Gas Company Victor In Biggest Rate Case Wins Nine Others

Lone Star Gas Company's victory in the famous gate rate case decided in its favor by the United States Supreme Court is the climax to a long series of court victories by the company, according to company officials. Since 1929 the company has won nine cases that have reached final decision.

In the present case, after six years of exhaustive investigation by the Texas Railroad Commission and the Courts, the company has established the fact that the railroad commission's order reducing its rate from 40 cents per 1,000 cubic feet to 32 cents was unjust and confiscatory. The Supreme Court sustained the verdict of a jury in the district court at Austin which held that the rate ordered by the commission was unfair and has returned the case to the Court of Civil Appeals for judgment accordingly.

This case, started by the railroad commission in 1932, was the one in which the commission assailed the company's advertising, laying down a policy which virtually would have prevented the company from advertising had it been upheld. While the commission did not eliminate the company's advertising expense in this case, it inferred that most of its advertising was for political purposes and stated as a positive policy that only the local distributing companies should advertise and not the Lone Star Gas Company.

The Supreme Court, according to company attorneys, in effect held that since the jury as the trier of the facts found the commission's order confiscatory upon the conflicting facts, the Court of Civil Appeals could not overturn the jury's verdict on the ground that the company had failed to properly segregate its Texas and Oklahoma property.

The High Court further held that the evidence was sufficient which the company introduced in support of its claim that the commission's rate was confiscatory. The court held that the gas company had by appropriate evidence shown the commission's order to be confiscatory, that the State practice the Court of Civil Appeals was not empowered to substitute its finding for the jury and trial judge upon conflicting evidence, and that therefore the case should be remanded to the Court of Civil Appeals for a judgment accordingly.

The other major cases won by the company since 1929 involved rates in Fort Worth, Royce City, Wichita Falls and Oklahoma, and regulatory issues in Sherman, Wichita Falls and Fort Worth.

LESSON

Lesson for June 5

SERVING BY PERSONAL DEVOTION TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 14:3-11, 27-31. GOLDEN TEXT—She hath done what she could. Mark 14:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Mary's Present to Jesus

JUNIOR TOPIC—Mary's Love Gift. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Showing Our Love to Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Heart of Christian Service.

"The love of Christ constraineth us" (II Cor. 5:14) was the all-sufficient moving force back of the greatest life of service rendered by any man. It is this personal devotion to the One whom we love "because he first loved us" (I John 4:19), which makes Christianity "different from all other religions. Christianity alone acts through this natural and deep hunger of mankind with a personalized religion which can be a satisfying joy and pleasure. Yet at this point Christians fall the most and make difficult the work of serving Jesus. They see religion as a job to be done, a form to be observed, a duty to be fulfilled" (W. R. King).

We need to renew that devotion to Christ which expresses itself in true worship. Prayer is too often asking for things; praise, thanking for things (unless we become so engrossed with them that we forget to return thanks); and worship, which is a coming to God in adoration and thanksgiving for what He is rather than what He can give, is forgotten. Our Heavenly Father wants us to show love toward Him. The act of Mary was pure personal devotion and worship, and its fragrance lives to this day.

I. Wasted—But Eternally Saved (vv. 3-9).

The dark hours of betrayal and death were before our Lord. All around Him was hostility. Even in the inner circle of the disciples there was misunderstanding and bickering. Mary (to be distinguished from the sinful woman of Luke 7) with the quick intuition of an understanding woman's heart knew what He was passing through, and with a magnificent act of love stood by Him in the fellowship of His sufferings. Dr. Morgan points out that it was "an impulsive act . . . born of the prodigality of love daring not to calculate." In the words of verse 9, Jesus declared that the gospel and that which this woman had done were to "stand side by side with each other forever. That keen intuition of love, that uncalculating outpouring of love, was Godlike, and an act in fellowship with the act of God by which a world is redeemed."

Judas, who was a thief, said she had wasted money that should be used for the poor (John 12:6). The other disciples thought well of his argument and murmured against her. But Jesus commended her. To be thrifty and frugal is commendable, but there are times when the heart should speak without being silenced by the drawing of purse strings. Many a home needs to learn the lesson of Proverbs 15:17: "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." Life takes on new meaning when love is free to express itself in unmeasured sacrifice. The same lesson needs to be learned in the church, where no end of harm has been done by logical penny-pinching when there should have been some holy abandon in spending for the Lord's work. Mary's gift seemed to be wasted, but it has been eternally saved.

II. Saved—But Eternally Lost (vv. 10, 11).

Judas betrayed Jesus for thirty pieces of silver. He "made" some money. The fact that he did it by betraying the Son of God may be worse in degree but is not worse in kind than the betrayal of the youth of our land by those who make merchandise of their eternal souls. A recent news item from England declared that church organizations were making money out of properties publicly known as centers of prostitution. The leaders deplored the situation, but said they could not prevent it without losing the income of the property. Why not lose every cent rather than be party to the betrayal of any man or woman.

III. Bold Words—But Weak Actions (vv. 27-31).

Verses 12-26 tell of the gathering of the Lord and His disciples for their last passover and for the establishment of the Lord's supper. As they left the sacred meeting and went into the Mount of Olives Jesus foretold His betrayal and His coming denial by the disciples.

Peter, quick with his tongue, and bold in spirit, spake swelling words of devotion and assurance. Sadly the Lord foretold his threefold denial of that very night. Again Peter and all the disciples declared their willingness to die with Him. They undoubtedly meant what they said, but reckoning without the weakness of the flesh they failed Him.

The lesson that is written large in this story for you and for me is, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (I Cor. 10:12).

Summer's Emancipation

—Or the above white and t-male ensemble of bathing suit, robe and Costa Rican cork clogs with three-inch soles and heels.

Back in 1895 the outdoor girl wore costumes like these, very unsatisfactory from a health standpoint. This was the first basketball squad at Smith college, when competitive games for girls were still very much a novelty. Scantier costumes would have been frowned upon then.

Amazing Women
Private Radio Jokes
By Virginia Vale

CAROLE LOMBARD and Clark Gable really ought to go into the dressmaking business. They co-operated on a sports jacket which Alice Marble, the United States' Number One woman tennis player, will wear when she steps out on the courts of Wimbledon, England, to battle for a championship. Carole designed the jacket, (she's Alice Marble's best friend) and Clark had his tailor make it. It's a knockout. And Alice, tall, blonde and pretty, will wear it.

Remember "Dawn Patrol," in which Richard Barthelmess starred, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., after pleading and fighting for the role, played the second lead so ably that he stole the picture and proved himself a good actor? Well, it's to be made again, with Errol Flynn, Patricia Knowles and Basil Rathbone in the leading roles.

Alice Brady has had years on the stage and years in the movies, but when you hear her on the radio you may be sure that she is nervous. The microphone simply scares her into such a state of nerves that the pages of her script have to be pasted on cardboard.

Encouraged by its success in building Ginger Rogers up as a dramatic star, RKO is going to try to do the same thing with Ruby Keeler, the dancer who is Mrs. Al Jolson in private life. You'll see the first results of the new campaign in "Mother Carey's Chickens." With Fay Bainter and Ralph Morgan also in the cast, the girl will have to act or be utterly swamped.

Bob Ripley has discovered, in his search for "Believe It Or Not," that it is three and two-thirds times as easy for a man to become an amazing person as it is for a woman to do so. He finds that amazing women are just as interesting as men, but rarer. The only reason he can give is that they don't have as much chance to distinguish themselves as men do.

The first thing any of us know, someone is going to form an organization to protest against radio programs which are awfully amusing to the audience in the broadcasting studio, but pretty dull to those who just tune in, and can't see what is going on. Eddie Cantor is one of the worst offenders. After all, radio is supposed to be heard, not seen. And I know of more than one instance in which a listener, at home, swore never to buy the sponsor's product because it was so annoying to hear the laughter and not know what was funny.

Airplane Technique. A safety belt, similar to the kind now worn by airplane passengers, designed for use in automobiles, has just been announced, says the National Safety Magazine. Made of heavy canvas, the manufacturer says the belt will prevent people being thrown from their seats when in collision, providing speeds are not in excess of 55 to 60 miles per hour. Adaptable to all passenger cars, installation can be made without deraiging the interior.

Vitamin A Needed as Health Weapon

Functions as Preventive of Certain Infections

By EDITH M. BARBER
NATURE advertises with a liberal use of color the essential vitamin A. Her favorite pigments are green and yellow, although there is a splash of red.

