be over a week later than last year.

The condition of the crop, according to the first official forecast of the season, is 67.9 per cent of a normal, compared with August 1, reports 69.5 per cent, and in 1927 it is slightly above the average for the 10 year period 1917-1926, which was 67.3 per cent. The indicated yield of 152.2 pounds of lint cotton per acre is below last year's yield of 154.5 pounds and the ten year average of 156.3 pounds and far under the record of 1925, when the yield was 182.65 pounds.

An encouraging feature noted in this year's crop was the less than usual amount of shedding, while the cotton was reported to be "fruiting freely."

PRESBYTERIAN LADIES ENTERTAIN CHURCHES

The Presbyterian ladies entertained the ladies of the other churches on last Thursday afternoon with a social from four to six o'clock at the church.

The church was indeed beautiful and showed these ladies had put forth every effort to make this social a success and they surely succeeded well. The lovely arrangement of furniture with pretty rugs on the floor and a profusion of lovely cut flowers and pot plants made you feel like you were in a real parlor. While planning the appearance of hered self and the entertainment. Each number presented was credit to the church these ladies also remember the one who gave it.

1. Song by All—"Joy to the World"
The song "Sometime Somewhere" by Misses Florence Henderson, Florence Gary, Jessie Gary, and Mrs. Hal Singleton, Jr., was surely a beautiful song. Little Miss Letta Merle Koeninger, gave two numbers and each reading would have done credit to a child much older. Miss Adriece Donald delighted the crowd with two very pretty violin solos.

The solo "Will There be Any Stars in My Crown," sang by Miss Florence Henderson was enjoyed so very much.
Mrs. Roberts gave a reading, "It Takes a Heap of Livin' to Make a Home" was indeed a rare treat. Misses Florence Henderson and Florence Gary sang a duet, accompanied by a ukulele, "There Must Be a Silver Lining" that was enjoyed by everyone. Little Miss Marilyn Roberts and Letta Merle Koeninger was so very fine.

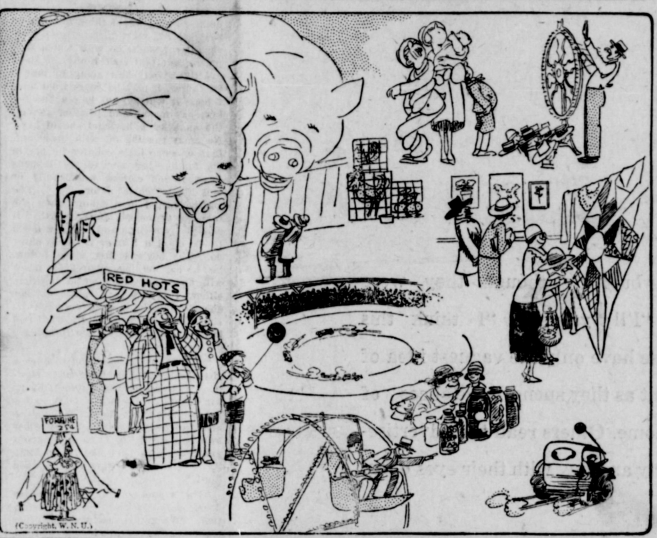

The Fifth Monday socials have proven to be quite an enjoyable as well as beneficial factor in the church life of O'Donnell. We meet each other at these socials that some times we work so hard preparing to see this custom drop but after we rest and go to attend a social someone else has arranged we are all pepped up and eager for our time to entertain again. Ladies let's keep it up. We could all make it easier for ourselves and just as enjoyable for guests if we make our refreshments more simple. We every one enjoy these good eats but when we have a full meal at 12 o'clock we do not need very much at 5 o'clock. So one should prepare refreshments more simple. We every one enjoy these good eats but when we have a full meal at 12 o'clock we do not need very much at 5 o'clock. So one should prepare refreshments more simple.

Among the distinguished guests at the social were Bro. Horn, Bro. Shade Stevenson and Bro. Scholten or may be Bro. Scholten was handy man instead of priest.

The ladies served lovely angel food cake and ice cream to several guests. When the Presbyterian ladies entertain again if you don't want to miss something good you must be sure and attend.

NEW DENTIST OPENS DOORS TO PEOPLE HERE

Dr. Ferrell Farrington of Alba, Texas, who recently graduated at Baylor College in Dentistry, has opened offices in the First National Bank building in the rooms formerly occupied by Dr. C. P. Tate. He has been busy the past week installing all new equipment. He opened for business Thursday and asks that the people of O'Donnell and territory call upon him and get acquainted. Dr. Farrington is a boyhood friend of J. L. Shoemaker, Jr., of the First National Bank who recommends him highly as a young man of splendid character and ability. Mrs. Farrington is here with her husband and at present they are stopping at McClang Hotel.

