A Mournful and Melancholy Motto for the Mugwump.

What a Wag Wrote at the White House-Mr. Coryell, of Colorado, the Pink of Patriotic Patience-A Moneyless Man from Missouri.

Special to The News.

Washington, Oct. 12.-"No Mugwumps need apply," was the legend which startled Mr. Eliphalet Sanders, of Brooklyn, as he stepped into the White House lobby yester-The heroic face of old Tom Jefferson looked down from a large painting on the wall. The mouth of the great statesman was pursed in conscious power, and a scroll of paper lay extended at his left hand. Some wag had, a few moments before, with a crayon, traced the words which confronted Sanders, of New York. "Well, I expected it!" exclaimed the empire statesman, and, turning upon his heel, he started for the depot. The knowing ones state, however, that the wag had written better than he knew, and that hereafter the administration will extend no more courtesies to the Mugwumps, who are believed to be hustling back into the Republican ranks, whence they came in the vain hope of spoils. "No Mugwumps need apply" will be the shibboleth of sturdy Democrats from now on.

CORYELL OF COLORADO.

At last Mr. Charles A. Coryell, of Denver, nas secured an office. Seven months ago this Colorado gentlemen gazed with rapture upon President Cleveland's inaugural procession as it moved up Pennsylvania avenue amid the booming of cannon and the clash of a hundred bands of music. Rejoicing over the successful advent of a new Democracy with sharpened appetite, filled with a pardonable enthusiasm and elated over the brilliant patriotism of the hour, Mr. Coryell promptly made application for an Indian agency and engaged rooms for two weeks at a boarding house. A fortnight slipped away while the applicant was a daily visitor at the Interior Department The weeks passed into months, and half a year went into history and the office seeker, while losing flesh, still clung to that ideal hope which, in Colorado, is cut out of the granite of the mountains and carries a lariat in one hand and a prospector's pick in the other. Mr. Coryell saw the offices distributed day by day, and scanned the bulletins with eyes expectant only to see that his name was not written in the great official register of the government. Finally the office he sought was given to somebody else. Calmly he made application for another position, and when that was captured by a stranger, then another, and another, until, after repeated interviews and appeals with Secretary Lamar, the latter was induced to promise something to the Colorado man. It was held that Democrats from that State did not deserve anything at the hands of the new adminisyear went into history and the office seeker, Democrats from that State did not deserve anything at the hands of the new administration, but the Secretary had promised, and the Western applicant continually refreshed the memory of the promissory cabinet minister. The cool October days, the saddest of the year (in Washington), were being checked off on the calendar by Mr. Coryell, when suddenly, at high noon on the 6th instant, the glorious announcement was made that Mr. Charles A. Coryell, of Denver, was appointed receiver at the of Denver, was appointed receiver at the Del Norte Land Office, and the happy man departed for home with his commission. The struggles of the Colorado man were equaled by thousands of other office-seekers. who have not been successful. "The fact is," said an official to-day, "there are not enough offices to go around, and many must be disappointed." "BUSTED" AND BEGGING.

"Beg pardon, stranger, but could you spare me a quarter to get a bite to eat?" sadly asked a spare Missourian to THE NEWS correspondent one evening recently, under the deepening shades of the tall sycamore trees in front of the White House. "I have been here four months expecting an appointment, and am a little short." This latter man represents a numerous class who remain here until their funds are expended, and, as the walking is bad, they cannot reach home. The city is full of disappointed place hunters, and their ranks are being daily swelled.

CLEARING UP THE CLAIMS. The Court of Commissioners of Alabama Claims is fairly booming. By day and night the judges are laboring hard and sweeping the docket at the rate of 250 cases per week By the close of the current year, when the court shall have ceased to exist, the great mass of business which has been referred to it will be disposed of. This will be as a reit will be disposed of. This will be as a re-buke to Comptroller Durham, who cut the court off on short rations. The attorneys are furnishing funds for all this booming, and Congress will be asked to appropriate money for the deficiency temporarily supplied by the lawyers.

GENERAL WASHINGTON NEWS.

SUPREME COURT IN SESSION. Washington, Oct. 12.—Supreme Court formally assembled for the October term this morning with a full bench. A number of lawyers were admitted to practice and the court adjourned until to-morrow. The docket now contains nearly 1100 cases and new ones are being added daily. Members of the Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Waite and accompanied by Attorney General Garland and Solicitor General Goode, called this morning to pay their respects to the President.

A POSTOFFICE GOING BEGGING. The postoffice at Holdridge, Neb., became presidential on Jan. 1 last, but as yet not an application for the position of postmaster has been filed at the Postoffice Department. NAVAL INVESTIGATIONS. The report of the Naval Board of Appraisers, appointed to appraise the work done on the unfinished cruisers Atlanta, Boston and Chicago, and the value of materials on hand at Roach's shippard in Chester, has been received at the Navy Department. Secretary Whitney will probably make the report public in a few days.

TIMBER DEPREDATIONS ON PUBLIC LANDS. Commissioner Sparks, of the General Land Office, has received the following report in regard to the cutting of timber in port in regard to the cutting of timber in the Northwest:

"Department of the Interior, General Land Office, Rathdrum, Idaho, Oct. 3, 1885.—
To Hon. Commissioner General of the Land Office: Sir—I have the honor to report that I have completed the reports in the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. and the Montana Improvement Co. timber trespass cases, and herewith transmit eight reports, making, with what I have already transmitted, thirty-one separate indictments in all, showing that these corporations have caused to be cut from the public domain 45,100,000 feet of lumber and bridge timber, 84,744 railroad ties, 15,400,000 shingles (61,600 bunches), 32,035 cords of wood and 20,000 cedar posts. To value the lumber at $10 per 1000 feet, which would be a low figure, the railroad ties at forty cents per tie, the wood at $3 per cord, the posts at $20 per thousand, or 50 cents a bunch, would amount to $613,402. This does not represent all the ties and wood cut for the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. by Eddy Hammond & Co., which changed its firm to the Montana Improvement Co. in July 1883, as I found it an absolute impossibility to get witnesses to testify in these cases, or even to find persons of whom I could obtain anything like satisfactory information. Where the depredations were committed, between Rathdrum and Bearmouth, Montana, the country is very thinly settled and men who were employed on the contracts during the construction of the Northern Pacific Railway, have gone to parts unknown. Owing to this it has taken me much longer to complete this investigation than it otherwise should. I was hampered by officers of the Montana Improvement Co., who appeared to expect an estigation than it otherwise should. I was ampered by officers of the Montana Improvement Co., who appeared to expect an investigation, and were fortifying their osition. The company have agents along an eline endeavoring to suppress the facts of the Montana Improvement Co.'s operators. The company is an unscrupilous. of the Montana Improvement Co.'s operations. The company is an unscrupulous corporation that will leave nothing undone to gain their point. I found that no reliance whatever could be placed on the statements made by officers of the Montana Improvement Co. I have mailed you a copy in duplicate of the contract between the Northern Pacific Railway and the Montana Improvement Co. It was furnished me by H. W. Fairweather, of Sprague, W. T., an ex-division superintendent of the Northern Pacific Railroad Co. M. J. HALEY, Special Timber Agent.

Rathdrum—The contract referred to by Agent Haley in the above report is between the Northern Pacific Railway Co. of the first part and the Montana Improvement Co. of the second part. It binds the railroad company to withdraw all of its timber lands from sale and disposal, and gives the improvement company, the exclusive right to cut timber from the lands. In return the for the prollege the improvement company transfers the railroad company 1001 full paid shares of its capital stock, of the value of $1,000,100, reserving to itself shares valued at $999,900. The improvement company agrees also to erect, at its own expense, all mills and furnish all plant necessary for its business of timber cutting. THE CONTRACT. THE PRESIDENT GOING HOME TO VOTE.

The Post to-morrow will state upon authority that President Cleveland will go home to vote. He will leave this city Nov. 2, vote in Buffalo on the following day and return in the afternoon to Washington. Se retary Manning and Col. Lamont will accompany the President, the former voting in Albany and the latter in Cortland PRESIDENTIAL APPOINTMENTS. The President, late this afternoon, made the following appointments: Redmon S Dent, of Illinois, Surveyor General of the Territory of Utah; Edmond G. Shields, of New Mexico, to be Register of the Land Of-fices at Las Cruces, N. M.

IMMIGRATION STATISTICS TO BE DISCON TINUED.

Secretary Manning, believing it impracticable to procure under the existing laws accurate statistics of immigrants arriving in the United States by railways from contiguous foreign territory, has ordered its discontinuance for the present.

Health Board Meeting.

BUFFALO, Oct. 12 .- At a special meeting of the Health Board this morning Dr. Briggs sent on a report of the situation along the border. He says there are eleven passenger trains passing across the river from Canada every day, and he finds it will be impossible for the local inspectors to attend to them without aid. He recommends the appointment of a sanitary in spector located at the suspension bridge to aid the inspector from here. He recom mends the immediate vaccination of school mends the immediate vaccination of school children and all persons in asylums, jails and other places of detention. An appropriation of $1000 for the purchase of vaccine virus is asked. The correspondence between the Treasury Department and the local Health Board was then considered, and a motion was adopted requesting Gov. Hill to ask the Government for inspectors, as only under that condition can they be obtained. Dr. Briggs says the general sanitary condition of the city is very good, in fact never better than at present. fact never better than at present.

At the conclusion of the performance the audience was photographed and each auditor was presented with a copy of the picture.

Suit on a Patent.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—The suit of Joseph McArthur, of New York, against the People's Passenger Railway Co., brought to receive remuneration for the use of the improved snow sweeper, for which complainants claim to hold a patent, was put upon trial before Judges McNann and Butler in the Circuit Court this morning and took up

The Business Men's Meeting Accomplishes Nothing.

They Resolve to Remain Neutral and Call on the Mayor to Enforce the Law-The Mayor Replies Pledging Protection-Knights Still Hopeful.

St. Louis, Oct. 12.—The situation of the strike is unchanged this morning. The Knights of Labor offer the Police Board any number of men to guard property. The regular police are grumbling loudly because they are kept constantly on duty and obtain but sandwich lunches in a haphazard way. paying for the same out of their own pockets, the street railway companies refusing to properly feed them while guarding their property. The business men's committee met again this morning, but received no encouragement from the managers of the railways. It is not now believed they will present a plan which will be accepted for settle-

THE BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING. The business men's meeting was called to order at 10 o'clock this morning and prepared an elaborate report, upon the testimony of the different parties who had appeared before them, concluded by finding: "No solution to the present difficulty; that it is the duty of the constituted authorities to enforce peace; that the Knights of Labor are pledged to assist in the protection of life and property and in maintaining the peace, and that pending any treaties between the companies and their employes the members of the committee are competent to act as arbitrators." Mr. Perry, president of the Laclede Bank and fatherin-law of Mayor Francis, said that he was opposed to a merchants' meeting; he was opposed to a meeting that would require the merchants of St. Louis to recognize the Knights of Labor. He thought a report from the merchants of the city should have been more devoted to discussing the violations of the law. He thought the Knights of Labor an irresponsible body of men from whom emanated all this trouble. As he had opposed the recognition of the Knights of Labor he still opposes it. He hoped a substitute would be offered. After considerable discussion the report was tabled.

