BEARS PREPARE TO INVADE CLYDE

Hard work is the order of the day out at the Bear camp. A revamped team is preparing to meet the Clyde Bulldogs on a return game Nov. 28.

It is not definitely certain that Captain Bill Austin and Randall Jackson, star senior guard will see any service in the Clyde classic. Bob Austin has been shifted from end to the backfield to fill his brother's shoes. Bob lacks the class of his older brother but he has a couple of years ahead yet and should be an outstanding star in the backfield before he finishes. Lub Ashton is still nursing an injured ankle but it will in shape by game time.

Doyle Chrisman, Junior reserve will get his big chance at end with Bob shifted to the backfield. Doyle is the hustling type and deserves a chance. He also has another year.

Bernie Bryant and Clyde Wallace Yarbrough are two other men that are expected to give a good account of themselves. Bernie Bryant is especially anxious to show his wares to the Clyde boys.

Lynn Bryant, another senior, will also play his heart out to win Lynn, who easily is the outstanding tackle in the district, took up the fillback position like a duck takes to water. He has made himself the most feared line plunger in the district.

There is a slight chance that Bill Austin and Randall Jackson may play. These two boys will really be missed if they do not play.

Some reserve backs that may get into the game are Bob Settle, Billy H. Hingshead and Grover Wiley. This trio have been working hard all season and making the regulars hustle all the way. They have the stuff and are determined to show the fans a thing or two in their own right way next season.

The line will be fairly intact for the game. J. D. Gorman and Doyle Chrisman on ends. J. D. hustles all the way and plays a steady game all the way. He should be a shining star before he finishes his career.

Horace Cook, Co-captain, will finish his last game. The big tackle has played many a great game and we are expecting the greatest of his brilliant career on Thanksgiving.

Floyd Pretz, a natural born fighter and football player, is also playing his last game. Floyd will be sorely missed by graduation. The Clyde boys can expect plenty of trouble from him.

Warren Hooker, another senior, will finish his career at center. Warren has not missed a minute of the playing season. He is a fighter that does not know the meaning of the word "quit". He is easily the best center of the district and expects to demonstrate again on Thanksgiving morning.

Another senior is Harold Alexander at tackle. Lack of experience is the only thing that has kept Harold from being a great star. He holds up his position well and may really be a star in his own right, in his last game.

Another senior who is in his last game is Clifton Hill. Clifton has been handicapped by lack of experience but possesses all the other qualities of a real man, and we take off our hats to him for his hard work and efforts.

Arnold Thompson will more than likely hold down the left guard position in case Randall is unable to play. Arnold has two years ahead yet and is expected to go places.

Joseph Fielder, a rough and tough tackle, is also ready to go. Cockey has three more years and is due to make fans forget the deeds of his older brother who was one of the greatest stars in the history of Baird's football teams.

A. J. Bruce is another comer. A. J. has had the misfortune of playing center this year and Warren's great play has kept him on the bench. A. J. is able to fill the bill at center if necessary and is determined to do so next year in his own right.

Another reserve that deserves a word of praise is Billie Smartt. Billie came out without any former experience and has shown plenty of promise. He is always ready to go and can give a good account of himself.

Other reserves that helped make the team and the season a success are: Bill McCoy, Willie Oscar McWhorter, Sam Irby Smith Jr., Leroy Manor, Marvin Swinson, Jimmie Beasley, Russ sell Chatham, Billy Fetterly and others. These boys deserve a tribute for a team cannot be a success without reserves to aid them in practice. They take all the knocks and receive little of the credit. We are just as proud of them as the mightiest Bear.

The Bears are all determined to finish their season successfully. The Clyde Bulldogs feel that their season will be a success if they upset the Bears and will be doing everything in their power to do so. They have a fighting team and a good coach and can give the best plenty of trouble.

The Bears have plenty of respect for the Bulldog's ability but are determined to leave them ome on the short end of the score. BEAT CLYDE NOV. 28th!

Long. The jury was completed shortly after the noon hour and the questioning of witnesses began. District Attorney J. R. Black and County Attorney F. E. Mitchell are in charge of the prosecution.

The state has indicated by questioning of jurors that they will ask the death penalty in the case.

Plans Submitted For Financing Highway $14,498.00 To Be Spent On Sanitary Project Here

The County Commissioners have submitted plans for financing Highway 36, running from Cross Plains to Abilene; the plan being to issue script for the purchase of right-of-way along the proposed route—the Work Progress Administration to do a project for grubbing and setting fences back; and then the State Highway Department to designate the route as Highway 36 and gravel and hot-top the road.

As a result of a recent ruling of the Attorney General's department a complicated scheme of financing became necessary to legalize the method and make construction of the road possible.

The proposal calls for the issuing of county warrants to pay for the right-of-way. When the warrants are presented at banks the plan is to have refinancing bonds issued—at an interest rate of five per cent—to pay the warrants. The refinancing bonds would be handled by H. C. Burt, bondholder and would be payable over a period of 17 years. The issue would total $13,500.00.

Following the steps prescribed by law the plan must be advertised 15 days, after which—Dec. 10th—another convention of the Commissioners Court will be called to dispose of the matter. Unless a petition of protest signed by 10 per cent of the county's legal voters is presented to the Commissioners December 10th, the financing plan is expected to be adopted. In the event a petition of protest is offered, a county wide election will be necessary.

Although the entire county must vote on the question and would be forced to secure the bonds, only revenues from precincts No. 2 and No. 4 would go toward retiring the obligation.

Mr. Burt told the Commissioners last week that he had the assurance of the Attorney General's department that the refinancing bonds would be approved, at an interest rate of five per cent, in the event the plans were followed as prescribed.

Final approval and working orders on the County Sanitary Project at a cost of $14,498.00 were received and the work started Monday.

The intention of this project is to put sanitary toilets as recommended by the State Board of Health, in all schools of the county at a very low cost—but will apply to any individual desiring to take advantage of this opportunity—the only cost being the purchase of material used in building the unit, which is approximately $5.

It is hoped that all will take advantage of this opportunity to improve the sanitary condition of our county. Forms will be constructed at a central point and transported to the schools and private residences for installation.

The work will be under the direction of Mr. Bondvillain, District Supervisor of Abilene, and Mr. M. G. (Melvin) Farmer, of Baird, County Supervisor. Any individual desiring a private installation should get in touch with B. C. Chrisman, County Supt., of M. G. Farmer, County Supervisor.

The project to begin in precinct No. 2 will give 128 men work for approximately nine months. Federal funds totaling $35,865.00 will be spent on the project.

Callahan Test To Try Many Pays

Callahan County's newest wildcat venture, a 2,200-foot test which will explore known shallow sands and a bout five deeper horizons was spudded in this week on the Mrs. Louie Williams ranch, 9 miles north east of Baird.

The R. H. Vise and Ralph Kellogg et al No. 7, R. D. Williams, will also test for the new producing sand discovered in the Barclay No. 1 Woods, two mile north of Clyde at 1,560 feet. Location is 330 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the east line of section 61, B. O. A survey.

The Barclay test, in the northeast corner of section 68, B. B. & C, survey found production at one of the deepest levels in Callahan. It is pumping 15 barrels of oil per day, with about an equal amount of water.

The R. F. St. John No. 1 H. Kniffin, which offset the No. 1 Wood on the east, took two feet of the sand from 1,578 to 1,580 feet, and is pumping 50 barrels of water and 25 barrels of oil per day. The water intrusion is believed to be in the pay sand.

Shuman Syndicate Snyder No. 4, location.

