Cost-of-Living Index Stabilized For First Time Since June, 1950

THAT RISING SPIRAL-The government's predictions that prices would level off as a result of its numerous and sometimes confusing price regulations, seemed to be borne out with the announcement that the costof-living index has come to a dead stop.

The bureau of labor statistics put out two sets of figures that indicated the unpward spiral had stopped for the first time since the oubreak of the Korean War last June.

Price Chief DiSalle He told irate farm bloc bis beef rollback order was justified.

have returned to duty.

As for food prices, the average home town housewife couldn't notice any decline, but according to government figures it was there-all .2 of a per cent of it. At the present time food prices are approximately 11.1 per cent above last June.

The confusing beef picture remained about the same with word from the White House that President Truman was "going to stand firm" behind Price Director Michael V. DiSalle on his order for the rollback.

THE PRICE WE PAY- For the first time since the Korean conflict began on June 25 of last year, the price we are paying for victory was made startling clear to the home town mothers and fathers of the na-

Testifying before house and senate committees, Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, reported there have been 72,679 nonbattle casualties in Korea, boosting the total of U.S. casualties in the Bradley told the senators there have been 69,276 battle casualties, including 10,680 dead. Of the nonbattle casualties, 612 died of such causes as pneumonia, automobile accidents, etc. Eighty-five per cent of the rest

Release of these figures confirms rumors long circulated in the nation that casualties have been more than double those officially announced.

TRUMAN AND THE HOME TOWN-It was evident that President Truman had the home towns of the nation on his mind during his recent news conference. At two points he indicated he had been giving them considerable thought.

For one thing, he told newsmen that a third world war would turn American soil into a battle front. He said he believes that the people have enough intelligence and energy to meet any situation. But he indicated he was unwilling to take a chance on seeing how they would react under the destruction another world struggle would bring to the home towns of the nation.

The President would not say whether he will be a candidate again in 1952, but he did indicate another of his famous cross-country tours to tell the home towners his policies was a possibility.

In the 1948 election campaign the President carried his message to the home towners and made hundreds of speeches to small but en-thusiastic audiences. His appeal on the local level is credited with his success in that campaign. It seems likely, therefore, that another crosscountry swing is but a matter of time.

APPEAL TO MAIN STREET-Governments may argue and pass regulations, but they are ineffective if Main Street doesn't support This outstanding trait of democracy was demonstrated again when the house agriculture committee appealed to housewives and consumer representatives to come forward and defend the beef rollbackaimed at cutting the price of beef 8 to 10 cents at butcher stores by

Under continued assault from cattlemen, packers and distributors, the committee decided the best counterattack would be from Main Street customers. They wanted to hear from any consumers or consumer groups who think the beef order will benefit them.

Meanwhile the government ordered a cut in the number of cattle that may be slaughtered this month. The quota will be 87 per cent of the weight slaughtered in June 1950. The purpose is to assure fair distribution of livestock among registered slaughterers and to prevent the

WHAT CHANCES FOR PEACE?-Ever since the MacArthur incident impressed upon the man on Main Street the awful possibility of years of struggle in Korea, one question has been uppermost in the mind of every American-what are the chances for peace?

At present there are being circulated rumors of peace proposals. These rumors have grown since United Nations troops broke the back of the second Chinese offensive and then plunged northward to kill and capture thousands of Red troops.

But it would be well for the home towner to remember that talk of peace as circulated now are but rumors—nothing more. It would be futile to pin the hope of peace on a rumor and then have it deflated by another Communist attack. Military leaders in Korea report the killing and capture of thousands of Red soldiers, but still warn they are capable of another offensive. It is well to remember that peace can not be made by one party-there must be two.

RED CROSS IN KOREA-The American Red Cross, to which millions of people in the home towns of the nation have contributed their dollars, this month is launching the operations of 28 clubmobiles for the troops in Korea. The clubmobiles, to be staffed by 60 Red Cross girls, were requested by the military because of their adaptability to the quickshifting Korean war front.

A popular feature of the Red Cross services to the armed forces in World War II, the clubmobiles will provide airmen and ground troops with free coffee and doughnuts, recorded music, and stationery.

They will supplement the one large Red Cross club operating at the At present approximately 360 Red Cross workers and more than 3,000 volunteers are now serving American troops in Asia.

Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, told house and senate committees investigating the MacArthur affair that U.S. casualties in Korea were 141,955. (See story above.)

BOOK OF FREEDOM

U.S. Society Has Distributed 406 Million Bibles in 135 Years

This year, the American Bible Society will celebrate 135 years of service in promoting wider circulation of the Bible. It was in May, 1816, that a group of Christian leaders gathered in New York and founded the national society for the distribution of the Bible.

America was embarking on a great period of expansion when the Bible Society was founded. York was a small city of some 10,000 people clustered around the Battery, but the country was spreading westward. Already set-tlements of hundreds, then thousands of homes were dotting the wilderness. It was the era of the American pioneer, and along with the need for roads and schools came another-the need for Bibles.

