SCHOOL NEWS

Mrs. Edwards' Honor Roll Spelling: Ruby Rathfill, L. E. Robinson, Wayne McDaniels, C. Robinson, McKee, Scott, St. Clair, Harvey McKee, Maurice Payne, Marjorie Musick, Estelle Stultemer, Oswald Ballow, Jeanette Eubank, Louis Bean, Viola Culp, Robert Campbell, Lometta Robinson and J. E. Seeley.

Miss Harville's Room Last Tuesday our room mother came to see us. She gave us some delicious cookies and then read to us. We enjoyed her visit very much. Friday afternoon we presented "Bobadi, Last of the Giants." Our room was full at each of the three shows. When we counted our money we found that we had made one dollar and sixty-three cents. A beautiful new book case now graces our room.

Honor roll for last week: Christine Barber, Inavey Burdine, Leona Holman, C. Lambert, Charles Kirkland, Norma Dean, Clifford Barnett, Jim Clements, Max Harris and S. E. Everett.

Miss Jordan's Honor Roll Low Fourth: Dean Scholer, Aris Thompson, Eldon Carroll, Deloris Bell. High Fourth: Alvera Lawler, Donald Ballow, Aleene Gates, Joe Burkett.

Miss Gary's Room Last week we chose sides for a contest. Christine Ables and Wynelle Scott were chosen leaders for having the highest averages for the past month. At the end of the month the side whose average grade is higher will be entertained by the losing side. We are doing this to stimulate more interest and effort.

These pupils in our room made standard grades in the addition test: Lester Eberidge, Garland Curtis, Bertha Campbell, Audrey Petty, Pearl Tune, Mary Louise Imman, Zoll Fritz, Evelyn Kirkland, Maurice Isbell, Wynelle Scott.

Miss Hancock's Room Miss Hancock finished reading "Anne of Green Gables" this week with much interest and enthusiasm. We voted that this was the best book we have read this year. We found it was very interesting to imagine these characters and to find pictures to represent each character.

Honor roll for last week: Christine health posters this week. Each pupil found out how many calories he was supposed to eat each day, after which each planned the meals for one day and made a "balanced ration" poster. Mary Hamilton had the best poster. Miss Hancock took us on a picnic Tuesday afternoon, since it was April Fool's Day. Indoor baseball and various other games were enjoyed until all were exhausted. Then a big fire was built and the fun of roasting marshmallows was begun. We had all of the eats which are enjoyed on such an outing.

Miss Gates' Room On Friday of last week our room had a picnic. We enjoyed games, baseball, and finally had a great feed of those things that make picnics a favorite entertainment of all. The daily grades of both boys and girls are being kept, and at the close of this month the losing side will entertain, but says just quite a bit of excitement.

We have all entered a "Clean Hands Hands" Campaign. Our pins, daily record and honor roll are all reminders that cleanliness is the first law of health.

Mrs. Gilbreath's Room Pupils having honorable mention for good work last week are: Geneva Bean, Orvell Warren, Jim Ellen Wells, J. D. Hunt, C. Hamilton, Odwin Hasley and Glen Payne. Most of the pupils seem to realize that the time is drawing near for promotion or failure and are working hard.

Our room enjoyed a lively picnic given last week to the winners of the highest average grades. The contest is well under way to see who gains the fourth holiday. The race is a tight one so far.

NOTE—The reporter and the editor regret that due to lack of time and space some of the school news had to be omitted last week. We realize that it was a disappointment to many and ask that they accept our sincere regrets and forgive us this once.

Our room sister, Miss Terry, visited us Monday afternoon. We enjoyed her visit and the games and matches.

Our month's contest closed last week. The seventh grade won by a very small margin. The averages were 81 and 83. Today we are having our picnic.

Mrs. Goesh's Room We are proud of Rundell Foster, one of the boys from our room. At the county meet he tied for second high point winner in the track events and won two first places for O'Donnell.

The seventh grade boys organized their baseball teams Monday. Lawrence Tredway and J. T. Middleton are captains.

Roy Smith went to the Fat Stock Show with the vocational agriculture party and made a most interesting and complete report to the room.

PERIOD of the TRAVEL CLUB

SATURDAY, APRIL 12 12 p. m.

$770.00 OR $300.00

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

HERE'S WHAT YOU CAN DO!

CREDITS allowed for subscriptions are cut big after April 12. They DECREASE RAPIDLY. If you are a member of the Travel Club or intend to be a member, it is VITALLY IMPORTANT that you get into Club Headquarters every available subscription by Saturday night, April 12, at 12 p. m.

