Cotton Harvest Starts; Gins Spill Over

Green Stalks Causing Problems In Modules

 Combest Visits With Voters In Muleshoe

Congressman-elect Larry Combest and his wife, Sharon, visited Muleshoe on Friday, November 16, to express his appreciation for the vote of confidence he received from the many citizens of Muleshoe.

Combest, making a district-wide tour, visited the public during a reception at the First National Bank in Muleshoe.

"Your interest in good government and support in this Congressional race means a great deal to me," Combest said. "I thank you for your input, your assistance and your vote of confidence on November 6."

"I encourage your continued input and please feel free to call on me and my office staff at anytime," said Combest.

On January 3, 1985, Larry Combest will be sworn in as the new U. S. Representative from the 19th District of Texas. Until then, preparations are underway

Cold, wet weather held up early cotton harvest, but the 1984 harvest has gotten underway, despite not enough of a killing freeze a presstime at completely kill the cotton stalks to provide for easier gathering.

During readings taken on Wednesday by Bailey County Electric Cooperative from the 25 cotton gins they serve in their area, a total of 15,760 bales of cotton have been ginned as of that date.

Early Friday afternoon, Muleshoe Co-op Gin said they had ginned 1,200 bales, with cotton coming in steady at this time.

Bailey County cotton farmers, anxious to harvest their crop, need to make sure the plants are properly killed before stripping, cautions County Extension Agent Spencer Tanksley.

The rush to harvest, coupled with recent weather patterns, is creating some major problems across the South Plains, Tanksley said. He said that Elston Grubaugh, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Lubbock, has reported that several gins have received modules too wet to run through module feeding equipment.

Green material in the modules also damages the lint and seed, causing loss of revenue to the producer, the county agent warned.

The weather pattern this year has caused many fields to shed a lot of leaves and the remaining leaves to blacken. Many such fields are being harvested, Tanksley added.

"These plants are still alive, there is still a lot of green material in them. In some places regrowth is starting to occur," he said.

"Harvesting of these fields is resulting in a tremendous number of hot modules."

Crops in areas which haven't received a killing freeze need to be killed before harvest, the agent stressed.

Over most of this area, a quart of arsenic acid will finish off the crop, he noted. After this application, seven to 10 days must be allowed for plant material to dry down before stripping.

"Plant material and lint going into a module must be below 12 percent moisture content, or that module will heat from internal combustion," he warned.

Modules should be frequently checked by inserting a temperature probe in at least three places down each side, the agent advised. A rapid overnight temperature rise of 15 to 20 degrees indicates that module has excessive moisture. If the temperature rises to 120 degrees, or higher during a

Littlefield, Post, Idalou Win Games

Childress found the Littlefield Wildcats living up to their reputation as the second ranked football team in the state on Friday night, as the Wildcats rambled past the Bobcats on a 27-0 shutout in Bi-District playoff action.

The Childress Bobcats managed to hold the Wildcats scoreless in the first quarter of the game, but, Steve Greene, Littlefield's power runner cut loose for two TD's in the second quarter, another in the third and the final in the fourth quarter of the game.

During the same time Littlefield was polishing off Childress on the field at Littlefield, Idalou was slapping previously unbeaten Perryton in Amarillo.

Idalou won over the Perryton Rangers with a score of 24-7. The Perryton team avoided a complete shutout with just 1:41 left in the game when Halfback Brian Williams made it over from the one yard line.

Idalou will now meet the winner of the Saturday game between Frenship-Fabens.

Post downed Kermit in another playoff game by a score of 27-7. Kermit scored in the first quarter, but tough Post defense held the team after that time while adding all their points in the second half.

Morton was eliminated from the playoffs by the Hamlin Pied Pipers on Friday night with Hamlin taking a 19-14 win over the Indians.

Lockney advanced in the playoffs after defeating the Hale Center Owls 6-6. Although the game ended in a tie, Lockney won the right to advance in the playoffs on penetrations.