Among the animal foods, liver, egg yolk, butter, cheese, cream, salmon and fish oils are the most highly endowed with vitamin A. Among the vegetables we find all salad greens, green peppers, peas, green beans, carrots, sweet potatoes, yellow squash and tomatoes as good sources.

As amounts are always small, the advantage of choosing a number of these foods daily is obvious. Variety in the diet not only makes meals more interesting, but generally more nutritious.

Cheese Omelet. 1 cup milk, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons cornmeal, 1 cup grated cheese, 2 eggs

Scald the milk in a double boiler, add the salt and cornmeal. Stir until thick, then cook for 30 minutes, add the cheese and stir until melted.

Spanish String Beans. 1 pound string beans, 1 large onion, chopped, 1 clove garlic, 2 tablespoons bacon fat, 2 cups cooked tomatoes, 1/2 cup tomato catsup, 1 green pepper, chopped, Salt

Slice beans. Brown onion and garlic in bacon fat. Add beans, cover closely and cook five minutes. Add tomatoes, catsup and green pepper and season to taste. Cook slowly until tender.

Cranberry Salad. 2 cups cranberries, 1/2 cup water, 2 cups sugar, 1 package lemon gelatin, Salad dressing, 1/2 cup boiling water, 1 cup chopped celery, 1/2 cup chopped walnut meats, Lettuce

Cook the cranberries and water until the berries burst. Add sugar. Dissolve the gelatin in boiling water and when thoroughly dissolved add to cranberries with the celery and nut meats.

Spanish Souffle. 2 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 4 eggs, 1 1/2 cups tomato pulp, 2 jars cottage cheese, 1 tablespoon onion juice, 1/2 teaspoon salt

Melt butter, add flour and when well blended add milk slowly, stirring constantly. Let cook one minute. Remove from fire and beat in one egg yolk at a time.

Lemon Blanc Mange. 1/2 cup sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 cups boiling water, 5 tablespoons cornstarch, 1/4 cup cold water, 1/2 cup lemon juice, 2 egg whites, beaten until stiff

Add sugar and salt to boiling water. Dilute cornstarch with cold water and combine mixtures. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly, and boil five minutes.

Baked Salt Mackerel. Soak mackerel overnight. Drain, dredge well with flour and pepper. Put in a greased pan and half cover with rich milk.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"WHAT'S a person to do about a brick mantel I'd like to know," writes Mrs. L. D. K. "No use to tell me it's out of style. I know that. But is there any hope, short of spending a lot more money than I have to spend."

"I simply don't know where to start. But I do want to do something and would be very grateful if you would give me a plan that I could follow. We have to use our old furniture and I'll have to make the new slip covers or curtains myself. We can have the walls repapered and the woodwork painted. And I'd like to get new accessories but hate to buy at random."

There are lots of things to do about that mantel. The easiest and cheapest is to paint it the color of the woodwork. Since the room is sunny you could use light gray for walls and woodwork.

We'd have the sofa in a fine deep red with a pair of round cushions in a gray textural fabric. The two wing chairs might be pleasant in red with a deep rope fringe of gray around the bottom (this fringe could go on the sofa too). One of the other chairs we'd like in dull gold, and one in a gray herringbone slip cover.

An Old-Fashioned Mantel. "Several years ago you helped me do over my living room and we loved it," writes M. P. "But now we've moved and so here I am again knocking at your door. I enclose a rough diagram of the room, also a sketch of the old-fashioned mantel which is rather a headache because of the fancy shelves above it."

"We now have an eggplant broadloom rug, a barrel chair in eggplant damask, a love seat with an ivory brocade covering and a green and gold antique frame, a rust damask sofa, odd furniture in walnut, lamps in white, some framed water colors and two rather nice etchings, and gold candlesticks and pedestal bowl to go in front of the mirror on the mantel."

To begin with, we'd have the walls papered in white with a gold design. And paint the woodwork white, including all the fireplace except the brick part which would be better painted black.

Add sugar and salt to boiling water. Dilute cornstarch with cold water and combine mixtures. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly, and boil five minutes.

Soak mackerel overnight. Drain, dredge well with flour and pepper. Put in a greased pan and half cover with rich milk. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit), about 15 minutes until tender.

WHITE MOUNTAINS

Looking Up at the Old Man of the Mountain.

"Second Greatest Show on Earth" Barnum Called New England Range

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

SINCE 1866 visitors to the White mountains have ascended Mount Washington, New England's highest eminence, to scan the sea of northern New Hampshire peaks. Soon another grandstand will be available when the new tramway to the top of Cannon mountain which will whisk passengers 2,025 feet above Franconia Notch begins operation.

"This is the second greatest show on earth," P. T. Barnum said when he stood on the summit of Mount Washington and scanned the jumble of peaks and ridges of the White mountains, spreading from the wasteline of New Hampshire to Canada and from its Maine border to the Connecticut valley, which separates this Granite state from Vermont.

Many New Englanders, dyed-in-the-wool White mountain fans who insist that nowhere has nature endowed a region with such fascinating heights, on first thought questioned Barnum's judgment. To them, the White mountains' show is second to none.

However, when they recalled the showman's love for his trained animals, gaudy trappings, and strange creations of nature that drew millions into his acres of canvas, they felt that his exclamation was the highest praise.

Origin of the Name a Mystery.

How and when the White mountains got their name is as mysterious as many of their often-told legends. "White mountains" appeared in a manuscript as early as 1672; and even before that time they were called the "White hills" by mariners on the Atlantic, 60 miles away, for whom they formed an important landmark.

To modern eyes, too, the name seems apt, whether it be derived from the white mist that often hangs over the higher peaks, from the whitish-gray effect of the sun upon rocks of the mountain tops above the timberline, or from the snow that normally covers the peaks of the Presidential range for eight or nine months of the year.

The White mountains are divided into two distinct areas.

Between Plymouth on the south and the vicinity of Gorham on the north is the high mountain region where every year more than two million men and women enjoy testing their leg muscles among New England's highest peaks, motoring on excellent highways, and utilizing the scores of recreational facilities, or just looking up from spacious hotel verandas toward the lofty emminences sweeping from quiet valleys.

Beyond Gorham is a challenging wilderness with Dixville notch its crowning glory and Berlin its only large population center. Here is the paradise of the sportsman searching streams and lakes for trout, salmon, pickerel, horned pout, perch, and small-mouthed bass. The forests shelter bears, deer, and ruffed grouse.

It is the high mountain area that has been the White mountains' chief lure to vacationists for more than a century.

Praised by the Great.

"We know our mountains are not the highest in the East," a resident recently remarked to a visitor. "Mount Mitchell in North Carolina and several peaks in the Great Smoky Mountains National park slightly top Mount Washington. But the impressions of Hawthorne, Whittier, General Grant, Webster, Mark Twain, Winston Churchill, and scores of other men outstanding in politics, literature, and the arts of their day certainly warrant the enthusiasm of those of us who see the White mountains in every mood."

"But Grant came to the mountains for relief from hay fever," said the visitor.

"That is true, but he, like many others, then and now, came here without knowing the mountains, and left with an indelible impression of their lofty summits, their tree-clad slopes, their cascades, lakes, and scenic curiosities, and their legends that have inspired multitudes of artists, writers, and just plain people."

Darby Field, a son of Erin, was the first man to conquer the heights of Mount Washington, highest peak in the White mountains. It thrusts its summit 6,288 feet above the sea and a mile above the valleys at its base.

It was just 22 years after the Mayflower had deposited its human cargo on the shores of Massachusetts when Field struck out from the coast on one of his many trips into the unknown wilderness that lay immediately behind colonial villages.

Some settlers feared to wander far from their settlements, but Darby Field was one of those bold adventurers for whom even the hard life of the colonist was too tame. He was accompanied by two Indian guides. On a June day in 1642, Field stood on the summit of Mount Washington.

As the Colonies grew and demanded wood for building, for paper, and for other manufactures, lumbermen carelessly swung their axes over the White mountain slopes and stripped them of their trees. All but a few thousand acres of primeval forest were cut over.

The forests one sees today are largely second growth, but no longer are they in jeopardy.

"Great Stone Face"

Mount Washington is admittedly the dominating feature of the White mountains and nearly every visitor to northern New Hampshire hopes to stand on its summit. But if your time is short and storm clouds thwart that hope, there are scores of other features that are well worth a ramble among the heights.