E. G. Johnson, A. G. Hobbs, No. 1, have a gas sand, estimated to be good for a million feet of gas per day.

R. F. St. John Kniffin No. 2, setting 8 inch pipe at 1150 feet.

Quezon Inaugurated First President of Philippines—Co-Ordinator Berry Has Troubles—Reassurances for Business Men—Armistice Day Celebrations.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

SELF-GOVERNMENT became a reality for the Philippines on November 15, according to schedule, and it is now up to the islanders to utilize their independence wisely and safely, with only general supervision by the United States. In the presence of a great throng of distinguished persons in the magnificent legislature building at Manila, Manuel Quezon, veteran advocate of independence, was inaugurated as the first president of the commonwealth. Representing the United States were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a large party of senators and representatives with their wives. Many foreign governments sent unofficial observers, and the leading statesmen of the islands were present.

After Quezon had taken the oath of office, Sergio Osmena, vice president, and the members of the new unicameral legislature were sworn in. President Roosevelt was personally represented by Secretary of War Dern, who made a pleasant speech and read the proclamation, simultaneously issued in Washington, terminating the old government of the islands and establishing the commonwealth government which is to lead to complete independence of the archipelago in ten years. A cablegram of congratulation also was received from Mr. Roosevelt.

Because of the danger of outbreaks by the extremist followers of Emilio Aguinaldo who have opposed Quezon, the constabulary was out in full force, thousands of its members being brought in from all over the archipelago.

The day before the inauguration the legislature held its final session and Frank Murphy, the last of the governors general, appeared before it to review the accomplishments of the American regime that lasted 36 years. "Having found democracy good for itself, America believes it will be good for the Philippines," he said. Mr. Murphy was then sworn in as high commissioner of the new government.

The entire American delegation attended a grand reception and ball given by Mr. Quezon in honor of Mr. Murphy.

MAJ. GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial co-ordinator of the New Deal, is having a hard time co-ordinating industries. An industry-labor conference has been arranged for December 9 in Washington, but it is evident that some very considerable industries will not be represented. First, the Ford Motor company refused curiously to send a representative; then the Automobile Manufacturers' association objected to the affair, announcing its opposition to any revival of the NRA, though most of its members signed the old NRA code; and next came a sharp letter from the National Hardware Lumber association, one of the country's oldest and largest trade associations, flatly refusing to attend the conference. The letter, written by J. W. McClure of Chicago, secretary of the association's board of directors, labeled any attempt to impose a new NRA on industry as "impractical, unworkable, unenforceable, a menace to respect for all laws and therefore opposed to public interest."

Nevertheless, the conference will be held, and representatives of labor are expected to advocate a plan for licensing industry, a proposal that all government contractors comply with code provisions and the 30-hour week.

IF SECRETARY ROPER is addressing the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America in New York was speaking with authoritative knowledge of the intentions of the administration, business men feel considerably reassured. He said "the breathing spell which we are now enjoying is to be the end of governmental regimentation." He declared business was the "scapegoat" of the depression and he upheld the profit system. Of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a "breathing spell," the secretary said:

"This declaration of the President is clear-cut and concrete. It means specifically that the basic program of reform has been completed. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

According to a Washington dispatch in the New York Times, informal orders have been issued by President Roosevelt to administrative officials to cut federal expenditures under the 1937 budget to $300,000,000 less than the newly estimated total for 1937.

As a result, the dispatch says, the lives of many federal bureaus and agencies were reported to be hanging in the balance.

The economy wave is heightened by signs of better business, the Times says.

THAT story, originating with the Deseret News of Salt Lake City, that George Norris had said he would not seek re-election to the senate from Nebraska, seems to have been at least premature. The veteran senator says he will make his decision at election time next year, and not earlier.

"A campaign would be a small disturbance, compared to the trouble my not being a candidate has cost me," he said in Los Angeles. "I have received hundreds of letters from all parts of the United States urging me to run next year."

ARMISTICE day was celebrated in the United States more generally and elaborately than it had been since the first of those occasions seventeen years ago. Chief of all the ceremonies, naturally, was that at Arlington National cemetery in Washington, where many thousands gathered to hear an address by President Roosevelt.

Standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Chief Executive paid a brief but eloquent tribute to the gallantry of America's fighting men in the World War, set forth America's hopes and intentions for world peace, and announced the imminent signing of a trade treaty with Canada which Prime Minister King had been negotiating in Washington.

At exactly 11 o'clock the President bowed his head and stood silent for a minute, as did millions of his fellow citizens all over the land. The President next placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb. For six hours, afterward, uniformed organizations marched up the hill in Arlington and laid their wreaths at the tomb.

The celebration in the national capital was culminated by a ball arranged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressional Medal of Honor men headed the list of guests, others being cabinet officers, diplomats and high officials of the army, navy and marine corps.

GOV. CYLDE L. HERRING of Iowa and Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota made a bet of one hog on the football game between the universities of their states. Herring lost, and paid by delivering a fat porker to Olson. That seemed all right, but Virgil Case, a vice crusader and editor of a Des Moines monthly paper, immediately swore out a state warrant for the arrest of Herring on charges of gambling, and said he would file federal charges against Olson.

Under Iowa statutes, gambling is a misdemeanor punishable by a maximum fine of $500 and a year in prison. The federal charge is a felony, Case said, punishable by a $5,000 fine and a prison sentence.

Neither governor appeared to be perturbed by the charges. Herring named Olson as his counsel, along with Senator Dan Steck of Iowa, who accompanied him to St. Paul to deliver the pig.

BRITISHERS went to the polls in the seventh general election since the World War, to elect a new parliament. Counting and publishing the vote over there is a deliberate process, so at this writing the results are not known. But there was no doubt of the victory of the government forces, though probably they would lose a number of seats. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin was unopposed. But the Laborites made a hot fight to defeat Ramsay MacDonald and several other members of the Baldwin cabinet.

The government, in its campaign, urged support of its League of Nations activities and its program of unemployment relief and stimulation of national trade.

Liberals and Laborites took issue with the Conservative candidates on national defense questions, with Labor candidates particularly insistent on disarmament and international control of war materials.

PROMOTED by the powerful nationalistic party Wafd, riotous demonstrations against British domination in Egypt broke out in Cairo and other places. Several rioters were killed and many wounded by the police commanded by an Englishman. The Wafd party insists that Prime Minister Tewfik Nassim Pasha must resign. There is a large Italian community in Egypt, and for a long time it has been understood that Mussolini's emissaries have been stirring up discontent against British there.

JAPAN'S apparent determination to dominate northern China has created another crisis in that oriental country, and Shanghai is involved for the Japanese have taken advantage of the slaying of a Japanese sailor there and landed a naval unit 2,000 strong which occupied the Hongkew section of the city.

As the Japanese force began patrolling with fixed bayonets and full war equipment, international settlement authorities mobilized a White Russian regiment of Cossacks under Col. F. R. W. Graham, British army officer detailed as commander of the local volunteer units. The Cossacks, paid by the international settlement, constitute a small standing army for the foreign quarter.

The Chinese were terrified and thousands of them fled from the native quarter to the international settlement, believing the Japanese intended military action in retribution for the murder of the sailor. This the Japanese government denied, but it declared the situation was "serious."

THREE Greeks went to London to invite George II to return to the throne, in accordance with the plebiscite of the Greek people. Deeply moved, he replied: "I shall never forget the past. I shall return almost immediately to my beloved people. May we have divine guidance to bring happiness, peace, and prosperity to our Greece!"

Following the ceremony, the forty-five-year-old monarch, with the Princes Paul and Peter and the Princesses Catherine and Olga, the latter a sister of the duchess of Kent, attended a special service of thanksgiving at the Greek orthodox church.

VICTOR EMMANUEL, king of Italy, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday rather quietly because of the war in which his people are engaged in Africa. He reviewed a parade of armed forces, and with him was the real ruler of the country, Benito Mussolini. Il Duce then appeared on the balcony of his Venezia palace to address a great throng of cheering citizens in the plaza. He spoke just these two sentences:

"The forces you have seen this morning with all their weapons, and especially in their spirit, are ready to defend Italy's interests in Europe, Africa or anywhere."