The balance of the meeting was a struggle the members of the committee are com-was tabled.

The balance of the meeting was a struggle between a few enterprising managers of the various mercantile interests and the money interests, which were heavily represented, the dealers fearing and the bankers desiring to snub the Knights of Labor. The bankers finally carried their point and the report simply called upon the Mayor to enforce the peace. Many of the members used the opportunity to vigorously denounce the Knights of Labor and to place the street car companies in the most favorable light possible. Mr. Skinker said he knew that many of the public sympathized with the strikers, and that sympathy was, he thought, misplaced. The strikers were revolutionists and the hoodlums were their natural allies. A committee was finally appointed to present the Mayor with the amended conclusions of the committee, which were simply that they were neutral in the questions at issue, and pledged the committee to assist the authorities in carrying out the law.

A call upon the Mayor was responded to by that gentleman in a speech in which he declared the entire police force of the city were at the disposal of the street car companies, and had been ever since they demanded protection; that the cars should run. He declared that he would not have a Knight of Labor appointed upon the special police force. He justified Officer Hannon in killing John Havey last Friday, and declared that all men arrested in connection with the disturbances should be tried for felony and sent to the penitentiary for twenty years.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S REPORT. The balance of the meeting was a struggle twenty years.

THE BUSINESS MEN'S REPORT.

The business men's committee has embodied in its report upon the street car strike a set of resolutions which, after declaring neutrality in the question, demand of the Mayor the full enforcement of the law. They offer no remedy and condemn the Knights of Labor for ordering the strike. The Mayor, replying to the committee, said the power of the city would be used to protect the company in running their cars. He said no Knights of Labor would be sworn in as special police officers. That lawlessness could be suppressed by the police department, aided by the military of the State if necessary. The speech creates considerable comment, and it is believed will have nothing like a conciliatory effect. The situation able comment, and it is believed with nave nothing like a conciliatory effect. The situ-ation is the same now as it was before the business men of the city took hold of it. The Knights of Labor say: "We will win it without their help, anyway."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

ENGLAND.

CARDINAL MANNING ON CARDINAL MOCLOSKEY. London, Oct. 12.—In an interview had by the Commercial News correspondent with Cardinal Manning to-day in regard to the death of Cardinal McCloskey, his eminence stated he was well acquainted with the deceased prelate, having met him at the Council of Cardinals, held at Rome, for the purpose of selecting the successor to the late Pope. "He was my companion during that time," continued Cardinal Manning, "and I was very much impressed with him. I have written Archbishop Corrigan expressing great regret and deep sympathy at the loss of such an able leader of the Church in America."

A SCHEME TO ANNEX BURMAH. The sensational announcement that the government is determined on the annexation of Upper Burmah is creating much discussion, but must await confirmation for The strikers' committee are jubilant tonight, the refusal of Mayor Francis and the Police Board to swear in the Knights of Labor as conservators of the peace and the very fishy complexion of the report of the business men's committee being the cause. Secretary Heep said: "We never expected anything but condemnation from a committee of business men who are all large employers and we regard the Mayor's call for 500 special police as only a move to put a few ward workers, friends of his, into a position to earn a few dollars. We shall continue to initiate men and to proceed with the winning of the strike, just the same, with the sympathy of the masses ours, as it has been from the inception of the struggle for a fair day's pay for a fair day's work." cussion, but must await confirmation for

No cars are running upon the affected lines, and the city is very quiet. some time. All the Tory organs and speakers have been given hints. army is contemptible, that King Theebaw army is contemptible, that King Theebaw is intriguing with the French along the Trawaddy Valley, which is is the only route for a railway from India to China through Siam, and that Burmah is a very rich country. The Burmese Ambassador to Paris denies indignantly any intrigue with the French, and asserts that the Burmese are both able and determined to resist annexation by anybody. The ultra Radicals will protest strongly. Nobody of authority has yet mentioned the subject, but Theebaw's abominations have all along excited disgust, and he is probably near the end of his tether.

GALVESTON.

The speech of the Greek Minister, M. Tricoupis, on Saturday, is causing alarm. He said that if Greece had followed, in 1821, advice similar to that which the powers are pressing upon her now, there would be no Hellenic kingdom to-day. The inference is obvious. M. Tricoupis will have an interview with Lord Salisbury this afternoon, so his next utterances will be more im-

GERMANY.

SETTLEMENT OF THE EASTERN QUESTION. London, Oct. 11.—A Berlin dispatch to the Standard states that Germany, with the approval of Austria and England, has proposed in settlement of the troubles growing out of the Bulgargarian-East Roumelian question, the following principles to be observed: First, that the demands of both served: First, that the demands of both Servia and Greece be rejected; second, that Turkey be advised to complete her military preparations and be ready to interfere in the event of any hostile move on the part of either Greece or Servia, and thirdly, that the union of Bulgaria and Roumelia be recognized under the reign of Prince Alexander, on condition that the latter avows his recognition of the sovereignty of the Sultan.

IRELAND.

A FARMER'S HOUSE ATTACKED. DUBLIN, Oct. 11.—A dispatch received here says that a party of "moonlighters" last night attacked the residence of a wealthy farmer named Hussey at Killarney. They fired several shots into the building, which were hotly returned by a number of police, who had been secreted in the house in anticipation of an attack. No casualties are reported, and the miscreants succeeded in making good their escape.

A proper distribution of the mounted police force, however, may tend to preserve the peace. Oswald says the illicit whisky craze is ruining business in the vicinity of Calgarry. Those who want whisky get all they want, as it is smuggled across the border from Montana. A local license law would, he thinks, do more to check the traffic than the present prohibiory enactments, which are not enforced.

MR. GLADSTONE WRITES A LETTER. BRUSSELLS, Oct. 12.-Mr. Gladstone has written to M. Emille Louis Victor Laveleye, the well known writer on political economy, as follows: "I favor the Bulgarian union, but trust its territory will not exceed its present limit, because I fear disastrous competition between the great powers themselves and also the Hellenic and Slavonic races for an extension of territory. I express myself on the question with reserve, because my mind is perplexed by the many difficulties surrounding it. I see that the Bulgarian union, excellent in itself, may produce immeasurable evils."

SERVIA.

WAR FEVER RUNNING HIGH. BELGRADE, Oct. 12.—The war fever runs high in Servia and active preparations are going on to enforce Servia's demand for an extension of territory. English, French and Austrian firms have been tendered contracts by the government to supply complete outfits for 25,000 troops, and all the contracts have been allotted; also one for 35,000 horses. The Lander bank war loan has been raised to $5,000,000.

Forney.
Forney, Oct. 12.—Shands & Co. have replaced the loss of their engine, which occurred by explosion last week, by setting a brand new one. They are now under splendid headway, with over 200 bales ready to be packed. For the last five days Mr. G. H. Crawford's gin has been running day and night, pressing from fifty to sixty bales a day. It is thought that between 4000 and 5000 bales will be in the immediate community this season, most of which will be sold at Forney.

Baird.
Baird, Oct. 12.—There was quite a disturbance in town last night. Sheriff J. W. Jones was notified that a posse of men were coming to take Joe Price, charged with mur der, from the jail. Sheriff Jones summoned a special guard and placed them at the jail. but after mature deliberation it was decided best to convey the prisoner to Fort Worth for safe keeping, which was accordingly done. About 10 o'clock p. m. a squad of men rode into town and a part of them went to the jail, but after hearing that Price had been sent away did nothing but fire a few shots as they left town.

Texas Cotton Crop Report for 1884-85-Strike of 'Longshoremen Compromised-An Interesting Will Case Before the Courts

Special to The News. GALVESTON, Oct. 12.—In the County Court to-day Mr. Samuel Bennison is contesting the will of Hugh Bennison, deceased. Hugh Bennison died several years ago and subsequently a will was probated making Miss Ann Maria Bennison the sole legate. Mrs. Bennison had two children by a former marriage, Edward Maume and Lillie Maume, now Lillie Owens, wife of Sheriff Owens. Upon her death the property in herited from her husband went to her children, Edward and Lillie. The plaintiff Samuel Bennison, a nephew of Hugh Benni son, charges that a subsequent will was made by which Hugh Bennison left his property to him and other blood relatives but that this will was destroyed by Ann Maria Bennison and others, that the property might revert to them under the former will. About $20,000 in property is involved. The case is still on trial.

THE COTTON CROP OF TEXAS FOR 1884-85. In consequence of the labor and attention required in establishing THE DALLAS MORN-ING NEWS by the time set, the 1st of October. THE GALVESTON NEWS failed this season to keep up its current statistics of the annual cotton crop of the State. There have been keep up its current statistics of the annual cotton crop of the State. There have been many inquiries concerning this matter. By Messrs. Kauffman & Runge The News has been placed under obligations for a carefully prepared statement of the cotton crop of Texas for 1884-85, which The News does not hesitate to accept as a very nearly accurate estimate of the crop.

The statement referred to covers all points formerly covered by The News, and in the aggregate shows a total crop of 973,000 bales as the crop of the State. In previous estimates of this kind The News has never found the statement of Kauffman & Runge more than 8000 bales out of the way from the official figures, and there was room for that much discrepancy in both statements. In the absence of its own data The News will accept 973,000 bales as a very close approximation of the cotton crop of the State for 1884-85.