T. E. L. CLASS IS DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED TUESDAY

Messdames T. J. Mansell and W. P. Howard entertained members of the T. E. L. Class with a number of associate members and guests Tuesday afternoon from four to six at the home of Mrs. Mansell.

Messdames Sorrells, Vermillion and Harville as entertainment committee arranged the following program which was very interesting: Devotional—Mrs. Harville. Prayer—Mrs. Vermillion. Song by all—"Stand up for Jesus." Talk—"Jesus as our Teacher," by Bro. Stevenson, which was very much appreciated. Lesson in Sunday School Manual conducted by Bro. Horn, was an inspiration to everyone. Song—"Blest be the tie that Binds."

Several sentence prayers. Humorous reading by Mrs. Middleton was very much appreciated. Each person was then supplied with a pencil and paper cut in the shape of a hammer and instructed to write there on an answer to the question, "What is wrong with the T. E. L. Class?" The hammers were gathered up and the various answers were read which caused us to wonder how the class may be remedied.

Poem, "What T. E. L. Stands For," given by Mrs. S. Lambert was indeed interesting. Messdames Mansell and Howard served angel food cake and ice cream to the following: Messdames Vermillion, Earle, Harville, Middleton, Mansell, Sorrells, Baldwin, Williams, George, Nelson, Goddard, Wyatt, James Lambert, Cabness, Street, Vandell, Carroll, Eaton, Horn, Musick, Hobby, Mote and Misses Jordan and Bro. Horn and Bro. Stevenson.

TECH COLLEGE TO HAVE NEW BUILDINGS

LUBBOCK, Texas, August 8.—Endeavoring to meet the demands of the increasing educational needs of West Texas, members of the Board of Directors of Texas Technological College are asking for more building on the campus here for the next two years. The board met with the State Board of Control this week in consideration of the budget of Tech for the coming biennium.
Included in the appropriation requests are petitions for the completion of the administration building, a new library building and a dairy products building to be erected on the campus during the next two years.

In speaking of the prospects for the coming year President Paul W. Horn stated here prior to his departure for Austin that he expected the enrollment of the school to exceed the 2,000 mark easily during the first term of the 1928-29 session.

REV. W. L. HENDERSON HOLDS MEETING IN SCURRY

Rev. W. L. Henderson leaves Friday for Scurry County where he will hold a two weeks revival at the Woodward Chapel church. Rev. Henderson is a former resident of that section and is expecting to have a very successful two weeks campaign. The good wishes of friends in O'Donnell go with him.

The local fire department has been joyfully demonstrating their ability to handle the new fire hose at the same time thoroughly testing out the pressure of the new water system.

Thursday last week the boys made their first test when they connected two strings of hose to the fire hydrant on the southeast corner two streams of water were forced of the square. For several minutes high into the air falling onto the vacant lots on Block A. The boys were highly elated over the test and for the benefit of the large crowd that had gathered to watch the demonstration, the boys staged a water fight.

The two hose gangs were about equally divided and for several minutes it seemed that the battle would be fought to a draw, when finally E. C. Willis and his assistants succeeded in getting the kinks out of his string of hose increasing the pressure considerably and with a straight run toward his opponents forced them to cover.

The boys thoroughly enjoyed the water battle and so did the spectators. All agreed that O'Donnell's new water system is a good one with plenty of pressure for any emergency.

MRS. HAL SINGLETON, JR. ENTERTAINS

Mrs. Hal Singleton, Jr., entertained on last Friday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in honor of her little daughter, Lena Mae's, fourth birthday. At three o'clock when the rain began to fall in torrents, it seemed that it was a tragic occurrence, but the rain passed over and quite a number of the little guests succeeded in reaching the home where little Lena Mae was made very happy indeed by many little gifts. An hour was spent playing games that children always enjoy. After this the beautiful cake was cut and served with ice cream to the following guests: Marilyn Roberts, Leona Holman, Lois Petty, Yvonne Westmoreland, Julia and Slaton Echols, June Gibson and Dorothy Allen Miles.

NOTICE

Warning is hereby given to all vehicles or pedestrians following fire truck during fire. It is very dangerous to follow fire truck too closely when going to fire. Too many people make this practice. Fire truck does not stop when firemen leap off wagon to connect hose to fire plug and when vehicles or cars are following closely it is unsafe for firemen. Please take warning.
H. G. Gantt, Fire Chief.