"In one month we have regulated two old accounts (apparently the Italian defeats at Adowa and Makale, Ethiopia, in 1896) and the remainder will be settled later."

Mussolini that same evening sent to the nations participating in the sanctions against Italy a formal protest against their action, and warned them that Italy would be forced into reprisals with serious consequences to the economic world.

Dispatches from Rome said Pope Pius was making a supreme effort to persuade the League of Nations to postpone the imposition of sanctions, believing this not only would spare the world great economic disorder but also would increase tremendously chances for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war, which might come through collapse of the Ethiopian resistance.

Meanwhile the Italian armies in Ethiopia were advancing steadily toward the interior from both the north and south. The strategic towns of Makale and Gorrahe were occupied practically without resistance.

Halle Selassie lost one of his ablest commanders in the death of General Afework, who was struck by an Italian bomb splinter at Gorrahe.

NOT of vast importance, but interesting enough to command the presence of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and 100,000 other persons, was the twelfth annual national corn husking contest held on a farm at the village of Newtown, Ind.

The winner was Elmer Carlsen, twenty-six years old, of Audubon county, who was competing against 17 opponents, the winners and runners-up of nine midwestern states' contests. Carlsen shucked 41.52 bushels of the golden corn in 80 minutes, which means that he ripped the ears from the stalks, tore the flimsy husks from them and pitched a gross weight of 2,295 pounds into his wagon.

Carlsen set a new world's record, the old one being 36.9 bushels, which mark was beaten also by four others of the contestants. The first prize was a check for $100 given by the Prairie Farmer.

ONCE more Jefferson Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, has been saved from assassination, the intelligence operatives of the Cuban army having discovered and thwarted the plot on the eve of its execution. Dispatches from Havana said the army officials believed the plot was nipped by the arrest of Cesar Villar, leader of the Confederation of Labor; that the assassination was to have taken place when Mr. Caffery left the embassy for home on November 1, and that six automobiles were ready to carry the assassins to a place of refuge. They believed the plot was inspired by radicals who seek to provoke American intervention in Cuba and hope this would bring on a revolution. It was said 29 men had been sworn to kill Mr. Caffery and certain others.

A Cheerful Briton That German Steel We Go Up to 14 Miles Danger to Their Souls
Maj. L. B. Angus, British financier, addressing the American Bankers' association, says:

"Confidence has returned to the United States, fear has declined, monetary velocity will increase. There will be an immediate boom—first, in consumer goods; second, in plant and machinery; third, in housing industries."

The British major—may all he says be verified and multiplied by ten—says truly there is any amount of money in America, but it "revolves" too slowly. It will soon speed up and "revolve," or change hands thirty-five times a year.

If Lloyd would insure the accuracy of the major's prediction, a good many would buy policies.

The particularly offensive plan to buy in Germany steel to build the Triborough bridge in New York will probably not go through. It is explained by those concerned that they can buy 1,000,000 pounds of German steel piling for less than half the American price; as a further "reason" it is said "American firms submitted identical bids."

The government's blue eagle was invented to prevent price cutting; but that is not the question, nor is the difference in price or the fact that work is taken from American workers to give it to German workers the most important fact. Buying steel in Germany, helping to finance the German steel industry and Mr. Hitler's program, with American dollars, would seem to endorse Hitler's program of persecution. That is the important fact.

Officers of the American air corps, Capt. A. W. Stevens and Orvil Anderson, rose above the earth into the stratosphere to a height greater than any human being had ever reached, with the possible exception, of course, of Elijah going up in his chariot of fire.

The American officers radioed: "We are at 74,187 feet, trying for 80,000 feet." They did not go higher, but broke all records.

Seventy-four thousand one hundred and eighty-seven feet is more than 14 miles, 2,000 feet higher than the unofficial Russian record of 72,200 feet.

A movie news reel photographer in Ethiopia, Edward Genoeck, was assaulted when he tried to make moving pictures of warriors at Harar. The Ethiopians beat the camera man, explaining afterward, "We shall lose our souls if we are photographed." That will surprise Hollywood, where the belief is the other way around. Once, it was generally believed, even by real Christians, that if you made a wax miniature figure of a man and stuck pins in it at intervals you would kill the original. Man is a superstitious biped.

Not long ago, when foreign countries were starving, America sent over American corn, and the foreign countries would not eat it. Even Russia refused.

Now, thanks to various devices for persuading our farmers to produce as little as possible, the United States imports more than 20,000,000 bushels of corn in one year.

Shortage of corn means shortage of food for hogs, and that meant expensive "hog men," pork chops and bacon. Somebody always has to pay the bill and now it appears to be those that eat, a decided majority.

At Maryland's Pimlico race track a horse named Axican, winning the $1,000 relay steeplechase, paid $340.40 for a $2 betting ticket, 170 times the amount paid. That news will cause many unfortunate geese to lose several times $340. Nobody ever won at race track gambling in the long run. If that were possible, who would support bookmakers and tracks?

Speaking in Arlington national cemetery, the President warned the country that there is danger of war, urging "adequate defense on land, on sea, and in air."

He knows, as does everybody, that defense, first in the air, and second under the water, is most important.

President Roosevelt announced the early "consummation of a commercial agreement between Canada and the United States," referring to "our two peoples, each independent in themselves, closely knit by ties of blood and common heritage, with standards of life substantially the same."

While eleven lawyers and clients discussed the sale of a window-cleaning business in New York's Brownsville, four young gunmen entered, said, pleasantly, "Reach for the moon, gentlemen," meaning "Stick 'em up." The hands went up; the gunmen walked out with $2,501 in cash.

That was not playing the game. It is customary for lawyers to get money from gunmen, although, doubtless, these were not that type of lawyer.

SYNOPSIS

At a gathering in the village of Liberty, Maine, Jim Saladine listens to the history of the neighboring Hostile Valley, and the mysterious, enticing "Hurdy," wife of Will Ferrin. Interested, he drives to the Valley for a day's fishing, and to see the glamorous Huldys. "Old Marm" Pierce and her nineteen-year-old granddaughter Jenny live in the Valley. Since childhood Jenny has deeply loved young Will Ferrin, older than she, and who regards her as still a child. Will leaves to take employment in nearby Augusta. His father's death brings Will back to the Valley, but he returns to Augusta, still unconscious of Jenny's womanhood, and love. Bart Carey, something of a ne'er-do-well, is attracted by Jenny. The girl repulses him definitely. Learning that Will is coming home, Jenny, exulting, sets his long-empty house "to rights," and has dinner ready for him. He comes bringing his wife, Huldys. The girl's world collapses. Huldys becomes the subject of unfavorable gossip in the Valley. Entering his home unlooked for, Will finds seemingly damning evidence of his wife's infidelity as a man he knows in Seth Humphreys breaks from the house, Will overtakes him and chokes him to death, although Humphreys shatters his leg with a bullet. At Marm Pierce's house the leg is amputated. Jenny goes to break the news to Huldys. Huldys makes a mock of Jenny's sympathy, declaring she has no use for "half a man," and is leaving. Will is legally exonerated, and with a home-made artificial leg "carries on," hiring a helper, Zeke Dace. Months later Huldys comes back. Will accepts her presence as her right. Two years go by. Zeke and Bart Carey engage in a fist fight, the trouble arising, as all know, over Huldys. Saladine comes to the Valley. Bad roads cause him to stop at Ferrin's farm, where he meets Huldys. Saladine, caught in heavy rain, takes refuge at Marm Pierce's. Bart Carey arrives, carrying Huldys, whom he claims has fallen from a ledge, and seemingly is dead. Marm Pierce declares her dead.

"Land!" cried the little old woman. "I declare, my wits are skrimshaw!" She flitted to the kitchen. "I'd be letting this boll dry in another minute. Nothing stinks like burned vinegar! What's the matter with me?"