CONGRESSMAN-ELECT LARRY COMBEST VISITS MULESHOE--Friday afternoon, M. D. Gunstream, left, and Tommy Gunstream, center, welcomed Congressman-elect Larry Combest to the First National Bank, who played host for a reception for Combest. He was in Muleshoe to thank the voters for their confidence in him. He and his wife, Sharon, were on an appreciation tour in the district. In the background are A. R. McGuire and James Glaze.

Muleshoe Man

Dies In Wreck

Near Lariat

Joel C. Shumake, 26, who had moved to Muleshoe very recently, was killed around 1:04 a.m. Wednesday in a one vehicle accident near Lariat.

Shumake, who moved to Muleshoe from Seagraves to work at SPS Talk Station, was traveling east on Highway 84, when he apparently veered off the highway in his vehicle. He then rolled the vehicle three and one half times.

Investigating the accident was Richard Diegelman of the Texas Department of Public Safety. Shumake was not wearing a seat belt and was thrown from his vehicle. He was pronounced dead at the scene by Farmer County Justice of the Peace Albert Smith.

Shumake's body was taken back to Seagraves. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Shumake and a brother, Raymond Shumake.

Creative Woman

by Sheryl Borden

Three topics will be presented on "The Creative Woman" show on November 20 and 24. Betty Chalker is a sewing instructor from Atlanta, Georgia and she will demonstrate a hemming stitch that is also called "faggoting" and it can be done with a straight stitch sewing machine. It's pretty finish and can be used on several different types of garments.

Another guest will be Sandy Parks, President and Founder of Color Charisma, and author of "Success of Color Charisma" and she, too is from Atlanta. Mrs. Parks says we should use the knowledge of the color effect and work with it to better understand and influence the behavior of ourselves and others. Color can work for or against us. It can be a tool to create moods, stimulate conversation or thinking or call attention, impart information and create lasting identities.

New research shows that children having a hot, high protein breakfast had a fifty percent gain in reading ability over those who had a cold protein breakfast or no breakfast at all. With so many families today consisting of two-career couples and young children -- who make up our most recent baby boom -- this report is timely and informative.

Three additional topics will be presented on November 22 and 25. Don Fandre believes microwaves are for cooking and his common sense approach is very easy to understand. He represents the Rubbermaid Co. and he's going to show how TV dinners, frozen entrees and frozen vegetables can be cooked in the microwave oven very successfully. Don's from San Francisco.

Cathy McCreery, a home economist with the Reynolds Metals Co. from Dallas believes we should enjoy entertaining and that it can be a breeze when you plan ahead and learn to use certain products to simplify cooking, storing and clean up. She will prepare three recipes that can be prepared ahead of time, which gives the hostess time to get the house, table and herself looking as attractive as the food. She will also discuss garnishes, table settings, containers, centerpieces and napkins.

A special segment on make-up tips from Estee Lauder Cosmetic Company will conclude the show.

"The Creative Woman" is produced and hosted by Sheryl Borden. The show airs at 12 noon on Tuesday and Thursday, at 2:00 pm on Saturday and at 5:00 pm on Sunday on KENW-TV. (all times are Mountain Standard). Viewers can request copies of printed materials offered on the show by calling on KENW-TV's toll-free telephone lines. MRS. BRENDA HAWKINS

Mrs. Carrie Lee Bishop Named Artist Of Month

Mrs. Carrie Lee Bishop has been named November Artist of the Month at the Muleshoe Public Library. Some of her paintings will be on display at the library all during the month.

Mrs. Bishop said, "My daughter, Mrs. Jack Schuster, was instrumental in my interest in oil painting. She thought it would give me another hobby when I retired, since my work was quite demanding of my time, she was afraid I might not have enough to do to keep me busy, therefore she took me to an art supply store and selected all the needed supplies plus some I have never used. This happened some three or four months before I retired. She thought oils would be the easiest medium to start with.

"Some weeks after I retired I discovered a Mrs. Emily Bredekier in Bishop, Texas which was only five miles from Kingsville, who was willing to let me in one of her classes in oils and tried to teach me how to paint.

"She was most patient and complimentary no matter what we did with our brushes. Through her encouragement, she made each of us feel like budding artists.

"After moving to Lubbock and Muleshoe I have studied with a number of artists in this area. Also artist from Houston, New Mexico and Idaho.