Chief among these is the Profile, popularly known as the "Old Man of the Mountain," or as Hawthorne's "Great Stone Face," peering from the rugged granite ledges of Profile mountain above the highway through Franconia notch.

It was a man's appetite for partridge for breakfast that led to the discovery of the Profile in 1805. Nathaniel Hall was a member of a road-building crew. Early in the morning he shouldered his gun and left camp.

With only a well-browned partridge on his mind, he silently crept along the shore of a small lake, his eyes penetrating the undergrowth. For some reason unknown to Hall he looked up—and for a moment was stunned by "the most wonderful face" he had ever seen.

News of the discovery spread rapidly over New England. The road Hall was working on was pushed through the notch. Men and women came on horseback, by stage, carriage, and cart. The popularity of the Profile was one of the factors that influenced the building of a railroad into the Franconia region and the erection of the famous Profile house, since destroyed by fire.

Strange Facts

Night Worker Wilts at 90°

WHY do expensive gardenias wilt and drop their blossoms when grown in greenhouses? The common garden varieties, grown out of doors in warm climates, keep their blossoms fresh until picked. In mid-winter when they bring the highest prices the sweet scented white blossoms often fall from their stems before they can be shipped from the greenhouses.

Curtis Keyes discovered gardenias work in two shifts. Like other workers they gather food in daylight hours, but when night falls the glamorous gardenia begins to grow. Daylight is the signal for the shift back to the food-making process, when the plant gathers sunshine, moisture and carbon dioxide to make starch. Night temperatures in greenhouses must be reduced to 58 or 60 degrees for the hard-working gardenia. The usual high temperatures of 80 and 90 degrees cause the blossoms to wilt and drop from the stem.

In America and Europe the plant is grown only for its beautiful white flowers and for perfume. In China and Japan one species of gardenia is raised for its large orange fruit. This fruit is used for a yellow dye to color silk. In the East Indies another variety produces a valuable gum.

Health Hints

The definite increase in the number of persons dying from cancer makes the subject of tumors a timely one. A tumor is a mass of new tissue which is of no use whatever to the body.

The malignant tumor known as cancer may consist, as in the case of benign tumors, of any bodily structures such as fat, bone, connective tissue, superficial layer of the skin, mucous membrane and bodily organs.

Where benign tumors are concerned, surgical removal usually results in permanent cure. However, in cancerous tumors surgery or irradiation (X-ray and radium) or a combination of the two, to be effective depends upon early diagnosis and prompt professional action.

While a number of cancerous growths unfortunately do not present early symptoms, many of the more common ones do. It is the deliberate or ignorant disregard of such early symptoms that has so decidedly occasioned the increase in cancer deaths.

The outstanding signals which justify a suspicion that cancer necessarily so, are: a lump; any unusual bleeding from any bodily opening; a persistent sore; and chronic indigestion.

To disregard these signs, which may mean cancer in an early and therefore curable stage, is to flirt with death. Most certainly it does not pay to take any chance with any kind of a tumor or manifestations that indicate the possibility of its existence.

POULTRY

Cool nights and warm days are rather hard on growing birds since correct ventilation is hard to apply. For this reason it is well to be on the lookout for Bronchitis or pneumonia. It is also time to plan to vaccinate fowl pox.

Bronchitis is observed in baby chicks as a mild infection characterized by watering of the eyes, accompanied by a mild gasping for air. In mature stock the gasping symptoms are more pronounced. In mature birds obvious difficulty in breathing is the outstanding symptom.

When an outbreak is found, strict sanitation should be followed. The feed and water containers should be thoroughly disinfected and a mild disinfectant used in the drinking water. A good bronchial spray should be used at least twice each day and should be sprayed over the heads of the birds so that they will inhale the vapors.

The vaccination against fowl pox is very effective if properly administered and will go a long way toward preventing cold and roup in poultry flocks. During the fall of the year, pullets are very susceptible to fowl pox and when an outbreak occurs it is usually followed by colds and roup in the flock.

The most desirable time to vaccinate birds against fowl pox is between the ages of one and three months. The feather-follicle method of vaccination is recommended with the vaccine being applied with a brush to two follicles on the leg of the bird. It is important in securing this vaccine that it come from a reliable laboratory and is fresh.

County Committeemen and County Agent Ross Brison, returning from the district wheat crop insurance meeting held at Coleman, Thursday, May 19, report that all plans of the crop insurance program, which will shortly reach the stage of offering policies on the 1939 wheat crop, was thoroughly explained to them.

"We are just waiting on the application blanks and for the word 'go', said Brison in commenting on the meeting. "While the policies will be underwritten by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation," continued Brison, "The Corporation will use, as far as possible, the already existing county Triple A set-up of county and community committeemen and county agents."

"If you want one of these policies, just as soon as the county office advises, through the local paper, that it has the application blanks, all you have to do is get one and fill it out and turn it in to the county office or see the committeemen with whom you are working."

Further knowledge gained from E. R. Duke, State Insurance Supervisor, was that the principal information you will need in filling the blank is very simple and will be (1) Record if wheat acreage harvested for grain, production and yields on your farm from 1930 through 1935. For those years you have been in Triple A programs this will be obtainable in the county office.

(2) You need the legal description of your farm. (3) Make up your mind whether you want a policy that will guarantee you 50 percent yield or 75 percent yield. These policies guarantee you either of these amounts. Policies can be assigned for two purposes only (a) to secure money for getting the policy and (b) caring for the crop. (4) How the crop is divided. Separate policies must be taken out by the landlord and by the tenant. Either can take out a policy on his own share whether the other does or not. (5) Tell the total acres to be seeded for harvest as grain and the total to be seeded following summer fallow.

After the application is filled out, signed and turned in, the county committee will approve or disapprove it. If approved, the local county office will complete it and forward it to the branch office. As soon as the application can be checked there, you will receive a premium notice showing the amount due. This can be paid at the county office. This amount can be paid either (1) with a negotiable warehouse receipt for the number of bushels called for or (2) in cash equivalent to the value of the wheat.

COUNTY AGENTS' NOTES

Thirty thousand pounds of grass hopper poison has been taken from the mixing station at Baird. Will Appleton reports very satisfactory results from the use of 150 pounds of hopper poison by sowing it on strips of pasture land 150 feet wide that surrounded the field.

Men who planted Tenmarq wheat as a demonstration are well pleased with the prospective yields. Virgil Jones of Baird expects to harvest at least 3 bushels more per acre from his Tenmarq wheat than from other varieties. W. H. Bryant in commenting on Mr. Jones' wheat remarked that "his acreage of Tenmarq and some of the same variety grown by J. L. Tabor was the best two patches he had seen."

Nelson Estes is well pleased with his prospective yields, and "believes he will like it all right". Others growing this new variety of wheat are: E. H. Williams, Putnam; W. G. Black, Rt. 5 Abilene; J. O. Taylor, Baird; S. S. Harville, Rt. 1, Ovalo; Chas. D. Straley, Rt. 2, Clyde; Quincy Loven, Rt. 2, Clyde; and Homer M. Connel, Clyde.

Let's Go To Bayou

How about a trip to the Bayou? All you need is your imagination and here we go.

We're taking off on the Coleman road, over the old overhead bridge and down by the Seale corral. There's a herd of white-faced cattle being driven down the road, and it slows us down considerably, but we don't care, we're out to have a good time not to try out for the derby, and besides, it gives an opportunity to exchange greetings with Curley and Billy Seale and we wouldn't miss that.

Before we know it, we have reached the Rowden turn-off, and directly to the right is the Bayou School building, a large red brick school house with ample grounds that just now is dotted with bright print dresses and blue overalls. To one side of the main building is a number of small frame ones, old school houses that have been moved there, and we smile because it all looks so very much like a mother with a number of fluffy white chicks huddled around her.

We unload and head straight for the front entrance, and my heart is in my mouth for I do want to make a good impression. How would O. O. McIntyre act under similar circumstances, or Brisbane? I ask myself and finally give the idea up and act like myself.

Just inside the door, we meet a group of smiling girls who offer to show us to where Mr. Fowler is directing physical education. Further down the hall we are joined by Mrs. Fowler whose warm smile and kindly eyes vanquish all fear and discomfort we feel at being in a strange place. She takes us into the gym and introduces us to a crowd of girls who pass the 3rd degree as to size of school, number of classes, etc., that your reporter puts them through. We stop and talk to two little girls who smile with all of the charm six year olds possess.