It may not be generally known that the Galveston banks have a clearing house, though not formally organized in all its details, but such is the fact, and it has been in successful operation since the 8th of September last. Formerly each one of the seven banks sent out collectors, who visited the other banks and settled in turn, with each one collecting the balance, if any. If the bank settled with had the larger balance it sent and collected it the same day or at its pleasure. Thus each of the seven banks in turn settling with the other six necessitated forty-two distinct settlements, on balances, to be ascertained and paid or carried forward. As often the bank settled with would be creditor, and sometimes, the amount not being large, it would be carried forward as an item against the debit bank until next day. Under this plan the tellers were compelled to receive and pay the balances, sometimes resulting in considerable labor in counting and verifying the packages of money. The settlements usually began about 2 o'clock p. m. and continued sometimes until near 3 o'clock. Under the new plan all this is greatly medified and changed, as there ar largest debit or credit being about $11,000. The saving thus made only needs to be seen to be appreciated. It is a step forward in the right direction. Houston, quick to see the advantage to be gained, will open a clearing house on the 15th inst. The News is reliably informed, one of her bankers having paid Galveston a visit this week to look into the modus operandi. A prominent Fort Worth banker is in the city and has made some inquiries about it. Doubtless the banks in all the larger cities in the State will adopt the plan. Mr. N. B. Sligh, cashier, is the originator of the movement in Galveston, and has temporarily made the settlements from day to day, giving the credit to the banks of the debit heavisg for the ments from day to day, giving the credit banks checks on the debit banks for the balances as ascertained. The News looks Sixty cents was promised for Sunday and night work, this increase to for Sunday and night work, this increase to be paid with the increase of business. As the increased pay had not been forthcoming, up to Sunday, a strike was determined upon as the best means to learn something definite; the head bosses, Messrs. Stannard and Ross, were consulted for a few moments and the difficulty settled for the time being in a compromise, the men agreeing to receive 50 cents an hour for day and night work both. Mr. J. N. Sawyer has been absent for some time, but is expected home during the week, and in the meantime there is no apprehension of further trouble from this quarter. Very little time was lost, and at present matters are progressing smoothly.

A Midnight Fire-List of the Losses-Death of a Well Known Railroad Employe. Special to The News.

PALESTINE, Oct. 12.—The fire alarm was sounded about 12 o'clock Saturday night, which quickly brought out Hope Hook and Ladder Co. and a large number of citizens. The locality was found to be in Max Herche's barber shop, on Spring street, in one of the finest brick blocks in the city The flames were making havoc with the woodwork and was spreading to the awnings in front before the firemen got a stream of water, but when they did commence work the flames were soon checked and then entirely subdued. Loss to building, $500; Herche's loss, $700; both insured. A house adjoining, belonging to the Manning estate, was damaged, as estimated, $250, and Sillman's hardware, next adjoining, $200; both insured. Hanna Bros.' saloon, adjoining Herche's on the east, suffered a loss of $200 in stock and fixtures; no insurance. The fire is believed to have originated in the water heating apparatus in the barber shop. Mr. J. C. The west-bound accommodation on the Texas and St. Louis was delayed several hours by a derailed freight frain. Nobody hurt. Damage to box cars slight.

The Suspension Bridge Co. resumed pile driving arross the road leading to the Brazos ford this morning. The boss and entire force at work were arrested by the city authorities and released on bonds made by the bridge company. The city authorities will probably be arrested for contempt of court, as the bridge company had secured an injunction restraining the city from interfering with the workmen. The work being done by the bridge company is necessary to the preservation of the abutments of the bridge, which were nearly undermined by the last flood.

The complication has its origin in the incorporation of East Waco, in 1870, as part of the municipality of Waco, then confined to the west bank of the Brazos River. For years anterior to the extension of the city limits eastward across the river the ford in question connected what was known as the public road from Waco to Corsicana. After the limits of the corporation had been extended the County Court abolished the road, turning over the question of egress and ingress into the municipality to the city. In lieu of the Corsicana public road the city opened a highway known as Elm street, extending from the eastern limits to the abutment of the suspension bridge. Subsequently the Suspension Bridge Co. purchased the commons along the banks of the river through which the abolished public road passed, and about 1876 inclosed the property. The closing of the roadway to the ford aroused public resentment, and Gen. Spaight, then acting Mayor, had the fence torn down, the panels of which were burned the same night by indigmant citizens. The bridge company's property. On a hearing in the District Court, the injunction was perpetuated and the case appealed by the city. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case, but as the was cut down so that vehicles could get to the river. When work was begun on the east bank the city was restrained by an injunction issued at the instance of the bridge company. The injunction was obeyed and work suspended Saturday. The bridge company put a force of men at work driving piles directly across the old roadbed, with the result above stated. The city filed its answer this evening in the last injunction suit of the bridge company, praying for an injunction in turny restraining the bridge company from driving piles or in any way obstructing Elm street from its eastern limits to the natural ford in question. The injunction was granted and late this evening the writ was served on E. E. Sturgis, president, W. L. Prather, secretary, and George B. Geiley, as in charge: The bridge company will fight the injunction to the bitter end.

THE FORT IN COUNCIL.

Special Meeting of Aldermen to Pass an Ordinance.

The Electric Light Company Victorious-A Delegation to Wait Upon Col. Hoxie to Consider Railroad Interests-Personals, Court and Police Matters.

Special to The News.

FORT WORTH, Oct. 12.—A special meeting of the Town Council was held this afternoon to consider the ordinance by which the privilege of erecting poles, hanging wires, etc., was granted to the Electric Light and Power Company for fifty years. The committee to whom the matter was referred had drawn up a new ordinance to which the pro-requirements and intention of the company. The ordinance grants to the company the privilege asked, but now stipulates that the company shall be in operation within four months, and that, if required, the company shall furnish lights to the city at the same cost as in any other city of the State.

moters of the company had assented, and it soon became evident that there was a much clearer understanding, on both sides, of the

Mr. Aldridge desired to so amend the ordinance that the company should place a good light upon the capitol of the courthouse without charge. It was elicited that the cost of this would be about $15 a month to the company, and the Mayor remarked that the free lights given the city by the gas company cost $50 a month, to which Hon. W. S. Pendleton, who was present as company red that the gas company had a heavy contract with the city and the electric company had not. THE VOTE.

The amendment was then put and the roll called, with the following result: Ayes-Feild, Aldridge, Darter, Mulkey,

Noes-Alexander, Brownson, Daggett,

Noes—Alexander, Brownson, Daggett,
Hughes.
During the voting Mr. Darter said he did not think the condition a hardship, but he did not want to hamper the company, especially as he understood they were willing to put up that light for a time at least.
The Mayor also explained that he thought the company should give the city something for such a privilege.
The ordinance was then read and was about to be put to vote.

Mr. Alexander interposed, however, and

Mr. Alexander interposed, however, and protested against the amendment just passed. He said that they were not making passed. He said that they were not making a contract with the company or he might agree that they should include that concession, but no such restriction had ever been placed upon any other monopoly in the city such as the street car lines, and that this was the first time such a condition had ever been imposed upon a corporation which asked so little and was willing to spend its own money at great risk.

A PASSAGE AT ARMS.

Mr. Pendleton having obtained permission to address the Council, appealed against the amendment, as the undertaking was an experiment, and that it would be a hardship to-encumber the permission with a condition that would be considered a burden.

"The burden only amounts to $15 a month, and a company undertaking so much could hardly be injured by that," remarked the Mayor.

Mr. Pendleton paused, put on that injured

Mr. Pendleton paused, put on that injured look he knows how to assume and which is in itself a silent eloquence, and replied:

"I thought the Mayor was acting as presiding officer, and was not at this point a participator in the discussion. If I am not interrupted, I will proceed with my remarks to the Council."

"The proceedings are altogether out of order; however, go on," answered the Mayor good humoredly.

Mr. Pendleton then continued his argument in a brief speech of much force, concluding with a sensible appeal to the council not to stand in the way of what would, he believed, be of great benefit ultimately to the city.

"We have always," he concluded, "been regarded as a progressive, enterprising, ambitious city, and I trust you will not raise factious opposition to an undertaking in which the promoters ask so little, but risk "TOCATING THE LIGHT."

Alderman Field said he desired to impose no burdens, but when the other franchises referred to were granted this was little better than a village, yet some of the corporations benefited had voluntarily imposed upon themselves a tax for the benefit of the people. He could see no hardship in this little tax of $15, as it was a company organized for profit, and he could not see the great benefit to the city.

Alderman Brownson wanted the light put on the city hall and not on the courthouse. The Mayor said the courthouse was the most conspicuous point, and light there would be more generally diffused over the city than if placed on the city hall. RECONSIDERATION.

Mr. Hughes supported the city hall proposition, because before long we would have a city hall worthy of the place.

A desultory discussion followed, during which Alderman Aldridge proposed that the vote on the amendment be reconsidered and the light be required for twelve months

As nobody was bold enough to suggest that a new City Hall would be erected within that time, the Courthouse was tacitly agreed

The amendment was then adopted as altered, with only Hughes and Darter dis-him—and broached a subject foreign to the object of the special meeting.

He wanted to know when the committee appointed to go to St. Louis would start, and who had been selected from the citizens as part of the delegation. The Mayor replied that a paper signed by a number of citizens had been sent to the Council suggestion. gesting the names of W. J. Boaz and A. M. Britton.

The subject was then discussed generally, the subject was then discussed generally, the point made being that citizens not directly interested in any one street should be selected, as the general question of opening streets across the railroad reservation would be raised, and the interest of the citizens of large ways he considered. cens at large must be considered.

Mr. Aldridge said that the only thing to fear was that the interests of the city might not be the interests of individuals. The railroad company was, he believed about to make big improvements here, and he was in favor of meeting that interest, while the interest of property owners and other concerned was not neglected.

"WE ARE SEVEN." Mr. Darter reminded the council of a recent resolution by which the railroad company was given thirty days to say what they would do about the opening up of certain streets.

Mr. Hughes suggested that the delegation Mr. Hughes suggested that the delegation consist of the three committeemen on streets and alleys, Messrs. Darter, Alexander and Daggett, together with the Mayor and three citizens. He incidentally remarked that with the exception of one man—Peter Smith—Mr. Boaz had done more than any other for the city, and he also eulogized the public spirit manifested by Mr. Daggett or all accessions.

that he was a fair, square man who would not be biased in such a matter by prejudice. DIGGING AT DARTER.

The Mayor also took this view, extending his eulogium to Mr. Britton.

Mr. Daggert said he believed it of all the Mr. Daggert said he believed it of all the committee, although he was a little inclined to the conviction that Mr. Darter would sacrifice the whole city to the opening up of Houston street. The tone of this sally belied the words and Mr. Darter joined heartily in the laughter it evoked.

The suggestion of the committee of seven was then approved, and steps will be taken to ascertain the desire of the citizens as to their representation.

The delegation will probably leave on Thursday or Friday.

The Fact Demonstrated That the Man with the Hoe can do Well in West Texas-Good Cotton on the Market-List of Farm Products Raised.

Special to The News.