"During the past two summers I have attended the Carriou Lodge School of Art and studied with some well known artists."

November 18-24 Declared National Adoption Week

Once again, President Reagan has declared this week to be National Adoption Week. Any couple who has experienced the pain of being childless, and then the thrill of becoming parents through adoption, sees special meaning in observing National Adoption Week at Thanksgiving.

There were 2.5 million infertile couples wanting to adopt last year; only 40,000 of them got a child. Understandably, the adoption alternative is one they would like to publicize. There are 14 million girls between the ages of 13 and 19 in the U.S. and 5.5 million of them will become pregnant at least once during their teens. They have four choices: marriage, raising the baby alone, abortion, or adoption. Abortion is the choice of 53 percent of unmarried pregnant teenagers. Of those who do bear their babies, 93

Sudan Young

Homemakers

Meeting Held

The Sudan Young Homemakers met for their regular meeting Monday, Nov. 5. A program on color analysis was presented by Elsie Wilson with Ann Carson and Deneece McDonald as models for the demonstration.

The date for a bake sale was set for Nov. 17 at Pay 'N' Save. The Toys for Tots program was discussed and it was agreed to help with this program this year.

December 1 was set as the date for the Young Homemakers Christmas party to be held at K-Bob's in Muleshoe.

Members present included Deneece McDonald, Ann Carson, Deanna Humphreys, Jodee Tennyson, Susan Donnell, Rita Conley, June Pierce, Ann Gaston, Julie Rigsby, Mary Kay Baker and Margaret Williams.

Refreshments were served by Rita Conley.

percent are keeping them as social stigmas about illegitimacy change. It takes a truly courageous girl to give her baby life and then to selflessly give it up for adoption. It also allows a childless couple to know the joys of being parents.

Maternity homes function as a link between the mother who wishes to give her child up for adoption, and the adoptive parents. The Edna Gladney Home in Ft. Worth is such an agency. Since its beginning in 1896, the Home has placed over 16,000 children in adopted homes.

The Edna Gladney Home - known to the residents as Aunt Edna's - provides a residence, education, counseling, medical care, and a loving environment for pregnant girls who are looking for an alternative to abortion, single parenthood or early marriage. The campus includes dorms, apartments, a hospital, an accredited junior high and high school, a swimming pool, a greenhouse, and several well-fed cats that permanently reside at the home.

There is also a Community Services Program, where a girl may remain in her home town during her pregnancy, and receive counseling and help with medical expenses from the agency. Any girl with an unplanned pregnancy is eligible for any of the services offered by the Home, regardless of her economic situation.

Confidentiality is important to many of the residents. Each girl chooses a fictitious name to use in the living area when she checks in and is advised not to tell the other mother-to-be her real name or hometown. But, there are over 100 girls at Gladney at any given time, and most girls soon make a best friend with whom they share everything.

The Edna Gladney Home is the only maternity home that also has an accredited psychiatric facility on the campus. Counseling is given to each girl, as well as her family, if desired. The Home's philosophy is to try to make each girl feel good about herself, and to help her prepare for her future after she leaves the Home. No girl is ever under the obligation to give her baby up, although most do.

A former 17 year-old resident from Plano said, "I wanted to have an abortion. My father said no. I came to Gladney, and now I'm glad I did. I'm too selfish - and I'm too young - to have a baby. I know adoption is the best gift I could give my baby. Being here matures you real quick. I can say I did it myself and that's one kind of pride no one can take away."

While a pregnancy may be unplanned, no baby is unwanted, as demonstrated by the large numbers of infertile couples waiting to adopt children. The Edna Gladney Home is also an adoption agency, the oldest privately funded adoption agency in the nation.

Gladney has about 4,000 inquiries each year from families wishing to adopt, but fewer than 400 babies to place. The start-to-finish process averages two to three years if the "request to adopt" form is accepted. Couples often have a nursery ready months ahead of time. The agency advises them to close the nursery door and let it get a little dusty.