One of them has lost a number of teeth, a stage all youngsters must inevitably go through, and she covers the space in embarrassment with her tongue, and we don't know why, but we like her all the more for it, maybe because we once did the same thing ourselves.

Recess is over and we accompany a young lady, who claims to be teacher of the fourth and fifth grades, to hear her room, wondering all the while if she isn't a student herself. In the room we find (excuse us, teacher dear, I know we promised not to mention it, but it was altogether too delightful to dismiss) a wash tub, wringer, and all the paraphanel's of a laundry room. The young teacher explains that it is stage setting for a play they are to put on Friday night. On the desk is a false face also to be used in the play, and on the window sill is a small bowl holding a bug-eyed, self-centered goldfish who knows very well he receives twice as much attention as the teacher and text books combined. Under the desks is a row of shoes which weather conditions forced the owners to discard. We look at them and remember a time another desk, but Mr. Fowler summons us to the office and we go in to meet the teachers, lovely Miss Kitty Grey Bentley, Mrs. Blain Odum, the teacher with us, Mr. Fowler, and Mrs. Sparkman completes the staff. Mr. Fowler introduces everyone and says nice things about "Around Town" that makes me let out my hat band a notch.

We stay on to meet Mr. Fowler's class of ten, all of which are boys except nine. The one boy student, Mr. Fowler says with a wink, takes turns sitting by each girl.

We look at our watches and see how time has passed and know it's time to take our leave. Regrettably we say good-bye to the Bayou School and as we leave, we watch the school grow smaller and smaller until it fades into the landscape. We know we are closing one of the most enjoyable days that will ever be checked from the calendar and pause to say, "Thank you, Mr. Fowler, students, and faculty, for making it possible."

AROUND TOWN

With Otto B. Grate

Graduation exercises over, the hustle and bustle of the end of school ceased, the home town settled down to the drowsy days of summer and somehow this seems the best time of the year to this department. You take a quilt, a pillow, a scratch pad and pencil and try in vain to get an idea for the column. If you're fortunate, you write down a line, maybe two and then your mind wanders to where the snake doctor is darting and skimming over the surface of the nearby creek dipping, almost touching a gauzy wing in the water and then bobbing up again. Before you realize it, the sun is descending behind the hills, outlining the trees of the horizon so perfectly that they are magically transformed into a border of black lace against the golden gown of the sunset sky. Then you bundle your things under one arm and with a sign at what you've failed to accomplish and plod homeward contemplating another trip on the morrow. Then oh then, you promise yourself, you'll bring back an inspiration that the readers will go for and maybe, if it's good enough, it'll bring a comment from Mr. Wower critic and reader, and that will be worth working for.

Anyway, the bush Brother Grate has been beating about is that he has heaved and tugged at this one cylinder brain all week and with absolutely no results, but he has had a darn swell time just being agood-for-nothing and this is what he wants to pass on to you. There is no better time than a sultry June day to lay aside the every day cares and hunt a shady place not far from the heat of town and relax. Sure, I know the legend of the ants and the grasshopper, but this is such splendid weather for "grasshoppering" that you should give in.

Little Johnny Swinson, they tell me, was winner of the Plaza Amateur contest last Tuesday, and a real trooper is Johnny who tickles the ivories with the knack of a professional. And speaking of piano players brings to mind one Harold Wristen who wins the applause of this columnist. Left high and dry without a pianist at the 'nth hour, we called on Mr. Wristen, just hope, hope, hoping and the way he came through to help out the boys and girls in the show is something worth remembering, and believe me, we intend to.

Long time no see visitors in town this week are: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Estes, Jr., and baby daughter, Jerry Lou, who are visiting the home folks. Also vacating in Baird are Mr. and Mrs. George Simons and sons Bobby and Sonny, from Oklahoma. They are visiting Mrs. Simons' father, Mr. Franklin and sisters, Mrs. B. L. Boydston and Mrs. Homer Driskill. Picture show should be inviting on these hot days and nights and what with "Goldwyn Follies" putting its appearance in the near future, (Sunday week, if I may venture a guess) and it should be doubly tempting. If you are looking for a frothy bit of comedy, don't be misled by the title of this Sunday's attraction, "Divorce of Lady X", for it is definitely on the light side.

This week's spotlight goes to no less a personage than Mrs. Roy Cutbirth and if you know her, you won't need to be told why. Nice smile, friendly attitude, and pleasant disposition, they all got to make up an ideal spotlight personality and Mrs. Cutbirth qualifies in all of them.

Gosh, signing off time before I was half through, wanted to make mention of the fresh yeggs in the Tots Wristen grocery store whose bright remarks and brain teasing questions they bombard the customers with makes trading there something more than just routine affair. Be sure to be in tune next week for more ear to ear gossip and news.

Sure, and it's signing off time, but regardless of the heat, Friday is always Around Town time and the town bus has put in air conditioning for your comfort, so come along, join the fun.

Association and vice-presidents, she stressed the fact that a delegate elected by a club has a responsibility that she should live up to by being present with paper and pencil to take notes so that she will be able to make a report back to her club members that will be of some value and interest.

Mrs. J. W. Brown, Coleman Co. Home Demonstration Council Secretary, gave highlights of a efficient secretary, stressing regular attendance, keeping of accurate records of meeting, being brief and clear, keeping record of demonstration activities on Achievement Day.

With Baird Baptist

Many of our people were out of town Sunday but quite a good attendance and a splendid report of the Sunday School. We had a real good service at the night service, though the crowd was small.

Russell Chatham, Mrs. Mays, Jo, and I went to the Homecoming over at Content in Rannels county; I had been asked to preach for them and after the Sunday School I gave them the best I had in my lot and it appeared to suit alright. We just had a mighty good time and were back home in plenty time for the evening services.

We are to move in to the new house this week perhaps Thursday, and "Say but I'm glad" yes "Oh say but I'm glad, I'm glad, Oh say but I'm glad". I will have something to say next week about it, want to say it now but it seems hat it is not quite time.

Our meeting starts next Sunday morning. Bro. S. L. Tidwell is coming o do the preaching, and I am saying to you now, you have not met a finer young preacher than he. You just must come and hear him, and then you must come help us work to make the meeting go. I call your attention, friends, the Baptists of Baird have always given themselves loyally to cooperate in all the meetings in Baird, we have done so because we love lost souls and are at all times anxious to help in any way we can to bring them to our Savior. We have helped you, now we really expect you to help us in return. We are counting on it and I just know you won't fail us. We will most likely have two weeks meeting and will have two services each day. We will preach, sing, pray, talk and work to get sinners to accept our Christ. Join us it will do you good. Remember the first service and be here for the 11 o'clock service Sunday.

The Lord willing, I will go out to Hart next Sunday afternoon. I am asking the people out around there to meet me there at 3:00 o'clock. Let's talk about a meeting for this summer.

Joe R. Mayes.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—President Getulio Vargas of Brazil is a far-western frontiersman in his youth, still wearing "bombachos," or gaucho trousers, for informal dress, and quite in character pumping a six-gun at the palace, and putting down a Graustarkian revolt.

A swarthy, stocky little man, quick on the draw, he has never been gun-shy, and impromptu shooting has been an occasional obligato in his rise to supreme power.

When he established his totalitarian state on November 10 of last year, there were those who said he was dealing in the dark of the moon with the green shirts—that here was where Germany and fascism got a toe-hold on this continent.

The green shirt revolt and its vigorous suppression by Sr. Vargas seems to be an answer to that, even if he had not previously made it clear that his authoritarian state was not of the European model.

Brazil has a complex racial makeup which provides no proscribed group or racial myth, the first requirement in fascist technique, and furthermore, when it comes to strong-arm government, all South American countries have plenty of home talent and indigenous skill.

Sr. Vargas recruited his political following as a liberal. He denounced monopoly and promised the overthrow of the "coffee plantation kings."

He seized power in 1930 by the overthrow of President Washington Luis, with the aid of his lifetime friend, old General Aurelio Monteiro. Luis had won the election against him, but Vargas raised a cry of fraud.

From the first he ruled partially by decree, now entirely, since the adoption of the constitution of November 10. His reorganization of the country followed established dictatorial practice in the formation of labor "syndicates," the fixing of maximum and minimum wages, and the denial of all rights of free press and free assembly.

He is a famous orator, speaking a fluent and fiery Portuguese, using the radio a great deal in national appeals. He is credited with just about the shrewdest political intelligence in South America. In his prairie town, he attended a private college, later enrolled in a military college, but was diverted to the law.