Saladine followed her into the kitchen. Bart stayed with Jenny in the dining room.

"I'll set it back to cool, or it'd take the hide off you," Marm Pierce decided, and suddenly she was busy with another saucepan, water, some twists of herbs from the cabinet above the sink. "I might try a hot steep on her chest," she whispered, half to herself. "No good just standing by."

And she called: "Jenny! Jenny!" The girl came softly to the door. "Jenny, you loose her clothes," Marm Pierce directed. "I'll want to rub this on her chest, soon's it's ready. Get her wet things off, easy as you can, not moving her. Get a blanket 'round her."

Jenny tried to speak; and after a minute she managed an assenting word. "Yes, Granny," she said, and closed the door.

Her faces were wavering; she turned and set her back against the door, and stood there weakly, looking toward the couch where Huldys's broken body lay.

So, slowly, at last she moved across the room.

Jenny approached the task of tending Huldys with a deep reluctance; but this was not because of the part Huldys had played in her life heretofore. She had cause enough to hate the woman, not so much because Huldys had pre-empted the place in Will's heart to which the girl so long had yearned, but because Huldys had wronged Will and flouted him and embittered all his life these later years. But in this hour Huldys was no longer the woman whom Jenny at once hated and despised; but only one who was hurt to death, and needed tendance. So after that first reluctance, Jenny began the task imposed upon her with gentle hands and pitying solicitude.

Once while she worked Marm Pierce called some question, and Jenny answered it almost heedlessly; but a moment later she was alert, watching the hurt woman keenly. For Huldys had stirred; and Jenny saw a faint movement of the other's breast.

But Huldys did not rouse, and when there was no more that Jenny could do, she stood beside the couch, lost in dim dreams and long thoughts of what had been.

After a long time, the pattern of the past began to shift and change, and Jenny glimpsed the future. Huldys was hurt, was dying. She would die and Will be left alone.

Alone, and free. And Jenny, understanding, felt her pulse quicken its beat, and her cheeks grow warm. Her eyes began to shine.

She had for the moment forgotten Huldys, in her thought of Will; yet she still stood above the hurt woman, looking down at her. And now suddenly she forgot Will again; for Huldys moved. Jenny saw her eyes half open, saw the lids crack, and the eyes—blank and wandering—stare up at the ceiling.

Then Huldys's eyes met Jenny's and held them for a pulse beat that was eternity. She looked at Jenny, and then her lips twisted a little in that familiar, half-insolent, half-challenging smile.

And from these lips came a sound, a low murmur of ironic laughter, perhaps a word.

Jenny bent lower, infinitely gentle; she whispered:

"It's all right, Mrs. Ferrin! We're taking care of you. Don't try to talk, ma'am. Just rest yourself."

The smile widened, and this time Huldys spoke audibly. Her voice was thin and strained, yet the words were clear enough. And they cut and burned and stung; for she said:

"You can have him now!"

Jenny's eyes widened at that, as though at a blow. She recoiled, faintly, her cheek crimson; but she gathered patient strength again.

"Hush, ma'am," she whispered. "We've sent for Will. He'll be right here. You rest yourself."

Huldys's head moved faintly, as though it were terribly heavy, as though she moved it by a slow tremendous effort. Her mouth was smiling still, dry lips twisted mockingly; and she spoke yet once more.

"He's finally fixed it so's he can have you," she said clearly, in that thin, strained, burning tone. "It was Will knocked me off. . . ."

She gasped and seemed to choke as though she would cough. Her breath withheld, she whispered:

"He hit me!"

Her mouth opened wider. She seemed to strain as though in the effort to produce one further word. Her lips drew tight across her teeth. Then she coughed faintly, convulsively; and her breast swelled, and remained distended, hollow, aching, for a long instant. Till the mockery faded from her eyes and left them blank and glazed; and she lay still, her smile now a fixed and merciless grin.

And there was no beauty in this that had been Huldys now.

For a space after the woman died, there lay in the dining room a long silence of horror and dismay. Jenny could not for her life have moved.

But the deep silence was broken presently, by a sound, sharp and startling; and at the same time hollow and sullen, as though a chair had overturned and fallen on a rotten floor.

Jenny heard it with half her mind; and a moment later she heard a stir in the kitchen, and movement there, and voices too. Yet it was as though these things were far off, remote from her and from the world in which she must hereafter dwell.

A world forever shadowed by the knowledge that Will, no matter under what ugly provocation, had struck this woman down to her destruction in the end.

Will, whom Jenny loved.

Blind, spinning chaos whirled like stars through the girl's thoughts; but through this chaos like a lightning stroke came her grandmother's voice. Marm Pierce called, from the kitchen: "Jenny, I'm opening the door!"

And at once she did so; but that instant was for Jenny an eternity, in which she had time to comprehend, and to consider, and desperately plan. When she whirled to face them, she was already resolved that this dark secret gone but herself should ever know; yet her own countenance might betray her to the old woman's shrewdly understanding eye.

Nevertheless she must face them; and she whirled toward the door, standing with her arms spread as though to hide this behind her, as though half fearful that even now Huldys would speak again. And she sought desperately some expedient to divert their eyes from her, their minds from her, lest her secret be too desperately plain.

For—secret it must be! Though this hour most shadow and distort her whole life hereafter, yet none should ever know.

The door opened and Marm Pierce came in, came toward her; but the old woman's eyes and mind were on Huldys, and Jenny made way for her to come to the dead woman's side. Yet she felt Saladine's glance upon her, and fought desperately for composure; and then Marm Pierce said soberly:

"No use now!" Bart asked huskily: "She's dead?" "Certain, she's dead."

Bart spoke to the girl, in a quick whisper. "Jenny, did she come to at all?" he asked.

Jenny wetted her lips; but she could not speak. She could only move her head in desperate denial; and there was a dreadful, shaken terror in her. Then Marm Pierce demanded irritably:

"Well, Jen! What you goggling for? Folks have died before!"

So Jenny found an expedient to turn their scrutiny away from herself. She remembered that toppling chair.

"There's someone in the Win-side the house," she said; and with a vast surge of relief saw their glances swing that way.

When Jenny had closed the door, shutting herself into the dining room where Huldys lay, Marm Pierce said insistently to Bart:

"You go 'long and fetch Will. Not that hurrying can help her; but Will had ought to know."

"I might do some help here," Bart still protested.

Marm Pierce spoke to Saladine. "Set down, you," she bade him. "Till I can rub that ankle of yours." And then, over her shoulder, to Bart still lingering:

"Well, then, go out in the hen pen and get me some feathers."

"Feathers?" he echoed. "T'll burn 'em under her nose. Might make her gasp and gag and start breathing. Don't stand there arguing. Go 'long with you!"

So Bart went out through the shed, and Saladine said gravely: "Ma'am, this ankle of mine can wait, if you can be doing anything for her."

"There's nought to do for Huldys Ferrin now," she told him in slow tones, and tossed her head. "And I dunno as I'd do it if there was! But I'll have to wait till the pot boils, anyhow. Might as well be doing this as setting here."

He suggested: "You sent Carey to get some feathers. If there's no chance, why, . . ."

She retorted: "I got fidgety with him hanging around." And after a silent moment she looked toward the dining room, as though her thoughts turned that way.

Saladine asked: "How do you reckon Mrs. Ferrin come to fall?"

"I want to know," said old Marm Pierce, and Jim stirred in quick attention. The phrase was usual enough, as an expression of surprise and interest and wonder; yet Saladine thought her accent and her intonation had not been usual.

There was a step in the shed, and Bart returned. She looked over her shoulder, saw him empty-handed. "Where's them feathers?" she demanded.

Bart seemed faintly to hesitate. "I couldn't find a dry one anywhere," he declared. "The rain has wet them all!"