BIG LAKE.—Big Lake is installing a new sewerage system.

At a meeting of the City Council on Thursday night of last week the honorable body made a very wise decision, that of extending O'Donnell's new water system, awarding the contract to M. L. Friday of Arlington who has just completed the installation of the $40,000.00 system. The new extensions will call for an expenditure of approximately $10,000.00 which will place mains throughout the entire city affording fire protection and water service to all citizens alike.

The new extensions will include 3400 feet of six inch mains, 12,000 feet of two inch which will be used as feeder lines, four new fire plugs, three six inch valves, eighteen two inch valves, and 1400 pounds of fittings. There will also be an additional booster pump installed which is capable of raising 150 gallons per minute from the eighty thousand gallon storage tank to the elevated tower. This in addition to the 500 gallon per minute booster pump which is already in operation. The installation of the small booster pump will allow water to be pumped to keep in reserve the 500 gallon per minute booster pump to be used in case of emergencies.

The present storage capacity will be 131,000 gallons. This added to the capacity of the present wells will furnish the people of O'Donnell approximately 250,000 gallons of water in one day which in the opinion of the City Council will be ample supply for a city three times the population of O'Donnell.

In letting the contract to Mr. Friday the city dads estimate they will save in the neighborhood of $4,000 on the new extensions because of the fact that all necessary machinery for the installation of the new extensions are now on the ground and the expense of shipping machinery in will be saved by making the extensions at this time.

Work will be begun on the new extension within the next two weeks, just as soon as the material arrives. It is expected that completion as fast as possible.

When the new system is completed O'Donnell will have one of the best—of the best—water system on the entire South Plains. The new system belongs to the people of O'Donnell and they are not for the few. The city fathers will be better satisfied. At least those that be served by the extension will be better satisfied and others have no right to kick.

The additional expenditure of ten thousand dollars will be taken care of by the City Council by issuing that amount of scrip which will in all probability be converted into bonds at some future date.

VOTE OF THANKS

To the people of Lynn County I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the vote given me on July 28th. I tried to conduct my campaign on a high plane for the reason that I think no campaign should be conducted otherwise. I hope that every vote cast for me was because the voter thought I was the best qualified man in the race and not for any prejudices against any of my opponents. I hope that in this run off the voting will be cast on the same basis. I want to say that I have no objection to my opponent in Lynn County a good friend. If you so feel and further feel that a man who does his best in a county then I will appreciate your support. You will remember that Mr. Sanford, my opponent in this race, was elected to this office for three consecutive terms. Since he has already been your sheriff you can judge for yourself which has done the most for Lynn county law enforcement.

In Mr. Sanford's statement to the voters in last week's Lynn County paper, he said: "I carried my home town of Taboka by a plurality of 60 votes over my nearest opponent." (What he said is true, but the statement might be misleading. There are two homes in Taboka—north and south Taboka. Mr. Sanford and I both live in north Taboka. He has lived there for about ten years and I have lived there for three years. The count shows that I carried my home town by five votes and lost south Taboka by 55 votes.)

I have not mentioned the violation of one single law in Lynn County. If one individual will show when I have failed to do my best or hesitated to go when called to catch a law violator I will resign my office immediately. If there be anything going on in this county that should be stopped and the people will show me how to get any lawyer in this state to show me how the same can be stopped I promise that every ounce of my energy will be put forth to see that it is stopped.

On the 25th of this month I am asking for a second elective term for the office of Sheriff and Tax collector of Lynn County on the basis of what I have done or tried to do toward making Lynn County a better and safer place in which to live.

J. W. Simpson.

Human Beings Are That

By EDGAR T. MONFORT

YOU certainly have a wonderful little daughter, Macbreath. Looks like a flapper, but isn't. Nice and sweet. Sort of old-fashioned in her manner toward men. That's what I call a fine girl."

Macbreath flicked the ashes from his cigar and looked out at the velvety golf course that stretched away from in front of the Westview Golf and Country club and slipped off into the trees in the distance.

