of members will be published after the auditions. First meeting will be April 1.

New Slant in Offshore Drilling

As many as 60 wells will be drilled from this single platform to be built in the Santa Barbara channel, Calif., by Sun Oil Co. — DX Division. The offshore platform features a tilted rig (see arrow) for drilling directional wells to shallow oil zones. Deep producing zones will be tapped by conventional drilling from the same offshore platform.

TULSA, OKLA. — The most modern methods of preventing water pollution while producing oil are being designed into the offshore platform which the DX Division of Sun Oil Co. will erect off the coast of Santa Barbara, Calif., this spring.

Instead of a forest of derricks, each with a potential for spilling oil, numerous wells will be drilled from a single platform to be built in 190-foot of water.

The structure, officially designated Platform Hillhouse, will be located on a tract leased from the Federal government last year for a bonus of more than $38,000,000 by a four-company combine composed of Sunray DX, Superior, Marathon and Sun Oil companies. Since the original leasing, Sun and Sunray have merged, and the project is being operated by Sun's DX Division with offices in Tulsa, and Ventura, Calif.

As many as 48 deep holes and 22 shallow wells can be drilled, which will have a helicopter landing pad and emergency living accommodations for 14 men.