She protested irritably: "Land sakes, I sh'd think you could find a dry one somewhere! You come 'long of me!" And she said to Jim, pointing toward the stove: "Let that boll up good, and then set it to cool. I'll be back in a minute to try it on her."

He nodded, and she went out through the shed with Bart on her heels; and Saladine was left wondering why old Marm Pierce was so bent on finding feathers to burn under Huldys's nose, if there was in fact no chance that the hurt woman could revive.

Then suddenly his hair prickled faintly; for it seemed to him there was a low murmur in the dining room.

And a chair toppled over, somewhere. The sound was loud and startling. Saladine came to his feet, half-crouching, ready for any apparition; but nothing did appear, nor did he hear any further sound.

Yet he felt, suddenly, rottenness all around; and he remembered that this was a house divided, half of it crumbling in a gangrenous decay. That toppling chair—if it was a falling chair which he had heard—might have been in the disused part of the house. There must be many such sounds there, when sudden plaster fell on rainy days, or beams gave way. . . .

The pot on the stove boiled, and as he lifted it, Marm Pierce and Bart returned, and the old woman had a tuft of feathers in her hands.

"Men are all blind as bats!" she exclaimed irascibly. She saw the boiling pot. "Now we'll try if there's anything to do!" And she went directly to the door between kitchen and dining room. "Jenny, I'm opening the door," she called, and waited a moment and then made good her word.

So they came into the dining room, and learned that Huldys was dead; and when Jenny said there was some one in the Win-side of the house, Saladine remembered that sound of a falling chair; and there seemed to him something hideous in the thought that anyone should prowl through those moldering and empty rooms while a woman here was dying. But Bart said reassuringly:

"That's likely Will, Granny. H. stayed at my place last night. He set out to go to Liberty this morning, but he might stop by here!"

The old woman assented scornfully: "He would if he was drunk enough!"

You go 'long, Bart, and fetch Will, and don't waste no more time."

So Bart at last departed; but Saladine paid no particular attention to his going. He was watching Jenny, puzzled by something in her eyes he could not read. He had seen in her a while ago deep terror, unmistakable; yet now it was gone. She had put on composure, and a steady courage; and he wondered, and wished to read her mind.

There was nothing to keep Saladine here; yet he stayed, and with a sense of waiting, an acute expectancy. He thought more and more of Jenny, remembering her terror at the sight of death, and the shadow in her eyes. Life for her must in the end center about some man. Bart Carey, perhaps? Bart stood straight, and his eye was bold and strong. It was suddenly strange to Saladine that Bart and Jenny were not married long ago. They were neighbors, of a like age, both comely with the splendor of youth, their interests akin. Between them no obstacle appeared.

Unless old Marm Pierce were an obstacle? Yet Saladine thought she had met Bart kindly today, treated him with courtesy. This might be guile—she might, while appearing to approve nevertheless check in every possible way the tendency of these two lives to flow together. Inconsequently, Saladine recalled the heavy rootstock of the water lily, which Jenny had fetched that morning from the brook. Some shadow of a forgotten memory stirred in him, and was gone without recognition; yet this memory would recur. It was one of the intangibles which made the whole of this day like a disordered dream.

The root itself was tangible enough; yet there were implications in it, just as there were implications in that peg leg Will Ferrin wore, and the cowboy hat so jauntily set atop the bowed and humble head of Zeke Dace, and the knotted rop that held Huldys Ferrin's garment close about her, and the boot prints on the fisherman's trail beside the brook, which had somehow ended without Saladine's remarking where they turned aside.

But most of all he thought of Huldys, and wondered how she came to fall to her death this day.

Then suddenly the dining room door opened, and Jenny came out into the kitchen, the old woman following her. "I'd best go myself," Jenny insisted; and Saladine saw a sort of stubborn haste in her eyes.

Marm Pierce protested: "Like enough Will and Bart will remember to bring something."

"Not Will," Jenny retorted. Her voice was gentle as she spoke the name. "A man wouldn't think of it. And it isn't for men to do, anyway. Rummaging through her things." She took down a heavy oilskin coat from behind the kitchen door. "I'll go myself," she said. "If I meet Will, I'll have him come on here, case you need anything. I'll get what's wanted and fetch it."

Saladine asked: "Anything I can do?"

But Jenny said: "I'm going after some clothes for her. The ones she's got on are all wet. I could dress her in something of mine, but she wouldn't want that. She'd want her own things. You stay here with Granny," she requested, and he nodded.

Then she was gone.

Theories Concerning Cosmic Rays

There are current three tentative theories concerning the origin and nature of cosmic rays. The most inspiring and philosophically or spiritually significant of the three is that the rays result from the formation of heavy atoms in interstellar space, a process which perpetually re-creates the universe and will prevent it from running down like a clock. This adequate knowledge of the rays may contribute to a solution of the riddle of the universe.

COUNTY AGENT NEWS

By ROSS B. JENKINS

COTTON COMMITTEE ATTENDED PLAINVIEW AAA MEET

Callahan Cotton Committee composed of Aaron McKey, Clyde V. F. Jones, Baird; S N Foster, Atwell; and Community Committee Earl C Hayes of Clyde accompanied their County Agent, Ross B. Jenkins to Plainview November 13 to hear C. A Cobb, Chief of the AAA Cotton Section discuss the cotton program.

Mr. Cobb said we had come a long way since 1933 when cotton was selling at 5 cents per pound and seed at $8 per ton but we haven't reached the goal yet. He said the program is going to continue with the great number of farmers voting for it whether the courts declared it constitutional or not. The farmers have voted 9 to 1 for it to go on and it has been passed by the congress to continue for 4 more years. "Its not a matter of the constitution that we are concerned with but to get for the farmer all that is due him under the constitution that the AAA is working to gain" he stated.

The new program that is soon to be released is one that was drawn by farmers who have followed down the row behind the plow shares from every cotton producing state and has been accepted by the Secretary of Agriculture. It is a program of the farmers, for the farmers, by the farmers. It will run for 4 years and has tried to correct the mistakes that have been found in the first program ever enacted for the cotton producer.

"This is a chance to get the government on the dotted line in cooperation with the farmers to insure a steady income", Mr. Cobb said.

CORN HOG CONTRACT CLARIFICATION

Recently the secretary of the corn hog association mailed letters to each individual for their information and give the number of hogs allowed to kill and also the number allowed for sale. This information was compiled from the true history of the producers operation and was his average over a period of 2 years.

It did not mean that if a producer had been killing only 2 hogs, for example, that he could not kill more than that number. On the contrary, if he had been killing 2 hogs and was allowed to sell 6 hogs, he would have a total production base of 8 hogs. If he desired to kill the entire 8 for his home use the Government does not care, so long as his total allowable of hogs to be raised does not amount to more than the total of his killing base and sales allowable.

Some producers have understood that the Government is trying to limit them to so many hogs to kill. This is not the fact, but the history of his contract showed his yearly average number of hogs to be killed was the amount entered on his contract. Any farmer may kill more than his average but this number will be subtracted from the number allowed to be sold.

If there is any question in the mind of any who read this column about your allowable, please address the Secretary, Mrs. R. C. Corn, and she explain it in detail, or better still, drop in and see her

V-8 LEADERSHIP

ON OCTOBER 31 of last year, Henry Ford announced his intention to build a million Ford V-8s in 1935. We are pleased to report that this goal was reached in exactly ten months instead of a full year.

One million cars and trucks is an impressive total. But figures by themselves mean nothing. It is what they represent that counts. Selling a V-8 at a low price has brought a new kind of automobile within reach of the people. Producing it has provided steady work for hundreds of thousands of men in the Ford plants, in associated industries and on the farm.

These million Ford V-8 cars and trucks have helped to make things better all around. In the first ten months of 1935 the Ford Motor Company paid out in the United States alone, $140,119,326.00 in wages and $523,111,399.00 for materials.