Finally, the adoption case-worker calls the waiting couple with news that their baby has arrived. Most couples agree that the thrill of that moment is absolutely unequalled. Case-workers tell adoptive parents about the baby's history, revealing no names or geographical locations, but sharing the family background, occupations, education, and physical appearance of its parents. The babies are usually placed at about two weeks of age.

A former 16-year-old Gladney resident from Houston said, "I'm doing what's best for this child. I can have other children later, and these people can't. Abortion crossed my mind once. But my aunt and uncle adopted, and I thought, I can't kill this baby when it could make someone as happy as my aunt and uncle are. When they place this baby in the adoptive parent's arm it's the answer to a prayer."

The Edna Gladney Home has a toll-free, 24-hour hotline: 1-800-772-2740. Those desiring information on becoming adoptive parents are asked to call 1-817-926-3304.

Booze & Babies

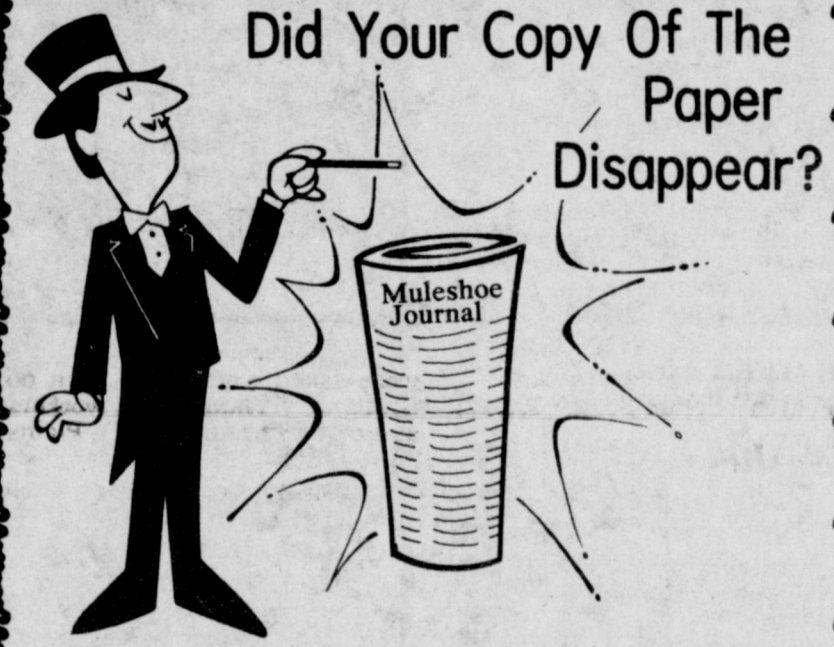

Another study indicates pregnant women shouldn't drink regularly or heavily. The National Institute of Health study indicates one or two drinks daily, can cause weight loss in an unborn baby.

One researcher even says no alcohol at all should be taken by pregnant mothers.

There is still some controversy on how much alcohol is harmful to babies, but the NIH findings were based on data from 31,604 pregnancies over a period of four years.

A&M researchers say cholestrol unefected by changes in diet

COLLEGE STATION — Most Americans can add as many as three eggs to their daily diet and not worry about higher cholestrol content or increased chances of getting a heart attack, say two Texas A&M University medical researchers.

Dr. Barbara O'Brien of Texas A&M's Department of Biochemistry and Biophysics isn't suggesting that people eat more eggs; she simply thinks that the American Heart Association's diet recommendations on the subject are misleading for most people.

Area Director at USDA's Marketing Services Office in Lubbock. Daily classing totals passed the 7,000 per day mark on Wednesday. Sample receipts passed the 20,000 per day mark on Tuesday. "We started a night shift Thursday," Bennett continued.

Temperatures dropped below freezing in some northern High Plains communities last Friday morning. Frost crept a little further south into central High Plains counties.

The Lubbock office classed, 28,700 samples during the week ended Thursday. This brought the season's total to 50,000 and compares with 79,000 classed by the same date last year.

The week's predominant grades were grade 41 at 23 percent, followed by grade 42 at 30 percent and grade 51 at 17 percent. About 9 percent was reduced one grade because of bark.

