Hail, ranging from pea to baseball, pelted homes and countryside for more than 10 minutes. One resident southeast of town said stones were three to four inches deep in his yard.

Residents expressed relief after the passing of the heavy clouds, and were then shocked once more with news two or more funnels dealt deadly blows to neighboring Wichita Falls.

Reports of the Wichita Falls disaster were heard by motorists as they returned to their homes from the safety of the high school basement, or other places of refuge.

Wednesday, true to Texas weather, the skies were filled with blowing dust. But no one was complaining.

Wichita Falls disaster strongly affects Iowa Park

Although Iowa Park escaped the devastating wrath of the tornado that leveled portions of Wichita Falls, the resulting effects were felt here almost simultaneously.

Electricity service to Iowa Park was severed at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday, and the loss of power produced a domino effect of other shortages including water and gasoline.

Texas Electric Service Company -- officials said they hoped electricity service to Iowa Park could be restored by late Wednesday af-

Iowa Park residents weathered the circumstances well Tuesday night by using portable electric generators, camping lanterns, candles, flashlights and transistor radios. Once the storm subsided volunteers began pouring into the Iowa Park police and fire departments. Since there was no severe damage here, an undetermined number of volunteers from here traveled to Wichita Falls to help rescue efforts in that city The dispatching of volunteers and heavy eqipment from here was handled by Mayor Johnny Crawford and fire marshal-civil service defense director Bud Thompson. Police Chief Jim Voyles and Sergeant Charlie Whittingstall ap-

Citizen patrolmen could be identified by a white gauze armband.

In addition to the numerous volunteer rescue workers from here, the Iowa Park MuleSkinners pulled their portable cooking facility to Wichita Falls to serve chili to victims and workers

Several persons in Iowa Park opened their doors to Wichita Falls residents who were left homeless, and the First Christian Church helped house and feed victims and collect donated items for victims.

Many residents undoubtedly expected electricity service to be restored Wednesday morning. Others were just thankful to have water.

However, Iowa Park's water supply quickly began to dwindle and by midmorning yesterday Crawford issued a request for volunteer water rationing.

Because of the low supply, city officials were forced to shut off the water supply to homes and businesses about 1 p.m. yesterday. How long would Iowa Park's water supply be rationed?

"Until we run out of water or until we get some power back," Crawford

The power loss caused the Wichita Falls treatment plant to greatly reduce its capacity. Even if Wichita Falls were producing water at its full capacity, there is no way to get the water Iowa Park purchases into the homes here

The electricity shut-off rendered the Iowa Park transmission plant useless. By 2 p.m. yesterday the overhead storage tank near the high scool contained some water, but the ground storage facility on Victoria Street was

The only water supply of any size was in the old water tower located between the post office and city hall.

City workers, Crawford and Alderman Bud Adams frantically worked on the situation yesterday afternoon. They were trying to install a new valve system at the foot of the old tower to allow residents to secure tornado that struck Wichita Falls water from that source.

Until power is restored, there will the few immediate hours following the be no water service to homes or businesses here, Crawford said. When the electricity service is resumed, city officials plan to begin taking water from Buffalo Lake to be treated at the Iowa Park plant.

The electricity outage also shut down operations at Iowa Park's sewer Gasoline service stations were put out of business because their pumps operate on electricity. At least two Iowa Park station operators secured portable electric generators and pressed them into action by Wednesday morning. Lines of drivers stretched more than a city block long.

State National Bank limited its service to a single walkup window.

Another complicating effect was witnessed in telephone service, although most telephone lines were operable to some degree by Wednesday morning

AFTERMATH - What once was a two-story apartment complex is a graphic scene which would be found along the tornado's path in Wichita Falls Tuesday night. This scene shows the remains of a south unit of French Quarter Apartments.

As I See It....

I've seen and been in a lot of disasters in my time, but nothing to compare with the wide spread, total devastation this part of the country sustained Tuesday afternoon.

I'll leave the descriptions to the major news media, since what little I saw was surely only a drop in the

What I would like to comment on, however, is the total outgoing of people wanting to help. If ever one had lost faith in humanity, it could be regained by observing how unselfishly people turned out to do what they could to aid the affected areas.

Moments after the tornado walked hundreds of people were there. working With more than 500 persons known injured, the Red Cross had more blood than it needed less than five hours after the tragic incident.

And Wednesday, more help was arriving Merchants, including many from Iowa Park, were donating hundreds upon hundreds of dollars worth of merchandise, mostly food, to the cause.

It was heart rending.

But problems from the storm will be with us for weeks, months and even years to come.

Think, for instance, how many persons lost their homes in Wichita Falls and Vernon. The first question is how soon will they be back in homes of their own. The wait for building supplies, and then construction, of all the homes and apartments lot will be a long one

It also occured to me, where will all that debris from the homes and businesses be taken? It would surely build a mountain if all placed in one

And I think it would be a conservative estimate to say more than half the retail businesses, at least dollar-wise, in Wichita Falls were wiped out or heavily damaged. Their source of supply to the buying public will be out for a long time. And what of the jobs all those businesses had filled? What will those people do for a living until replacements are built and

How about all the jobs lost in the industrial area on the east side of the city, also?