His rise through minor offices to the national congress parallels the standard career chart of our congressional record biographies—district attorney, state legislature and all the rest of it.

THE make-believe war in which the eastern seaboard was defended against "black" expeditionary forces from overseas was the first large-scale work-out of our "flying fortresses" in Mock War.

General Frank M. Andrews, running the show, is one of the few flying generals.

He gathered up the strands of the unified service when the GHQ air force, which he commands, moved into the huge air base at Langley field, March 1, 1935.

Called the "handsomest man in the service," he is quietly effective and the last man in the world to be called a swivel-chair officer. He warns the country against a shortage of fliers and urges civilian training. He was not an A. E. F. flier.

In 1934 he made the unusual jump from lieutenant-colonel to brigadier-general and was made a major-general in 1935. He was graduated from West Point in 1906 and was with the cavalry on the Mexican border, before he found his wings.

New York, "Empire State"

New York appropriated the title "Empire state" when it surpassed all other states in population, commerce and wealth. New York, N. Y., is sometimes known as the "Empire city." On December 2, 1784, in reply to an address of the common council of New York, General Washington wrote as follows to Mayor James Duane: "I pray that Heaven bestow its choicest blessings on your city; that a well-regulated and beneficial commerce may enrich your citizens, and that your state (at present the seat of empire) may set such examples of wisdom and liberality as shall have a tendency to strengthen and give a permanency to the union at home, and credit and respectability abroad."

WAGE BILL IS PASSED

Southern Democrats Lose Hot Fight in the House

Here is an armored car detachment of Czechoslovakia's up-to-date army which was sent to the frontier to meet the threats of aggression by Fuehrer Hitler's troops that were massed on their side of the border.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

HOUSE PASSES WAGE-HOUR BILL
REPRESENTATIVE MARY NORTON'S wage-hour bill finally got through the house by a vote of 314 to 97, despite fierce opposition of the southern Democrats. It was sent on to the senate, which has passed a widely differing measure and where opposition blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster.

Rep. Norton

The Southern blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster. The Southern blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster. The Southern blocs were reported forming to carry on a filibuster.

The measure establishes rigid wage-hour standards for certain classes of workers in all industries operating in interstate commerce, regardless of prevailing sectional scales. It fixes an initial wage of 25 cents an hour which steps up to 40 cents an hour in three years, and a 44-hour week graduating to 40 in two years.

A coalition of farm state representatives and the southern Democrats put over a drastic amendment offered by Mrs. Norton exempting thousands of employees engaged in the processing of agricultural commodities from the provisions of the measure. Other amendments exempt retail establishments in intrastate commerce; the entire fishing industry; and employees of rural weekly and semi-weekly newspapers with less than 3,000 circulation.

The shipment in commerce of goods produced with the aid of child labor is prohibited, but child actors are exempt from this provision. When the fight ended, Mrs. Norton, chairman of the labor committee, was cheered and hugged by the victorious administration Democrats.

Morgan Charges Deceit
DR. ARTHUR E. MORGAN, ousted chief of TVA, was the first witness heard by the congressional committee inquiring into the affairs of the authority. In straightforward fashion he told his side of the story, charging his fellow directors with dishonest management. He explained he did not mean David Lilienthal and Harcourt Morgan took bribes or stole money, but that they deceived the President, congress, and the public; that they covered up important facts tending to throw doubt on the advisability of the government's huge social experiment; reported a false electric power yardstick, and were subservient to political and other special interests.

He accused Lilienthal flatly of deceit in leading the public to believe that the financial accounts of the communities buying power from the TVA include all the costs of the service they render to the public. Dr. Morgan discussed in great detail the celebrated "Berry marble case," involving Sen. George L. Berry, Tennessee Democrat.

Boss Hines Arrested
JAMES J. HINES, most powerful leader of Tammany Hall and chief dispenser of federal patronage in New York, was arrested on charges arising from the 100-million-dollar-a-year policy game racket in that city. He surrendered in the office of District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, hard hitting young prosecutor of Manhattan's multitudinous rackets, and was released in bonds of $20,000.

Lewis Backs Barkley
JOHN L. LEWIS, C. I. O. chieftain, has asked labor to support Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky in the primaries August 6. In his capacity as chairman of Labor's Non-partisan league, Lewis said of Barkley: "He is recognized as one of the nation's leading statesmen, liberal in his viewpoint and co-operative in his attitude toward legislation in the interests of labor and the common people."

Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, found occasion to say a good word in favor of Rep. Otha Wearin of Iowa, who is seeking to take the Democratic senatorial nomination away from Senator Gillette. For this Hopkins was denounced by senators who were demanding that the relief appropriations be earmarked so they cannot be used for political purposes.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

By Carter Field

Washington.—The strong stand taken by Joseph P. Kennedy as to what must be done about labor disputes in the merchant marine if the United States is ever to get one has been completely scuttled through the influence of Secretary of Labor Perkins and the national labor relations board while Joe tells reporters he will wear long pants to the court receptions.

The senate commerce committee, which at first adopted the recommendations of Kennedy for compulsory mediation of labor disputes of strikes until after the mediation board had acted in such controversies, cut his stiff, mandatory provisions from the new shipping bill. The senate followed its committee.

Though striking out the substance, the senate curiously enough retained the shadow. For in the "shadow" were some lucrative jobs, nice $10,000 commissioner type jobs of the lame duck variety. Copying the railroad mediation board, the proposed new board of course the house may strike this out in conference) would have no real power at all. More astonishing, it is deliberately short circuited by a direct statement that the national labor relations board is not deprived of any of its functions!

The substitute provisions provide only for mediation in case both parties to the water controversy favor it, and are not compulsory in any sense of the word. They are much more in line with the mild treatment of striking seamen and dock workers recommended by Secretary Perkins than with the views expressed by Joe Kennedy.

It was shortly before Kennedy left Washington to take his diplomatic post that he, as chairman of the maritime commission, and Miss Perkins as head of the Labor department locked horns before the senate commerce committee, of which Senator Copeland, of New York, is chairman. West coast shipping was tied up very generally by strikes at the time.

As Kennedy Saw It
Kennedy argued that the railroad mediation board, which functions satisfactorily in the settlement of disputes involving rail carriers, might widen its scope of jurisdiction to cover disputes involving water carriers. He recommended that the provisions against strikes by the railroad men until after the mediation board had acted be made applicable to the seamen.

Miss Perkins pleaded for maintenance of the "status quo," argued that tolerance must be shown to the various waterfront unions, because they are comparatively young, declared that the shipping industry was not "ripe" for compulsory arbitration, and contended that anything favoring it would be more harmful than helpful. President Roosevelt, consulted by senators, refused to take sides.

Then the committee senators proceeded to exercise their own judgment. They sided with Kennedy. But after this decision something happened. John L. Lewis is not without resources when it comes to pulling political wires. Especially as everyone in Washington knows that he has it in his power simply by sulking after this week's Pennsylvania primaries to return anti-New Deal Senator James J. Davis to the senate, and throw the state government at Harrisburg, with 30,000 employees, over to the Republicans.

The admirals who were so anxious to get a real auxiliary fleet for the navy in the event of war are frantic over what has been done to the bill. They frankly admit, in private, that the building of a merchant marine is impossible under the senate bill, or without something like the Kennedy recommendations.

But there seems no prospect of Kennedy and the admirals having their way, despite the President's very definite desire to do everything possible to strengthen the navy, everything of course except to antagonize the labor leaders.

Real G. O. P. Problem
Connecticut is one of the real problems for the Republican party, and of enormous interest because it is typical of a great many other states, some of which have more and some less electoral votes. It is a tower of strength to the New Deal, and a staunch bulwark against the menace of the LaFollette movement.

The disease from which the Connecticut Republicans are suffering is the same malady which affects the Republicans in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Rhode Island. All four of these states were always regarded as just about sure Republican in a presidential election, despite the prognosticators' silly chatter during campaigns, that New York was "pivotal" and doubtful.

They were the backlog—especially if New York was excepted—of the Republican end of the balance of power, when joined with Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Massachusetts in the Northeast, and Illinois, Iowa and the whole group of so-called Mormon states—Utah, Idaho, Nevada—in the mountain region. The Democratic end of the balance of power, of course, was the solid South.

The disease which has hit the Republicans of the Northeast, and most of the other one-time Republican states as well, is loss of leadership.