Although there were local societies for this purpose in their own communities, none was able to fulfill the needs to the west. It was Samuel J. Mills, "the father of the foreign missions," who was most instrumental in calling together the historic meeting which brought about the formation of a national Bible society. Many notables of the day were in attendance. Among them were Dr. Lyman Beecher, "the father of all the Beechers," James Fenimore Cooper and Elias Boudinot, who as president of the Continental Congress had signed the peace treaty with Great Britain in 1789.

Boudinot was elected the first president of the society. His vicepresident was John Hay, the first chief justice of the United States supreme court. In later years, still another great supreme court chief justice was to serve as vice-president of the society, Charles Evans

But it is more than that. Horsely of freedom.

But it is more than that. Horsely of freedom.

Dr. Frederick W. Cropp, general secretary of the American Bible Society, holds in his right hand a copy of the Scriptures which the society distributed to soldiers during the Civil War. In his left hand is the edition being distributed to servicemen today.

The first treasurer was Richard Varick, the second mayor of New York City.

AS AMERICA expanded, so did the society. From their first small headquarters in the offices of a printer, they moved into their own establishment. After repeated enlargements, the society moved to their own building on Astor Place, which was then so far uptown as to be considered almost a suburb of the city. The Bible House, which was the only building of its day to occupy an entire block in New York, was the show place of the city. Today, although the Astor Place Bible House is still being used, main headquarters for the society is housed in a modern building on Park Avenue and 57th Street in New York.

The number of Bibles, whole and in portions, printed by the American Bible Society since their first edition of 10,000 Bibles in 1816 is staggering. During the Civil War period alone it issued in the United States 5,297,832 Scriptures, most of which were New Testaments for soldiers fighting on both sides. In its first 50 years, the American Bible Society has distributed 21, 409,996 volumes; in one hundred 123,292,359 copies of the years. Scriptures had been distributed. At the end of 135 years, 406,422,004 volume's of the Scriptures were distributed in 1,000 languages.

And yet the distribution increases each year. "Never before has the Bible been so wanted," said Dr. Robert T. Taylor, general secretary of the society, at the 135th annual meeting held in New York recently. 'The 1950 reports show a record distribution in almost every part of the world. In my ten years in the Bible Society I have been nurured on emergencies, never seen anything like the present opportunities."

Today the American Bible Society is a prime factor in making the Bible the least expensive and most widely distributed book in the world. In many languages, a Gos-pel may be had for as little as one cent and if the penny isn't available, it may be had for nothing.

It is America's most purchased book. It is the world's best seller.

first. She turned away and walked to the door with ner head high and went out. Johnny sighed and sat down at his desk. He was amazed and dis-gusted with himself. Ten minutes ago he had been the practical executive. He had rung for his secreary, Miss Alyne, and a girl with titian colored hair and blue eyes had appeared instead. "I'm Jinny Alison," she explained matter-of-factly. "Miss Alyne is ill oday and I'm taking her place."

She had stood looking at him from the other side of the chair, and without saying a word he had reached out and pulled her toward nim and kissed her, and she had slapped his face. Sitting at his desk Johnny wondered why he hadn't noticed Jinny Alison before. She must be new, he told himself. He gestured angrily. What a fool he'd made of himself. He didn't believe in mixing business with-well, with things like that. And, he told himself fiercely. he wasn't going to begin now. Miss Alison would have to be dismissed. He couldn't have a girl around whom he'd kissed and who might think of him as-well, in that way. He stood up, grimly determined. The matter had better be attended to at once. Half way to the outer

He went back to his own dest. Well, she hadn't quit and he wouldn't fire her. No. he decided to let her stay and ignore her entirely

During the remainder of the morning he put Miss Alison from his mind. When he had letters to dictate he rang for a stenographer in exaggerated unconcern. And when prim Abby Nathan appeared he told himself he was relieved.

THAT night Johnny went to sleep putting Jinny out of his mind. The next morning he reached the office before nine. At 9:15 he opened the door of the outer office and breathed easy again when he saw that Jinny was at her post. At noon he looked toward her desk on his way out, caught her eye and fell strangely sick when she turned coldly away. During lunch he became pretty grim, admitting to him-self that he was making rather a mess of his resolve. Miss Alison would have to go. There was no use, he just couldn't concentrate with her on his conscience. It would solve the whole problem to have her out of his sight.

His first act on reaching the of-fice was to call Miss Nathan and ask her to send in Miss Alison. Jinny, notebook in hand, entered and stood looking at him from the other side of the interview chall just as she had the day he had kissed her.

"Miss Alison," he began, and stopped. He cleared his throat importantly, "Miss Alison, I've called you in to-to apologie for what happened the day be fore yesterday."

"Oh." said Jinny. "I don't want you to think," Johnny went on, scarcely recognizing his own voice, "that I—er—kiss—er act that way with all—with other stenographers."

"In fact," said Johnny, "you're the first one, I mean, well—" He stopped, desperate, panicky, angry. 'Miss Alison, you're fired!"