"Emily's proved a theory I've always had," Macbreath said after a moment. "I'm certain in my own mind that fathers make the best mothers. It's the women who make flappers of their daughters. Now, I've raised Emily since she was ten, brought her up to be a man's sort of girl, taught her to obey me in everything, always to consider my wishes, but I've been careful to let her see my reasons for doing things; why I think my opinion best. Now, most girls choose their own boy friends, go with whom they please, but that isn't Emily. I know exactly whom she's going to marry. Of course, it may be years from now. I hope it will be, but he's a fine fellow, has money and position and all the qualities a husband should have. No crazy running off with the chauffeur or some little counter jumper in my family—just because he happens to wear his clothes wonderfully or look like a "movie" actor. . . . She got interested in a fellow when she was off at school, Jim Atworth. It was pretty serious and he came down to see me, but I knew it would never do. The boy's a fine, clean fellow, but he has nothing and probably never will have, not much social position, either, I imagine. I talked to her about it and she was perfectly reasonable, gave him up without a word and has been running around with a dozen others since."

"It certainly is wonderful to have a girl like that," said Montgomery slowly. "Now, my Margaret almost snaps her fingers in my face if I try to tell her anything; in fact, I'm honestly afraid of her. She says her life's her own and she'll live it to suit herself and those who don't like it can lump it. . . . And getting parties, good Lord!"

"That's another thing Emily never does," said Macbreath with satisfaction. "We got confidential the other night on the porch and she told me that she never had kissed a man in her life."

Macbreath looked at his watch and went to his car. Montgomery left also for a bit of golf. The little group had scattered.

As the high-powered imported machine purred along the boulevard that was flanked by magnificent lawns and shrubbery Macbreath's mind was still on his daughter, Emily. He was proud of her, but more especially of himself, for having made such a good job of her upbringing. She was on a par with the other experiences of his life, he reflected; he had finally controlled everything with which he had become connected.

Emily met him at the door and after giving him a dauntingly peck on the cheek danced over to the orthophoni and put on a lace record.

"That's a hot song, isn't it, dad?" she laughed, tossing her slimness into a chair and languidly turning the pages of a "movie" magazine. "What'd you old fogies talk about out at the club 'kafternoon?' I bet it was about women."

"It was about—you," said Macbreath, remembering the conversation with returning pride and satisfaction.

"Well, that was an innocent enough topic," she confessed, "but what did you say about me?"

"Nothing of much interest. . . . I guess I'd better go up and get ready for dinner."

After dinner Macbreath went back to his club and bridge. Emily had a theater date, she explained, so she would not be lonely.

When Macbreath returned late that evening the house was all in darkness. Emily was already in bed, he decided. He went straight to his room and prepared for the night. As he threw back the covers of his bed his eye struck a note pinned to his pillow and quickly taking it to the light he read:

"Darling Dad:

"Don't think I don't love you because I just dote on my precious old foggy dad, but by the time you read this Jimmy Atworth and I will be married and speeding away on our honeymoon. I know you didn't approve of him but I did—so we just decided to take the plunge. There was no use in arguing or trying to reason it out with you because you never change your mind, so I'm doing like I've always had to do; say yes, dad, then go and do as I please, please."

"I love you heaps and bushes, and Jimmy and I'll be over to see you soon."

"Devotedly,

"EMILY."

When Macbreath had finished reading the note he dropped into a chair and held his head while his world of illusion tumbled down around his ears. After a long, long time he got up and crawled into bed.

"Oh, well," he said to his pillow with a wry smile, "human beings will be human, but I bet they rag me to death at the club tomorrow."

Principles Of OPERATION

We believe that a bank should not only be a depository of funds, but indeed a haven where the rich and poor alike can confide their financial troubles, fears and doubts in to the attentive ear of their mutual friend and counsellor the BANKER. The bank, the foundation of all saving, should be solid like the granite, standing the acid test of time, pursuing a conservative but friendly course.

This bank like the great Oak from a little acorn, of persistent effort and sound business principles has grown. It stands today like the Oak, its many services and ample resources like the limbs, cast their shadow of protection over those who seek its shelter, a mecca which invites the confidence and patronage of the public.

POLITICAL Announcements LYNN COUNTY

The Index is authorized to announce the following persons as candidates for the respective offices, subject to the action of the 2nd Democratic Primary August 25.

For County Judge:
C. C. GLIDER.
G. H. CAIN, re-election.

For County and District Clerk:
W. E. (Happy) SMITH, re-election
TRUETT B. SMITH.

For Sheriff & Tax Collector:
J. W. SIMPSON, re-election.
SAM W. SANFORD

POLITICAL Announcements DAWSON COUNTY

For Sheriff & Tax Collector:
J. H. RAY, Re-election.

