SUPER MARKET

Grocery shopping just isn't like it used to be. I went early today to avoid the crowd, only to find a few hundred others had the same idea. All I wanted was sufficient to carry us through the weekend so I could do the serious shopping on Double-Stamp Day.

My first catastrophe was getting the last available cart. You know, the one with all four wheels permanently fixed so it makes only right turns, even when you want to go straight. This one contained three lettuce leaves and a coupon for a five-piece setting of bone china.

There was a traffic jam by the bread section, which is sandwiched between early squash and the ladies' blouses. Unfortunately, the shelves needed re-stocking at that moment, so I had to back all the way into canned goods to let the delivery man through. Three aisles and 15 minutes later, while I was struggling to lift a gallon bottle of milk which was firmly wedged in, I had to move again to let the same fellow through. In fact, he seemed to follow me all over the store.

Just as I was about to whip around and suggest that he take a coffee break, I came upon the cry cereal section. It was terrible. There must have been at least 346 brands, each in six different sizes of boxes. That decision consumed approximately seven minutes. I couldn't choose between the one with a monster mask on the back and the one containing a scale model of the Goodyear blimp.

The meat department was depressing. The meat department is always depressing, but I was hungry for a good roast, so closed my eyes to the pig feet and the head cheese, and felt my way to the tender aged beef.

Just as I spotted a really good looking cut, the little old lady to my left dived in with both hands, grabbed it and headed for shelter behind the bread man, leaving me with a plastic-wrapped, green-tinted bone costing $1.50 a pound. Perhaps it would do for soup.

One item remained on my list. I weaved up and down every aisle in search of canned milk, but it was not to be found. Ascending trip proved equally in vain. It was not with canned goods, it was not with cake mixes, it was not among miscellaneous. So I cornered a clerk who was stamping blurred prices on the bottoms of egg cartons. He grunted and pointed in the general direction of garden tools. In a last ditch attempt, I found my treasure. It just never occurred to me to look for canned milk in hardware department under the light bulbs.

By now I was exhausted from trying to steer a cart that should have been re-cycled years ago, my temper was at 99 on a scale of 100, and I was in a hurry to get home to mow the lawn before it rained. Of nine check-out lanes, seven were closed, and the express lane was backed up halfway to El Paso.

The couple ahead of me were either preparing for a national emergency or planning to open a store of their own. The fellow in back apparently needed to mow his lawn worse than I did. He kept bumping me with his cart.

As I stepped up to take my turn, I experienced excruciating pain, having carefully rolled the right rear wheel of my basket over my foot, which was inappropriately clad in a worn-out sneaker.

Since crying in public is socially unacceptable, I kicked the cart

Joe W. Laird Family Move to I.P.; She Is to Teach in Hi Sch

Mr. and Mrs. Joe W. Laird, daughter Angela and son David have moved to Iowa Park from Duncan, Okla., and are making their home at 1302 North Fourth.

Joe is an evangelist for the church of Christ; Harriette will teach English in IPHS, beginning this fall. Angela is a sophomore in Oklahoma Christian college of Oklahoma City; David will be in the ninth grade here.

Mr. Laird will not be a located minister, but will work with small churches and will conduct evangelistic services wherever he is asked to do so.

Born April 1, 1916, in Rector, Ark., he was graduated from high school at Ft. Smith. He had been preaching since he was 14 years of age. He attended Abilene Christian college and in 1938 was graduated with the BS degree in business. The past 34 years he has been minister of Oklahoma churches of Christ located at Elk City, Duncan, Comanche, Marlow, Headton, Seminole, Oklahoma City, Altus and Duncan.

Mrs. Laird is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Rogers of Iowa Park. She was born near Abilene, attended high school there and has the BS in business from Abilene Christian college. She taught typing and shorthand at ACC for five years. Taught two years at Bangs, a year in an Abilene high school and two years at Central High near Marlow.

Joe and Harriette were married June 5, 1949 at Abilene. They are both interested in outdoor sports and particularly like to support the local teams in football, basketball and baseball. They enjoy fishing and golfing.