"Oh!" said Jinny. Johnny gulped. "No. I don't mean that! What I mean is, I can't concentrate unless—unless—we have an understanding. Oh, the devil! That wasn't what I intended to say at all. I mean, Miss Alison, wo you like to go out to dinner with

Mac Could Have Left UN Command, Kept Japan Job

By Wright A. Patterson

NOW THAT we have heard both sides I am convinced that General MacArthur has the best of the argument, and it would seem that General Marshall, as spokesman for the administration, largely concedes that. What I still do not understand is why it was necessary to summarily relieve General Mac-Arthur of all of his duties in the far east, where his opponents admit he had done an outstanding job.

If the United Nations took exception to his proposed methods, that organization could have asked President Truman to have made a change in their field commander, for he was employed by the United Nations as supreme commander of

That would have left Mar Arthur in Japan where he had done a remarkable job, and where he was needed, at least. until a Japanese peace treaty was completed. That would have saved for us a man who General Marshall says is better qualified to advise on military and diplomatic lines than any other man in the world to-day, and whom we need in directing and formulating a far eastern policy.

Through the senate investigation the President may have molified many members of his party, to an extent that they will accept the verdict, whatever it may be, if any. But nationally, he has lost with the people much of the leadership he had previously enjoyed.

on Gen. Harry Vaughn. His passing St Lawrence waterway and the would not have been considered a serious loss, or regretted by any, other than the recipients of deep freeze units.

The whole MacArthur incident has resulted only in a loss to the nation of a valuable, and specially talented administrator and soldier at a time when we are in sad need of such talents.

While there are only seven Civil War veterans still living, the government is paying out $6,000,000 a year in Civil War pensions, most of it going to 9,500 widows, and to 1,331 children of veterans.

Many of our ills are caused by feeling sorry for ourselves.

Defense mobilization director, Charles E. Wilson, a President Truman appointee, has made a new move in the way of socialistic centralization of the government. He has instructed the governors of all states, the mayors of all large cities, and the governments of all counties that they can not borrow money in excess of one million dollars with which to finance new, or uncon pleted projects, without first getting a clearance from his office.

The first of such notices should have gone to the White House. The one individual most prone to start. new, and unneeded projects is Mr. Wilson's big boss, President Truman. The next of such notices should have gone to congress.

iastically applaud his efforts, if successful, when applied to the President, and to congress, and especially to the congressional "pork" bill. Wilson holds a federal job. His direction to the state, city and county governments is a violation of the Constitution, and abridgement of the rights of local governments, including those of the states. I know of some counties where that edict, if it could be made to stick, would be valuable to the people of those counties, but the principle is wrong. The place where it is most needed, and the people with whom it is most needed, are right there in Washington. How can we reconcile the World War III wolf cry of to-day that is followed tomorrow with the optimistic assurance of approaching global peace? We have had such statements at intervals since the fighting stopped in Germany. So many times has the wolf cry been sounded, that the American people no longer believe in either. We do not get excited about them. To-day Joe Stalin is a deep-dyed villian, tomorrow he is a fine old fellow, with only peace in his heart. We have lost our fear of the big, bad wolf.

We are spending billions on war preparations, but should the conflict

Wedding Details Should Receive Careful Attention

By Ertta Haley

DERHAPS you've wondered, if you're going to be a bride, or have had anything to do with weddings, just why there are so many rules connected with them.

A wedding is a really big occasion for the bride and groom, of course, but for families and friends as well. The rules are strict, but they're designed for the sake of graciousness, thoughtfulness and consideration for all involved.

Responsibilities are divided between the two immediate families involved, possibly more for the bride's family than for the groom's, but that is probably due to the fact that the groom must assume more responsibilites economically than the bride.

What kind of wedding to have really depends upon individual preferences, and the bride and groom should decide this for themselves. As they think of the wedding in later years, it should be the kind of wedding they wanted rather than

Budget has a lot to do with weddings, and even the simplest kind may make a serious dent in finances. The size of both families also helps in determining wedding type, as do the number of friends and relatives you want to include. Weddings should always be in conformity with your station and that of the family's. It should never be an affair that has any tinge of keeping up with the family next door or a friend.

There are six types from which to choose: First, the large formal wedding at a church, followed by a reception at home, hotel or club, where everyone is invited.

Type of Wedding

Determines Guests With the formal semiformal or informal church or chapel wedding. followed by a small reception at home or a club, only families of the bride and groom and intimate friends are invited. A third type of wedding is a small one held at church or home, with a small re-ception at a club includes only a few friends and the two immediate families. This is followed by a large reception to which all friends are invited. Another type is simple yet ideal from the point of view of the reception is that held at home, and possibly in the garden. This is followed by a reception at the same place to which everyone is invited. Then there's the small chapel wedding which is very simple, too, held in a small chapel to which a few friends are invited. The bridal couple usually receive in the foyer of the chapel.

Slimming Pique

A white pique dress that's smart, cool and lovely for summer is this white pique with the waistline-slimming inset of white organdy. The only trimming on this simple frock is the appliqued banding of white cotton lace. Worn with a simple pearl choker and bracelet, in keeping with the simplicity of the dress, this is a fashion that is bound to please those who want to look smart.

The last type is the military wedding which is usually formal. It's held at a military post, at the chaptel there and is followed by a reception at home or at the club on the post.