See those friends, relatives and neighbors who have promised you their subscriptions, for later on—and explain to them WHY they should give them to you NOW instead of later—when they do not count so much!

They are interested in your standing! Get their support NOW while their assistance will be of greatest value in the drive.

After April 12th, each one-year subscription goes down. Show them what it means if they fail to fulfill their promises. Get the longer term subscriptions of five years—they count the most. It is much easier to work with ten prospects and land each for a 5-year subscription than it is to see 100 prospects for one-year subscriptions.

The time is short! Only real action counts now when it gets results. ACTS make FACTS, and "if your WISHBONE is where your BACKBONE ought to be"—SWITCH QUICK. There will be no excuses accepted on May 3. It is now or never—don't overlook a prospect.

HERE'S WHAT YOU MUST DO!

AN EXAMPLE OF TRAVEL CLUB ARITHMETIC

Did you see today's paper and your favorite's standing in the Club? It is a very easy task—one good day's work—for any of the lower club members in the race to catch up and pass any of the leaders. Just a few hours of sincere work will mass enough credits to accomplish this. A brand new club member—YOU—can do this!

Here's How to Pass The Leaders!

One Entry Coupon	5,000 Credits
Extra Credits with First Subscription	10,000 Credits
5 One-year subscriptions	25,000 Credits
Your Own Five-Year Subscription	25,000 Credits

ALFRED E. SMITH

The tallest building in the world is now under construction in New York on the site of the famous old Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

Competition for the highest and biggest "cloudscraper" has been at fever heat for some time. And now, tapping them all, the Empire State building will pierce the horizon 85 stories above street level.

TERRIBLE HAMMERLOCK JOHN IS COWBOY IN NEW MOORE SECTION

Hammerlock John, who twisted ears with Kendrick Gaston and won by a knock-out, then tried the heavy stuff on Cowboy Tipton, is reported "punching cattle" out in the New Moore community.

the sweetest hugging and loving exhibitions ever seen in O'Donnell, and

He intends to try—a comeback in the very near future, it is reported, to show the fans here that Cowboy Tipton is entirely a weakling beside the Great John. Some fans here think that Hammerlock is just so much "pappy" and will most certainly go down in defeat if the powerful Cowboy Tipton ever goes in the ring again with him, they say.

The MUTINY OF THE ALBATROSS

BY WYNDHAM MARTYN

W.A.U. SERVICE

Gibbons looked at him. His eyes, following his glances, saw what meant. There was superb luxury everywhere. Did not these two men also have been a time when they were entertained in magnificent rooms one who had no greater opportunity in youth than they? Less opportunities. Unwin was always a student to whom academic tasks were assigned. Bettington had a small property and Gibbons had but an allowance as a distant relative. From the pale green of Gibbons' face when Bettington had passed his life mainly traveling and painting the sea in sterner moods. His pictures were such as to attract the dealer, although his followers revered him for his art. Economically he was a failure, and yet Gibbons could not rid himself of the feeling that they were not impressed by his position. There was something stinging and irritating in it. He was annoyed to find that these two quiet guests were re-establishing that sense of unasserted superiority which they had exercised in college. There had been a time when they meant more to him than any other men. And when success came to him he forgot them. Gibbons was a little ashamed; but the feeling lasted only a few moments. His arrogance banished it. He had succeeded; they had failed. He was even little gratified when the pale secretary bowed his way in with two cables and demanded immediate attention. "Made a million or so?" Bettington asked quickly, when the secretary taken down the answers and gone. "Or lost one?" "Radway is the loser," Gibbons said. "I have just taken a railroad car and he's too drunk to know what it'll mean tomorrow." "Tubby Unwin made an unexpected mark." "That will be the Memphis and Toledo," said "It is Radway's pet lamb." "How the h— do you know that?" Gibbons snapped. "He came to himself with a start, realized that he had repeated something Mary had told him in confidence. He made a gesture as though say, financial secrets were not hid from him entirely. "Was it you who told me so much about that, you'll be astonished to learn that you can't run the run. There isn't a man in New York for Radway and I told them something of his decision for Radway; of how these years he had been setting snares for him. "I never forgive or forget," Gibbons boasted. "I see you all marked on the chart as 'your face,' Bettington answered. "Anything else you see?" Gibbons retorted. "Bettington gazed at him steadily. The painter's good looks and splendid eyes forced themselves on the captive. "See what all charts mark. Rocks, sands, reefs. You're headed for Gibbons." "There was something dominating about Bettington. Gibbons felt it even in his magnificent home in a moment of triumph. "The unsuccessful," he said acidly, as they left they have the right to say. "It's about the only thing you can do and the do that badly." "You call me unsuccessful?" Bettington demanded. Then he smiled a little. "You are wrong. I've accomplished what I set out to do. And I know what you will never have—contentment. The difference between us is we measure success by different standards." "In the unsuccessful one," Unwin retorted. "I have not done what I set out to do." "You don't have to advertise the fact," Gibbons said, still a little irritated. "I can see it." "Bettington felt the protective instinct calling him to defend the small friend of other days. "It amazes me to think you troubled yourself so elaborate a feast for two successful men. Why?" "Ask Unwin," the host returned. "I told my secretary he had important business with me, and as I busy all day and every evening then I suggested a dinner. The fact of Tubby brought you to my mind, I asked you, too. I'm waiting to know just how important this business is." Unwin drew from his pocket a half sheet of paper and passed it across to Gibbons. The diner now at the coffee and liquor stage, manuscripts had withdrawn from the table. Gibbons took with a frown read it through. "We, the undersigned," he read, "desire to separate, do hereby award, if one of us attains fortune and others do not, the lucky one shall lose. "Don't forget to send the girl around. I'll see that she is sent right into my private office and that's a privilege some would pay high for." His guests understood that the audience was over. Alfred Gibbons had no more interest in them. In a sense, they were dismissed.