Predominant staples were staple 31 at 22 percent, staple 32 amounted to 23 percent, staple 33 was 21 percent and staple 34 accounted for 15 percent. The week's staple average was 32.5 thirty-seconds of an inch.

Mike 35-49 accounted for 36 percent, 33-34 was 19 percent, 30-32 amounted to 28 percent and 27-29 was 13 percent. The average was 33.

High Volume Instrument breaking strength averaged 25.2 grams per tax at Lubbock during the week.

Early ginned cotton brought growers 900 to 1225 over '84 loan for mixed lots of mostly grades 42 and 52, staples 31-33, mike 35-49. Gins paid growers $90 to $110 per ton for cottonseed, mostly $90.

Area Water Conservation Saving Big, Big Dollars

During 1984 irrigators conserved 90,586 acre-feet of water in the areas served by the Lubbock and Amarillo Area offices of the USDA-Soil Conservation Service (SCS) through use of technical assistance provided by the SCS field office staffs. These 1984 results would have a value of 19,058,600 for water saved for future use based on an estimated value of $100 per acre-foot.

Irrigators in these areas have requested technical assistance in the form of on-farm irrigation application efficiency evaluations to pinpoint where water losses occur on their farms. Then SCS technicians have provided these irrigators with guidance on where and how to modify their current irrigation practices to reduce water losses.

The 1984 improvements made by irrigators to increase their water use efficiencies should carry over for at least five years on the same group of farms. This carry-over effect could equal a long-term savings of 300,000 to 400,000 acre-feet of water which would have a value of 30 to 40 million dollars.

This technical assistance program began in 1983 when the U.S. Department of Agriculture designated twenty-seven Texas High Plains counties for a special targeting funds program. The funds from this program are being used to provide technical assistance to irrigators in the target area to help improve the efficiency with which they apply irrigation water to their farms. Mobile field water conservation laboratories are used by SCS field personnel to evaluate on-farm application efficiencies. These mobile labs have been provided by the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1 and the North Plains Underground Water Conservation District with assistance from the Texas Department of Water Resources, State Soil and Water Conservation Districts, Commissioners' Court and others. Once the tests have been performed, the data are used to determine where the irrigator can make improvements in his irrigation system, methods to eliminate water losses, and/or obtain a more uniform distribution of his irrigation water.

During 1983, the SCS Lubbock area field offices provided irrigation efficiency assistance on 48,992 acres. An average improvement in efficiency of 13 percent was attained on 88 percent of the acres evaluated. This correlates to 13,834 acre-feet of water conserved in 1983. The SCS Amarillo area field offices provided the same type of assistance on 134,487 acres for an improved efficiency of 8.6 percent on 30 percent of the acres evaluated. The 1983 effort in this area would relate to 31,527 acre-feet of water conserved. The improved efficiencies in each of these areas should have been maintained on the same acres in 1984.

In 1984, the Amarillo area field offices provided irrigation efficiency assistance on 209,289 acres. As a result, 74,133 acre-feet of water were conserved by an average efficiency improvement of 14.75 percent on 38 percent of the acres evaluated. The Lubbock SCS area field offices provided assistance on 60,924 acres for an average efficiency improvement of 13.5 percent, or 16,453 acre-feet of water conserved for future use. The combined two-year savings for the two areas would amount to about 181,308 acre-feet of water.

In addition, immediate benefits of this program are a savings in fuel cost for pumping water. In the target area it costs an average of $4.00 per acreinch for fuel to pump irrigation water. Fuel savings resulting from not having to pump 181,308 acre-feet of water during the report period of 1983 and 1984 would be about $8,702,784.

This targeting funds program is scheduled to continue through October, 1985. Anyone in the target area who is interested in participating in this program should contact his local USDA-Soil Conservation Service office to arrange for an irrigation efficiency evaluation. Counties served by the Amarillo Area office of the SCS are: Briscoe, Carson, Castro, Deaf Smith, Hartley, Moore, Oldham, Parr and Swisher. The Lubbock Area office serves the counties of: Bailey, Cochran, Hockley, Lamb, Lubbock, Hale, Crosby, Floyd, Dickens and Motley.