The responsibilities of the groom

The groom usually plans to give several gifts, and these are for the bride, the best man and the ushers. For a formal wedding, he presents matching ties and gloves to the men and gives a dinner (bachelor) if he wants to have one.

The groom will also handle the clergyman's fee and the wedding trip expenses.

Pre-Wedding Gifts Dictated by Wedding Type

Showers before the wedding are in perfect order for all types of weddings no matter how simple they may be, but the bride's or bridegroom's immediate family should never give one of these. If either of the families want to give a party, it must be clearly understood that no gifts are expected from those attending.

When showers are given, the bride is expected to write thankyou notes not only to the hostess who gave the shower, but also to all who gave gifts.

If desired by the bride, she and her mother may give what is called a trousseau tea a week or so before wedding, after the invitations have been sent. Invitations to this are usually by an informal, written note. The guest of honor at the tea

The farewell luncheon for the bridal party is part of the big formal wedding, and usually takes place a few days before the big event. Attendant's gifts are usually presented at this affair.

The bridal dinner either precedes or follows the rehearsal, and includes the complete wedding party, as well as important out-of-town guests. This may be done in buffet style, or it may be a formal sitdown affair. Invitations are by personal notes or by word of mouth by the bride's mother.

The bachelor dinner is held at the preference of the groom, and he plays the host. His friends may also give it in his honor. Gifts to best man and ushers are presented at this time.

Procedure Given For Wedding

At any formal wedding, music begins one-half hour before the ceremony. Vocal solos should be scheduled during the last few minutes of this time, just before the ceremony begins.

Candles are lighted by the sexton a few minutes before the guests arrive, unless a traditional candlelighting ceremony has been scheduled during the service.

Reserved pews number ten to twenty, depending upon the size of the wedding and number of guests. Guests present pew cards to the usher if they are to sit in the reserved section.

Five minutes before the ceremony, the bridegroom's mother is escorted to her place, the first pew on the right side. The bridegroom's is the groom's mother who usually father follows her and is seated pours. Bridal attendants and close next to her.

Adultery' Awful Word To Face

"I AM in a very serious dilemma," writes Ethel Wilsey, from Roanoke. "Time, which you so often say heals all wounds, may solve this for me, but meanwhile would be glad of your opinion. "Would you ever advise a woman to divorce her husband for no particular reason, and marry another man? I don't think you would. But let me explain the rather unusual circumstances. My social and club circle is large, but I can't consult anyone here.

"I am 29. Ten years ago I married a man 12 years my senior. I liked Hart, I loved my new name and my house, and we really had some good times. Then my two children were born, and things quieted down. Hart had a small salary; my father died and that source of hospitality ended, and I began to feel that life was a pretty steady drudge. Hart began to travel a good deal three years ago, and then my days were duller than

money. World Upside Down

"Then I met Roger. Just a quiet fine man at a card party, at first. Then-fireworks. Neither one of us had ever really been in love before and it turned the whole world up-side down. During Hart's absences, when my mother was with the children, I was free to come and go. and in the first radiant happiness of our finding each other we were

he takes it all as settled, he feels, as he says, that it will 'justify' our love affair. I am worried, almost distracted, by it. In fact, I can't eat or sleep for nervousness. Roger wants my immediate consent, and talks as if our love were still in the stage it was two years ago. I don't mean it isn't, exactly, but these things do grow less, and one does not see them in the beginning as one does later on. I have argued that my love for my children, my home responsibilities, and my position in the community are all against my making any such change, but Roger regards all this as only one more evidence of my unselfishness and perfection, and sweeps it away as nonsense.

"I am quite confident that there will be no real trouble about this, Ethel's letter concludes, "but I would be glad of your opinion."

If Ethel is really confident that there is no real trouble here I can only marvel at her obtuseness. If ever there was real trouble in store for a woman who quite obviously wants to hold on to home and husband and children, this is it. Between the lines I can read a certain uneasiness; Ethel may begin dimly to suspect that home, husband, children, position, and very likely material comfort have all been jeopardized by her sin.

Maybe the Profs Saw Super Mouse

Zoologists Discover High-Jumping Rodent

CARBONDALE, Ill. - Here's a fact that should encourage micefearing women to scale new heights: Southern Illinois has mice that can jump six feet high.

Not that they'd want to jump on a frightened lady's chair. The meadow jumping mice referred to probably are even more timid than their cousins in the pantry. In fact, they're so skeptical about people that only four known specimens have been taken in southern Illinois in 11 years.

This small, bouncy creature is not too uncommon north of the Mason-Dixon line, but until 1940, no jumping mice had been collected in Little Egypt. A family of them apparently jumped up for a week-end and decided to colonize the area.

Julius R. Swayne, a faculty assistant in zoology at Southern Illi-nois university who trapped a pair on a farm near Pyatt three years ago, estimated that there were about four per acre in that vicinity.

Another such mouse was found at a university farm here and still another is in the Musem of Natural and Social Sciences at SIU. The meadow jumping mouse, called Zapus Hudsonius for short, is about the size of an ordinary field mouse, but his tail sometimes measures nearly five inches and his real legs are about one and onehalf inches long. He looks something like a kangaroo that didn't quite make the grade.

