Chamber to purchase scrap metal

The Chamber of Commerce will be buying scrap metal this weekend, as a fund-raising project.

And sellers will be receiving top dollar for their goods, according to Ken Via, chairman of the project.

The Chamber will set up shop in the vacant lot across west from city hall from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and 1-6:30 p.m. Sunday.

Prices to be paid includes: aluminum cans, 45-cents per pound; copper, 55-cents per pound; brass, 45cents per pound; lead, excluding batteries, 10-cents per pound, and radiators, 25-cents per pound.

A truck and scales will be provided by Select Metal Processing. Inc., will be located on the vacant lot and manned by Chamber workers during the sale.

The Chamber of Commerce will be paid a commission on each purchase it makes during the two days.

All purchases will be in cash, Via said.

GAS PUMP FIRE - Iowa Park volunteer firemen quickly extinguished a blazing gasoline pump at Allsup's Thursday night. An electrical short reportedly ignited the blaze. No injuries were reported, but the pump was said to be a total loss.

Fireworks disallowed inside city

With July 4th just around the corner, residents are being encouraged to observe the law prohibiting the setting off fireworks inside the city limits, and to use caution wherever they are fired.

Police Chief Allan Sheffield reminds the public that the city has an ordinance prohibiting the setting off of any fireworks of any type inside

The ordinance lists "firecrackers, topedoes, rockets, Roman candles and other types of explosives commonly

The city council will consider restricting parking on Fourth Street when aldermen meet at 7 p.m. Monday in council chambers.

While there is adequate parkingoff the pavement, many of those

The council for several months has been discussing building a new structure for the Chamber, in exchange for the building the organization now occupies.

Mayor Tim Hunter received a tentative agreement from the Chamber board of directors Monday, and the issue will again be fielded by aldermen at the meeting.

Because grass and weeds are always dry at this time of the year, the prospects of fires being ignited by fireworks' is always great.

If people are going to set off fireworks, officials encourage them to do it at one of the city's two lakes outside of town, Buffalo or Iowa Park.

They should be aimed out over the water.

And after the show is over, people are also encouraged to pick up the debris, and leave the shoreline clean.

'Cotton showers' drop almost half an inch

Other than the extreme humidity they caused afterward, no one complained about the "cotton showers" that fell in the area over the past week.

Virgil Woodfin reported he had measured almost half an inch from the very localized showers; .45 of an inch, to be exact.

Most of the rainfall took place in the early evening last Thursday.

Chamber board okays city's building plan

Chamber of Commerce board of than current, for the city, he said. directors Monday put their seal of approval to a proposal by the city to relocate the office in a new building.

Mayor Tim Hunter met with the directors during their monthly meeting and explained the proposal.

Negotiations between the city and Chamber have been going on much of the past fiscal year, but no contract has yet been signed.

Hunter explained the city's plan is to build a structure of approximately the same floor footage as the organization now has, on the vacant lot west of city hall, and deed building and lot to the Chamber.

In exchange, the city would take possession of the building now occupied by the Chamber.

The exchange would provide space, to be needed more in the future

Office space now used in an old house west of the water treatment plant will be eliminated as the city carries out a project of cleaning up that area, he told the directors.

Hunter had said in an earlier meeting of the city council that the cost of adding onto the city hall would be more expensive than the trade proposal with the Chamber.

The city built the present office building in 1962 and gave it to the Chamber, O.N. Newman recalled. At that time, it was agreed that should the city ever need the space and want to take possession, it would provide an acceptable location to which the Chamber would move.

Newman said the city council minutes, as well as the Chamber's,

Armed with the board's agreement, Hunter said he would bring the issue up to the council at its meeting Monday.

Hunter told the directors that, once the agreement was signed, the city was ready to get started on the project, and the Chamber would be in its new home by Oct. 22.

The date to which he referred is the annual Whoop-T-Do, which will be the climax of the community's centennial celebration.

Hunter said the city would act as its own contractor, utilizing the talent of some personnel, such as a master electrician, to hold down the total cost.