A&M researchers study genetic change in domestic plants

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M University biologists are looking at the genetic differences between wild and domesticated plants to determine the amount of genetic erosion — or valuable traits that may be lost — as new hybrids are produced.

"There's been a lot of talk about preserving wild relatives of domesticated plants to preserve a broader range of genetic variation, but no one has ever really looked to see if wild plants are more variable or less variable than domesticated plants," said Dr. Hugh Wilson, associate professor of biology and project leader.

The research is funded by the USDA Competitive Grants Program and Texas A&M.

The researchers are studying wild species and closely related domesticated plant forms, comparing hereditary differences in the plants by looking at the genetic makeup of their protein (allozymes) structures.

DANGER! HIGH VOLTAGE

COTTON HARVEST IS HERE AGAIN and BAILEY COUNTY ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE ASSN. urges extreme caution when operating farm equipment near electric lines!

In recent years, many tragic incidents have occurred involving cotton module builders and power lines. The extended portion of the cotton module builder can come into contact with overhead electric lines if the operator is not very careful. The same problem exists with overhead baskets on cotton strippers.

We urge farmers and their employees to be alert to these potential hazards and to take every possible precaution to avoid serious injury... or even death! When you are moving a module builder, be sure the packer arm is lowered as far as it will go. When using a stripper with an overhead basket, be sure to check for overhead lines before dumping.

If some piece of equipment DOES contact these 7200 volt lines, it is important that you or the operator not try to simply back away. The line could break, or if it's already broken, it could tangle in the equipment and break again, compounding the problem and increasing the danger. Jump clear of the machine, being sure NOT to touch the ground and the machine at the same time. Move quickly away at a right angle to the power line. Then call the Cooperative office whether or not the line is broken so they can help you.

Farm crisis depiction draws praise for "Country" from Hightower

(AMARILLO)—Following a preview screening of "Country," the highly-acclaimed new movie about a farm family's struggle to hold onto their land, Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said here today. "The story of the Ivy family is not some fantasy dreamed up for its dramatic impact. This story is being lived by real families all across rural America, and it's straining the very social fabric of a large and valued segment of our population. Real people are being hurt by the collapse of our rural economy."

The screening was arranged and sponsored by the Texas Farmers Union, and Hightower was on hand to join a crowd of approximately 150 Panhandle-area farmers and other residents to see the movie that has been hailed for its realism by Iowa farmers who viewed it at its premiere in Des Moines, Iowa, a few weeks ago. In the movie, stars Jessica Lange and Sam Shepard portray an Iowa farm family who battle the Farmers Home Administration, which is trying to foreclose on them.

"This movie couldn't come at a better time," Hightower said. "Hopefully, it will help a lot of desperate farmers understand that they're not alone, that their problems are being shared by their counterparts in every area of the country. And hopefully it will bring home to urban Americans the fact that the economic recovery has not come to rural America and that a lot of their fellow citizens out there are being economically and emotionally destroyed through no fault of their own.

Researchers say free marketplace controls shortages

COLLEGE STATION — Americans who believe government ought to get involved in impending water shortages by regulating prices have learned nothing from experiences with oil and other crises, say two Texas A&M University economists.

In a new book published by the Hoover Institution Press at Stanford University, Dr. Charles Maurice and Dr. Charles Smithson maintain that unfettered marketplaces have alleviated economic crises over the past centuries and will continue to do so in the future.

"The Doomsday Myth — 10,000 Years of Economic Crises" points out scarcities, or economic crises, lead to higher prices and the higher prices will lead to additional conservation. The same will be true for water.

As water becomes more scarce, they contend prices should be allowed to rise so new technologies can be developed for conserving water and providing additional supplies.

The free market, not government, eliminated past American shortages, such as the timber crisis at the turn of the century, the natural rubber crisis in the early 1940s and the oil crisis of the past decade, the two Texas A&M professors state. Americans who think government was responsible for elimination of the long gasoline lines haven't learned this lesson, the economists say.

and that a lot of their fellow citizens out there are being economically and emotionally destroyed through no fault of their own.