CHAPTER II

The Planning of the Cruise

"The place stifled me," said Unwin, when he was alone in the street with Bettington. "Walk as far as my studio," Bettington suggested. "Isn't it strange that we should have lost sight of one another. I feel guilty. . . . It's true I'm not often in New York. . . . Tubby, I'll not lose sight of you now." Bettington's studio was more a collection of marine objects, a museum of the sea, than a place to work in. There were two rooms at the top of an old brown stone house on the north side of East Thirty-fourth street. He had a very lease of the place and used it but rarely. There were quaint figureheads of old sailing ships now long broken up or sunk. "I have not always led the simple uneventful life Gibbons assigned to me," the painter said smiling, when he noted his friend's interest. "Sit down, Tubby, while I make real coffee." Later, he began: "I had a small fortune when I left Harvard. I spent most of it in seeing the world. With what was left and some small savings I have bought a camp. At present I'm hard-up, but there's plenty of money in this very room. I'm energetic enough to get it. I have sold very few of my paintings. I have been able to afford not to. I have commissions for a number which I have not filled. That was selfish of me. I'll execute them and sell some of these canvases. Your girl Mary shall go to Smith, and your boy shall have the Tech. Sewer and paint shall take them both there. It has been a fortunate evening for me. I needed waking up." Unwin thought of how soon this miracle might be accomplished, which should give his children their opportunities. "That's a good thing," he had trained him to calculate with great niceness such adjustments. Bettington planned to start for the painting expedition within two days' time. He would start at Gloucester and wander up the coast, reaching his new camp in northern Maine in a month's time. It were wise, he thought, to send Mary to Gibbons' office. The pictures might not sell. Gibbons might offer the girl a splendid stipend. He might seek to make amends for his brusqueness by unexpected kindnesses. Perhaps they had wronged Alfred Gibbons. "Mary looked at him next morning over the breakfast table and her eyes asked the question her lips did not formulate. "Smith must wait just a little," he said, "but don't be cast down. Mary. There is hope; you will yet win to Northampton. Take an hour off this very day and go and see the great Alfred Gibbons. He wants to see you. Commercially speaking, your fortune is made. He is expecting you." "Mary Unwin had been almost a year an inmate of the office of Elgar Radway; she had quickly accommodated herself to the routine of her work. She worked always at top speed, as did her employer himself, and was paid fifteen dollars weekly. The people were kindly, and Radway—notorious as a man-about-town—never missed his pleasures with his work. She was a free from harm when taking his dictation, as she would have been with a decent-minded man. "It was to him she preferred the request for an hour off. He was not pleased. "I'm busy," he grunted. "I'm off for a vacation soon, and there's a lot to do. Don't be longer than an hour." He looked at her curiously as she went from the office. As a comrade of women he admired her charm, but she was worth more to him in the office than out of it. Radway was a voluptuary of sixty who was finding out that he lived now in soberer age and could not adapt himself to it. Gibbons' victory padded the moral. He did not greatly fear Gibbons. He comforted himself that after a few weeks on the sea he would come back refreshed for the big game. "He was thinking of Gibbons' triumph over the Memphis and Toledo road, only made possible by the treachery of a trusted manager, when Mary Unwin entered the office of her father's associate friend. "Gibbons was often a matter of speculation among the Radway staff. It was known that he had once been Radway's clerk and had left suddenly, breathing threats against his employer. And yet seemed to have voted his life to getting even for some grievance of whose origin none in his office had any definite idea. "Mary looked at him with a curiosity that had nothing to do with his financial position. She looked at him as one who had in the other years been a close friend of her poor, blundering, clever, but unstable father, whom she loved the more because she saw his need. "Gibbons was not prepared for a beauty. It was true, Unwin had fine features and brilliant eyes, but one remembered Unwin as the man who perpetually flattered and looked apologetic. There was a cloud of depression about Unwin, which seemed