In other business, Chamber President Robert Palmer challenged each director to contact organizations in the community, asking them to hold at least one special project in conjunction with the centennial.

During a discussion about the Chamber's booth in last weekend's "Fallsfest" in Wichita Falls, directors suggested a better location to the main crowd be allotted next year by the organizers, or not participate.

playing on the courts have been parking their cars in the street, prompting the council to consider the action, James Barrington, city administrator, explained.

Council members also will consider a proposal to construct a building for the Chamber of Commerce, purchase land for Little League, improvements at the RAC ballfield, authorizing a purchase or upgrade of the city's computer system, and advertising for proposals for city insurance.

ARTIST'S DRAWING OF NEW CHRIST THE KING CATHOLIC CHURCH BUILDING

Ground-breaking for a 400-capacity Christ the King Catholic Church building is to take place within the next two weeks, according to Rev. Mr. Patrick Burke.

It is to be located just north of the congregation's original structure, which is to be converted into a parish hall and classroom space. It will provide dinner seating for 200.

Total cost is expected to be $320,000. T.A. Litteken will be the general contractor.

A partial second floor will be along the east and north walls to provide a bride's room, additional seating for mothers and infants, a meeting room and choir room, and storage.

Beneath that area on the ground floor will be the foyer, restrooms,

Less than nine years ago, on Nov. 11, 1979, 39 adults attended a meeting at Sacred Heart Church in Wichita Falls to discuss the possibibility of beginning a church community in Iowa Park.

It was decided to request that a mission church of St. Paul's Parish of Electra be established to provide a place of worship and build a parish community. Bishop Cassata granted his permission to Father Richard Beaumont, who was the founding pastor.

Since no funds were available to start a new parish, the first mass was celebrated in the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church. Seventy people attended the Feast of the Epiphany that Jan. 6, 1980.

The parish continued to grow and eventually outgrew the facilities of the Lutheran Church, and a building committee was formed in April from the Catholic Diocese of Fort Worth, the original church was built in two phases.

The first phase was completed by a local contractor, and second phase by two parishioners, and was dedicated Sept. 12, 1982.

Father David Johnson was then pastor.

Mrs. V.I. Woodfin reviewed the last chapter of "The Church Starts Here" Monday for a meeting of the Night BW of First Baptist Church. The group met at the church where Mrs. C.L. McKinnon and Mrs. Homer Blalock served as hostesses.

The setting for the review was Lewisville, Tex. and focused attention on the Lakeland Southern Baptist Church there as it struggles to keep pace with the growth of the nation's fastest growing county.

Mrs. Woodfin stated that the church has dedicated itself to church starting by using unique methods in creating a "divide and conquer" policy. She said that the policy had brought successful results through the efforts of Ron Somers, a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary, and the pastor of the church, who have led the church to launch 20 missions in the north Dallas community since 1982.

She presented Mrs. Eleanor Bell, a volunteer home missionary serving as a teacher in the Houston Baptist Mission, who gave a brief description of the mission which also serves as a food and clothing distribution center.

Mrs. E.T. Patterson directed the period of prayer for missionaries on the birthday calendar for the day, and Mrs. Woodfin conducted the business when a nominating committee composed of Mmes. J.T. Parker, Roy Smith and Patterson was elected.

Sixteen members and two guests, Mrs. Darrell Monday and Mrs. Bell were present.

The table held a brass votive centerpiece that was decorated with bows and greenery. Nuts, mints, punch, napkins and cookies were on either side of the centerpiece.

The registry table, covered with white lace over mauve and decorated with aquamarine mist bows, held a circle of light surrounded by greenery.