Besides golfing, Joe is somewhat of an accomplished cook. He particularly enjoys making bread and cakes, and has great skill in outdoor trailing.

Up to now, David has shown a great interest in band. His parents hope he will begin soon to take part in more active athletics.

We noticed that Mrs. Laird has quite a resemblance to Mrs. Harrel Sullivan, who happens to be her sister.

A hearty welcome to the Joe W. Laird family. Meet them, you will love them!

and said, "Oh, drat," which frightened the checker, who was still learning to operate a cash register. Limping from the disaster area, I silently swore never again to darken the automatic doors of that or any other grocery store for all eternity.

It wasn't until I pulled into the driveway that I realized I had forgotten to pick up a couple cans of dogfood; and we were completely without. Oh, well. You can't win 'em all.

Bird Lore

by Layette Stankewitz

One of the most popular birds in our area is the Bullock's Oriole and we seem to have an abundance of them this year. The Bullock's Oriole replaces the Baltimore Oriole from the Rocky mountains to the Pacific.

The male is one of our most striking birds in orange and black. He has a wholesome, rollicking song which goes well with his color.

The Oriole's nest is suspended from branches of mesquite, cottonwoods, or other trees from 5 to 40 feet up. The male rarely assists in collecting nesting material but keeps close by cheering and showing much interest in the proceedings.

The female builds the nest in about six days. Those who have seen her at work say that, after carefully selecting a horizontal fork at the end of a high and free-swinging branch, she loops anchor strands over one arm of the "Y." Using strips of bark, bits of twigs and anything else that is handy and suitable, she works at these anchor lines and weaves one side of her hanging nest.

When this reaches the proper length, she repeats the process on the opposite arm of the fork. The rest is inside work—adding more and more strands, and at the same time binding and tucking material already present. She weaves an amazingly tight, even fabric that forms the shell of the nest. All loose ends are tucked in and every knot is tight.

Next she fills the bottom of the nest with a soft cushioning material. Finally, she hops into the nest and uses the round of her breast to mold the shell into its final shape.

"This hanging nest is truly a work of art and one of the many marvels of the bird world. "Who of us could do it, even using our hands?"

H. Carlton Hicks of Iowa Park is enrolled in East Texas State University's co-ordinated vocational-academic education program. As a teacher here, Hicks is developing a program so his students who have special learning problems can get a salable vocational skill and basic knowledge in math, science, English and social studies.

Lions Elect International President

GEORGE FRIEDRICHS

George Friedrichs of Ancey, France, was elected president of Lions International at the association's 55th annual convention in Mexico City, June 28-July 1. Serving as the 56th president of the world's largest humanitarian service organization, Friedrichs leads over 979,000 members in 25,646 clubs located in 147 countries and geographical areas.

His 1972-1973 program stresses the need to increase understanding and cooperation between Lions Clubs through projects in international service. Increased participation by the clubs in the international youth exchange program is among the goals Friedrichs has set for his presidential year.

SHUCKS

by George R. Huckaby

While the Texas delegation led by Dolph Briscoe was stuttering and fumbling the ball at Miami, Wednesday, Illinois was shrewdly timing its vote in order to be the group which put Senator George McGovern over the top as the Democratic nominee for next President of the United States of America.

Our hope is that Texas Democrats will wake up soon and join the rest of the party in restoring our nation to sanity and responsibility toward the people.

Please Save Water

The Mayor of the City of Iowa

Park with the authority and backing of the City Council in regular session on 10 July 1972 declares a state of emergency exists in the amount of water that is available for use from the City Lakes. As of this date, the 13th day of July 1972 it is not permissible to use the water for lawn watering, garden watering or car washing.

If any one is observed using water for any of the above reasons, the City is going to turn the water off for that person. As was stated in last week's paper, residents will be permitted to spot water the shrubbery and roses that need the minimum water to keep them alive.

These drastic actions are taken only until such date as we get the water from Wichita Falls, to prevent having to use the water from Lake Kemp.

This includes every one who uses water from Iowa Park lakes, both inside the City Limits and those living outside of the City Limits.