Farmers in the restricted area of the pink boll worm district have forgotten about those two dead worms discovered in a certain part of Dawson county some time last year. They are devoting their time trying to solve the problem of gathering the enormous cotton crop that is practically assured this fall. Doesn't take excitement long to pass over.

Prospects for an all round bumper crop was never brighter than at the present time. Cotton, corn and all kinds of small grain are as fine as we ever saw at this season of the year. Old timers say Lynn and Dawson counties have the best crops they have had in several years. O'Donnell's cotton crop is being variously estimated at from 18,000 to 30,000 bales this year. Better than five hundred cars of corn and maize was shipped from the O'Donnell markets last season and this year's crop promises to surpass last year's yield.

OUR DEFENSE

The Index is in the printing business and appreciates all work given us whether it be circulars, stationery or what not, but we also have one of the best advertising mediums in this section of the South Plains in the form of advertisements inserted in its columns which goes out to fifteen hundred homes and is read by approximately 7,500 people each week. Government statistics show there are five people to the average home. We were forced to rise up in our own defense this week when one of our customers remarked: "Five hundred handbills will reach more people than an advertisement will in the pattern." The customer has a perfect right to his own opinion and no doubt was honest in his belief. However, he lacked a few convincing arguments that he lacked a few convincing arguments, but we still contend Index advertising is better and will proceed to give our reasons for so believing. First, the Index goes right into the home where every member of the family reads it before coming to town on Saturday. There are on an average five people to every home and when the Index goes to fifteen hundred homes each week it is read by approximately seven thousand readers. Five hundred handbills put out the streets and in cars on a Saturday is read by less than half that number of people. One out of every five dropped into a car on the streets on a Saturday is read by the owner of the car before returning home after the day's shopping is done. Many of them handbills, pedestrians are dropped to the street and trampled under foot by the enormous crowds before they are read. The per cent of prospective customers that read a message printed on five hundred handbills is small compared to the number that reads the Index each week. Five are it for yourself. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

However, we are in the commercial printing business, and when you want to reach your customers with a message printed on hand bills, we are ready and willing to serve you on short notice. Thank.

THE SENATORIAL RUNOFF

Texas is fortunate this year in having its major political race freed in the first primary from tangles as to personalities and principles which might obscure issues in the runoff primary. As between Tom Conally and Senator Mayfield, the voter should have no difficulty in making his choice, since these two candidates are as far apart as the poles. The voter who wants Conally can not, by any chance, think he might want Mayfield and vice versa.

The entire progress of the senatorial race thus far has been highly satisfactory to Texans who believe that such campaigns should be conducted on a high plane. There has been a heartening scarcity of personalities in the candidates' speeches and vilification has been totally absent. On this score, all the candidates rate congratulations from the public.

Especially are the State's thanks and congratulations due to those candidates eliminated in the first primary whose subsequent actions have given evidence that they intend to continue, in the face of disappointment, their honorable course. There is no bitterness, only loyalty to the best interests of the State, for instance, in the telegram of Congressman Thomas L. Blanton to Mr. Conally, applauding the latter's victory and pledging support in the runoff.

The adherence of Mr. Blanton to the Conally cause is naturally important for the reason that the West Texas Congressman, of all the candidates in the race, was able to command a great following which was attached to him personally. Other candidates obtained votes because of things they advocated, or for one or another reason of a more or less personal nature. The thousands who voted for Mr. Blanton did so because of the personality and the personal record of the colorful Congressman.

There is, of course no question of any of the eliminated candidates "delivering" their vote to either of the two who remain in the race. Voting blocks simply refuse to be deluged. But if anybody were able to do so, it would be Mr. Blanton. His personal position will carry more weight with those who voted for him than would be the case with any of the other candidates, including the two who remain for the runoff. For this reason, Mr. Conally is fortunate in having been able to continue through the heat of the campaign the friendship with Mr. Blanton formed in their days in the House.

Developments in the senatorial race since the first primary are further interesting as they reflect a psychological principal which seems to apply very generally in such cases. It has been observed time and again in Texas where the state is the field of operations of candidates and offices, one of the two left in the runoff is the incumbent, the second man is returned winner in the runoff. This seems to characterize the vote for all the other candidates in the first primary as being not only votes for favorite candidates, but votes against the man who is at that time in office. In view of the seeming clearness of this principle as applied to the present situation, Mr. Conally seems certain to be the next United States Senator from Texas.—Star Telegram.