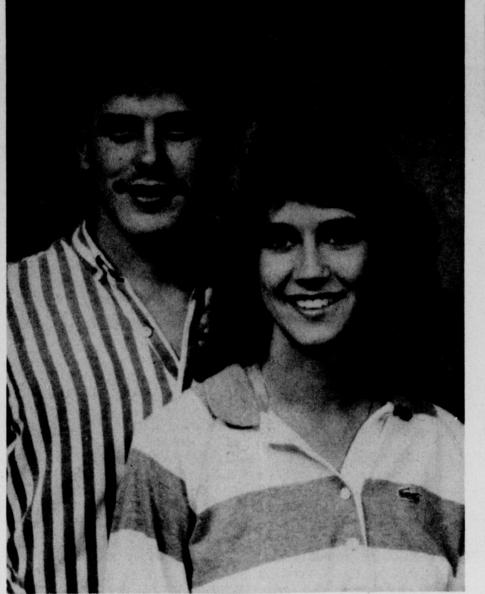

Special guests were Mrs. Keith Aulds, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Bob Reams, mother of the groom, both of Iowa Park.

Hostesses presented corsages in the bride's chosen colors to the honoree, and mothers of the bride-andgroom-elects.

The couple will be married July 23 at Faith Baptist Church.

Woods was selected from "hundreds of applications" submitted to the TEA, according to a letter he received from W.N. Kirby, commissioner of education.

He will join other school principals from across the state July 14-16 in Austin for Texas School Improvement Initiative accreditation and effective schools training.

Supt. Glen Mitchell said Woods' participation in the program would be of benefit to the district, in that information of programs would be available to the local district earlier. and thus be implemented earlier.

The recipes given to us this week by Diana (Mrs. Doug) Collins are all favorites of hers. Some are everyday and some are not so everyday, but each was given to her by someone close, and some have an interesting story behind them.

The recipe for Uncle George's Red Beans is a one of her uncle's, a railroad worker and widower with 11 children. Diana said his beans were famous among his co-workers and family.

The Burnt Sugar Cake recipe was obtained from the cookbook of her Grandma Van's, a cookbook given to her grandmother as a wedding gift at the turn of the century.

Other recipes include Coke Cake, given her by a close friend, the Karo Pecan Pie by her mother, and Cornbread by her mother-in-law.

Mrs. Collins teaches chemistry and physics at Iowa Park High School and is a Mary Kay consultant. She taught at I.P.H.S. from 1972-1976, and returned three years ago.

The former Diana White grew up in Wichita Falls where she graduated Rider High School. She was graduated from Texas Tech Univ., and received her teaching certificate and masters degree in teaching from Midwestern State Univ.

She and her husband, Doug, an electronics instructor at Vernon Regional Junior College Tech Center, have two children, Jim, five years old, and Elizabeth, three.

The family enjoys riding bicycles and plans to ride 50 miles in the Hotter 'N Hell Hundred this summer. They are members of the Family YMCA and of the First Christian Church in Wichita Falls.

and thereas have been a serie that

I've been criticized by many for my stand concerning persons who have contracted AIDS.

I'm perceived as not being sensative to those who contracted the disease through birth or blood transfusion.

Actually, I am sensative to their problem. It was not their fault. But this group is only about one percent, according to reports I've read, of the total number of known AIDS patients.

It's those who caused their dilemmma that get my dander up.

AIDS is a tremendously expensive ailment that is 100% fatal, and treatment to just prolong life is going to break this nation's finances.

AIDS has been self-imposed by the overwhelming majority of those who have contracted the disease, either through homosexuality or sharing needles to inject drugs.

Millions of Americans already have been identified as AIDS carriers, and the number that is expected to be inflicted by the turn of the century is staggering.

The public is expected to pay for

In a little over three months the world will gather for an anticipated event.

The Olympics, a celebration of mankind, by mankind. Hundreds of athletic events involving thousands of athletes from all races. That is what the games are about.

The Olympics, a major battleground of world powers on a political level. That is what the games are all about.

Politics and boycotts are nothing new for the games, which began their modern version late last century. Petty jealousies, differing ideologies, even attitudes concerning the eligibility of athletes, have troubled the games from their beginnings. But recently happenings at the world gatherings over the last 16 years have become serious in the extreme, even deadly at times.

The games at Munich turned from a showcase event of athletes, into a grim school for terrorists. People died. The games may never be the glorious event it was before.