Because our community is so closely akin to Wichita Falls, we work there, their residents work here, friends or relations live there, Iowa Park will surely suffer almost as dearly as those in the city.

Tuesday, April 10, will be a day to live in our memories the rest of our lives. We will remember it with shock and sorrow. But we can also remember it was a day which brought our community closer together than we've been for many, many years.

Memorial services Saturday for Col. Charles Roby

Memorial services for Col. Charles Roby, who was reclassified from missing in action to killed in action a week ago, will be at noon Saturday in the base chapel at Bergstrom Air Force Base.

Col. Roby was shot down over North Vietnam during the Vietnam War. He was born in Sulfur Springs, Sept. 25, 1928. He was a 1946 graduate of W.F. George High School in Iowa Park and entered the Air Force in 1949. He was a graduate of Flight Test School at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. His classmates included several astronauts.

Survivors include his wife, Martha Ann of Fort Walton Beach, Fla.; two daughters, Carol Ann and Lisa, both of the home; his mother, Mrs. Mae Roby of Iowa Park; two brothers, Harold of San Antonio and James of Austin, both retired Air Force officers; and a sister, Mrs. Hazel Ruth Roberts of Lander, Wyo.

Four burglaries are reported

Iowa Park police were investigating four burglaries this week including thefts of drugs, CB radios and camera and stereo equipment

Police received a report that the home of Dr. Gordon Clark, 304 W. Alameda, had been buglarized around noon Monday.

Buglars gained entry through an unlocked door, the police reported. A variety of drugs were stolen including Valium, Demerol and Mor-

Ocean's oil insures future energy

Offshore drilling, one way in which advanced technology will serve to insure future energy supplies, was stressed during the 23 Study Club's program Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. C.E. Birk and Mrs. Erwin Soell were hostesses for the meeting at Texas Electric Reddy Room.

Mrs. O.E. Lochridge, the leader, emphasized the gravity of the energy situation and the need to speed up offshore drilling by quoting philosopher engineer R. Buckminster.

"We are using up nature's saving account. It has taken nature billions of years to store up the world's oil reserves, and we have managed to consume most of them in a century".

She said that a survey of the situation showed that the U.S.consumed 100 percent more oil and 65 percent more gas than was found last year, and unless there is a drastic change by the middle or late 1980's the world demand for oil will outrun the supply, and prices will soar as nations compete for dwindling supplies.

Mrs. Lochridge said that the objections to offshore drilling had been mainly on the grounds that it posed grave environmental danger to beaches and shore properties.

School choices clear-cut; run-off slated for city

Holliday school board election, however, a run-off election appears immenent for one city council spot.

Officials also are seeking permission to have a special election to fill the mayor's post that would be held in conjunction with the city council run-off

Mayor Pro Tem Jim Virdell explained the situation in a letter to Governor Bill Cle-

"In our city election held April 7, 1979, we had a tie vote for councilman Place 5. The two candidates concerned wish to have a run-off election within 30 days. Our mayor resigned just before the election creating a vacancy for this office. As you may realize, a community of our size does not have allocated funds to hold two elections in addition to the elections already held in his fiscal year.

"The laws, Article 201-B, Paragraph B. indicates we cannot place the mayor's seat in the run-off election without first having the consent of the governor," Virdell stated in the letter to Clements.

Virdell said he spoke with an assistant to the governor, who indicated the governor hopefully will reach a decision before Monday's 7 p.m. regular council meeting.

Red Cross volunteers Tree grafting clinic today ollected $201.48 during grafting pecan trees. The bark is beginning to "slip" which is the signal for the grafting season which will last a little more than a

A pecan grafting and budding shortcourse is set for last Tuesday and today to teach the techniques of these propagation methods. The instruction will be provided by Virgil Woodfin, chairman of the county pecan and fruit growers.

The field work today will begin at 6 p.m. at the Iowa Park Research Center. This time will enable those working at jobs to participate after working hours. There will be ample daylight for the practical work. Each person will be given an opportunity to graft or bud a pecan tree. Participants are encouraged to bring a sharp knife, small hand saw, aluminum foil, one quart plastic bags, and horticulture or electrical tape.

A person needs to have completed the classroom instruction in order to thoroughly understand the procedures for the field work. This field training will be under the direction of Tim Hunter, station superintendent; Wesley Davis, pecan grower; and Virgil Woodfin.

Graft wood or budding wood will be available from Woodfin at the field training for those who desire to graft their own pecan trees. Wood from the most desirable varieties for this area will be available such as Mohawk, Choctaw, and Wichita. The cost will be nominal. Grafting is the best and easiest method of propagation, in my opinion. There are about five things which can happen to budding, and four of them are "bad". Grafts can be placed on branches from 11/2 to 3 inches in diameter. This is not applicable to all situations, but grafting is by far the most popular method of pecan propagation.