ABILENE, Oct. 12.—There is scarcely a day passing now without from one to ten bales of cotton being marketed here, which statement many people in the Eastern portion of Texas will be slow to believe; but it is a fact, nevertheless. Until quite recently the popular belief in the section referred to, and in nearly every part of the State, as for that matter, was that Taylor County was designed by nature for grazing purposes exclusively. But of late years the man with the hoe has rapidly extended his experiments, until it is a thoroughly demonstrated fact that every portion of the county yields in abundance nearly every variety of farm produce. Cotton is the latest tried, and in every instance, so far as THE NEWS correspondent can hear, the results have been highly satisfactory. Half a dozen farmers who marketed here last week were questioned, and in no instance did they report a yield of less than half a bale, and some as high as three-quarters, to the acre. The merchants and buyers of Abilene are encouraging this new development, and are paying even more than it is worth for every bale brought in. Eight thirty-five was the lowest and 8.65 the highest price paid last week. The cotton all grades high, being well matured, clean and white, the only drawback being that the staple is a little short. Every prospector coming to Abilene can see specimens of all varieties of produce raised in different portions of the county right here in the city. Mr. J. A. Lowry, the editor of the Taylor County News, has accumalated a fine exhibit and takes pleasure in showing it. He has permitted The News correspondent to make the following partial list of what he has on exhibition:

Special to The News. TERRELL, Oct. 12.—This is court day in Esquire T. L. Frank's Court. A number of cases were tried and a greater number continued. One case that afforded considerable amusement to the audience and occasionally caused the court to smile, was an action of debt, wherein a countryman was plaintiff and a country merchant defendant. The plaintiff had employed counsel, but failing to come up with the fee the counsel failed to put in an appearance. But the countryman was not to be downed in this style. He sailed in and pleaded his own cause. The defendant was represented by one of the ablest attorneys of the Terrell bar. The funniest part of this suit was the fact that the plaintiff won. County Attorney Cunningham is here flying around in a manner that forebodes trouble to the evil-doer. It is suspected that the disciples of the green cloth and the cyprians will be called to a reckoning.

The Flood Rock Explosion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—It was naturally supposed that one effect of the great explosion at Flood Rock on Saturday would be an im mediate change in the currents in the East River in that neighborhood. A United Press reporter inquired about this of some East River pilots. Two of them had taken vessels by Flood Rock this morning, and they declared that they could see no change of any kind except that the appearance of the top of the rock had been slightly altered. It was evident that the rock, however much it may have been shattered, still retains its it may have been shattered, still recans looriginal outlines, and until the mass of fragments was at least partly removed no change in the currents could be expected. After the Hallett's Point reef was blown up to work was changed immedi After the Hallett's Point reef was slown up, in 1876, the currents were changed immediately, and there was a depth of from fifteen to twenty-five feet of water directly over it. No doubt was hinted that the Flood Rock explosion had not accomplished what was wanted, but the effect will not be palpable until after the removal of the broken rock.

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—Startling developments have been made in the case of Harry Schendler, accused of a diamond robbery in Buffalo. Sam Ashman, a prisoner now in the county jail here, will testify in the Supreme Court this evening that he committed the robbery himself, giving a most minute detail as to how it was planned and carried out. Schendler will have to be released, but, on the other hand. Ashman cannot be punished for diamond robbery. He was recently extradited from Canada on another charge. If the latter charge falls through he must be returned to Canada under the new rulings of the court that a man cannot be held for any offense except the one for which he is indicted.

LITTLE ROCK.

An Appeal Granted in a Murder Case-The Reign of Terror in Louisiana.

Special to The News.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 12.-To-day the Supreme Court allowed application for an appeal in the case of George Carroll, convicted of murdering his wife and sentenced to be hanged at Serrey Sept. 25. Carroll was respited by Gov. Hughes until Oct. 16. Letters from Bienville Parish, La., which reached here to-day, give particulars of a reign of terror which has existed in the parish for some time past. The origin of the trouble was a neighborhood feud. Members of several families have been taken from their homes and whipped and otherwise mistreated. Two parties were shot; it is feared fatally. Gov. S. McEnery, after investigating the matter, through the District Judge has ordered that all guilty parties be arrested and punished. Several have been identified and officers are in pursuit of them. The people in the vicinity of the trouble are terrorized. a reign of terror which has existed

Eating a Mexican Lunch.

Fannie B. Ward in San Francisco Chronicle. Refreshments were speedily spread upon the well-scoured table, to which the addition of a cloth would have been an incongruous superfluity, a pot of rancid goat's milk, curd-cheese with honey, biscuits which would have made excellent cannon balls, and a basket of fresh tamarinds, mangoes and pomegranates, temptingly arranged in green leaves, as these poetic people have a tasteful habit of doing. The inevitable pulque was at hand, bottled in a pigskin, which gurgled approving notes, alarmingly life like, while disgorging its contents into our mugs. These so-called "pigskins" are really the undressed hides of sheep with the woolly side turned in. Nothing else is considered so good for holding the popular beverage, and we are told that a small sized skin costs about $2 50, but lasts little more than a month, as the fermentation going on within soon eats the wool off.

Betsey is distressed over this weighty problem, which disturbs her nighly slumbers, of how much wool we two female wanderers must have imbibed during our long vesidance in this Canaan flowing with bers, of how much wool we two female wanderers must have imbibed during our long residence in this Canaan, flowing with pulque and wild honey, reckoned at the rate of three mugs each per diem. The dirtiest of these Indians make the most delicious curd cheeses of mixed sheep's and goat's milk, which is eaten with honey or crumbled into the frijoles (stewed beans), without which no meal is complete. Though the cheeses are extensively imitated by their betters in social status, none can make them half so well as the Indians, who have been offered considerable sums for the recipe, but find it more profitable to keep their ancestral secret. Evidently the proper flavor needs certain "conditions," like a spiritual seance, which los ricos fail to give.

After this dainty repast the mistress of the manse dived into the depths of her greasy gown and from its pocket produced her cigarette holder, proffering the customary courtesy with the air of a princess, an honor which Betsy and I would not for the world have wounded her feelings by refusing. Having nobly performed that politic duty, while the driver and his mules were finishing their siesta we strayed out to view the village, whose low roofed and no were finishing their siesta we strayed out to view the village, whose low roofed and no roofed casas are nestled close under the shadows of some dreary foothills. I will admit that when I lost it sensation appeared to be transmitted to the brain from apparently the same places where the knee, toes, or other parts of the leg should be, but after a time the cords healed up at the stump and gradually a change came. The notorious ex-Gov. Moses, who has just been sentenced to three years more of prison service in Massachuseets, is said to be in a desperate mood. "I am morally and physically a wreck," he said to his keeper, "It is not from dissipation: I have never been a drunkard, nor have I ever had other bad habits. I have simply been unfortunate, that's all. My business life was a failure: I was deeply in debt, and in desperation I resorted to illegal means to raise the funds which I so sadly needed. But I'll never live my sentence out. I shall find some means to meet death, and I shall seek for the earliest opportunity." The ex-Governor was taken to Charleston Prison. He was closely watched on the way that he might find no means of harming himself. In the prison, for fear of suicide, he was taken to a padded cell and left in solitude. All day long he appeared to be in a state bordering on insanity. When he thought no one was looking he would rush madly up and down the narrow cell, and then throw himself down on the floor, as if in an agony of despair. on the floor, as if in an agony of despair. A Lightning Rod Impales an Osprey. Philadelphia Times.

A big stir was created to-day by the impaling of an osprey on the lightning of the Pine Street Presbyterian Church at a height of 150 feet. The bird, which measured about six feet across the wings, was caught in the right wing. Crowds gathered about the church all day, witnessing its desperate struggles for freedom. A handsome reward was offered for the capture of the wounded bird, and several efforts were the wounded bird, and several efforts were made to secure the prize. The Mount Vernon Hook and Ladder Co. got one of its Hays trucks, in the hope of reaching the dizzy height with the ladder. A daring fellow climbed out of one of the windows of the spire and drew himself up the lightning rod by sheer force until he had covered about two-thirds of the required height from the place of starting, when he weakened and descended to a point of safety. After the bird had suffered for several hours it was killed by a rifle ball. was killed by a rifle ball.

DOUBTING THE PRESIDENT'S DE-MOCRACY.

The New York Star, edited by ex-Congressman and now United States District Attorney Dorsheimer, prints an editorial article headed "Cleveland Will Vote for Hill." Of course this statement is not to be disputed, but what was the occasion for making it? Like Mr. Lamont's chipper little certificate of the President's Democracy, it or private persons. Let the work go is calculated to create in an unsophisticated mind the impression that it was a matter of doubt at one time if Cleveland would vote the New York Democratic ticket. The Star came out with a flourish of trumpets under Mr. Dorsheimer's control as the organ of the administration. It does not look like judicious organship to imply or suggest a doubt about the Democracy of the President. Mr. Cleveland was elected as a Democrat, and why should his Democracy be questioned or need indorsement or vindication? Is it because he is a strenuous administrative reformer, because he is faithfully executing his ante-election No more can Texas as a State. Other hands pledges, and carrying out in good faith and skill than ours have built up the place the platform promises of the Democratic of exhibit. It is only left for our people to party? It is conceded that David B. Hill has made a good Governor of New York, that he was the choice of a large majority of the Democrats of the State to succeed himself, and that he was fairly and regularly nominated by a convention of representative Democrats. Un- street. der these circumstances, why should it be deemed necessary to assert that Mr. Cleveland would vote for Gov. Hill? Why should it not be taken for granted as the most natural proceeding in the world that Mr. Cleveland would be among Mr. Hill's general body of Democratic supporters? This thing of asserting continuously that the "President is a Democrat." has a kind of offensive sneer about it. Hendricks and McDonald and Hoadley and Randall, and others whose party brands are supposed to be always distinctly legible, are in the habit of indulging in this kind of assertion.

dent "is a Democrat." Why should they be so particular to make this observation? Was it necessary to state every once in a while that Arthur, Garfield and Grant were Republicans? Not at all; the public understood that they were Republicans and there was no need of reiterating it. Why should it not be the same way with Cleveland? His record as a citizen is that of a staunch and consistent Democrat. He always supported the nominees of his party, even if he differed, as an honest man is sometimes bound to differ, with some members of his party in office. He was nominated and elected as a Democrat to every office he ever filled. He entered the White House as a Democrat, called Democrats around him as advisers, and yet Mr. Dorsheimer, in his very interesting newspaper, finds it necessary to allege in black letters that the President will support the nominee of his party for Governor in his own State. Such allegations, repeated with such persistency, seem singularly adapted, if not designed, to convey the insinuation and disseminate the impression that because Mr. Cleveland is a reformer, because he believes public office is a public trust, and refuses to prostitute the public service to partisan ends and purposes, he has lost caste with his party and made his present political position or party affiliation a questionable or problematical matter. Mr. Cleveland should resent such inferences, insinuations, implications or suggestions, and if possible repudiate those who seek to place him in embarrassing situations. Of course Mr. Cleveland is a Democrat, and of course he will support the nominees of his party when they are fit

An international congress of freethinkers, lately sitting at Antwerp, passed a resolution declaring that "moral responsibility does not exist; but society has a right to guard itself against criminals and madmen." This, the legitimate fruit of agnosticism, or at least of the denial of the existance of a Supreme Being, has never hitherto been affirmed, says the London Spectator, except by a few individual thinkers. The customary line, it points out, has been "to admit that men, though without responsibility to God, were responsible for sins as well as crimes, either to society or to the human race as a corporate whole." Granting these premises there is no disputing the conclusion of the freethinkers of Antwerp; but, as the Spectator says, there are two consequences of their postulate which perhaps they have not considered: "One is that society has a right to slaughter out criminals and madmen as they would tigers; and the other is that if society deems their opinions conducive to criminality it has a right to slaughter out the freethinkers themselves." And yet the freethinkers may doubtless hear this conclusion with equanimity, for in a society that really believed opinion to be criminal they would expect whatever degree of repression or punishment such society might deem expedient. The statement as to responsibility to society, or the right of society to protect itself is simply a difference in form. To be responsible is to have to answer for something to those who have a right to ask an account. Society calls upon every man to explain any act which is injurious to others, and he must make a response, but not for his thoughts. Kant said discuss everything, but obey.