The mouse can broad jump 10 feet or more using his hind legs and tail as a springboard. His movements are so quick that he barely touches the ground after a leap and he's sailing through space

Wedding Details Should Receive Careful Attention

By Ertta Haley

DERHAPS you've wondered, if you're going to be a bride, or have had anything to do with weddings, just why there are so many rules connected with them.

A wedding is a really big occasion for the bride and groom, of course, but for families and friends as well. The rules are strict, but they're designed for the sake of graciousness, thoughtfulness and consideration for all involved.

Responsibilities are divided between the two immediate families involved, possibly more for the bride's family than for the groom's, but that is probably due to the fact that the groom must assume more responsibilites economically than the bride. What kind of wedding to have really depends upon individual pref-erences, and the bride and groom should decide this for themselves. As they think of the wedding in later years, it should be the kind of wedding they wanted rather than

type, as do the number of friends and relatives you want to include. Weddings should always be in conformity with your station and that of the family's. It should never be an affair that has any tinge of keeping up with the family next door or a friend.

There are six types from which to choose: First, the large formal wedding at a church, followed by a reception at home, hotel or club, where everyone is invited.

Type of Wedding

Determines Guests With the formal semiformal or informal church or chapel wedding, followed by a small reception at home or a club, only families of the bride and groom and intimate friends are invited. A third type of wedding is a small one held at church or home, with a small reception at a club includes only a few friends and the two immediate families. This is followed by a large reception to which all friends are invited.

Another type of wedding which is simple yet ideal from the point of view of the reception is that held at home, and possibly in the garden. This is followed by a reception at the same place to which everyone is invited.

Then there's the small chapel wedding which is very simple too, held in a small chapel to which a few friends are invited. The bridal couple usually receive in the foyer of the chapel.

It could be of profound impor-tance to the fate of the world.

A white pique dress that's smart, cool and lovely for summer is this white pique with the waistline-slimming inset of white organdy. The only trimming on this simple frock is the appliqued banding of white cotton lace. Worn with a simple pearl choker and bracelet, in keeping with the simplicity of the dress, this is a fashion that is bound to please those who want to look smart.

The last type is the military wedding which is usually formal. It's held at a military post, at the chaptel there and is followed by a reception at home or at the club on the post.

Responsibilities of Families Are Definitely Listed

All types of invitations and announcements are paid for and handled by the bride's family, but the complete list to whom they are sent are made out by both families or the bride and the groom.

The bride's trousseau, wedding ensemble, wedding decorations, bridesmaid's bouquets, gifts to musicians and other helpers and church expenses with the exception of the clergyman's fee are also handled by the bride's family.

The responsibilities of the groom include the wedding ring, the mar-riage license, the bridal bouquet, boutonnieres for the men of the wedding party as well as for corsages to both mothers and grandmothers. The groom usually plans to give several gifts, and these are for the bride, the best man and the ushers. For a formal wedding, he presents matching ties and gloves to the men and gives a dinner (bachelor) if he wants to have one.

The groom will also handle the clergyman's fee and the wedding trip expenses.

Pre-Wedding Gifts

Dietated by Wedding Type Showers before the wedding are in perfect order for all types of weddings no matter how simple they may be, but the bride's or bridegroom's immediate family should never give one of these. If either of the families want to give a party, it must be clearly understood that no gifts are expected from those attending.

When showers are given, the bride is expected to write thankyou notes not only to the hostess who gave the shower, but also to all who gave gifts. If desired by the bride, she and her mother may give what is called a trousseau tea a week or so before the wedding, after the invitations have been sent. Invitations to this note. The guest of honor at the tea pours. Bridal attendants and close | next to her.

The bridal dinner either precedes or follows the rehearsal, and includes the complete wedding party, as well as important out-of-town guests. This may be done in buffet style, or it may be a formal sitdown affair. Invitations are by personal notes or by word of mouth by the bride's mother.

The bachelor dinner is held at the preference of the groom, and he plays the host. His friends may also give it in his honor. Gifts to best man and ushers are presented at this time.

Procedure Given For Wedding

At any formal wedding, music begins one-half hour before the ceremony. Vocal solos should be scheduled during the last few minutes of this time, just before the ceremony begins.

Candles are lighted by the sexton a few minutes before the guests arrive, unless a traditional candlelighting ceremony has been scheduled during the service.

Reserved pews number ten to twenty, depending upon the size of the wedding and number of guests. Guests present pew cards to the usher if they are to sit in the reserved section.

'Adultery' Awful Word To Face

"Would you ever advise a woman to divorce her husband for no particular reason, and marry another man? I don't think you would. But let me explain the rather unusual circumstances. My social and club circle is large, but I can't consult anyone here.

'I am 29. Ten years ago I marliked Hart, I loved my new name and my house, and we really had some good times. Then my two children were born, and things quieted down. Hart had a small salary; my father died and that source of hospitality ended, and I began to feel that life was a pretty steady drudge. Hart began to travel a good deal three years ago, and then my days were duller than ever, even though there was more money.