Clyde School To Send Students To Centennial In Dallas

At a recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Clyde Independent District, it was decided that a real treat should be given to twelve students of the school. Two students are to be selected from each grade from the sixth to the eleventh inclusive and given a three days trip to Dallas next summer with all expenses paid.

Points will be given on high grades, deportment, application, participation in interscholastic league events, and attitude toward school work in general. The two pupils in each grade who score the highest will be given this splendid trip.

It is expected that a great deal of interest will be manifested as a result of the plan.

The School Board is to be commended on taking such steps.

Mother, I can't Study—My head hurts!

As a usual thing, he is "such a regular guy." He comes home from school full of pep and energy. Of course you want him that way always. But are you protecting his health and safety during the few short months of winter when he must spend his evenings indoors?

That uncomfortable "stuffy" feeling . . . dullness . . . lowered vitality . . . headache—these are some of nature's ways of complaining against improper heating and insufficient ventilation. These are the warning signals that America's Public Health Enemy Number One, the common cold germ, has found another fertile field in which to attack. For your health's sake and that of your loved ones do not wait for these definite signs of warning that the air indoors has become stale. Keep the air you breathe constantly purified with fresh oxygen through adequate ventilation in every room in the house.

Without oxygen man cannot live. Without oxygen, fuel cannot burn. Therefore, if your family "huddles" in one or two rooms around an open flame heater during cold weather with the doors and windows tightly closed, you are violating all the rules of nature, good health and good heating. Sooner or later the occupants of the room and the burning fuel reduce the oxygen content to the point where the room air becomes stale. Without adequate ventilation and circulation the air indoors may become as foul and unhealthy as that of the tenement slums of large cities, even though your home may be the most beautiful in the neighborhood.

A simple and easy method of providing a constant circulation of fresh air is found by opening a window in each room a few inches from the top and bottom. Connecting doors left open between adjoining rooms when the entire house is adequately heated provide a natural circulation of pure warm air from one room to another. Incidentally, fresh, pure air is easier and more economical to heat than "stale" air.

Guard the health of your loved ones with adequate heat and proper ventilation of pure air in every room in the house.

Reason Faulty

But how are you going to induce men to be moral without either laws or religion? Are you to depend on reason?

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation. Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all. Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

FLOYD GIBBONS Adventurers' Club Hello, Everybody!

"Thrilling—Almost a Killing!"

By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter.

I BUMPED into this story today from Mr. Bernard Bumpus, and I don't mind telling you boys and girls that Mr. Bumpus certainly was put over the bumps in what he tells us was the biggest thrill in his young life. Let's bump into it.

Bumpus bumped into adventure—excuse me, Bernard, for my Bumptious puns—bump me off if I do it again—when he ran to the rescue of a friend he thought was about to be bumped—I mean killed off—by robbers. And it was quite a rumpus that Bumpus bumped into—all right, Reader, I'll stop!

In 1934 Bernard lived in New Bedford, Mass., and worked in Wareham. He had a pal—an insurance agent—who used to run back and forth between the two places daily in his car and he generally took Bernard with him.

One evening as they met at their usual place for the home ride, the agent told Bernard that he had to make an important collection at the "Head of the Bay," which is about three miles through dense woods from Buzzards Bay.

Mr. Bumpus Figures He's Being Kidded.

As the men rode through the night the insurance man confided to Bernard that he was carrying a large sum of money with him and was glad that Bernard was along. He added that the place they were headed for was an isolated spot and a tough crowd—capable of even murder—hung out there.

Now Bernard says his pal was an inveterate practical joker, and he thought right away he was being kidded so he decided to hand the line right back to him.

"That's all right," Bernard said. "I'll take care of you. If anybody gets tough, why just whistle three times and I'll clean out the place." That promise, Bernard says, seemed to reassure his friend, so nothing more was said until they drew up in the darkness before an isolated cabin lighted only by a dim kerosene lamp.

The place was miles from nowhere and, despite the fact that Bernard thought his friend was joking, he had a strange feeling of uneasiness.

Bernard stayed in the car as the insurance man picked his way carefully toward the house. "Don't forget the three whistles," he warned. Bernard smiled to himself and settled back in the car. Once alone, however, he began to think the situation might not be so funny after all. His friend, he knew, often carried large sums on collection days—and this spot looked about as ideal a place for a robbery as you could find. He made up his mind to play safe and be on the alert.

Mysterious Goings-On Reveal Themselves.

A few seconds after the insurance man had disappeared toward the back of the house, Bernard saw a huge man slink out the front door and make for the back.

The man carried a lantern in one hand and an axe in the other. As the lantern went around the rear of the house, Bernard heard something that drove all thoughts of a practical joke out of his head. A shot rang out from the rear of the place!

Bernard straightened up with a jerk and strained his eyes in the direction his friend had taken. He held his breath as he listened for the signal agreed upon. It was no joke now he knew—and then he heard the signal.

Three faint whistles came from the back of the house—whistles so faint that they might have been made with a man's dying breath!

"Believe me, I was scared," Bernard writes. "I didn't know what to do. Was it all a joke or had they shot and killed my friend? Should I start the car and drive for help, or should I run to his aid as I had promised? I was unarmed and felt that I would be helpless against them and yet it seemed cowardly to run away."

"Did I want to be a live coward or a dead hero? My thoughts probably took only a few seconds, but it seemed as though I was wasting hours of valuable time. I sat behind the wheel ready to start the motor, and then the next instant I had jumped noiselessly out of the car and, grabbing a big stone from the road, went creeping like an Indian to the rear of the house."

Mr. Bumpus Starts to Bump—With a Rock.

"The man with the lantern had his back to me—I sneaked up with the heavy stone held ready for a death blow. In another second that stone would crash into his skull! He didn't hear me as I made the last few steps in a jump."

Wham! The big stone came down with a dull thud!

But it didn't come down on the head of the man with the lantern. No, sir-ree, Mr. Bumpus had bumped—there I go again—into another figure in the dark and the stone plopped to the ground harmlessly. A familiar laugh sounded in Bernard's ear, and as he looked sheepishly around the live insurance man explained everything.

The shot had been fired at a raccoon which had been caught red-handed robbing the chicken coop. The insurance man wanted Bernard to see the fun so he whistled.

"But the weak whistle?" Bernard asked.

"New false teeth," the agent answered.

Wow! What a close call for the man with the lantern! And it just goes to show, boys and girls, how a little thing like a new set of teeth might bumpus off!

People of History Are Pictured on P. O. Stamps

A little more than five centuries ago Great Britain was on the way to conquering all France, but at the psychological moment the French army was imbued with a new spirit and, at the City of Orleans, won a great victory so that France was saved, notes a writer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

At the head of the French troops there appeared, one day, a young woman in white armor, riding a great black horse. The French followed her bravely, and at Orleans she led them to victory.

Later the young woman, known to history as Joan of Arc, was captured and burned at the stake by the English; but her mission, that of saving France, had been accomplished. Five hundred years after the deliverance of France at Orleans France issued a dark-blue postage stamp of 50 cent's value. The center design pictured Joan of Arc on her horse, riding victoriously ahead of the French army. Few of the greatest men and women of history have been omitted from postage stamps of the world. Among the rulers we find numerous portraits from ancient Egypt down to the present time. Rameses II, Pharaoh of Egypt and Augustus Caesar of Rome are among the older monarchs.

In the field of science we have Copernicus, the astronomer, on a Polish stamp; Pasteur on a French stamp and Mendeleeff, the biochemist, on a Soviet Russian stamp. Among the musicians we find Beethoven shown on a German stamp, Dvorak on a Czechoslovakian stamp and Beethoven as well as Bruckner, Haydn, Mozart on stamps from Austria!