DALLAS AND THE EXPOSITION.

Capt. B. T. Walshe, special commissioner of the North, South and Central American Exposition, at New Orleans, who has been in the city several days working up exhibits, has met with the co-operation that one would naturally expect among a people of thrift and enterprise. He is gratified with the response made by the people, and looks forward to still greater success during his further stay here. The large factories of Dallas have secured space for exhibits and other enterprises are about closing similar arrangements, while the merchants generally are negotiating with the special commissioner.

THE NEWS feels a strong interest in the placing before the eyes of the world the products of this city and other cities of Texas. Nothing but good can possibly come out of a judicious display of the thrift, enterprise and capabilities of Texas and all sections thereof. It has always been and is now the policy of THE NEWS to advocate any valuable means of advertising the advantages of the State that may be adopted either by the State authority on, and go on without any fear that the Exposition will not be a success. Advices are at hand that show beyond doubt that nearly every section of the civilized world is preparing to be represented at the exposition in good shape. The coming together of this vast display will furnish an opportunity for interchange of views and lead to inquiries by one section of country into another that, so far as such a growing and prosperous State as Texas is concerned, will result in vast additions to her population and wealth. Dallas cannot afford to be absent from the great fair. grasp the chance of showing themselves and theirs to the world.

The Evening Post replies: "How any future event will be construed depends altogether on the construer. THE assurance of Hanlon, the Blainite editor whose paper during the last canvass was run upon personal abuse of Mr. Cleveland, was something uncanny. The following little dialogue will illustrate the march of science and something else:

march of science and something else:

"Well, the fruit crop might be set down as a total failure," said the superintendent of the largest fruit canning factory in a progressive Northern State; "a total failure, you might call it." "That will almost close your establishment, then," said the visitor. "Oh no, no," replied the superintendent. "On the contrary, we will haw to employ an additional force. Years when there is no fruit we turn our attention almost entirely to putting up jellies; and then, later on, if the potato crop turns out as we expect, we will can about three million pounds of pears." And as the visitor, silent with the great awe that falls upon common people when they stand in the presence of genius, went softly out of the office, he saw a car load of hoofs and horns unloading at the doors of the jelly department.

It is not well for men to exult in spells of prosperity to the extent and in the manner once reported of Smith, the recently broken broker of New York, who is alleged to have said: "Mark my words, sooner or later I shall reduce Jay Gould to poverty, so that he shall earn his bread in the street with a hand-organ and a monkey." What the Interior Papers Say. "No morning sun shines through the day," says the poet, and the Texarkana States states that no honeymoon illumines the long period of wedded life, or words to that effect, so far as a great many people are concerned at least:

effect, so far as a great many people are concerned at least:

The young husband goes into the depth of his pocketbook for every expressed wish and desire of the thoughtless and inexperienced bride. Money is scattered here, there and everywhere, with no thought of the morrow, or that responsibilities must come, heavy duties of life be performed and the cross taken up and bravely borne to the end of earth's days. She shirks the cares of existence, deprecates the annoyances of housekeeping and prefers the boardinghouse with its unsatisfying routine, ignorant of the sweet rest, peace, comfort and enjoyments of "home, sweet home." There will come the day when tiny forms shall gather about them, when joy-lit eyes and pattering feet and bright faces shall claim the wealth of a mother's abiding love, and the steady affection of a father's manly heart. As they grow up to womanhood and manhood they require an abiding place around which shall cluster fond memories—the homestead. It is a sadly mistaken idea which young married people possess that life's pathway is strewn with undying blossoms; that its cares and duties are not a part of their existence, and their cheerful assumption is the only true road to happiness; that a life among strangers, a roving existence, like that of this Arabs of the desert, can afford immunity from toil and the richest blessings of the world. 'Tis all a mockery, a snare, a fatal delusion to life's contentment, and must eventuate in the shadows of dissatisfaction and unhappiness enshrouding the heart and marring and blighting all the richest blessings and most satisfying pleasures of life in its higher aims and greatest good. The Center Laborer's Champion has a long editorial on a very common, though it would seem an irremediable evil, the usual expedients of men in obtaining office. After alluding to such practices the article proceeds to say:

This state of things has a tendency to deter many from entering the political arena, who under proper conditions would do so and would win fame for themselves and work blessings for the country by so doing. As it is they see honesty and plain dealing at a discount in the public estimation, trickery applauded and rewarded, modesty shamed, brass commended, and recognize as their return for a conscientious dignified course the sneers, if not the opprobrium of the very men who, in other matters, are counted good citizens. The devices of the latter day politicians by which they have drawn so many prizes in the lottery of politics, bode no good in the end to the people. The wily office-seeker has discovered that the road to political station lies through the The wily once-seeker has alsoovered that the road to political station lies through the prejudices of voters, and that if he would be great in the land, he must learn the art of pandering thereto. Texas has assumed general control over the education of her youth, which is all very proper. Now, let her go one step further—provide a series of text books for use in her public schools and make the study of our system of government not only a prominent but a compulsory prerequisite to the granting of certificates to teach said schools. Do this, and in twenty years the average citizenship of Texas will have been improved 100 per cent, and the latter day politicians will have to whistle a new and better tune, or be relegated where some of them ought to be to-day—to the walks of private life.

The Brownsville Cosmopolitan says: The action of the State government of Tamaulipas, Mexico, in heaping tax after tax on the already half ruined commerce of Matamoros is, to say the least, short sighted and foolish. Many stores that are strugling along, making but small profits, are forced to shuft up, and other interests must, corresto shut up, and other interests must correst ondingly suffer. The trouble with Tamauipas, and, in fact, the whole of Mexico to-lay, is that the government is slowly taxing all commerce, trade and industry out of ex-istence, and by killing that on which it sub-sists, is as surely starving itself to death. "He thinks it is good to be here: let us build." The Houston Herald says:

Of another character who has beat Texas papers out of more gratuitous advertising than any one else, the Gazette says:

The Gazette has received Brick Pomerov's Democrat. It is made up of strictures on President Cleveland and the rest is filled with "plated" matter. Pomeroy is a brick that ought to be crushed, politically.

The Jewett Messenger is a secular paper, but it takes interest enough in religious matters to remark:

Some people—more particularly younger ones—seem never to comprehend that at church the minister is the proper one to do the talking, and the less 'chin music' from other sources the better he can talk and the more interesting is the service to those of the congregation who go for the purpose of receiving instruction. Nothing is more disgusting and more deserving of condemnation than laughing, whispering and half suppressed giggling during chuyer or other uppressed giggling during church or other

The El Paso Times devotes a good deal of attention to the subject of the Mexican trade of that city. The business does not seem to prosper as was anticipated from the completion of the railroad to the Mexican capital. The markets of Mexico are peculiar and require to be made the subject of special study. The Times remarks:

The people of this city are inclined to be exceedingly liberal, and in many things we might say progressive. But the greatest trouble is that we lack that discrimination, might say progressive. But the greatest trouble is that we lack that discrimination, that order and system in our efforts which will nearly always command success. We have several movements which require great tact in management, and are intelligent and we might say tireless, pushing to the front, which must be encouraged and sustained by the solid co-operation of all our people. Our commercial relations with Mexico should be entirely reorganized, and every shackle and prohibition knocked off, except the mere nominal duties. Mexico is a republic of twelve millions of people, who are our neighbors and who consume much that we grow and manufacture; yet on account of our trade restrictions they go by our doors and bring their supplies 3000 miles beyond us. Every intelligent discussion of this question must end with the query: Why is this true and who are responsible for it? Mexico is not, for she has always of late years manifested a willingness to cultivate closer relations with the United States. But our government has not met this friendly advance as it ought to, and it should be agitated and discussed until the people understand how vital it is to their future welfare, and then the government will be made to respond to such a wish.

This amount of business is taken into considera-tion it deserves a good customhouse." This is strictly true, and it would be equally true, only more so, of El Paso. Uncle Sam ought to have a substantial and commodious building here.

God willing, to commence the publication of a journal devoted exclusively to the discussion of The True Faith as set forth in the pages of Holy Writ. Reading, observation, and experience has demonstrated this fact to the writer's satisfaction; that the wisest and most beneficent human governments are at best only less imperfect than the acknowledged despotisms of modern or ancient times, and fall far short of the most moderate anticipations and yearnings of the human heart. The True Faith will be issued as soon as possible and will be sentire to as many as it is possible to supply. issued as soon as possible and will be sent-free to as many as it is possible to supply. Smouldering embers of the True Faith are in many hearts and will be quickly fanned into a glowing flame by the "words of truth and soberness." Not one single line of advertising will be inserted, and the only promise made is that the True Faith will proclaim the Gospel, free to all, and will be published as often as possible To the unregenerated and those who have tried to sustain newspapers on far more substantial patronage than Brother Kitrell asks he will seem a good deal like a crank. The present editor of the Tribune, however, loes not seem to regard him in that light.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING

A Texas Cattle King Marries a Dayton Millionaire's Heiress. New York World.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 8.—The wedding of Valentine Dickey and Miss Lulu Platt took place at the Baptist Church this evening. It was the grandest social event of this valley, and was attended by an elegant audience. Long before the hour appointed for the ceremony every seat in the house was occupied. The church was decorated with a profusion of flowers, a mass of tropical plants covering the walls back of the pulpit. In the auditorium were hundreds of handsome women, whose dresses were made especially for this occasion. At 8 o'clock the sudden increase of light and soft tones of the music indicated the approach of the bridal party. Six ushers passed slowly down the aisle followed by six bridesmaids. As they took ushers passed slowly down the aisle followed by six bridesmaids. As they took their places at the aisle four beautiful little girls, two blondes and two brunettes, strewed roses, and closely following them was the bride, leaning on the arm of her uncle. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. B. Colby. The guests were received at the home of the bride's mother, the bridge and groom standing under a beautiful floral bell. The dresses of the ladies were the most costly ever worn in this city, that of the bride attracting much admiration. It was a handsome white brocade, satin trimmed, with deep folds of point lace; a brilliant necklace of diamonds encircled her neck, and the gems sparkled in her hair.