Locusts Swarm Eastern States

As astronomers time cycles of the comets, naturalists time the cycles of the broods of 17-year locusts or cicadas which swarm and disappear in various parts of America at regular intervals. Now, after slumbering in the earth for half a human generation, "Brood II," as it is known to scientists, dug itself out according to schedule, and is swarming over the Atlantic seaboard states. During June and a part of July the rasping hum, heard in myriads of swarms, will be heard in Connecticut, New Jersey, Southern New York, Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and North Carolina.

This does not mean, however, that the East will be afflicted by the desolation which marked the visitation of locusts in Biblical times. According to W. T. Davis of St. George, Staten Island, who has named half the varieties of cicada known in America and has written many government bulletins on them, the 17-year locusts have a sucking rather than a biting mouth. They may hand the foliage of a few oak, hickory, and chestnut trees, or of young orchards, but the damage will be due largely to the eggs they deposit in the tree twigs and about the fruit.

This year's locusts are born of eggs that were deposited in 1911, during the last swarming of Brood II. The pupae burrowed into the earth, cast off their outer shells from time to time as they passed through various stages of development, and now are emerging to enjoy life as adults. They were above ground before they mate and die.

Girl Receives Father's War Insurance

After nine years of waiting, Miss Dolan Juanita Mae Henserson, 14-year-old granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Meador of this city, has been officially recognized and will receive the wartime insurance of her father who was killed in action in France. Tucker Lee Henderson was one father of the young lady and was a member of the Thirty-sixth Division which saw such a great amount of action in France. The mother of the young lady has been for many years and the bureau had failed to find any trace of relatives of the dead soldier until recently.

The affair was handled in Clarendon by Randall Sunday, Porter and Leon O. Lewis, who gave all the information needed to Capt. S. M. Hankins, state service officer at Austin. The claim was verified and the file news of the work was received in the daily papers of this week. In addition to the receipt of the $10,000 insurance, there is a matter of $20 per month for the past nine years, or since 1919 that is to be received by the girl.

Investigation has been under way in the matter for a year or more, but in the actual proof of the legality of the child's claims were not presented until a short time ago. Mr. Meador, the present clerk of the child, states that she is quite overcome with the news and as yet fails to understand what it all means. Her father plans to attend school, this being one of her first statements when she heard she was to be paid the insurance. According to her grandparents, she is a hard working girl and has always been ready to do her part. She has attended school in Clarendon, attending during the past five years, being prevented from a perfect attendance through lack of finances.—Clarendon News.

CHURCH NOTES

A large number of little folks at- tended the Bible Story Hour at Mrs. Haymes' on Monday afternoon. The children are studying Heroes of the Bible. They began with the story of Noah and have enjoyed learning a- bout all the great men from that time on. Their story for Monday was that wonderful story of Joseph. These little folks are getting a good foundation from these lessons that will help them to construct a great character.

Sunday School at the Methodist Church was well attended and every one enjoyed the lesson. Supt. Shook made very interesting and helpful remarks on the lesson.

Mrs. Moody Everett had a birthday but we failed to hear the jingle of many pennies so she must have used nickels and dimes instead.

Bro. Weems filled the pulpit at Draw Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Bro. Wright. So the Methodist congregation all enjoyed going to the tabernacle.

On account of so many young people being out of town the Epworth League program was not carried out.

The Missionary Society met at the church Monday afternoon and a very interesting program was carried out with Mrs. Weems as leader. A talk on "Charity by new ways" was given by Mrs. W. H. Kazezy followed by a talk on "Neighbors" by Mrs. R. O. Stark. These talks caused each one to stop and think if we are fulfilling our mission as Christian women. All expressed themselves as falling far short. But resolved to turn over a new leaf especially in looking after strangers in our town.

Mrs. Bowlin told of the death of a faithful Chinese woman who had recently died. We are encouraged to hear of the good things these converted foreigners are doing for us. We know then that we have a part in doing a great good.

Mrs. Gillespie gave several interesting topics from the News Bulletin. Mrs. Garner favored us with a beautiful solo. The meeting closed with a prayer by Mrs. Gates.

"A steward," he said, "stood at the gateway of a ship of mine, and as he stood there he kept shouting for the benefit of the arriving passengers:

"A young woman stepped daintily aboard with a baby in her arms. As she hesitated before in his chivalrous way:

"First or second?"

"Oh," said the girl, her face as red as a rose, "Oh, dear it's—it's not mine."

The Lessing Secret

By AD SCHUSTER

A MONTH after Mortimer Lessing closed up his great house and departed for Europe queer stories began to circulate in Minden. The house, set back from the street and sur- rounded by an iron fence, was har- bored and boarded from the world. Where once had been the center of social life stood a bleak mansion.