Japanese Renaissance

Perhaps the world's most astonishing revolution began in 1868, when Japan began reconstituting her Middle Ages, feudal empire into a modern nation. Englishmen were brought in to create a navy and build railways and light houses; Frenchmen to recast the laws and train the army; Americans to organize education and the postal service. Germans to train medical men and organize local government.

National Farm Policy Is Goal

AAA Working With That End in View; Decentralization Process Going On

By EARL GODWIN

WASHINGTON.—Back of the AAA is a land policy we will come to some day. We are reaching out for the day when we will naturally and willingly conserve and use American farm land in accordance with the principles of good farm management. This may be well known to some readers of this column, but in Washington, where they do practically everything with an eye to politics, it was refreshing to me to sit in the office of Chester Davis (he is AAA administrator) and get this long range view of the adjustment theories.

Some day we will be able to get the best out of agriculture by a common program. . . . We will make progress toward the ultimate goal by a series of jerks—such as the experience of AAA up to date; but when we get there we will wonder why we spent a century or so stopping on our own feet.

Agricultural adjustment is working toward preventing soil erosion, floods, and wrong use of soil as well as adjusting the crops to the market. In a sense it is using the 6,000,000 or so American farms as one community—so that each individual gets the benefit of combined and consolidated wisdom. When that day arrives we will accept it as a matter of course, just as we now accept a uniform school system, federal aid to roads, post offices, lighthouses and what not, and mind you, these things were all subject to violent attacks in the beginning.

I don't know that the good old Tories will ever get over that slaughter of the little pigs which heralded the hog control program. They blame practically every subsequent economic occurrence on the death of those small porkers, and I imagine that the generation of those weeping for these little pigs will have to pass away before this event will cease to represent a rallying point for the opposition to a national farm policy. We are going to have that in city politics from now on. I said city politics because, as we all know, city congressmen of both parties are going to blame all living costs on the slaughter of those small pigs and promise—if elected—to prevent any such catastrophe in the future. Nationally, it certainly seems that the Republicans will not try to elect a President who opposes the principles of AAA. That eight to one vote for the continuance of the hog-corn program certainly knocked any such idea in the head. There are about six and a half million farms; there have been 5,561,754 AAA contracts since the beginning, and there are now 3,554,000 1935 contracts. More than half the farms appear to be represented, and that's too big a proportion of farms to be neglected by a national political platform.

The experts have apparently confused their findings covering prices—particularly respecting meat cattle and hogs. Nor are they clear as to the numbers of meat animals. These details are involved in the AAA plans, but it is evident that while there may not be many more cattle for slaughter there will be more meat—account of bigger and better animals because of more feed raised.

PLAN SIMPLIFICATION

The Republicans will, I presume, attack AAA on local administrative lines. They may say the administration is overstaffed; that there are too many officials or something like that; but the AAA seems to have started a movement which will rob the critics of that ammunition.

A simplification and decentralization process is going on. More work in the field and less at Washington. There have been long delays in auditing; long delays in receiving checks. The old Washington red tape nearly choked 'em to death in AAA, but that is being taken care of. Some day it will all be as simple as the mailing of a letter—an achievement which did not reach its present day smooth perfection without years of effort.

One source of complaint is the "historical basis" for AAA contracts. They took the figures on what a farmer produced over a certain number of years and calculated his reduction on that, which hasn't pleased everybody, nor is it entirely fair. The next phase of this part of AAA will be a flexible program, which will remove many injustices.

Republicans are making a drive to discredit the administration's farm policy by emphasizing the fact that we are importing a large amount of foodstuffs. They will say that reducing crops of corn, hogs, wheat, etc., resulted in such a shortage that we had to go to Europe, South America and Canada for enough to supply the market. Of course, they fail to state that we have had no AAA control of oats and rye; but they include these grains in their blasts. The greatest cause of shortage in foodstuffs was the drought. The greatest reduction by drought ever known in this country preceded the shortage which induced us to import foodstuffs.

Regardless of the drought the administration knows it faces that stark fact about food importation and yet, by the time election rolls around, it is said to be a ten-to-one wager that our farm production will have been adjusted and the excitement over the importation of foodstuffs will have subsided. In spite of these nagging troubles, AAA seems to be doing pretty well. The cotton referendum in December, 1934, was 89 1/2 per cent favorable. That same month the tobacco referendum was 97 1/2 per cent favorable. The wheat referendum in May of this year was 86 per cent favorable, and about the same proportion of hog-corn farmers voted "yes" in the recent referendum.

And the trend of cash income for farmers has been right straight upward since 1932, when it totaled $4,328,000,000. In 1933 it was $5,117,000,000; in 1934 it was $6,387,000,000, and this year it is heading toward $6,800,000,000.

MUCH REPAIR WORK AHEAD

Rusty railroad tracks, rickety freight cars, unpainted houses and leaky roofs! They are due for a good going over next year, a fact which means a lot to the agricultural community—because the experts here all agree that 1936 will see so much money spent for replenishing and repairing our worn-out railroads, factories and homes, that there will be a 10 per cent increase in purchasing power for food.

A painstaking study by the bureau of agricultural economics published in book form makes a volume as large as a mail order catalogue, and makes use of expert knowledge of everything from peanuts to world trade and international finance. The nub of the study is this: The demand for farm production in this country next year is likely to be greater than 1935, which means a trend toward higher prices, except that there is also indicated larger meat animals, more grains and more vegetables. Around the world the worst of the depression is over, and as industrial production increases people have more money for food, for better clothes, and for replacements. In this country the experts expect industrial increases will pay the workers about 10 per cent more, with correspondingly higher demand for the better meats and dairy, fruit and vegetable products. Also, in those pools where money collects—like New York and Chicago—look out for a small or possibly a good-sized boom, with all that goes with it.

Solemn-eyed economists are always talking about the necessity for starting up "the durable goods industries" which include the steel, iron, brick and stone and similar trades. Well, if the signs are O. K. we will see the railroads spending for steel; the automobile industry spending for expansion, the building industries rushing the erection of homes, and a new lease of life on the almost moribund office building business. Such things not only start money flowing where it will do the most good, but it gets business people all excited about prosperity.

Auto production this year will be about 3,700,000 cars and trucks, which is 30 per cent more than in 1934 and 100 per cent greater than the low point in 1932 when the bottom fell out of nearly everything. Now, as incomes increase, people buy new cars sooner—there will not be as many old cars on the road in a couple of years.

The experts have apparently confused their findings covering prices—particularly respecting meat cattle and hogs. Nor are they clear as to the numbers of meat animals. These details are involved in the AAA plans, but it is evident that while there may not be many more cattle for slaughter there will be more meat—account of bigger and better animals because of more feed raised.

ELECTION AFTERMATH

They are still quarreling here as to who won the state and city elections earlier this month, but you can answer them this way: Had it been a Presidential election Roosevelt would have carried New York and Kentucky, but might have lost Ohio.

A four hundred thousand Democratic lead in New York state and the largest Democratic lead in Kentucky in half a century do not indicate that Mr. Roosevelt is slipping.

Kentucky results are interesting because "As Kentucky goes, so goes the nation." Back in 1907 Kentucky started the habit of electing governors from the party which next year would win the Presidency. In 1907 Kentucky elected a Republican governor, and the following year Taft won over Bryan. Four years later Kentucky elected a Democrat, and the next year Wilson was elected President; and so on, with the exception of the Coolidge year, when a Democrat was selected in Kentucky, which was the single exception. Kentucky Republican governors preceded Harding and Hoover; a Democrat preceded Roosevelt; now comes A. B. Chandler, New Deal Democrat in Kentucky, with a huge vote. Does that also indicate Roosevelt again next year?