After that, each session of the games seemed plagued with one nation dropping out in protest, only to have another boycott the next edition in spite. Once again, the games suffered. Didn't get Ace Connell, local Chevrolet dealer, to give me a notorized statement on this story, but it's so far fetched that I'm inclined to believe it.

Ace says he was fishing over the week end on the Brazos River near Mineral Wells. He had just bought a 55-cent plug and was ready for action.

On the first and second cast, Ace didn't get any action, but on the third try all sorts of things started happening.

First, his plug got hooked up under the water. Not wanting to lose his 55-cent purchase that quickly, he took off his shoes and socks and started to go into the water for it.

No sooner than he had stuck his right foot into the water, something hit it. As a flash thought, it felt like he had stuck his foot into a bear trap.

He yanked it out of the water. Hanging on to his foot was a threefoot-long catfish! He said the fish slipped off before he thought about grabbing it.

I looked a little doubtful about the story as he was telling it to me, and he immediately pulled off his shoe and sock. Sure enough, he had some long scratches on both the top and the bottom of his foot. When he returned home, he contacted his doctor and asked if he should take a shot for tetanus, or something, for a fish bite on his foot. After a long silence, the doctor said, "No, just put some iodine on "You know," Ace said, I'll bet the doctor had never prescribed for a fish bite on the foot before." TOM MOONEY McGregor Mirror their care in hospitals.

The Dallas Gay Alliance sued Parkland Hospital in Dallas last month, claiming that facility was not administering drugs to victims quickly enough.

Or as they put it, the waiting list was too long.

And sure enough, they found a judge who went along with them, and he issued an injunction against the hospital.

Our nation has its hands full these days, attempting to find ways and means of caring for our elderly, who are living longer. The additional expense of costly treatments for drug addicts and queers is more than we can afford.

While we're trying to care for the people who have become inflicted with AIDS, we need to take a stronger stand against its cause and spread. Education isn't going to do it.

Like drugs, as long as there is a demand, there's going to be a supply. AIDS carriers will continue to grow in numbers.

Preachers could make a strong case to their congregations that the spread of AIDS is God's wrath against the lifestyles many have adopted the past three decades.

Drugs and free love grew out of the 1960s, and I'm of the opinion that neither finds justification in the Bible.

Gives thanks

Another Father's Day has past and remembering that over the years there has been many presents given and received with love. In my case the three most loved and cherished presents (two sons and a daughter) were given by my wife. They are why I'm so proud on Father's Day and now those three have presented a total of eight more presents making this Father a Grandfather every day of the year. So now I can look forward to the time I'll not only be a father and grandfather but a Great one.

DELBERT WAITS TURNS OVER VAN KEYS TO CHIEF ALAN SHEFFIELD ... for use by Iowa Park Police Department.

Ma Bell gives van to police department

Iowa Park Police Department was the recipient this week of a van, compliments of Southwestern Bell Telephone.

The company has a program of turning over vehicles still considered usable, but ready for replacement, to deserving organizations requesting them.

Bell representative Delton Waits turned the keys over Monday to Chief Alan Sheffield, who said it would be used for a dual purpose: crime scene and crime prevention.

Once the interior is converted with cabinets, the unit will have in it all the equipment necessary for investigating the scene of a major crime.

Sheffield said it would also be used to display at schools and other crime prevention, making it both functional and "installing community pride."

The van will be repainted and striped.

Several items will be needed for its use as a crime scene vehicle, however.

Sheffield is seeking donations of equipment, monies and/or labor from any group or organization to assist in converting it.

Some of the items needed, he said, are a generator, portable flood lights, extension ladder and ladder holder rack, and carpentry work to install cabinets.

Once equipped and a radio is installed, the unit could also be used in case of an emergency, such as serving as a command post should the struck by a tornado or other disaster.

"We urge any organizations or groups in Iowa Park to consider this as a project worthy of their efforts and funding," Sheffield said.

Church

The present church facility, which doubles as a parish hall and religious education for youth and adults, has a capacity of 165, and the average Sunday attendance is now 245, with over 75 children enrolled

All of this was beyond the control of the ruling body, namely the International Olympic Committee. They simply put the events together and invited the world. The rest was out of their hands.