For years J. Henry Roraback was the dictator of Connecticut. He was the Republican boss, national committeeman, and what have you. No one thought of doing anything in the Republican party without consulting Henry. There were little centers of dissent, notably in New Haven, where the rebels even dared to select their own congressman. But Roraback's ability began to slip, and, so great had been the fear of him, that despite this slipping, obvious to all who knew him, no one dared to take the initiative toward perfecting a new organization.

Made It Tougher
To make the problem tougher for aspiring Republicans, it so happened that even before Roraback's slipping had become apparent, Connecticut elected a Democratic governor who was a great personal friend of Roraback's. Roraback praised him publicly. So as that once great political mind weakened the Democrats were developing patronage as well as organization.

Finally Roraback died, but he did not leave a strong successor. There had been no regent during the period of disintegration. New would-be leaders, so to speak, started from scratch, with more interest in their personal advancement than in building up a strong organization.

At the present moment there are three distinct factions aspiring to state control of the G. O. P., and any number of little groups not allied with the Big Three. No one of the Big Three would be pleased at the success, even though it meant the election of Republicans in place of Democrats, by any of the other forces.

Were They Surprised?
Utility officials and army officers alike were flabbergasted by reports of the President's conference with Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Power Commissioner Basil Manly as to a proposed new survey of the national power situation, from the standpoint of national defense.

The President said this matter had never been studied from that angle, and that it is not so much a question of additional power as it is a question of existing power lines that are not connected. He said if anything should happen the District of Columbia could not borrow power from Baltimore or vice versa. In the city of New York, he said, there is no physical connection between one side of the Hudson and the other.

Of course the President was simply illustrating to the newspapermen the kind of information he wanted mapped out. Actually there is a power line between Baltimore and Washington intended for the very purpose of permitting one city to serve the other in the event of some emergency.

Actually also New York city is protected against failure of its normal supply. There is a connection, made for that purpose, with the power lines of the Niagara and Hudson company. Incidentally the President was enormously interested, about two years ago, when some of the power companies cut their connections at certain state borders, notably the New York-Connecticut border, in the hope of escaping federal regulation and the death sentence of the public utility holding company act.

Here's Amazement
But this is not the amazing part of the story. What really surprised the army and the utility men was that there is a marvelously accurate survey of the whole situation right in the government's possession. It was made by the army engineers.

Unfortunately, this report is confidential. In fact, it is regarded by the army as a very important part of its war plans, and is kept on tap with other plans for industrial mobilization.

Why Assistant Secretary Johnson did not mention this to the commander in chief of the army, the President, when they were talking about this survey, and emphasizing its national defense aspects, is rather a mystery to some, but is explained, with political logic, by others.

The President, these others point out, is not in precisely a friendly mood toward the army engineers. He still remembers with some bitterness the strength which the army engineers developed as a lobbying force a few weeks ago on Capitol Hill. The engineers, whose friends on Capitol Hill are legion, were afraid that perhaps Harold L. Ickes or somebody else in the administration might at some time persuade the President to take the engineers' functions away from them, and transfer them to PWA or elsewhere.

HELLO EVERYBODY:
There's only one thing I know that's less profitable than being a burglar, and that's just posing as one. And Distinguished Adventurer Willard G. Stanton of Bloomfield, N. J., ought to agree with me there. Once upon a time, when Bill was a youngster of sixteen, he tried that little stunt. Not purposely, of course. Bill's intentions were perfectly O. K. But it doesn't make any difference what your intentions are. If you look like a burglar, or if you act like a burglar, first thing you know somebody is going to think you ARE a burglar and treat you accordingly.

Back in 1907, when this adventure happened to Bill, he lived in an old-fashioned apartment house in Brooklyn. At least it would look old-fashioned today. At that time it was probably the last word in apartment houses. It had a stairway running up the center of the building, and there were two apartments to the floor. The doors of the living rooms opened on the stair landing, and the outer doors were fitted with ground glass panels. The glass was opaque. You couldn't exactly see through it. But when you were on the inside looking out you could tell when someone was at the door, because you could see a shadow of a human figure against the glass.

Remember those panels. They've got a lot to do with the story.

Burglars Alarmed the Old Ladies.
Bill's family had an apartment on the fourth and top floor of that building. Across the hall lived two old ladies—retired school teachers—one of whom was slightly deaf. Remember that deaf old lady, too.

Bullets Whizzed Over Bill's Head.

Between her and the glass panels, Old Lady Adventure managed to cook up quite a thrill for Bill Stanton.

About three o'clock one November morning, Bill was awakened out of a sound sleep by a loud, insistent pounding. As he came out of a half-dozed, he realized that the pounding came from the wall, on the other side of which the two old ladies slept. Something was wrong in their apartment! Bill jumped out of bed and went into his own living room. Then he saw what the trouble was.

On the ground glass panels of the door leading to the hall he could see two shadowy figures. They were over by the door of the old ladies' apartment and they seemed to be trying to jimmy the lock. So that was it! Burglars, trying to get in next door! The old ladies had heard them and pounded on the wall to attract Bill's attention.

Bill called out, "Who's there?" and began rattling the door knob. The two figures moved noiselessly to the stairs and began to descend. Bill was sixteen, and impetuous. He ran out of his apartment and started to follow the two men down the stairs. "Right there," he says, "is where my adventuring career started."

Bill Was in a Tight Place.
Bill followed the crooks down two flights of stairs, but they were too fast for him. He was in pajamas, and he couldn't very well dash out into the street after them anyway. Not on a cold night in November. He turned around and went slowly back up the stairs.

Bill got to the top and put his hand on the doorknob. The door was locked. In his haste to follow the two men he had slammed it behind him. In his pajamas and without a key in his pocket, it looked as if he was going to have some trouble getting back in. He stood for a moment considering his plight, and then, suddenly he heard a voice coming from the next apartment—

It was one of the old ladies—the deaf one—and her tone was ominous. "If you don't go away," she yelled, "I'll shoot."

All at once Bill realized what a tight situation he was in. The old lady could see his shadow through the glass door and thought he was one of the departed burglars. He knew she kept a gun in her apartment and didn't have any doubt that she would do just what she threatened to do.

Shot At by a Deaf Woman.
"I thought I had a good pair of lungs," says Bill, "and I screamed back: 'Don't shoot. It's me.' But I didn't count on that old lady being deaf. Before I had a chance to get in another word I heard a loud report and a bullet came crashing through the door. It was followed by two more. Then I dropped flat on the floor, and while I lay there, three more shots imbedded themselves in the wall over my head."

The shots stopped then, but Bill lay right where he was, afraid to stir lest the slightest motion bring more of that hot lead his way. Then, inside his own apartment, he heard his mother open a window and start screaming for the police. Still Bill stayed where he was. Courage is one thing, but when a panic-stricken old lady starts blazing away right and left with a revolver, there isn't any sense in giving her a mark to shoot at.

Bill lay right where he was until the police came. Then he got up again. He looked himself over and was relieved to find that he hadn't been hit by any of those wild bullets, but he found an ominous little hole in the sleeve of his pajamas that showed just how close he had come to having a funeral instead of just an adventure. "And now—advice," says Bill, "when there is any burglar hunting to be done, I do it by telephone."

Finland's Name
The name Finland has nothing to do with the fin of a fish, as one might be excused for thinking at first glance. True, the country has a long seacoast bordering on the Baltic, but inland there are many lakes surrounded by marshes and connected by glistening streams and canals. Many years ago regions like this were called fens. Thus the little country in the northern part of Europe became known as fen-land, or marsh-land, and, as the years passed and people spoke carelessly, its name changed to Finland.

El Temple in Havana
El Temple in Havana dates from 1327 and commemorates the landing at Puerta Caranas of Don Diego Velazquez in 1519. An obelisk bears an inscription commemorating the mass sung at the town meeting held at the time in the shade of a giant siba tree. A tree shading El Temple is believed to be a slip from the original tree, cut down in 1753.

Brides Sold by Weight
In some gypsy villages in Yugoslavia girl brides are sold by weight, the sale being held when the girls reach a marriageable age, says Pearson's London Weekly. The average price is between 2 pence and 3 pence a pound, the higher price being paid for girls who can dance and sing as well as cook. To prevent cheating, the gypsy chief keeps the weighing scales under lock and key. The sale of girl brides is a recognized practice in Yugoslavia, but only in gypsy villages are their values assessed by weight.