Ex-Official Once More Argues Against the Commission Clause-Traveling Over the Texas and Pacific-On the Lookout for Gould-Big Suit.

To the Reilroad Editor of The News:

DENISON, Tex., Oct. 12, 1885 .- The Globe-Democrat of the 9th instant quotes Mr. Waldo, Texas pool commissioner, as say-"We may not be able to enforce the order prohibiting the payment of commissions in Texas, but if it is possible to enforce it, you may be assured that it will be to the very letter. So far as I have been informed, no one objects to it but the ticket sellers in Texas. I believe the rule can be enforced, and if it is, the increase in the net revenue will demonstrate that the principle is Now, Mr. Rumbler, let us see about all this business. With due regard for Mr. Waldo and the great interest he represents, your correspondent will take the liberty of criticising the action of our Texas pool as far as the "commission" part of it is con-

1. Mr. Waldo does not seem to be certain as to the result of the move, hence he admits it is an experiment—he has no assurance of its success. This fully indorses what has been said in your columns for the last ten days on this subject, and in reply to remark No. 1 I will say that one has but to refer to your columns for the last ten days to be convinced that all similar "experiments" have been complete failures, and have been very expensive, both to the people of Texas and to her railroads. I will simply suggest that it is much better, safer and more business like to "run with the tide," and pattern after those who have been successful than to try "experiments" or force water up hill. When I speak of success I refer to Kansas and the West, and if we do as well as they have in the way of development and improvement we will have no cause to complain. Therefore I say the policy the roads in Kansas have pursued. which has been and is to-day liberal, is the safest and best for us. And as long as our opposition continues to work and pay money for business we will have to do the same, or get badly left.

2. Mr. Waldo remarks that "as far as he has been informed there is no objection to

2. Mr. Waldo remarks that "as far as he has been informed there is no objection to the doing away with paying commissions outside of the Texas ticket agents."

In replying to this, permit me to say, Mr. Waldo is no doubt correct. The gentlemen with whom he has came in contact and mingles with are mostly high officials like himself, and many of those, especially of opposition lines to Texas, would like to see the "experiment" tried, and no doubt enjoy the fun and the increased revenue it will bring to their respective lines. There are also, no doubt, many officials of connecting lines (I refer to lines running east of St. Louis and Chicago) that will not object to Mr. Waldo giving the "experiment" a good trial. They have nothing to lose, and some of them are no doubt like the monkey who cut his tail off and then tried to convince all the rest of the monkies that it was the fashion. Some of the officials of connecting lines have given this cutting off of commissions a trial and would like to have others experiment at a little of the same medicine, and no doubt they hope to see Mr. Waldo and the Texas pool succeed; but you don't catch any of those who have tried it and know what their line lost by the move trying it again until they have gilt edged assurance that all lines will unite in the "reform."

Now, Mr. Rumbler, we all know that Mr. Waldo has not been "informed" by the gen-

Now, Mr. Rumbler, we all know that Mr. Waldo has not been "informed" by the gentlemen who sell the tickets and distribute tlemen who sell the tickets and distribute the land matter, etc., that they do not object to the cutting off of commissions, and it is also safe to add that he (Mr. Waldo) has not mingled with or talked to the gents who stamp the tickets to the West, Northwest and Southwest. He has not had the time to do this or learn from actual experience in the field to what extent the ticket agents and their sub-agents control the emigrant busi-

No. Mr. Rumbler, it takes time and undivided attention to the land and passenger business to realize to what extent the paying of commissions controls this business of commissions controls this business, and, judging from the experience of others who have given this matter a trial under what they and their friends thought most favorable circumstances, it is safe to predict that our present Texas pool will add one more to the list of failures to suppress the payment of commissions to the list of failures to suppress the payment of commissions.

3. In regard to the "principle" being wrong, be this as it may, with successful railroad managers the idea should be and is to get business and to use such means as are necessary to secure as much of it as possible and to at least fight the opposition with their own club and go them one better if they can. "Principle" is a good thing to talk about, but what the people of Texas and her railroads most need is population and business, and we don't want to be handicapped by too much "principle" and reform. "Business is business" the world over, and to get our share of it we have to "fight fire with fire."

TRAIN TRAVEL IN WEST TEXAS.

TRAIN TRAVEL IN WEST TEXAS. To the Railroad Editor of The News:

EL Paso, Oct. 10 .- "Where in the name of Pat Mooney are all these people going to?" was an expression used by your corre spondent on a recent trip to El Paso, when entering the coach in search of a seat.

"Well, I'll tell you," replied a resident of one of the youngest towns on the Texas and Pacific Railway, with whom your informant is acquainted. "Every mother's son of them is going West. Few will be missed until we reach Cisco; then they will drop out in twos and threes until we reach Baird, where we will lose half a dozen. At Abilene fifteen to twenty will drop out, perhaps a half a dozen at Sweetwater, eight or ten at Colorado, four or five at Big Spring, four or five at Marienfeld, and perhaps half a dozen at Midland. At Pecos we will lose five or six, and the remainder will be California passengers. This means the original set now in the car. One-fourth are residents of the country, the balance strangers in these parts, whom I have never met before. I will, nevertheless, undertake to guess where they are from and where they are going to.

"See, that long lank fellow in the corner with the family of tow-heads. Well, I'll bet a dollar he's from West Virginia or East Tennessee, and that some of his wife's relations are located somewhere between Cisco and Baird. He has been complaining about the flat country east of Dallas ever since we left Texarkana. Special to The News. TEXARKANA, Oct. 12 .- Jay Gould, who it was reported was to pass through this city this evening en route to the West, failed to show up. Diligent inquiry by The News reporter failed to ascertain at what hour the distinguished capitalist would arrive, although railway officials were unanimous that he would pass through within the next twelve hours.

BOOM IN RAILROAD SECURITIES. By reference to the commercial columns of THE NEWS this morning it will be seen that the activity in railroad stocks on Wall street yesterday was greater than at any time since 1883. The sudden demand for the leading railroad securities threw the stock exchange into a fever heat, and over 306,000 shares changed hands within the two hours preceding noon. The stock market showed an advance of from 1/2 to 2% per cent on all favorite lines, and was marked by a steady and healthy buoyance until its close.

PILGRIMS TO PECOS. A telegram to Major W. H. Abrams, received last evening, announces that six passenger coaches and two Pullman sleepers left St. Louis over the Missouri Pacific yesterday morning, loaded with people on yesterday morning, loaded with people on their way to Pecos City to attend the auction sale of town lots which takes place on Thursday, the 15th. The pilgrims will pass through Dallas this evening. Here the special sleeper from Dallas, of which mention was made yesterday, will be hitched on to the train, to convey people from Dallas and vicinity who wish to attend the sale. Every berth in the special sleeper has already been engaged, and other coaches will have to be added to supply the applications made for accommodation.

A DOUBLE COLLISION. A unique and serious accident occurred Saturday afternoon on the Pittsburg and Wheeling division of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, at the east end of Wheeling, W. Va. Freight engine No. 305, light, was going east ahead of a regular freight train. when it met a second train coming west. The engineer reversed the engine and he and the fireman jumped. The engines came together lightly, the pilots only being demolished. The train stopped and engine 305 started backward at a fearful rate of speed, started backward at a fearrul rate or speed, and after going a few hundred feet the east-bound train was met. The two engines came together with such a shock that both were demolished. Tom Gates, of Allegheny, Pa., engineer of the east-bound freight, had a leg broken and was hurt internally. He will probably die. William Doyle, of Pittsburg, brakeman, had his head and shoulders badly gausshed, injuries senjons. Pobert badly crushed; injuries serious. hours. GOULD SUED FOR BREACH OF CONTRACT. While Jay Gould was in this city yesterday he was served with a legal summons notifying him he had been sued for the sum of $150,000 for an alleged breach of contract. The plaintiff in the case, Mr. John M. Woodward, alleges in his petition that a contract was entered into between the defendant and himself on Jan. 7, 1882, for the construction of a double-track railway, to be operated in connection with the Missouri Pacific Railroad from St. Louis to Pacific, a distance of thirty-three miles; that Gould agreed to advance all the money necessary to carry out the project: that he was to give the plaintiff a position as secretary of the road for the term of three years, with an annual salary of $5000; that the plaintiff was to be the owner of 45 per cent of the capital stock of the said line; that certain work was to be performed by the plaintiff for which the defendant was to remunerate him, and that the defendant suspended the work agreed upon Feb. 1, 1882, and declined to go ahead. defendant was to remunerate him, and that the defendant suspended the work agreed upon Feb. 1, 1882, and declined to go ahead. A gentleman who claims to understand the facts of the transaction out of which the suit above referred to grew, made this statement to the railroad reporter of the Republican yesterday morning: "The contract between Mr. Gould and Mr. Woodward was entered into in January, 1882. It was then agreed, if I have been properly informed, that a line with a double track should be built from this city to Pacific, connecting at this end with the Missouri Pacific in order that the latter line might avoid the tunnel near Kirkwood. Between Jan. 7 and 23 it is claimed Gould compelled Mr. Seligmann to sell him a controlling interest in the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway. Shortly after this transaction the Gould directors, it is asserted, took charge of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway, suspended work and discharged 600 men who were employed between St. Louis and Kirkwood, keeping them off the road a year and a half. It is also claimed that the Gould directors forced the traffic arrangement, entered into by the Kansas City and Memphis and the St. Louis and San Francisco lines, to be rejected by the latter company, and that the former was afterward required to reach St. Louis over the Missouri Pacific Railway. I have also been informed that the Gould directors forced the St. Louis and san Francisco company to terminate their line at a point six hundred feet west of Grand avenue; compelling it also to abandon its bought and paid for right of way into the Union depot and take a lease, for a right of way over the Missouri Pacific track, for a term of fifty years—thereby compelling the 'Frisco line to pay a tribute to the owners of the Missouri Pacific line."—St. Louis Republican.