Anyone who attends both sessions should have no trouble in grafting their own pecan trees. The favorable moisture situation helps to increase the percentage of successful grafts.

A growing graft is only the beginning. Rapid growing grafts which are unattended will often "blow-out". The growing grafts must be kept pruned back to about 2 feet or they can be braced with a small board nailed to the tree to support the shoot.

Wheat grazing so good, it's a problem

By Don Decker County Agent

Wheat pastures are so good they are causing a serious livestock problem. Bloat losses are running extremely high and producers are having a hard time controlling the problem.

Jess Wright reports the loss of eight head east of Wichita Falls, and Frank Morton has experienced some losses. Jim Schur is wanting to turn some cattle on a field to be grazed out, but he is almost afraid to open the gate on the wheat because of the bloat threat.

Local livestock producers are using a combination of several practices aimed at reducing bloat. Several additives can be used, but getting consumption is the problem. Good results are being obtained by feeding bloat guard blocks or molasses liquid mix containing Polaxalene. The additive is a surface tension. anti-frothing agent.

Other practices which can help is keeping hay available at all times plus salt and minerals. A good method to make dry forage available is mowing strips through the field. As the cattle graze across the field, they will pick-up some of the dry forage in these strips. It is better to apply these practices before the problem

Cattle going on a lush pasture (winter grass) or wheat field must be filled with plenty of hay first. Cattle should be worked onto the fields over a peiod of several days, if possible. Poloxalene granules can be added to grain in a self feeder. The grain is fed at the rate of one percent of the animal's body weight. Any amount of hay or grain consumed reduces the amount of wheat consumed. Antibiotics in feed or blocks do a pretty good job for a while. The bacteria in the rumen seem to become resistant after a short period, and bloating starts

The uniform cotton planting date has been set for May 20 by the county field crops committee. This date of the committee. Cotton growers are being asked to plant their cotton on May 20 or later, as a cultural practice to give natural control of over-wintering bollweevils.

Cotton planted on May 20 or later will begin to square about July 1. Overwintering weevils emerge the last week in May and first week in June. They can survive about 2-3 weeks. The uniform planting date program denies any squares for egg laying. By the time the cotton begins to fruit, the overwintering weevils have

There is only one "hitch" to this program. The cooperation of all growers is essential. A single field of cotton planted early can raise enough weevils to infest the entire community.

It is hard to argue with "success", and last year was an example of excellent results from this program. Our cotton crop made after the August rains. If the weevils had not been eliminated by high mortality due to the cold winter and uniform planting, late generations would have destroved most of the late fruiting cotton.

included the county wheat tour set for May 15. A cotton and grain sorghum tour is set for the latter part of the summer. A soil fertility shortcourse has been scheduled for late August. The committee also made plans to emphasize the overseeding of coastal bermudagrass pastures with small grains. Tom White of Friberg-Cooper and Frank Wolf of Thornberry have been successful with this practice.

The county field crops committee is headed by Fred Dwyer with the membership including Raymond Schroeder, Loys Barbour, Mike Isbell, J.W. Tole, Cecil Jarvis, and Frank Morton. Other members are Larry McAlister, Fred Daume, Rex Wells, Dan Glass, Ralph Harvey, and Otto Malone.

Soil temperatures have been running too low for the planting of grain sorghum and the sudan sorghum grazers. The soil temperature has been between 45 to 50 degrees, 3 inch depth, at 7:00 a.m. for the past several

This situation is expected to change and the soil will probably warm-up rapidly this week. Some sorghum will be planted later in the week as soil temperatures reach 55 to 60 degrees.

The grain sorghum hybrid demonstrations will be planted by Joe Kohler of Punkin Center and Bill and Carl Brockriede of Clara

Church group hears reading

Mrs. Bob Dawson, devotional chairman of the L.L.L. Sunday School class of First Baptist Church, read the story, "The Mouse Wife" for the program Monday evening in a meeting held in the home of Mrs. Steve Lovelady, with Mrs. Alton R. Aunter serving as

Mrs. Dawson suggested that to obtain the full meaning of the story by Rumer Godden one needed to listen with his heart and not just his ears.

Mrs. Hunter presided during a brief business meeting. Mrs. Art Brown, class teacher, read a letter from the Eagle Nest Baptist Mission and the group voted to adopt the mission as a project. Mrs. Joe Singer reported on ministry to a shut-in friend.

Refreshments including some delicacies of France, Mrs. Lovelady's native country, were served to eight members.

CARD OF THANKS

Our hearts overflow with deep gratitude for the many, many acts of kindness and concern extended to us during the unexpected deaths of our loved ones. The prayers, flowers, food, calls, visits, ministry of the Rev. W.F. Williams and the Church of God certainly made our sorrow easier to bear. We hope that we can minister to each of you when sorrow comes as you have to us. God bless all of you.

The families of Ervin, Vicki and Kelli Kenyon.

CARD OF THANKS

Our heartfelt thanks to all our dear volunteers who worked so diligently to make our bazaar a success, to Bud Mercer and Billy James for cooking the turkey, to all the other people for their generous donations. Without you it would be impossible.