Caterpillars Can Hear
This statement has been made because experiments have shown that these insects have the ability to hear; for certain sounds result in sudden movements of the body. Hairs that absorb sound are provided in place of ears. In experiments, when these hairs were coated with shellac and noises were made, the caterpillar did not respond.

And while she was toying nervously with her quill, her husband and young Pedro were sitting astride their horses in Don Pedro's beloved orchard.

The trees were full of Indians, gathering the luscious fruit that hung in rich clusters, bright in the autumn sunshine; early pears and apples, late peaches and pomegranates. Little naked boys, pajaderos, ran through the orchard with rattles and miniature bows and arrows, frightening away the clouds of birds that had assembled to steal the ripe fruit.

As fast as the fruit was picked, it was loaded into panniers on mules, and carried to the shore, where boats were piled high and oared to the Astrolabe and the Boussole, a princely offering from the Spanish Governor to the expedition of the Count de La Perouse.

The Governor and his son watched the scene with pleasure. The movement and life, the color, and the clamor of many voices was pleasant to them. They looked at each other and smiled, completely at harmony together.

An Indian passed them carrying a basket strapped to his back, and supported from his brow with thongs. It was filled to the rim with purple grapes. The Governor stopped him, and made a note on a list he carried in his hand.

"Twenty baskets of grapes," he said. "Hum," to the Indian, "that will be enough grapes. No more today. Vayase." The Indian plodded on.

"Yes," continued the Governor, following the basket of grapes with his eyes, "that will have to be enough. We must have enough left for the vintage. But I have already sent them barrels of wine, so I do not think I am selfish. Do you?" "Pues, no!" cried the boy. "And too, we would not have any grapes for the fiesta, the vendimia. And we must have, mustn't we? And won't it be soon?"

"Yes, I think it will be soon. Yes, we must have a great fiesta this year . . . just for ourselves. It has been nice to have the Franceses here, but it will be nice to have a party just for ourselves. I think there is a little bull that is ready to meet a torero, and there is another that will make a barbecue. And we will have some horse-races, and some cock-fights, and some of the Indian boys will wrestle, and there will be music and dancing. Al de mi, what a vendimia it will be!"

"And Mother will sit on a throne with grapes and leaves on her head for a crown, and be queen of the fiesta!"

"Yes, yes, and again yes! Look, they hurry down to the beach to see who comes!"

It was an Indian messenger from the camp of La Perouse, asking that something.

As they reached the beach, they could see a cloud of smoke, and a strange activity going on. On coming closer they discovered La Gobernadora with Angustias, and almost all of the people of the presidio, who had evidently been summoned hastily by a messenger from La Perouse.

The Frenchman came hurrying to Pedro Fages.

"I had a thought at the last minute," he said hurriedly. "You have been so wonderful to me, all of you people here, that I wanted to give an occasion special for you. We are to have a balloon ascension!" "Balloon ascension!" exclaimed the Governor. "I have heard of balloons but never seen one."

"Regard, then," said La Perouse dramatically, "there is a balloon which was given us to take on our voyage around the world. Why, I do not know, unless it was to impress people around the globe that Frenchmen now make balloons! What good they can ever be, I can not see, but they say some day they will be made strong enough to carry men."

"There will never be one strong enough to carry me!" laughed Fages. He and young Pedro dismounted and hurried on foot after La Perouse to where the great muslin bag was slowly filling with smoke, its rounding sides showing strange designs and pictures.

"We have had it up once before on this trip," explained La Perouse. "That was in Lima. I hope it will ascend now!" he said anxiously.

And at last it did. Slowly it staggered into the air.

Everyone regarded it with amazement. Some of the Indians muttered, and several old women prostrated themselves on the ground. Accompanied with a chorus of incredulous ejaculations it rose the full length of the cord that tethered it, then, as a fresh late afternoon breeze puffed in from the sea and threatened, it was brought down again.

"Por Dios!" exclaimed the Governor of California, greatly pleased and amazed. "Mil gracias to you, Senor el Conde, for such a miracle!

A balloon raised from the shore of California! It will never happen again, and will be something to remember all our lives."

"And it will be something for me to remember all my life, that I have visited your California. More, I can not say. And now . . ."

"And now," replied the Governor with a slight formality which he assumed to cover his real feelings, "and now, my friend, I suppose the time has come for you to say, as you French put it, adieu!"

"Your Spanish word, adios, is the same, Monsieur le Gouverneur. Both speed the parting guest in the care of God."

"Yes, we must say those words. For we must not hinder your departure with our curiosity, and there are things I must attend to at the presidio. But be sure, Senor el Conde, that at whatever hour you sail we shall be here on shore, watching you as far as we can see. And wherever you shall sail, you will be in our hearts. Thank you for visiting us."

The two men gripped hands. La Perouse was frankly moved.

"Thank you for everything. The friendliness, the courtesy, the hospitality and your gifts of fruit and wine. We will appreciate those, surely. And even for the goat and the chickens, and . . . Mon Dieu!

"Certainly, Your Excellency," she said at last.

I can not say more. My feelings . . . pardonnez moi . . ."

He turned to Eulalia, who was standing quietly beside her husband, her eyes on Dagelet.

"And, to you ma Reine de Californie, my respects for your fortitude and loyalty in being such a wonderful woman in the midst of such a remote country."

Eulalia's lips moved, but her remarks were inaudible as the Count kissed her hand. There were other farewells, then the Governor, followed by his soldiers and Indian bearers, his wife on one hand and his son at the other, moved away from the camp on the beach.

As they rode the Governor and his wife were each very silent, busy with their own thoughts. Young Pedro prattled beside them.

The Count had given him a silver medal which had been struck off by the French Government to commemorate the great expedition of La Perouse around the world. On one side was an effigy of Louis XVI, and on the other two olive branches tied with a ribbon, and a scroll which read:

"Les fregates du roi de France, la Boussole et l'Astrolabe, commandees par Mm. de la Perouse ie de Langle, parties du prt de Brest, en Juin 1785."

The child rapturously polished the bright coin on his jacket, and asked his mother to translate it for him. She did, lifelessly.

The Governor sighed and spoke. "At dawn, on the tide, they sail for all the seven seas. And I," he chuckled suddenly, "I will escort you home, my Lady, then ride over to the Mission Carmelo to talk with Fray Lasuen about this new Mission Santa Barbara. For that is the next great thing to happen to our California."

"Ah! So you will not be home this evening?"

"No, my love. I shall sup with the good fathers, but will return early. You will pardon me?"

For a long moment she looked at him intently, then gazed straight ahead.

"Certainly, your Excellency," she said at last. When at the great gate to the presidio young Pedro elected to go with his father, she seemed in a strange mood.

"Go with your father, my son," she said, "but kiss me adios." The boy looked startled, but pecked his mother hurriedly on the cheek.

Eulalia watched them until their figures and that of the servant who followed were lost around a curving hill.

Then she spurred her horse and rode rapidly across the parade-ground to the palacio.

Late that evening, the Count de La Perouse, working with some of his scientists in their rude laboratory on the beach, was amazed when an attendant told him that a woman, with a baby in her arms, wished to see him.

And when the companion of La Gobernadora strode in, unabashed, he was still more surprised. With no preamble she told her story.

"And here he is," she said finally. "My baby, my Chichi. You will take him, will you not, where he will be well, and live?"

"But of course, Madame!" exclaimed the Frenchman, his eyes bright with amusement. "I will see that he has the best of care, and I will lose him in the most beautiful jungle I can find, I assure you."

He was astounded to see the woman's harsh face begin working with emotion. "Here," she squeaked, "here is a little bundle of clothes I made him. He has needed them here where it has been cold, and before he reaches his jungle. See," perhaps he will need them again she explained, holding out a tiny pair of trousers, and poking her finger through a hole, "see, his dear little tail goes through here."

La Perouse had taken the monkey in his arms, but Angustias reached for him, strained him passionately to her breast. The little animal put out a tiny paw and stroked her face with queer little noises. She held him away from her, and stared into the worried human eyes, then thrust him back at the startled Frenchman.

"Take him quickly," she gasped. "Be good to him . . . he is my all . . . my baby."

Before La Perouse could say another word she stumbled out of the tent into the dark.

"Nom du nom du vieu singe!" roared La Perouse. "Here, Dagelet, you seem moony and unoccupied. I give you this animal to keep in your charge, and to watch and ward, and put his dear little tail through the hole in his pantaloons until we land on a tropical isle! Mon Dieu, quelle femme!"