A GREAT BRIDGE COMPLETED. The Minnesota and Northwestern Road has completed its bridge across the Mississippi River at St. Paul. Work was commenced the 1st of last December, the piers being sunk through the ice, and it has been finished in the remarkably short time of ten months. The bridge is of iron, 1825 feet long, and the draw span, 412 feet long, is the largest and heaviest in the world. The cost of the bridge was $350,000. The road is now building a two-story brick structure in the yard for headquarters for the trans portation department. The roundhouse wil portation department. The roundhouse will accommodate fourteen engines. The cost of the freight depot will be $18,000. The passenger station $2800, the roundhouse $4000, and the remaining buildings $2200, making the total cost $27,000. The total cost of the improvement in West St. Paul by the Minnesota and Northwestern is about $50,000.

SANTA FE AND SOUTHERN PACIFIC. The Transcontinental Association complications have become still more mixed up by a recent agreement made between President Strong, of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, and President Stanford, of the Southern Pacific. The Santa Fe has been more bitterly opposed to the arbitrary stand taken by the Southern Pacific lately than any of the other transcontinental lines. has just completed an extension of the Atlantic and Pacific from Mojave to San Diego, and had contemplated the construction of another line to Los Angeles to tap the fruit regions in that section. This seems to have brought the Southern Pacific to its senses, and the result was a conference between President Strong, of the Santa Fe, and President Stanford, of the Southern Pacific, at which they made an offensive and defensive treaty. The Santa Fe, it is learned, obtained very valuable concessions from the Southern Pacific on condition that it should not run steamers between San Diego and San Francisco, and that the proposed line to Los Angeles should not be built. In connection with this it is reported that the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. is to be made construction of another line to Los Angeles reported that the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. is to be made a party to the Santa Fe and Southern Pacific combination. If this report should turn out to be true the Burlington, Rio Grande and Union Pacific Roads would be deprived of an independent outlet to the Pacific coast, and would be entirely at the mercy of the Southern Pacific. The managers of the Burlington do not think that any such combination will be formed. They say the Oregon Railway and Navigation Co. could not afford to join a formed. They say the Oregon Kallway and Navigation Co. could not afford to join a combination with the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe, and thus shut out its natural allies. They claim to have information that the agreement between the Santa Fe and the Southern Pacific, above referred to, has not been fully consummated, and that the not been fully consummated, and that the game of the Southern Pacific is likely to be

A Correspondent Says if Dallas is to Have Surface Water Supply Get it from High Lands and not Trinity Bottom.

Dallas, Oct. 12, 1885 .- I learn that the City Council is about contracting for a large lot of water pipe, boilers, engines, pumps, etc., with a view of laying a fifteen-inch main to the mouth of Turtle Creek, where a large reservoir is to be made. I do not wish, in any way, to reflect upon our Council as regards their good intentions, etc., as I am confident not a member of the board would do anything which he thought would be detrimental to the city. I write this to ask them to consider well before incurring a debt of $50,000 or more. It is well known that Turtle Creek goes dry every year, and a reservoir at its mouth for four months in the year would be no better water supply than if it was on top of the could be fed from Cedar Spring. This would cost an additional outlay of $50,000 and would not insure much water. The reservoir at the mouth of Turtle Creek would have to be built twenty feet above the top of the ground to be above overflow from Trinity River, and after a heavy rain Turtle Creek, rising quick and running off rapidly, would make a reservoir at its mouth almost unavailable. From what I learn, after this work is done it will be no more than a reservoir in the Trinity bottom to catch surface water: then to be pumped at a heavy expense (as it will be seventyfive feet below the standpipe) to the standpipe. If the Council concludes that it can find no available place to get water from under the ground and want surface water, I candidly think the best plan is to go west of he river or east of the city and make one, two or three surface lakes. The ground must be located right—not too hilly. On either side of the city they may have these lakes ocated. It would require no expense at all o get this water into the stand pipe. No comping would be necessary, and if it was desired to filter the water the lakes could be pumping would be necessary, and if it was desired to filter the water the lakes could be connected with a reservoir located on the high hill just above the city, and from this the water would force itself through a filterer into the stand pipe. The surface water caught on the high prairie is much superior to the surface water caught in the Trinity bottom. It has been demonstated by the water works at Corsicana and by private tanks that the prairie soil is peculiarly adapted for making tanks. Water will not sink into the ground like it does in sandy soil. We have a great deal of rain in this country, and it would only be necessary to store enough water in these lakes to last four months in the year. The balance of the time the rainfall would keep them well supplied.

If the Council does not wish to adopt this system and want to fall back on river water (as they would get nothing but river water at the mouth of Turtle Creek), make two large reservoirs on the top of the hill north large reservoirs on the top of the hill north of the city and pump from the present pumping station on the river, and let the water filter from these reservoirs into the stand pipe.

As the friend of the City Council, and for the best interest of the city, I sincerely ask the attention and mature consideration of DALLAS, Tex., October.

Mr. Editor—A vote of thanks is certainly duce The Dallas News for the excellent results of our first attempt at advertising in that splendid medium. From Bryan, Mexia, Groesbeeck, Cors cana, Ennis, Fort Worth, Weatherford, Marshall, etc., etc., we have had orders for those $20 dinner and $3 chamber sets; but many ask us whether we have goods still more elegant than the beautiful sets we sell at these prices. Please state to the people that in addition to these, we can furnish anything to the taste of the most fastidious. For instance, the Burslem Ragoon dinner sets, ivory body, underglare decoration, worth $100, we sell at $40. In hanging lamps, glassware, silver plated goods, hotel and bar room settings we defy competition. Our specialties in wedding presents are superb. But in order to tell your readers all that they can find at extremely low prices in our house, please have your special news agent call, look through the stock and inform the public what he saw in the way of assortment and prices and what he thinks of the China Hall, corner Elm and Murphy streets, Cincinnati Reeking With the Foulest of Election Vices.

The Better Elements of Both Parties Hard at Work Ferreting Out Frauds-Some Surprising Disclosures-Prospects of the Two Parties.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 12.—One thing has been demonstrated by the registration law that has opened the eyes of men who were loth to believe that fraud has been practiced at the elections in this city. It has shown that above one thousand men, in spite of the great danger of detection, have taken chances and registered falsely. In many instances they have given street and numper of residence at random. One case of this sort happened to give the residence of the Registrar at the precinct in which he made this false registration, and, singularly enough the Registrar took the name. The game which has been attempted is for one scoundrel to register as a voter in as many precincts as possible, get certificates of egistration and sell them to some boss vilain to be peddled out and used on election day. The scheme seems likely to come to grief. One man who tried to sell six registration certificates to Mayor Smith has been convicted and sent to the workhouse for one year and sentenced to pay $1000, which, if worked out, will prolong his sojourn at the workhouse four years. Lists of the names of all who have registered at each precinct have been posted publicly at the precinct voting place for general inspection. In many wards these lists have been torn down, notably in the very wards in which election frauds have been most fre quent in the past. The audacity with which these fraudulent registrations are made is startling the people and is waking up men of both parties to prevent fraud being practiced at the polls next Tuesday. Every case has been spotted and the judges of elections and the rallying committees on election day at each of the polls will be provided with a full list of fraudulent names. The house of every one that has registered, except in the case of well known citizens, has been visited, and the registration, if correct, has been verified; if false, exposed and reported.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS. The committe of one hundred citizens has had daily meetings this week, and with abundant means, including money and the services of the best legal talent in the city. has been ferreting out and hunting down the scoundrels and devising means for prethe scoundrels and devising means for preventing the consummation of the contemplated villainy on election day. This committee, which is composed equally of Democrats and Republicans, has the backing of the great mass of the people. Their work thus far has frightened the scoundrels very greatly, so that the vote cast will be between 2000 and 3000 short of the 62,700 registored.

TRAFFIC AND TRICKERY. Each of the two great parties is accusing the other of a purpose to trade votes with the Prohibitionists for the Legislature. Both parties are indifferent as to who is elected Governor and are in dead earnest to secure the Legislature. No doubt many of the votes that Leonard, the Prohibitionist gets for Governor will be paid for in votes for Democratic or Republican candidates for the General Assembly. Still this cannot be carried very far, inasmuch as the Prohibitionists have no legislative ticket up in hibitionists have no legislative ticket up in most of the State. Both parties also are just now conceding more votes for Leonard than they did directly after the conventions. The figures of the estimates now sum up to from 20,000 to 40,000 in the State. The suggestion that the Prohibition party would gain many votes from the Democratic ranks was flouted in the beginning of the campaign, but it is pretty generally admitted now. These gains will be in the rural disnow. These gains will be in the rural districts, chiefly in Central Ohio. Both parties—that is, the speakers of both parties that have been through the State—admit that the gain of the Prohibition vote will be very largely from the ranks of the Democratic party. All over the State there are Prohibitionist clubs, and the membership of these furnish pretty good data as to where the greatest gain of the Prohibition vote is to come from.

A DOUBTFUL OUTCOME Still the question as to who will win the Governorship remains in doubt. Neither can see anything brilliant in the prospec before him. Ohio is a very uncertain State -one that sometimes does unexpected things. One thing seems to be certain, and that is that the Governor will be elected by a plurality and not by a majority. On the Legislature the Republicans seem to have the advantage, in that the last Legislature was Democratic and, as nearly all Legisla tures have been, was unpopular. It is likely to be a very irregular election on the leading candidates, for several reasons, chief of which is the varying effect the Prohibition vote is likely to have in different sections of the State. Other disturbing elements that were operative two years ago are either dormant or absent now. THE TAFFY WAS TOO THICK.

The Democratic speakers and papers set out in the campaign to speak very kindly of the Prohibitionists. This was reciprocated by Dr. Leonard, the Prohibition candidate while he abused the Republican party and the Republican speakers, notably Senator Sherman, who has labored with great in dustry in the campaign. This seems to have been a mistake that they have just discovered at this late date day. The tendency ered at this late date day. The tendency seems to have been to drive the extreme liquor men from the Democratic party and to cool their ardor on the one hand and to fire up and consolidate the Republicans on the other hand. The Republicans seems to have had the advantage in the number of outside speakers in the campaign. But as to use of local talent, both parties stand about equal. What the result of the Hoadly-Foraker joint debates at Toledo and Cincinnati will be, the election next Tuesday will best tell.