World Upside Down "Then I met Roger. Just a quiet fine man at a card party, at first. Then-fireworks. Neither one of us had ever really been in love before and it turned the whole world upside down. During Hart's absences, when my mother was with the children, I was free to come and go, and in the first radiant happiness of our finding each other we were

he takes it all as settled, he feels, as he says, that it will 'justify' our love affair. I am worried, almost distracted, by it. In fact, I can't eat or sleep for nervousness. Roger wants my immediate consent, and talks as if our love were still in the stage it was two years ago. I don't mean it isn't, exactly, but these things do grow less, and one does not see them in the beginning as one does later on. I have argued that my love for my children, my home responsibilities, and my posiried a man 12 years my senior. I tion in the community are all against my making any such change, but Roger regards all this as only one more evidence of my unselfishness and perfection, and sweeps it away as nonsense. "I am quite confident that there will be no real trouble about this,' Ethel's letter concludes, "but I would be glad of your opinion."

If Ethel is really confident that there is no real trouble here I can ever there was real trouble in store for a woman who quite obviously wants to hold on to home and husband and children, this is it. Between the lines I can read a certain uneasiness; Ethel may begin dimly to suspect that home, husband, children, position, and very likely material comfort have all been jeopardized by her sin.

Wedding Details Should Receive Careful Attention

By Ertta Haley

DERHAPS you've wondered, if you're going to be a bride, or have had anything to do with weddings, just why there are so many rules connected with them.

A wedding is a really big occa-sion for the bride and groom, of course, but for families and friends well. The rules are strict, but they're designed for the sake of graciousness, thoughtfulness and consideration for all involved. Responsibilities are divided between the two immediate families involved, possibly more for the bride's family than for the groom's, but that is probably due to the fact that the groom must assume more responsibilites economically than What kind of wedding to have really depends upon individual pref-erences, and the bride and groom should decide this for themselves. As they think of the wedding in later years, it should be the kind of wedding they wanted rather than

Budget has a lot to do with weddings, and even the simplest kind may make a serious dent in fi-nances. The size of both families also helps in determining wedding

type, as do the number of friends and relatives you want to include. Weddings should always be in conformity with your station and that of the family's. It should never be an affair that has any tinge of keeping up with the family next door or a friend. There are six types from which to choose: First, the large formal wedding at a church, followed by a reception at home, hotel or club, where everyone is invited.

Type of Wedding

Determines Guests With the formal semiformal or informal church or chapel wedding, followed by a small reception at home or a club, only families of the bride and groom and intimate friends are invited. A third type of wedding is a small one held at church or home, with a small reception at a club includes only a few friends and the two immediate families. This is followed by a large reception to which all friends are invited

Another type of wedding which is simple yet ideal from the point view of the reception is that held at home, and possibly in the garden. This is followed by a reception at the same place to which everyone is invited.

smart, cool and lovely for summer is this white pique with the waistline-slimming inset of white organdy. The only trimming on this simple frock is the appliqued banding of white cotton lace. Worn with a simple pearl choker and bracelet, in keeping with the simplicity of the dress, this is a fashion that is bound to please those who want to look smart.

The last type is the military wedding which is usually formal. It's held at a military post, at the chaptel there and is followed by a reception at home or at the club

Responsibilities of Families Are Definitely Listed

All types of invitations and announcements are paid for and handled by the bride's family, but the complete list to whom they are sent are made out by both families or the bride and the groom.

The bride's trousseau, wedding ensemble, wedding decorations, bridesmaid's bouquets, gifts to musicians and other helpers and church expenses with the exception of the clergyman's fee are also handled by the bride's family.

ONCE OVER President's Piano Wanderings

THE piano industry gave a piano to President Truman the other day, making him the first President in history with a spare. Harry smiled and seemed happy, but we can't think of anything that he really needed less in the present harassing moment. If the idea was that it would soothe the President and settle his nerves it came a little late and should obviously have arrived before the MacArthur recall. Still it must be some satisfaction for him to know that he has the piano makers of America behind him in the present situation. Probably helps him sleep.

Perhaps, after all, the gift of a piano to President Truman may not be a minor matter, a mere expression of good will. It could be of profound impor-tance to the fate of the world. History may show that it played a part in saving America in a critical hour. Harry has been under a great strain and is clearly taut, hair-triggery and impulsive in a day that calls for poise and coolness. This new and super piano may give him greatly needed relaxation. Music hath charms to soothe the savage pen, as the saying

The responsibilities of the groom include the wedding ring, the marriage license, the bridal bouquet, boutonnieres for the men of the wedding party as well as for corsages to both mothers and grand-

The groom usually plans to give several gifts, and these are for the bride, the best man and the ushers. For a formal wedding, he presents matching ties and gloves to the men and gives a dinner (bachelor) if he wants to have one.

The groom will also handle the clergyman's fee and the wedding trip expenses.

Pre-Wedding Gifts Dictated by Wedding Type

Showers before the wedding are in perfect order for all types of weddings no matter how simple they may be, but the bride's or bridegroom's immediate family should never give one of these. If either of the families want to give a party, it must be clearly understood that no gifts are expected from those attending.

