Rotarians Hear Tech Speaker

Prof. R. L. Chappelle, head of the agricultural department at Texas Tech, was the guest speaker at the Rotary club Tuesday noon and spoke interestingly upon "Trends in Agriculture."

Chappelle vividly described many of the changes that will probably come forth as a result of the war. He particularly stressed the fact that this section must bring forth a greater variety of products and a closer application to the saving of moisture and soil.

Out-of-town guests were K. M. Renner and H. Gillis, district Boy Scout executive, of Lubbock; Frank George, Charles Townes and Lee Dodson of Tahoka.

Mrs. Pauline Campbell, was present at the meeting as a guest of Hervey Gardenhire.

Six-Inch Snow Blankets City

Much to the amazement of those who said it wouldn't, and the gratification of those who said it would, snow began falling here Monday night, and an estimated fall of six inches was made early Tuesday morning by Ben Moore, local government gauge custodian.

Lighter falls were reported over the county, but none heavier than in O'Donnell.

A "warming-up" sun, doubtless allergic to the white mantle, grabbed the spotlight quickly in the morning, and by noon had made the snow just another memory so far as actual white was concerned. Mud, water and slush was the replacement, much to the discomfort of children and those of somewhat advanced ages who still enjoy throwing snowballs at inoffensive pedestrians.

Fire Destroys Brooder House

Fire destroyed the brooder house belonging to Claude Tomlinson Monday, with damages amounting to about $200.00.

Tomlinson expressed his thanks to members of the fire department for assistance in preventing greater damage.

Meeting a Friend in Need

They call it an "Aerial Life Raft," though it's just a parachute to most of us. Flying Cadets of the Army Air Corps are thoroughly familiar with the twenty-four-foot "silk umbrella" before they leave the ground in a plane, and while in the air each carries a parachute of his own. They may never use it in an emergency but, as in this class, they learn what to do with it and how to handle it. They will never go up without it. Here, a master sergeant of the Air Corps pulls the rip cord of a parachute in a demonstration to Flying Cadets at the "West Point of the Air," Randolph Field, Texas.

This smartly-stepping model platoon of the 29th Infantry at Fort Benning, Georgia, home of The Infantry School, swings out at 120 steps a minute in a modern column of threes. Precision and coordination are necessary to bring foot soldiers to their highest efficiency both in garrison and in the field. Doughboys who travel on foot are still called "the backbone of the Army." This photo shows how many of the men recently registered for service will look after they become highly trained.

SUCCESS FORMULA

If we follow this Success Formula we might not necessarily roll up more of this world's goods, nor might we gain greater social, political or business success. But we most certainly would enjoy life more, probably live longer, develop a new sense of values, and get real satisfaction out of our daily work and living. Here tiz:

- Do less that is easy, and more that is hard.
- Do less of what you like, and more of what you fear.
- Do less laboring, and more planning.
- Do less talking, and more listening.
- Do less that is technical, and more that is human.
- Do less that is complicated, and more that is simple.
- Do less high-pressuring, and more pushing the right button.
- Do less that is selfish, and more that is altruistic.
- Do less dreaming, and more acting.
- Do less hurrying, and more relaxing.
- Do less worrying, and more enjoying.
- Do less wanting, and more plain living.

Do less to get, and more to give. Do less to improve others, and more to improve yourself. Do less of what you know you shouldn't, and more of what you know you should do.—H. D. Shaw in Brass Tacks.