That is until the Games of '88. An uninterested person could see the signs of disaster. The athletes of the world are in serious danger. The games have been scheduled to take place in a part of the world which could blow up at any minute.

Seoul, Korea is a modern country, a show-place for capitalism. It is also bordered by a fanatical state jealous of its success and committed only to its own set of questionable values.

North Korea has passed the word. They want the games to fail, they want South Korea to fall. They will do anything, including mass murder, to reach their goals.

South Korean officials, of course, have vowed that security will be maintained, and that no one is in danger.

To back this up, they have spent millions of dollars. They have designed a contingent force comparable to some small countries' armed forces.

Yet all it will take is one dedicated nut case to slip by one lax guard, and hundreds could die.

I usually look forward to the Olympics. The feats of individuals and team athletes are exciting. The exchange of ideas between cultures and nations is educational.

But I am beginning to dread the coming games. The risk they pose is not worth the gain.

The IOC should seriously consider cancelling the games, and should seek a permanent neutral site for their continuation.

I know many will say that can't be done. We cannot afford to let these fanatics order our lives. We must stand up to their tyranny and hold the games. It's the principle, the face saving, that counts in the long run.

That is simply not so. It is a problem which could be stopped before one is hurt, or thousands killed. It just makes sense.

Oh well, the games are set, and the site is Seoul, and I hope everything goes off without a hitch. LYNN BRISENDINE Brownfield News

TRAILS AND TREES 1 PETER 1:6,7; JAMES 1:2-4

A boy and his father hiked into the mountains. They took shelter from a storm in the lee of great boulders that lay like sleeping giants close to the crest of a lonely ridge. Looking upward, they saw the wind lay its mighty hands on a pine that towered from the summit. Savagely, the wind tore at the tree and shook it violently. The boy thought the pine would be torn to pieces. The full fury of the blast of wind caused the pine to shudder and sway

'Storms are an old story to that tree," said the father. "The strongest trees are always those that have weathered the

"The strongest trees are always those that have weathered the most gales. Besides, the question is not what is happening to the tree, but what is happening in the tree." It doesn't matter what happens to us, but what happens in us. One's character is tested by everything that happens to him - he becomes weaker or stronger. The test is not nearly so important as the result of the test. The old pine is safe because it resisted the first storm years ago and has kept on resisting. It gets stronger all the time. Because of what has happened in it, nothing bad can happen to it. So also is when a stumblingblock to others may become a stepping stone to you when sorrow and misfortune are properly understood you when sorrow and misfortune are properly understood.

Elderly should be wary of promoter schemes

Retirees living at home on a fixed income often become the target of schemes that take advantage of senior citizens' desires to stay ahead in the race against inflation's erosion of their buying power.

Too often they wind up bewildered, disillusioned and defrauded of their monthly allotments or life savings.

Particularly enticing are ads offering work at home, from addressing envelopes, to knitting baby bootees, to raising worms. Regardless of the specific come-on, the promoter of a work-at-home scheme never provides regular salaried employment, requires money for instructions or merchandise before telling how the plan operates, and falsely assures guaranteed markets and a huge demand.

Worried about their health, many seniors are easy targets for disreputable hucksters that promise cures for cancer, arthritis, deafness, and other plagues of old age. Not only are such promises without foundation, but they often deter the elderly from getting legitimate medical help for chronic problems.

Assessing the cost of living in their present residence, many retirees erroneously assume that they can live better and cheaper somewhere else. There are, indeed, financially sound, carefully planned land developments, retirement homes and condominiums for senior citizens.

Unfortunately, there are even more real estate swindles involving land sold sight unseen to naive older Americans who believe that a halfacre lot in the middle of a desert somewhere is an oasis when it is actually only a mirage.

The elderly are susceptible, too, to flim-flam schemes which promise them something valuable "free."

Pyramid sales clubs, chain letters, strangers who offer to share money they've found, sale of certificates for "free" vacations, and contests that award "free" prizes if the "winner" buys something else all fall under this heading.