When showers are given, bride is expected to write thankyou notes not only to the hostess who gave the shower, but also to all who gave gifts.

If desired by the bride, she and her mother may give what is called a trousseau tea a week or so before the wedding, after the invitations have been sent. Invitations to this are usually by an informal, written note. The guest of honor at the tea is the groom's mother who usually father follows her and is seated pours. Bridal attendants and close next to her.

The farewell luncheon for the bridal party is part of the big formal wedding, and usually takes place a few days before the big event. Attendant's gifts are usually presented at this affair.

The bridal dinner either precedes or follows the rehearsal, and includes the complete wedding party, as well as important out-of-town guests. This may be done in buffet style, or it may be a formal sitdown affair. Invitations are by personal notes or by word of mouth by the bride's mother.

The bachelor dinner is held at the preference of the groom, and he plays the host. His friends may also give it in his honor. Gifts to best man and ushers are presented at this time.

Procedure Given For Wedding

At any formal wedding, music begins one-half hour before the ceremony. Vocal solos should be scheduled during the last few minutes of this time, just before the ceremony begins.

Candles are lighted by the sexton a few minutes before the guests arrive, unless a traditional candlelighting ceremony has been scheduled during the service. Reserved pews number ten to twenty, depending upon the size of the wedding and number of guests. Guests present pew cards to the usher if they are to sit in the reserved section.

Adultery' Awful Word To Face

writes Ethel Wilsey, from Roanoke. "Time, which you so often say heals all wounds, may solve this for me, but meanwhile I would be glad of your opinion. 'Would you ever advise a woman to divorce her husband for no particular reason, and marry another man? I don't think you would. But let me explain the rather unusual circumstances. My social and club circle is large, but I can't consult anyone here.

"I am 29. Ten years ago I married a man 12 years my senior. I liked Hart, I loved my new name and my house, and we really had some good times. Then my two children were born, and things quieted down. Hart had a small salary; my father died and that source of hospitality ended, and I began to feel that life was a pretty steady drudge. Hart began to travel a good deal three years ago, and then my days were duller than there is no real trouble here I can ever, even though there was more money.

World Upside Down

"Then I met Roger. Just a quiet fine man at a card party, at first. Then-fireworks. Neither one of us had ever really been in love before and it turned the whole world upside down. During Hart's absences, when my mother was with the children, I was free to come and go, and in the first radiant happiness of our finding each other we were

he takes it all as settled, he feels, as he says, that it will 'justify' our love affair. I am worried, almost distracted, by it. In fact, I can't eat or sleep for nervousness. Roger wants my immediate consent, and talks as if our love were still in the stage it was two years ago. I don't mean it isn't, exactly, but these things do grow less, and one does not see them in the beginning as one does later on. I have argued that my love for my children, my home responsibilities, and my position in the community are all against my making any such change, but Roger regards all this as only one more evidence of my unselfishness and perfection, and sweeps it away as nonsense.

"I am quite confident that there will be no real trouble about this,' Ethel's letter concludes, "but I would be glad of your opinion."

only marvel at her obtuseness. If ever there was real trouble in store for a woman who quite obviously wants to hold on to home and husband and children, this is it. Between the lines I can read a certain uneasiness; Ethel may begin dimly to suspect that home, husband, children, position, and very likely material comfort have all been jeopardized by her sin.

Maybe the Profs Saw Super Mouse

Zoologists Discover High-Jumping Rodent

CARBONDALE, III. - Here's a fact that should encourage micefearing women to scale new heights: Southern Illinois has mice that can jump six feet high.

Not that they'd want to jump on a frightened lady's chair. The meadow jumping mice referred to probably are even more timid than their cousins in the pantry. In fact, they're so skeptical about people that only four known specimens have been taken in southern Illinois in 11 years.

This small, bouncy creature is not too uncommon north of the Mason-Dixon line, but until 1940, no jumping mice had been collected in Little Egypt. A family of them apparently jumped up for a week-end and decided to colonize the area.

Julius R. Swayne, a faculty assistant in zoology at Southern Illinois university who trapped a pair on a farm near Pyatt three years ago, estimated that there were about four per acre in that vicinity.

Another such mouse was found at a university farm here and still another is in the Musem of Natural and Social Sciences at SIU. The meadow jumping mouse, called Zapus Hudsonius for short, is about the size of an ordinary field mouse, but his tail sometimes measures nearly five inches and his real legs are about one and one-half inches long. He looks something like a kangaroo that didn't quite make the grade.

This summer American farmers and gardeners will use about 1,000,-000,000 pounds of bug-killing materials, much of it containing parathion, especially those highly effective on the destructive leaf aphid.

Insecticides containing parathion are used a great deal by commercial fruit producers.

Now produced by several chemical companies, parathion in its original state is a brownish liquid. But as a commercial insecticide it Thile highly effective on insects, parathion also is extremely poisonous to humans. That is why some kind of respirator is recommended for farmers and growers spraying or dusting with insecticides containing the chemical.