Dagelet picked up the monkey dolefully.

"And you think I have nothing to do!" he muttered. He walked away from the tent, carrying the monkey and his bundle of clothes to a spot where a boat was moored, and an oarsman sat as though waiting for someone.

"Take this," barked Dagelet. "I will return."

Angustias, blinded with her tears, staggered through the sand until she reached firmer ground, then she made her way toward the presidio, sobbing and talking to herself.

"Chichi, my baby," she grieved, holding her empty arms to her breast, "my baby, my baby."

When she was quite near the presidio gate she noticed a figure moving hurriedly in the direction of the beach. It seemed to be the figure of a woman. Angustias slipped behind a tree and watched. The woman came closer and Angustias could see a large bundle balanced on her head. Every few feet she turned around and looked back toward the presidio.

"Indizuela!" gasped Angustias. "What is she doing? Ah, the vixen, she is running away with some French sailor, I'll be bound. Well, we can't have that. I've always had my suspicions of that one. Que la doncella honrada la pierna quebrada y en casa (The virtuous maid and the broken leg must stay at home)," she muttered. She took a few steps toward the girl, then stopped. If the hussy was intent on joining some French lover, she would use violence rather than let Angustias stop her, she reflected. She needed a man to help her. As she hesitated, her eye still on the flying girl who was zigzagging through the sand, she heard the sound of horses. She ran toward them as they came in view. Then she saw it was the Governor.

She stopped. She must not let him see her. She had disobeyed him. He would reprimand her, she, Angustias, whom he had always called "a good soldier." She started to step behind her tree again, but was too late. The Governor had seen her. So she took matters in her own hands and ran toward him.

"Your Excellency!" she gasped, "look, see that woman running toward the beach! With the bundle on her head! It is Indizuela! She is running away to join some French lover on the ships."

Pedro Fages looked after the figure that Angustias pointed out. She did indeed seem to be fleeing, her erratic course took her now from one tree to another, and she was avoiding the open spaces.

"Very well, Angustias, you return with Pedro to the mansion. I will attend to this. Go with them," he ordered the servant.

He spurred his horse lightly and cantered toward the girl. As he drew near he saw she had staggered and dropped the great bundle from her head. She was leaning over it, sobbing with exertion when he caught up with her.

As he jumped from his horse, she turned away from him, and tried to cover her face with the rebozo that swathed her head.

Fages spoke very gently. "Mi chiquita," he said, "my poor little one. Why are you running away from us all, and from your home, and those who are concerned in your welfare? Did you not say you loved the Governor, and were grateful for all he had done for you? And now you run away, Indizuela!"

The girl suddenly became dymamic. She straightened and faced the Governor boldly, tearing the rebozo from her head.

"So!" she screamed. "It is Indizuela you love, is it! Indizuela whom you follow after in the starlight! Indizuela, is it! Indizuela!"

Pedro Fages put his hand to his beard, then brushed his eyes as though he doubted his sight.

"Eulalia!" he said. "Eulalia! You were running away."

She stooped over her bundle and tugged at it. "Of course I am running away. And you can not stop me. Indizuela is not leaving you," she panted, "so you will be happy."

She lifted the bundle and staggered a few steps.

Don Pedro watched her as though he were viewing an incident in a dream, with drugged senses that could not react.

"I am leaving everything behind that you love," she said through her teeth, "the children, Indizuela and your California. For ever!"

Then he strode to her side and wrestled her burden from her.

"Come," he said sternly, "no nonsense." She struggled with him.

"Not wildly. 'No! Let me go! You can not hold me here any longer! Let me . . ."

But he slung the bundle over his saddle, and taking her around the shoulders that writhed and tried to slip from his grasp, he put one hand firmly over her mouth, and tried to move her toward the horse.

She dug her heels in the sand, he could feel her maledictions and imprecations sputtering against his hand.

Future Japanese Soldiers Early Learn to Hope "to Die for Beloved Emperor"

You cannot assess the Japanese army numerically.

Japanese officers have often protested to me with a smile that the Japanese soldier is not a whit superior mentally, morally or physically to the soldier of the West. Yet they insist that he is, in fact, "a better soldier," because, unlike other soldiers, he courts death as his greatest honor, writes Willard Price in the London Spectator.

The training of men who will go to their doom with the unswerving directness of robots is a weird and unworlly process.

It begins 2,000 years before the soldier is born. Bushido has taught the Japanese race to think well of itself, and the Japanese individual to regard himself as nothing but the dirt to be ground under the chariot wheels of the progress of his race. The One must give himself for the All.

What better racial tradition could there be for the making of die-essay soldiers?

Active military training begins at the age of six. Boys in the first year of primary school are taught to march, drill, do the goose-step, sing war songs and marshal platoons of wooden soldiers.

"Morals" is a required subject in every primary and middle school. From six to seventeen the future soldier is drilled, not in morals as we would understand the subject, but in "Morals" with an imperial M—loyalty to the immediate family, the larger family which is called the nation, and the emperor who is the father of all.

This goes on until many students when asked "What is your dearest wish?" will sincerely enough set down this answer: "To die for my beloved emperor."

Wireless First on Lucania

The Lucania has the distinction of introducing wireless to the ocean. Marconi experimented with his new invention aboard this Cunarder in June, 1901. The experiments were successful. Permanent apparatus was immediately installed and was soon duplicated in all ships of the line. The Lucania also carried the first "submarine signal apparatus" to detect the approach of other ships.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Place of Fats in the Diet

Nationally Known Food Authority Compares the Different Cooking Fats and Shortenings

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City

THERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats than any other class of foods. Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious and healthful foods. Both points of view arise from ignorance of dietary facts.

convenience, economy, and the use to which the product is to be put.

The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture of animal fats and vegetable oils, hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that the use of this less expensive product releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine is interchangeable with butter for dressing vegetables and in doughs containing spices, fruits and chocolate. Its shortening power and keeping qualities are similar to those of butter.

Lards, compounds and other shortening fats are useful not only as a means of increasing palatability and food value, but to add flakiness to baked foods and to produce a crisp coating which seals in the minerals and vitamins of fried foods.

Lard is used chiefly as a shortening for pastry, and a good grade will be found to be white and free from objectionable odors. The highest grade, called leaf lard, is produced from the leaves of fat in the sides of the hog.

When made by a reputable manufacturer, the compounds prepared especially for cake making, for shortening pastry and for deep-frying, are wholesome, highly nutritious and give most satisfactory results. They are a most economical form of shortening.

Digestibility of Fats

Because of their ability to retard digestion somewhat and thus give satiety value to a meal, the impression has grown up that fats are "difficult" to digest. This results from confusing the length of time required for digestion and the completeness with which a food is digested.

When "digestibility" is regarded in the popular sense of the ease, comfort and speed with which the digestive organs carry on their work, it is conceded that fats in general retard the secretion of the

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the diet—to satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire nations.

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice may be determined by preference, gastric juice and thus cause food to remain longer in the stomach.

On the other hand, most fats have such a high coefficient of digestibility, that under normal conditions only about one-twentieth of the fat eaten escapes digestion. Experiments indicate, for example, that the coefficient of digestibility of oleomargarine is 97.55 per cent.

It is sometimes erroneously stated that pastry is indigestible. This statement is without foundation, provided the pastry is made from a high grade shortening and is properly baked. Similarly, fried foods come in for a great deal of criticism that should not be charged to the use of fat, but to incorrect methods of cooking. If food is properly cooked in fat that has a high smoking point, there will be no opportunity for decomposition products to develop.

How Much Fat?

Nutritionists have ample evidence that health is best served when 30 to 35 per cent of the total energy value foods is provided in the form of fat. This will include the fat of meat and the fat used in cooking the many delicious fried and baked foods which make eating a pleasure.

Questions Answered

Mr. F. K. C.—Answering your query as to whether pineapple juice possesses special properties as a laxative—all fruit juices contain fruit acids, which tend to have a stimulating effect upon the entire digestive tract. However, the pulp of any fruit is far more effective than the juice in providing normal elimination.

Mrs. N. H. R.—As to whether a tendency to overweight is inherited: the body build is inherited. That is, some individuals tend to be short and stocky; others are tall and slender. However, there is no reason why the stocky individual should allow himself to become obese. Frequently, a condition that is blamed on inheritance can be traced to faulty habits of diet, exercise and sleep, passed from one generation to another.