to make his carriage mean and inconspicuous. "Mary was calm and held herself as though no failure or self-depreciation had ever come near her. There was something fine about her. And the brown eyes which looked at him under level brows raised a doubt in his mind as to the successful outcome of the scheme which was working in his crafty head. He first set himself to disarm her by the adoption of the air of an old and privileged friend. "So this is little Mary Unwin," he exclaimed, shaking her hand. "Well! Well!" "It was a banal beginning, the girl thought. But she smiled. There must be something good in a man whom her father had liked. "So you want to go to Smith?" he went on. "He could see her vivid interest now. "More than anything on earth," she answered. "I don't suppose you can ever guess how much I want it." "That's all right," he smiled. "Your father helped me to understand." His air was one of delight in well-doing. There was born in her heart a fluttering hope that for old friendship's sake he was going to help her. Her cheeks that were usually pale took to themselves a lovely flush. She could not bring herself to ask what he meant for fear of meeting disappointment. "I was good to hope after so much despair." "I told your father I would help you. The world knows me as a hard man, but it knows me for a man of my word. I'll try to help you and your brother." "Oh, Mr. Gibbons," she cried, "I can't believe it. It is one of those things too good to be true! How can Bob and I ever thank you enough?" He looked at her keenly. This was the ripe moment. "You would like to feel you earned the money, rather than be under a monetary obligation to me? Is that what you mean?" "Of course," she replied. "I should expect to earn it. But how can I?" He leaned over the glass-topped table. "You can," he said. "You can very easily repay me for the few thousand dollars your education will cost. You are Radway's private stenographer. Very well, you must have taken many letters from him to three men named Harrod, Harte and Buford. Haven't you?" "Yes," she admitted. "What I want is this. I wish you to leave Radway and bring with you the notebooks with the letters written since the fifth of the month to those three men. You will find a typewriting machine in the adjoining office. You will transcribe the letters and then forget all about it." "Forget?" she asked. "Forget all about it?" "That's the idea," he said delightedly. He was very much relieved. He had dreaded the idea of tempting her. "Forget it entirely. Go to Smith and feel that you have earned the money. I'll tell your father it is a loan, so he will feel satisfied." "She rose listlessly; the color had gone from her cheek. She felt physically weakened. After all it was to be a life of office drudgery. Gibbons did not understand this sudden alteration. "What's the matter?" he said irritably. "Oh, not very much," she said. "I was only wondering how my father could ever have called you his friend." "What?" he exclaimed. "You are going to throw away a chance like that?" She made a little gesture of despair. "I am going to throw it away." "He was now thoroughly angry. He had not been so upset for months. "You deserve to starve," he snapped. "with that 4-d-foot over a father of yours; and will will, too." She shook her head. "I shan't starve, but I think I'd rather starve than do that." "Gibbons had been wrong in declaring that the Memphis and Toledo road had been taken from Radway because he was drunk. Gibbons had bid so high, that one on whom Radway relied wholly had sold him. Well, that would not happen again. For the moment there was a lull in the warfare. "It was not until some allies of Gibbons returned from Europe that the struggle would begin again. And before that happened there would be one month on shipboard, where he could fill himself with alcohol and feel he was not ruining his prospects. It was the debauch of an alcoholic, long denied his pleasure. "Elgar Radway always deceived himself and others about this annual voyage. But he never deceived his wife. There had been a day, ten years earlier, when he was a national figure in politics. The death of a governor had made him a little beard of lieutenant governor, the head of a great state. His financial knowledge was at the service of the White House at a moment when a black panic seemed about to devastate the country. Senator Whitburn, of his own state, looked upon Radway as his own discovery, and talked of him so much, that his daughter, carried away by the spirit which is found so much in Washington society, found the disparity in years more than offset by his name, prominence and promise.