George E. Trammell
City Secretary

TEENTIMES

by Lisa Bernadette

Now you see him, now you don't: In a time of national bomb threats, teen idol David Cassidy (of Partridge Family fame) was flying to New York from Los Angeles to have a concert at Madison Square Garden. And he was supposed to fly on the airline that was getting all the blame. In the meantime, his Public Relations man had called up my school and asked if a bunch of kids would like to meet David at the airport. So fifty kids went to see David, hoping he Lisa Bernadette would have a safe trip. We went to the gate the man told us to go to and waited.

Then the plane came in. Two girls wanted to faint but didn't. They had stayed there too long and knew if they fainted they'd never get to see David.

Everyone on the plane came off. David Cassidy didn't. Two security guards came over and told us that he was coming in on another airline, at six o'clock. It was now 5:55 p.m.

So we made a mad dash for the other airline's building and got there at 5:59 p.m. One minute to go. Then the hearts broke.

The lady at the information counter said that David's flight had arrived an hour before. And David Cassidy was on it! The two girls finally fainted.

Movie Time: Fans of Robert Redford, be sure to see his new film, The Hot Rock. It's filled with action and thrills, and as usual Redford gives a dynamite performance. But, there's an extra added attraction — George Segal who matches Redford in style, point for point. Don't miss it!

Well, it seems Sean Connery couldn't stay away from his James Bond role very long. He's back, and as cool as ever in Diamonds Are Forever. There are Super Villains and Beautiful Girls galore in this one, but what would a 007 film be without Super Villains and Beautiful Girls?

One thing, though, if you have read the Ian Fleming novel, don't expect to see the same plot in the movie. The only thing they took from the book was the title.

Tips for Teens: With all the problems in the world that need solving, there is still one that seems trivial until it hits you.

That problem is acne, and although no one has been able to do away with it completely, there is a product that comes closer than all the rest.

Fostex soap, used as directed, can help eliminate acne and blackheads, and that my friends is the 100 per cent, uninhibited truth. So pick it up at your local drugstore and give it a whirl.

P.S.—While you're there, ask for medicated Postril cream and don't worry—it's not one of those heavy icky creams. It treats the blemishes while it hides them.

Till next time—amor y paz and remember: Don't compromise yourself, it's the only thing you've got.

—Janis Joplin.

OUR HEALTH

By C. H. Tracy, M.D.

I live in a big dirty city. I consider it essential to bathe three times a day with soap and water, but now friends are telling me this is too much. What is your opinion?

I would be the last one to tell you not to use soap at all, but I do agree with your friends that three times a day is too often. Too much soap and water dries the skin, and can lead to painful chapping and cracking. Excessive scrubbing washes away the skin's protective coating, the natural lubricants which keep your skin moist and youthful. For your face, use a cream or lotion cleanser. These usually remove makeup and accumulated dirt most effectively. Follow up with a freshener, which will serve to keep pore openings in good condition. For all over care, lean on careful grooming (such as use of an effective anti-perspirant) for help. As for bathing, one bath a day should be sufficient, but if you do require two, or better yet, a shower in the morning, a full bath at night, use a soothing therapeutic bath oil such as Alpha Keri in your tub to combat the symptoms of dryness. Alpha Keri will supplement your skin's natural oils and lubricants. It is also available in spray form for use after a shower.

Dr. Tracy

Can you explain why my heart beats faster when I am in the mountains than it does at sea level?

The simple fact is that the oxygen content of the air in the mountains is much less than at the shore. To compensate for this decrease, your heart beats more rapidly and you breathe faster so that your blood can keep the body tissues supplied with sufficient amounts of this vital gas. If you were to remain in the mountains for a longer period of time, your system would adjust to the altitude and your heartbeats and breathing would return to normal. Is vigorous nose-blowing harmful?

It can be. By blowing your nose gently, one avoids injuring the delicate tissue lining of the nasal passageways. Also, avoid compressing the nostrils when starting to blow the nose, for pressure tends to back up in the upper part of the nose and the back of the throat, forcing the mucus into the sinus opening or middle ear. This can result in sinus and/or middle ear infections. Keep this in mind: when blowing the nose, keep the nostrils open, or if desired, one closed ever so slightly.