"Unfortunately, the bureaucratic insensitivity portrayed in this movie is being played out in real life by federal officials today, including the nation's top farm officials. We've asked Secretary of Agriculture John Block to do a number of simple, commonsense things to help some of our Texas producers survive the past four years of low farm prices, but we've got nothing but one callous rebuff after another.

"Most recently, we asked Secretary Block to waive the bureaucratic prohibition against selling hay from set-aside acreage, a simple measure that would help our drought-stricken ranchers make it through the winter, help some of our farmers pick up a little much-needed extra cash, and cost taxpayers nothing. A USDA undersecretary denied our recent request and said that a lot of cattlemen don't want cheaper feed. We invited Secretary Block to come see our drought for himself. He never replied. Now he's attending a $100/plate breakfast. He'll leave town with a full stomach, while he leaves Texas ranchers empty-handed again.

"Up until a month ago, John Block was running around preaching that everything is rosy in the farm economy, claiming that 'farmers are living better than ever.' Then, when a Republican congressman warned Reagan not to come to Iowa without some kind of program to deal with the massive farm debt, the Administration suddenly got religion. Reagan showed up in Iowa with a press release ballyhooing a brand new $630-million loan-guaranty program to restructure the debts of farmers. Trouble is, it was a fraud—nothing more than a press release.

"In the first place, Reagan really was not making any new money available to hard-pressed farmers. Of the $630-million funding that he announced, $130 million was money they already had in hand but hadn't spent, and the other $500 million was money Congress was on the verge of appropriating anyway, despite Reagan's active opposition.

"But, worse yet, the Administration designed the program in such a way that it almost certainly will fail, moving no money to the pockets of hard-pressed farmers. Instead of making loans directly to deserving borrowers, all Reagan's program does is to offer federal loan guaranties to banks that are willing to write off some of a borrower's principle—and you can imagine how anxious bankers are to do that. We have not found a single Texas bank that is interested in the Administration's scheme, and it is not likely that any farmer will benefit.

"In short, there was no new money, no real program, and no debt will be restructured. It's a political shell game, pure and simple—Reagan takes our vote and gives us nothing in return. You can get a more honest deal than that from a carnival barker on the midway at the State Fair.

"There is another federal program on the books that could help farm borrowers, but the Farmers Home Administration has not been willing to implement it fully in Texas. The 'limited resource' (LR) loan program makes loans with interest rates 5% lower than regular FmHA loans. In some states, FmHA is complying. In Iowa, for example, 58% of FmHA's loans are LR loans. In Massachusetts, nearly 40% are LR loans. The national average is 22%. Congress has mandated a goal of 20% of all FmHA loans to be LR loans. Yet, in Texas, only 3.4% of FmHA's loans are the lower-rate LR loans.

"Naturally we wondered why Texas producers are all being forced to pay the high rates. The state FmHA office told us they hadn't found many borrowers who qualified for the LR loans. You know what the main qualifications are? A farmer must have a low income now, but have chances of making it in the long run. Now, with this Administration's low-price farm policies, I can see why they might have trouble finding a farmer with a good chance of surviving, but they sure ought to be able to find plenty who qualify as 'low income.'

"So, to help them out, we at TDA took it upon ourselves to print up a couple of brochures outlining the LR program and a borrower's rights when dealing with FmHA. We are sending them out to FmHA borrowers all over the state, and they're available at all our district offices.

"In addition, we've hired a farm credit specialist at TDA to help our farmers and ranchers figure out their options, and we are holding a series of farm credit seminars around the state to assist FmHA borrowers with their problems. We expect some of these newly-trained 'experts' on FmHA to then help their neighbors who have similar problems.

"These admittedly are small gestures, little more than 'handholding' in the face of the tidal wave of foreclosures, bankruptcies and liquidations that is sweeping across rural America. But it's important that we do what we can, because the fact of the matter is that the current Administration is perfectly willing to let a few hundred thousand more family farm operators go belly-up rather than take some obvious steps that would allow our most efficient producers to make a living and stay in agriculture. And urban Americans had best pay attention, because they're not going to enjoy paying the bill at the grocery store check-out counter when a handful of big conglomerates get control of our food supply."