"I suppose," said Dad Withers, "it is because we are used to seeing the place all lighted up that things seem queer now. No, I don't believe there is anything in the stories."

"And yet," it was Tom Inches who spoke up, "and yet there are all kinds of stories. Folks say they hear noises, see lights through the cracks of the boards. Do you suppose we ought to investigate?"

"Not much!" Alex MacKinnon, marshal, snapped his knive. "The last thing Mortimer Lessing said to me was to see to it that nobody went on the place. He has valuable stuff in there, curious and the like, and he's fussy. If anybody so much as sets his foot on the lawn I'm to arrest him. I told Mortimer I would and I will."

Alex spoke proudly, for it was not every man who could call Lessing by his first name or boast of a conversation with the great man.

Mortimer Lessing was the last of a notable family. In state he lived in the great house to which came men of prominence. Minden was ac- customed to seeing United States sena- tors, even, drive up to the Lessing gate and the city envied Lessing his wealth and position. After Mrs. Lessing's death the parties ceased for a while. They had been resumed but for a few months when the owner boarded up the place for a trip abroad. No one knew when he would come back. The weeks passed and then the stories started.

At last it was rumored that Mortimer had died; that his ghost was inhabiting the place. Then Phil Byram related an incident which brought the mystery out of the conversation of the few and made it town talk.

"I was walking near the place last night, real late," he said, "and was cutting across the street so I was hidden from the sidewalk by a row of trees. When I got so I could see the gate there was a man, a little fellow with a white beard. He was sort of tugging at his neck and acting queer and then, then he disappeared."

"What?"

"He seemed to sink out of sight and I pinched myself to see if I was dreaming. I know all the white-whiskered men in Minden, but this was a stranger. Disappearing like that—"

Phil let the sentence die. "I said before," Tom Inches was not to be denied, "I heard noises in the house and I've heard them again. What do you say we go by tonight and listen?"

The look around the circle of the Chess and Checker club. "Not me," Phil Byram was nervous. "That little old man—I'll guess I'll wait until I reason him out."

"That night," members of the club, with one exception, walked past the Lessing house and, with their ears to the grating of the fence, listened for the noises. From somewhere in the big house came a rhythmic pound- ing. It stopped only to sound again and then came a tearing grinding sound.

"What, what are we going to do?"

The group tightened for support awaiting the word of a leader and hoping it would counsel retreat. Dad Withers, striving to make his thin voice firm, plunged them into adventure.

"We'll go investigate. If it's a little man with white whiskers, he can't hurt us. And if it's a ghost, they never do. Come on."

The Chess and Checker club climbed the fence and made its way to the house. The sounds grew louder. They came from the basement. Then it was that Dad Withers, braving the super- natural, tore the boards from the win- dow and revealed to the startled eyes of them all, Mortimer Lessing working over a carpenter's bench.

"Now that you are so close to it," Mortimer spoke politely, "you may as well climb through the window."

"Nice shop, isn't it?" he said a little later and it was evident he was enjoying the discomfiture of his guests. Suddenly he changed and a look of relief came to his face.

"Gentlemen, you have known me as the proud and wealthy citizen. You don't know I started life as a car- penter and you did not know that the pretense and the strain of this life that has befell mine was often un- easy. No, no one was to blame. I had my time, but I thought, I have thought for a long time, that a vacation, a chance to putter in the shop and to be let alone would be welcome. Now you know."

"But the little old man with the whiskers?"

Lessing drew a false board from the table drawer. "I heard Phil Byram approach just in time and was putting this on as he came up. Then I crawled under the fence."

Again Dad Withers spoke to end an embarrassing silence, and it was with inspiration.

"I have some cabinet work I would like done, Mr. Lessing," he said, "and I'm wondering if you could do it."

"Do it, sure! Why, say, man—"

They left a man who, troubled with excitement because he had found a job.

all my friends will support you.' Later a letter received by Conally from Ballard W. George, Corsicana lawyer who managed the campaign of Alvin Owsley made this declaration.

"I did my best to place Alvin Owsley in the runoff," he said, "to secure a sufficient number of votes I am now supporting you. I believe you will make a splendid representative of the Democracy of Texas in the United States Senate. I hope that my friends throughout Texas will join me in supporting you."

Conally spent the week in conference with friends and preparing the speech he will make in opening the run off campaign at Fort Worth next Tuesday night, August 7. After that he will have sixteen speaking days before the primary and he plans to make a mard campaign.