Monopoly in Our Economy

by Ralph Nader

To his credit, Senator George McGovern is the first serious presidential contender in decades to associate himself with the historic concern over monopoly in our economy. Last September he co-sponsored a bill with Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma (S.2614) to break up giant corporations in monopolized markets. McGovern said in January "The accumulation of corporate power is among the most critical issues to be addressed in 1972. I am preparing a detailed series of recommendations to deal with economic concentration."

During the Wisconsin primary in March, his speeches condemned both ITT and the "shared monopolies" which control more than 40% of all industrial assets. In April he released figures from a Federal Trade Commission study which showed that 100 firms had overcharged consumers by more than 100% in the monopolized area is most favorable.

These data led McGovern to urge that the Price Commission freeze requests for price hikes by these firms.

To the consumer, the impact of collusive or monopolizing corporations is very real. Monopoly market control and political influence add billions of dollars to the prices of gasoline, fuel gas and oil, automobiles, milk, bread, pharmaceuticals and other necessities. Beyond sustaining price inflation, such monopoly power blocks innovation that would increase efficiency and safety and pollution control.

The Republican administration has pursued a policy of weak enforcement of the anti-trust statutes and has encouraged vast direct and indirect subsidies. And it plans even more programs to shield large companies from the competition of small business.

The background for a strong Democratic effort in the anti-monopoly area is most favorable.

Vets Urge Horse Vaccinations

Texas Veterinary Medical Association & Texas Animal Health Commission have issued a joint statement recommending the revaccination of all horses immunized during the encephalomyelitis outbreak of a year ago. Recent outbreaks of VEE in Mexico and discovery of VEE antibodies in a dog and coyote found in Texas influenced the decision.

Weather conditions are right for mosquitoes and other vectors to transmit VEE from an infected animal to one that does not have immunization nor to humans.

The disease is almost always fatal to horses, it was about 40% fatal to young children in South America, and seldom kills adult humans.

Horse owners are advised to vaccinate any horses not previously treated, such as colts born since the epidemic or animals brought into Texas since the 1971 epidemic.

Those who never have appreciated pantomime would quickly overcome their lack of enjoyment of that art if they could see the great Aulds twins put on their act. Kenneth of Archer City and Keith of Iowa Park were the program Tuesday at Lions club.

Their undertaking was to make their fellow Lions laugh and forget their worries about the shortage of potable water facing Iowa Park and her surroundings. We have no idea what K & K sang for their opening number, whatever it was, they did a fine job with all the action which is supposed to go with pantomime. Second number was "Glow, Little Glow Worm" and their listeners glowed in satisfied appreciation.

Too bad they ran out of breath so soon! We could have stood still for another number or two. P.S. Our pun in the first line of paragraph 2 was intended.

Larry, Mickey Report Work in Rhodesia

Mrewa United Methodist Centre Private Bag 62 Mrewa, Rhodesia May 1972

Dear Friends:

It is hard to believe that seven months have passed since we left the United States to begin our work here! What began as a yearning to find our place in God's plan for His work has now led us to immensely exciting and challenging mission field. As many of you have written and expressed a deep interest in the work here, we thought it was time for us to bring you up to date on our activities. We hope to share some of our experiences with you through this newsletter.

After completing our missionary orientation program at Stony Point, N.Y., in late August of last year, we returned to Iowa Park to await our Rhodesian Residence Permits. Near the end of September we received word that the permits had been issued. Then on Oct. 4 we left Kennedy International Air Terminal bound for London. We spent three exciting days there before flying on to Paris for another four days of sight-seeing. At last we boarded a plane for Salisbury, Rhodesia, and arrived in our new land on Oct. 12.