A light weight and not uncomfortable respirator, with a molded rubber facepiece has been developed by the Mine Safety Appliance company of Pittsburgh which will fill the needs of most farmers.

FirePower *** ACCEPT NO SUBSTITUTES

Chrysler's new FirePower engine has rocked the automobile business right down to its roots.

Quietly, behind all the laboratory talk of "engines of tomorrow" . . . Chrysler has built a revolutionary engine for you to drive today!

It can give you 180 horsepower, to surpass any other engine in any other car. It develops its power in its own new kind of way!

But you don't have to "baby" it . . . or give it fancy quality gasoline to get that 180 horsepower performance!

FirePower takes any regular grade gaseline you care to buy . . . and adds its own new "mechanical octanes" to the power-giving octanes of the gasoline itself.

The result is something new and startling in responsiveness . . . and in safety, too. You get quicker and smoother control of when and how you move than you have ever felt before.

It's the engine of tomorrow . . . on the road for you today . . . and your Chrysler dealer invites you now to try it, in the all-around most astonishing new car you because there aren't any!

Here's the new Hemispherical Combustion Chamber that's the heart of Chrysler FirePower. Its new, designed-in "mechanical octanes" make regular grade gas do what best premium grades can't do in any other engine you can drive today!

Chrysler FirePower ever put in an automobile

Tell the Story!

Lesson for June 17, 1951

"TELL me the old, old story" is a favorite hymn in many places. But the first Christians would have been considerably puzzled by that hymn if you had tried it on them. It was no old, old story for them, it was hot news. Whatever objections people m a y have had to Christianity in those days, they never said it was "old stuff." More than that, Christians did Dr. Foremon not go around telling one another the story of Jesus.

When Jesus said, "Be my witnesses," his first hearers did not think he meant "-only to those for whom it is an old story." The early church was by no means an organization devoted to repeating somethig they know by heart, like the ritual of a lodge. It was devoted to telling the good news about God to people who did not know that God had any good

The Gospel Is a Story

THE saying has been quoted in this column before: Christianity first came to the world not on the editorial but on the news pages. Christianity is not God's new advice to the world. It is first of all the something God has done for the "Gospel" in Greek means simply good news. It is the story of Jesus, the kind of person he was, the kind of truths he taught, the kind of work he did, the death he died. But the story of Jesus is more than the story of a man, uniquely great though he was.

It is, after all, the story of God. God who became man so that in the life of Christ Jesus we can read the unreadable God, see the Invisible, know the Great Unknown. The early Christians were not theologians, and they did not use the language or the formulas that centuries of thought were to hammer out. They never used the word "Incarnation" and seldom used the word "Atone-ment." But that was what they were driving at.

The Story Is a Challenge

OOK through the book or Acts for the story of Jesus as the early Christians told it, and you will see that the Incaration and the Atonemet are there. The Incarnationthat God has lived among us as a man amog men, that the glory of God is in the face of Christ. The Atonement-that for Christ's sake God offers forgiveness to all men, that the door to God's love is a wide-open portal. The early church taught and told this; but not just as a story to entertain or inform, not as a puzzle to be solved, not as something to be believed or not, as we please; but as THE story, not only the "greatest story ever told" but beyond any comparison the most important. If you cannot see God in Christ, where can you see him? If you will not take God's forgiveness for Christ's sake, then what right have you to look for forgiveness at all?

Christianity Is a Life

THE readers of the book of Acts will discover that the early Christians were not simply preachers. They lived a new sort of life. The essential thing was that they lived as a family-the family of God. They so lived that few have fully imitated them since.

The way in which Christians treated one another was so different from what the world was used to, that an almost new word had to be used for it.

When Paul went about preaching, a good deal of what he said was about himself. Was this because he had taken the place of Jesus? No, it was the other way around-Jesus had taken his place. That is, what Paul had to tell was not simply the story of Jesus "from Beth-lehem to Calvary," it was not even the story of the Resurrection.

What always aroused Paul's finest eloquence was his story of what Christ had done to him, for him, through him, in him. The Gospel is the power of God, he said to the Romans. And if this were not true, do you suppose the Christian religion could have lasted as long as it

But the telling of this story, and the living of it, is not something the church can leave to the women, or to the preachers, or to "missionary societies." Letting the world knowthe news, the good news, is the business of the whole family of God.

Cepyright 1951 by the Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America. Released by WNU Features.)

A budget salad for budget meals is this nutritious vegetable salad served with Perfection Salad Dressing. Crisp endive, spinach leaves and chicory compose the greenery while decoratively cut carrot slices are added for color.

LYNN SAYS: Select Quality Vegetables By these Characteristics

Asparagus when at its best has straight stalks that are from 6 to 10 inches long, with a fresh, green color. Stalks which are thin, wilted, tough or woody or stalks with loose tips are to be avoided. When green beans begin to bulge they are usually too old to be used. They should be crisp and full with straight as possible.

Favorite foods like macaroni, cheese and deviled ham are served in an unusual way in this hearty salad bowl which can be the main dish for luncheon or supper. Seasonings for this salad include a touch of onion, worcestershire sauce and vine-