Early in the week the victorious congressman gave out this formal statement of thanks and forecast of the campaign no beginning:

"To my friends throughout Texas I want to express my deep gratitude for their unselfish and untiring efforts in my behalf. The results of Saturday's primary prove their loyalty and activity. They have achieved a great triumph. However, the real fight lies before us.

"The lines of battle have not changed. From the beginning of this contest it has been a battle of the whole people who want a United States senator who knows no master but the people and the public good against those interests that seek preference and privilege and stand for the rule of secret and selfish interests.

"Before last Saturday there were five of us enlisted in the fight. The total vote of the five candidates at this moment aggregate 377,538 to 159,018 for the opposition and my vote alone stands at 146,864, just 12,154 short of the total vote of the remaining candidates. This overwhelming vote of protest makes it clear that the people of Texas want a new Senator.

"I know that my friends will carry on and hold and advance the lines until August 25. The night is on. The issues between Mr. Mayfield and myself differ widely. I stand for government in the open by and for all people. I am opposed to government by a few and for a few.

"Since Saturday a host of those who voted for other candidates have pledged me their enthusiastic support. To the Democrats of Texas I am thankful. I solicit their support

General Rains Improve Crop Outlook; Prospects for Bumper Cotton and Grani Yield Good

Dallas, Texas, August 8.—General rains over practically all Texas during the last week in July have been highly favorable to all growing crops—especially cotton—according to reports compiled by the Department of Public Relations of the Southland Life Insurance Co. Up to the time of these rains an entirely peculiar situation prevailed in that a great deal of the cotton producing counties which had early in the season been complaining of too much wet weather, were beginning to suffer from the drought. This condition, however, has been corrected and unless the rain continues too long, or develops insect infestation, cotton may be said to be in excellent condition.

Conditions are especially good in the Southwest, Central and Northern sections of the state. Crops other than cotton are doing extremely well—one of the best corn crops in years is in the making—vegetable crops are above normal—small grains made at least an average crop—and the forage crops are much above the average.

By far, the most encouraging aspect of the entire situation as far as Texas farmers are concerned is the fact that altogether they have had little or no ready money, many of them have not gone farther into debt during the past nine months and are in a position to have more money at the end of this crop growing season than ever before in their experience.

An interesting side-light on crop conditions in Texas is the report that the lower Rio Grande Valley shipped 20,640 cars of fruit and vegetables during the 1927-28 season. This far exceeds any of the previous seasons and clearly shows the growth of the valley section.

Business all over the state is, of course, suffering from its usual depression, but even this, according to reports, is less than it usually is at this time of the year.

All crops, of course are from 10 to 30 days late. In general it may be said that chances are extremely favorable for the production of an unusually large cotton crop despite all the propaganda and influence which has been brought to bear on a decrease in acreage. It is true, however, that most of this increase is due to the raising of larger crops on the West Plains.

Pasturage Essential To Livestock

College Station, Texas, Aug. 8.—Providing adequate pasturage is one of the first essentials in the profitable production of livestock in Texas. D. T. Killough, agronomist, Experiment Station, A & M College of Texas, pointed out in a discussion on "Temporary Pastures" before the livestock sections at the nineteenth annual Farmers Short Course here. Pastures are classified as permanent and temporary, he continued. Temporary pastures, as the name implies, have to be resown every year.

"Since temporary pastures are intended to carry stock for only short periods and the crops used for this purpose have to be resown one or more times a year, they fit well into a rotation or cropping system on the farm. Some of the principal crops used in planting temporary pastures consist of sudan grass, cowpeas, Soy bean, and velvet beans for summer pasture; and small grains, such as wheat, oats, and rye, alone or in combination with winter field peas or vetches, for winter pastures.

"Sudan grass is probably the most widely known annual summer crop seed there on account of its drought resistant which makes it suitable for planting in the western sections of the state where rainfall is often the limiting factor in crop production. It is equally well suited, however, for pasture in the most humid sections of Central and East Texas although it is difficult to produce a crop of seed there on account of the sorghum midge. Sudan grass is an annual and is killed completely by frost.

It therefore never becomes a pest as Johnson grass often does on cultivated land. Sudan grass should be planted on land which is well drained and fairly productive since it does not make as good a growth on poor soils. Leguminous crops such as cowpeas, Soy beans and velvet beans provide good temporary pasture in the summer for all classes of livestock and the small grains such as wheat, oats and rye are used in most sections where these crops are adapted to furnish temporary pasture in the winter and spring, the speaker said.