You can well imagine our feelings of anticipation and apprehension when we realized that we were now in Africa! We were fortunate in that our first "assignment" was at Rancho House College in Salisbury. Instead of being thrust immediately into field work, we were given a nine-week orientation to Rhodesia. Other participants in the program were missionaries from the Southern Baptist Convention, the Church of Christ (USA and New Zealand), and the Methodist Church (Great Britain). The major emphasis of the program was study of the Shona language. The nine weeks also contained a considerable amount of variety as we had lectures on the history, land, people, customs and politics of Rhodesia. Our speakers included businessmen, university professors and a former Prime Minister. This period of orientation gave us a good background for our work and allowed us time in which to adjust ourselves to our new situation.

When the Rancho House College course ended on Dec. 18, we moved to the Mrewa Mission to assume our duties. Naturally, the first few weeks were occupied in just "settling in." This was no problem as we found the mission staff to be some of the most hospitable, helpful people we have ever known. We were made to feel that these were friends who were eager to do all they could to welcome us.

Our first Christmas away from home was one which elicited a variety of emotions. There was the expected feeling of loneliness and separation from friends and families. But this soon gave way to the awakening of a fresh challenge within us—the challenge to BE an active part of the Incarnation. With the edges of our excitement worn down somewhat by months of paper work and orientation classes, we suddenly found ourselves confronted by the birth of the Savior. And a new fire of inspiration and determination flamed up within us once again.

Our responsibilities as teachers began on Jan. 27, 1972. That is the date on which the first term of school opened. Again the newness of the situation and the strangeness of the system caused us to have some anxious moments as we began, but the other staff members helped us to find our way and fill our place.

Mickey was assigned two classes, Form I (freshman) needlework and Form III (junior) cookery. The needlework course is being taught for the first time at Mrewa Secondary school, so it has generated considerable interest. The girls have been busy doing embroidery the first term. For their initial project they made aprons with cross-stitch designs. One of the girls' major tasks has been to interpret Mickey's American accent. For instance, on the second day Mickey asked for the new girl in Fort JA to stand up, since she knew that a new student had arrived. And in response half of the class raised their hands! There are 23 girls in the needlework class, and the school has purchased six hand-operated sewing machines for them.

Mickey's cookery class is considerably smaller with only 14 girls. It is not only the students who are learning, however, as Mickey is being introduced to cooking on a wood stove. The domestic science lab has three gas ranges and three wood stoves.

Larry is teaching Form I bookkeeping and Form II (sophomore) commerce and typing. As Forms I and II are the largest, he has 76 bookkeeping students and 66 in commerce and typing. Mrewa is the only United Methodist school and one of the very few schools in Rhodesia which offers commercial subjects. So there is a great deal of student interest in these "practical" courses.

In addition, Larry is Form Master (homeroom teacher) for the Form IB class and staff adviser to the Scripture Union. He is also serving as Student Chaplain and Form III Sunday school teacher. Both of us are class leaders in the Methodist tradition. Students are divided into various classes for a 40-minute period on Friday when we meet with them and discuss religious topics. Mickey's class is Form I girls who are probationary members; and Larry's class is Form IV boys who are full members.

Mrewa United Methodist Centre is located 55 miles northeast of Salisbury, capital of Rhodesia. The Mission grounds contain the Central Primary School (552 students, 24 staff), the Secondary School (258 students, 16 staff), Howard Memorial Church, a small student clinic, a central administration building, housing for mission staff, and boarding for all secondary and some primary students. There are two other missionary couples on the secondary school staff, but all other teachers and mission personnel are Africans. The mission is headed by a capable leader, A. M. Chibanguza.

You are no doubt aware of the political and social problems facing the Rhodesian people. And you may know of the stand our Bishop Muzorewa has taken. Perhaps we can discuss these in future newsletters, but we do ask that you remember this country, its people, its leaders, and its church, in your prayers. And we know that as you continue to support us and to pray for the work here that we shall find strength daily for our service in the name of Jesus Christ in Rhodesia.

Grace and peace to each of you.

Mickey and Larry George

A 14 pounder

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest B. Leatherman, 306 Kathleen, really enjoy the fishing here. They were out Thursday for some sport, and Frances snagged a 14-lb catfish. She was using stinkbait and a rod and reel.

Her catch was so beautiful and so large they came to A & K to buy scales and weigh the fish and had pictures made.

That would be a good meal for a small man, no?