To avoid being taken advantage of, senior citizens need to face up to their limitations and vulnerabilities. If, for example, their eyesight is not what it used to be, they may be tempted to skip over the fine print in a home repair contract.

A wise resolve, under such circumstances, would be to get someone else -- a son, daughter, neighbor, or trusted friend, to read every business document before making a decision on whether or not to sign it. Similarly, if physical informi-ties limit their mobility, the elderly ought to compare quality and price of products sold door-to-door with similar merchandise or services available elsewhere in the community. Many stores have telephone ordering and home delivery, making reliance on door-to-door sales unnecessary.

A special warning: senior citizens, like other segments of the population, should check with the Better Business Bureau before ordering anything from a mail-order catalog. Delays, non-delivery of merchandise, and products that do not perform as advertised are frequent complaints about the mail-order industry. Although many catalog operations are legitimate, others are a continuing vexation.

By getting a second opinion before making a major decision involving the expenditure of money, the elderly can forestall the majority of their consumer problems.

Cryovac relocates plant at Duncan

Operations are scheduled to begin this month for the relocated packaging equipment business of the Cryovac Division of W.R. Grace & Co., at the company's North American headquarters at Duncan, S.C.

Last July, Cryovac President Bill Sturgis announced the transfer of the business from Womburn, Mass., during the company's 25th anniversary celebration of the location of the headquarters in South Carolina.

When the operation is at full capacity, about 150 people will be employed in the building. At startup 100 employees will be working there, most of whom were formerly working in the headquarters building in the Cryovac complex.

"We will be able to include customer service and administrative personnel in this building, in addition to those who will be involved in development and assembly," said John Warner, director of Packaging Equipment Systems for Cryovac.

This segment of Cryovac business had operated in Woburn since 1960. "We wished to combine the research and development, custom equipment, sales, and inventory in one building," Warner said. "Another division of Grace had need for a manufacturing facility in the Woburn area. We decided to go ahead and move this operation to our headquarters here because it made so much sense to do so."

Cryovac is one of the nation's largest manufacturers of packaging materials for the food and non-food industry with plants in Iowa Park, Simpsonville, S.C., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Mississauga, Ontario, Canada, in addition to the headquarters in Duncan.

Additional plants in Reading, Pa. and Indianapolis, Ind., produce foam trays for the meat and vegetable industry.

The company also manufactures certain specialty equipment used in the packaging industry with its pack-

Operations are scheduled to bethis month for the relocated packment made by other supplies as well.

The packaging equipment operation has always worked closely with engineers at the Duncan and Simpsonville operations. "In the past we have had to send drawings and engineering specs to Woburn, where additional work had to be performed. Now we are able to have all of the work done right here. It makes it more efficient when the designers are able to work directly with the engineers and people on the floor of the plant," Warner said.

Engineering and administrative personnel are located in the building which formerly housed Grace Distribution Services. Located in the new building are an extensive model shop operation, facilities for training those who will be using the finished equipment, an area for sales demonstrations, as well as a large cold room for customers to see equipment work under actual on-the-job conditions.

"Having the cold room in which we can demonstrate to our customers exactly how the equipment and packaging process works under on-the-job conditions is a real benefit," Warner said. "Since so much of the packaging of food takes place at around 40 degrees, it is important to see the equipment function at that temperature range."

Lockwood-Greene Engineers of Spartanburg designed the new building and renovations at the Duncan facility. The expansion project construction costs totaled $6-million. York Construction Co. was general contractor for the site. About 20,000 square feet of existing space was used for the new facility and 115,000 square feet was added for the plant, warehousing, training area and research and development areas.

The move of the operation to the Duncan headquarters, where all functions in the development of the packaging equipment systems can be done in close proximity, is a tribute to the training programs available in South Carolina and in the Spartanburg and Greenville areas.

"This situation would have been a natural one when the Duncan headquarters was built in 1962," Warner said. "I imagine that the technical labor force wasn't available then. Because of the improvement in the availability of people with the requisite technical skills and education to perform the jobs we have, we are in a position to hire skilled people in the local market."