Presidents generally need New York to win, but there is an impression here that Roosevelt can lose New York and still win. In 1907 New York Republicans won a majority in the assembly in spite of the 400,000 Democratic lead, because the New York election districts have been so arranged that it takes a Democratic landslide to carry the legislature, and for that reason New York's assembly is generally Republican.

Republicans claim they won a victory in New York, but, as I say, if the same situation obtained in New York next year the Republicans would have the state assembly but Roosevelt would have the state's electoral vote. One consequence of the New York vote and the general ballyhoo following it is that Republican supporters will more readily contribute cash because their party has come to life. Money will come along from company officials, power trust magnates and millionaires who object to paying an increased income tax. This money reason partly explains why Republican leaders are making such unlimited claims and are so venomous in their abuse of the President.

In bread and cakes and breakfast foods and macaroni, you will consume 230 pounds of flour and cereals. Sugar, 102 pounds of it, is the next most important item. Of canned fruits and vegetables, you will eat 33 pounds, states Today.

Laxative combination folks know is trustworthy

The confidence thousands of parents have in good, old reliable, powdered Theodor's Black-Draught has prompted them to get the new Syrup of Black-Draught for their children. The grown folks stick to the powdered Black-Draught; the youngsters probably will prefer it when they outgrow their childish love of sweets. Mrs. C. W. Adams, of Murray, Ky., writes: "I have used Theodor's Black-Draught (powder) about thirteen years, taking it for biliousness. Black-Draught acts well and I am always pleased with the results. I wanted a good, reliable laxative for my children. I have found Syrup of Black-Draught to be just that."

The Day Before Thanksgiving

New England Thanksgiving Busy Time

THANKSGIVING day! How these words spelled days and days of work and worry for the colonial housewife! A festive holiday it was called by proclamation, observes a writer in the Boston Herald, but actually it represented a day which demanded more preparation than most any other in the year. Our old New England traditions required it—the Puritans did, so must we—was the common understanding of the day.

In days of yore grandmother would start her Thanksgiving preparation weeks in advance. The pies must be made. Of course she wouldn't serve mince pies that hadn't "ripened." They were made in quantity and put down cellar where they frequently froze to a solidity overcome only by a hot oven just before the feast.

In passing it might be well to remind you of the custom in one New England family to have three pieces of pie for breakfast on Thanksgiving morn. Mince, apple and squash were the three dictated by tradition.

Well in advance of the traditional day one would see grandmother take down the seasoning used but a few times a year, the crackers would be ground up and gradually the stuffing for the turkey was prepared—this also went down cellar to ripen. We mustn't forget the plum pudding which was made well in advance and hung in a bag up in the attic suspended from a nail so interested mice could not approach.

Then came the days before Thanksgiving. Sons were drafted to collect and crack the butternuts, walnuts, bechnuts, etc. (and more than one finger was smashed in the process). Daughters were drafted to peel squash, turnips, carrots, potatoes, sweet and white, and of course the proverbial tear-producing onions.

The turkey must be caught, killed, plucked, singed and hung up for a day before he was brought to the kitchen. Grandmother must make her famous nut bread for William ("he does like it so when he comes home"). "Sadie, you make the fudge—Sue, you make—the molasses candy—Sue, you make—and so it goes. Everyone hustles, all wanting the same dishes, the same stove cover, the mix'n' spoon, etc.

the village and get me some more crackers—Glory me! I've run out of seasoning"—and the errands start.

These were typical New England days of preparation for the Thanksgiving feast, all of which must be executed in addition to the regular chores of making butter for market twice a week, churning the cottage cheese, collecting the eggs, etc., etc.

Then came the day—the house must be spic and span. Dozens of pictures must be dusted, the parlor must be opened up, wood brought in for the extra stove, chestnuts gathered to put on the fireplace hearth—and on went to the great process of preparation.

The folks came, hugs and kisses went the rounds, the new baby was chucked under the chin and an immediate retreat to the kitchen by the feminine members took place. By one-thirty or two the feast took place—and then the dishes. Stacks upon stacks of dishes, pots and pans (usually the turkey pan went under the sink for scouring the following day).

PLYMOUTH ROCK

BECAUSE the proprietor of a home for tourists solicited patronage on historic old Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts, he was brought before the town council of Plymouth within whose border the old rock lies. The ruling of the council was that the old rock does not belong to the town or to any private individual but to the entire country, all Americans having the same rights of ownership—in this shrine.

Games, gossip, etc., occupied a brief period until time for supper, when again the kitchen staff swung into action and made turkey sandwiches, poured the cider and cut up the pies.

As the lights were blown out it was unusual to hear the women folks say, "Didn't we have a good time, but isn't Thanksgiving a tiresome day!"

This was the Thanksgiving of yore contrasted to the modern Thanksgiving of a restful morning, a motor ride through the country or a ride "in town," a sumptuous dinner prepared by chefs who have vied with grandmother and her recipes until even she is forced to admit that she has been surprised—a delightful matinee at the theater and an evening in the game cellar at home. What a contrast—and what a pity that grandmothers of old couldn't be here now to reap the benefits of the advance of New England family traditions!

THE THANKSGIVING PIE

Thanksgiving Pumpkin Pies
From the time the first golden pumpkin makes its appearance until the last one has been taken out of storage, there's no more universally popular dessert than pumpkin pie. Although canned pumpkin is available at all times and makes excellent pies, pumpkin pie enjoys a definite season and is most appreciated during the autumn months. Everybody has his own very definite ideas of just what a pumpkin pie should be from color to taste.

IRON DOG GROWLS

The use to which the photophone, popularly known as the electric eye, is put are literally numberless. One of the most peculiar is used by a practical joker to give voice to an iron dog on his lawn. When a visitor approaches he is startled by growls for on his approach he interrupts a beam of light focused on an electric eye and that sets off the vocal mechanism—a big, raucous buzzer.—OH Power.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds. Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

"Calumet sure gives you your money's worth, with that Big New 10¢ Can!"

SAYS MRS. W. W. HICKEY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.

"THERE'S a lot of good baking in that 10c can of Calumet," observes Mrs. Hickey. "It's worth more than a dime any day!"

"Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25c now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!"

Grandfather Rommel, who was a baker for 40 years, says: "Calumet takes the guesswork out of the job nowadays."

LOOK AT THE NEW CALUMET CAN!
A simple twist... and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHAT makes Calumet so dependable? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat. This Double-Action produces perfect leavening.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history... The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25c! And ask to see the new 10c can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods.

A BULL'S EYE FOR DAD

WITH BAIRD BAPTIST

We certainly did have a good day Sunday—an even 100 in Sunday school but our collection was just the thing, over 100 dollars was handed in on the building fund Yes, we went over our goal now why not bring the other in next Sunday and get it over with. We have $175.00 more to raise in order to be ready to dedicate the building on the first Sunday in December and we have set that day and Bro. G W Parks has been invited and has agreed to come and preach the dedicatory sermon

We are asking every member of the church to be in the service next Sunday and help us do this glorious little task which means so much to all of us. We are not neglecting other things but we are at the business of raising the money to pay off the debt on the church and we are in dead earnest, every member should be glad to do his bit and I believe that every one just as far as their ability goes is willing to and will do his or her part

Next Wednesday night we will have a big Thanksgiving service. This will be especially for the members of the Baptist church but anyone who can and will is not only welcome, but we invite such, in fact we invite all to attend this service and enjoy a good old fashioned Thanksgiving service At that meeting we will make our final arrangements for the dedicatory service the following Sunday morning

We will have our regular service next Sunday morning, and our Unions will meet at 6:30, then we will dismiss and go to the Methodist church to welcome the new Pastor This is a custom we have had here for a long time and I like it although it has been a long time since the Baptist church has had the pleasure of having such a service

Our WMS meets Monday afternoon at 3:00, every member in the church is urged to attend, last Monday afternoon there were 15 present and they had a good program Come sister, let's make it 20 next Monday afternoon New everyone to the task!