Senator Beck and the Administration. Special to the Times-Democrat.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Senator Beck, of Kentucky, is here for a few days, arranging his household plans for the winter. He is an ardent and uncompromising friend of silver, and looks for an active and exciting canvass of the subject at the coming session of Congress. Senator Beck is repeatedly referred to as one harboring intense ill-will toward the administration and as carrying a knife in his boot for it. Such an interpretation of his feelings and position does him the greatest injustice. He is not an enemy of Mr. Cleveland in any sense. He does not like the President's Mugwump friends, and he will not support him in his Mugwump leanings, but in the carrying out of a strict and undoubted Democratic policy Mr. Cleveland will have no more cordial indorser than the senior Senator from Ken. dorser than the senior Senator from Ker

The Tariff and the Silver Question. Special to the World.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.-The general impression seems to be, among the members of the House who have been here during the last two weeks, that all Congress can accomplish this winter upon the silver ques tion will be a temporary suspension of the coinage. No bill repealing the coinage will be able to pass the House. The most ardent advocates of silver are willing to concede that the present situation is an embarrassing one for the business of the countay and that something ought to be done. The temporary suspension of the coinage will be urged as a compromise by those who are in favor of the gold standard. They will say to the silver inflationists: "Let us suspend the coinage for a brief period, and you may try by legislation to get the silver that is now in the Treasury out into circulation." The silver men do not see very much advantage in piling up coin in the Treasury vaults. They will come to the front this winter with numerous bills prepared with the purpose of getting the silver out.

In order to get these considered they will that something ought to be done.

In order to get these considered they will be willing to let the temporary suspension of coinage go through. So it is now certain that Congress will have two great debates—one upon the tariff and the other upon the silver question. These will begin in the House and will, perhaps, for a time rival in interest the political discussions in the Senate over the President's appointments.

Advice to Money-Lenders.

Let all the good thou doest to man A gift be, not a debt; And he will more remember thee The more thou dost forget.

Do it as one who knows it not, But rather like a vine That year by year brings forth its grapes, And cares not for the wine.

A horse, when he has run his race, A dog, when tracked the game, A bee, when it has honey made— Do not their deeds proclaim.

Be silent, then, and, like the vine, Bring forth what is in thee; It is thy duty to be good, And man's to honor thee.

The Disconsolate Merchant. A merchant alone in a desolate store Sang "Willow, tit-willow, tit-willow!" I said to him, "Why are you pacing the floor, Singing 'Willow, tit-willow, tit-willow?"

"Alas" he replied as he smothered his cries,

And now I've no custom at all but the flies,
Oh, willow, tit-willow, tit-willow!"

YELLOW ROSES.

From the French of Alphonse Karr. Inter Ocean.

This yellow rose tree brings a story to my

One evening two years ago I went to spend a few hours with an old lady, amiable, witty and kind, who lives near me. She is passionately fond of flowers, and you could not conceive the delight I take in making beautiful bouquets for her, or how happy I am in her surprise when I take her a flower that she does not know or which is not common in the country.

Yesterday when I went in I found an old gentleman with her who came into our neighborhood a year ago to take possession of a large estate which was left him by a distant relative on condition that he should take with the property the name of its former owner. He is called, accordingly, M. Descoudraies.

He sought an introduction to my old friend, and I soon had reason to be jealous of his attentions to her; they formed a friendship for each other and spent almost all their earnings together playing trictrac. I saluted them quietly in order not to interrupt their game, and then, when it was ended, I offered Mme. Lorgeral a bouquet of yellow roses which I had bought.

My roses were very beautiful, although the excessive rains of that year had caused the yellow roses to bloom imperfectly; mine, sheltered by the protection of a roof, were perhaps the only perfectly expanded ones in the neighborhood. Mme. Lorgerel uttered exclamations of delight over the uttered exclamations of delight over the beautiful bouquet.

M. Descoudraies said nothing, but appeared preoccupied. I remarked this with surprise, not understanding the mysterious influence of my yellow roses; but Mme. Lorgerel soon spoke of something else, and I thought I must have been mistaken.

As for M. Descoudraies, he begah to lauch and said:

laugh and said:

"Would you believe that this bouquet has recalled, as by an operation of magic, a whole epoch of my youth?"

"During the last five minutes I have been but twenty years old; within five minutes I have fallen in love anew with a woman who must now be sixty years old, if she is still living. I must tell you this story; it concerned a circumstance that has had a great influence over my whole life, and whose memory, even to-day, when my blood has only just warmth enough to continue life and play trictrac, does not fail to move me in an extraordinary manner.

"I was twenty years old a little more than forty years ago. I had only just come from college, where young men spent more time then than in these days. After having ripely considered for me and without my aid the choice of a vocation, my father announced to me one morning that he had obtained for me a lieutenancy in the regiment of —, quartered in a city of Auvergne, and bade me hold myself in readiness to set out on the third day.

"I was somewhat disturbed for several reasons. In the first place I did not like a military life, but that would have been an objection easily overcome; the sight of a rich uniform, a few ambitious phrases, a little music would easily have made of me an Achilles or a Cæsar.

tle music would easily have made of me an Achilles or a Cæsar.

"But I was in love.
"I would not for anything in the world have ventured to mention this to my father. His sole response to such a confidence would have been an order to depart that very night. But I had an uncle. Such an angele!

'He was a man then of my present age; nounce with a better grace Satan, his pomps and his deeds, but toward others. He loved young people; he understood them without being jealous of them. He did not believe that his infirmities were progress nor his old age necessarily wisdom. Through his kindness of heart and his reason he lived in the happiness of others. He was found a sharer in all the generous follies, all the noble foolishness of youth; he was the confident and protector of all love affairs, debts, and hopeful plans. I went to him and I said to him: 'Uncle. I am yery unhappy.'

'Uncle, I am very unhappy.'
"'I wager 20 lous that you are not,' said he.
"'Ah! uncle, do not joke. Besides, you would lose?

"'If I lose I will pay; perhaps that will help to comfort you.'

"No, uncle; money has nothing to do with my trouble.'

"In regard to letters it was much worse. When the moment came to give them they seemed so stupid to me that I could not tear them into small enough pieces."

"But, my boy, it is time to make up your mind at last, and there is a reason for it, too. Your father has not told you all. He wishes to send you to Clermont because the Colonel of the regiment is a friend of his and has a daughter; because this daughter is intended for you and will make a rich and splendid match. But—you need not speak—I know that all that is nothing when one is in love. It is a tremendous folly, no doubt, but it is a folly of which I should be very sorry not to have been guilty. None but prigs are free from it. I know that the old call it illusion, but who knows that the illusions are not their own? The glass that diminishes the size of objects has no less real an existence than the glass that magnifies them.

But you must find out whether she loves you, and just now you have an excellent opportunity to do so. They want to marry her. You turn pale at the idea and wish you had your odious rival at the sword's end—is that what you say nowadays? Well, then, try to keep up a little of this fine courage in the presence of your beautiful Naomi. They want to marry her; you are richer than she; but the one to whom they wish to give her is richer than you; besides, he is titled, and is a husband ready to their hand; and the wedding outfit is prepared, while for you they would have to wait. Go to Naomi and tell her that you love her. She knows it, but it ought to be said in any case. And tell her—for she must love you, young, handsome and witty as you are—tell her to swear to wait three years for you, and to write it to me in a letter, which I will keep. Then I will break up that other marriage; I will get you into another regiment, and in three years, in spite of everything, I will have yeu married.'

"'Well, uncle, I have an idea. I will write to here."

"As you please.'

"I left my uncle and went to write my letter. This was not the hardest part of my letter. This was not the hardest part of my letter. This was not the hardest part of my letter. my letter into the middle of the bouquet. This is perhaps all very foolish, but I remember it still.

"After avowing my love I begged her to love me and be happy with me, and to wait for me three years. I asked her, if she consented, to wear one of my yellow roses in her belt that evening; then, said I, I shall dare to speak to you of my joy—I dare not yet say our joy.

"When evening came Naomi wore no rose in her belt. I wanted to kill myself, but my uncle went with me to Clermont. He remained there two months, and ended by comforting 'me and persuading me that Naomi had never loved me.

"But, uncle,' I would say, 'she seemed so happy when I came and reproached so sweetly when I came late.'

"Wo men love everybody's love,' he would reply, 'but they are far from loving everybody."

"At last I almost forgot her and married.

body."

"At last I almost forgot her and married the Colonel's daughter, whom I lost after eight years of marriage. But I still think of Naomi, and I always see her a young girl of seventeen, with her brown hair and her dark, velvety eyes, while she must now be some good old lady."

"But your name is not Descoudraies!"

"No, that is the name of my uncle's estate; my name is Edmond d'Altheim."

"Then I will tell you what became of Naomi."

"Yes, she loved you."
"But the yellow rose?"
"She did not find your note. Your sudden departure cost her many tears. Afterward she married M. de Lorgerel, whose widow I she married M. de Lorgerel, whose widow I am to-day."

"What, you? Are you Naomi Amelot?"

"Alas, yes; as you are still, or rather, as you scarcely are, Edmond d'Altheim."

"Who would have believed that one day we would be unable to recognize each other?"

other?"

"Yes; or that we should meet years after only to play tric-trac. As for the bouquet, I have always kept it."

And Madame de Lorgerel went to an ebony cabinet and brought forth from it a withered bouquet. She was trembling, She untied the bouquet and found the letter that had been there for forty-two years.

They were both silent. M. Descoudraies arose.

Anose.

Madame de Lorgerel took his hand and said: "You are right. This resurrection of our hearts' youth should not be before two aged faces like yours and mine. Let us shield from becoming ridiculous a noble affection which, perhaps, will bring us happiness all the rest of our lives. Come again after a few days."

Since that time the two old people have been inseparable. I have never seen anything like the love that is between them. They have a thousand things to tell that have never been explained; they love each other retrospectively; they would like to be married to each other; but they dare not marry now.

Eloped Rather Than Wait.

Eloped Rather Than Wait.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—An elopement, precipitated by the going into operation of the new marriage law requiring the certified consent of guardians to the marriage of minors, came to light to-night. John C. Dennis, a young bottler, came to board at Andrew Busling's saloon, across the street from George McMahon's, a month ago. Dennis and McMahon's foster daughter, aged seventeen, fell in love at long range and began a clandestine correspondence, which lasted until a week ago. It would doubtless have continued longer had not the lovers been apprised of the immediate operation of the marriage law. Spurred by the necessity of either marrying at once or waiting until the young lady should become of age, they made an arrangement by which Miss Georgie crept out of the house, after having sent her clothes before her, and were married two hours before the law went into operation.

A SHREWD SWINDLE

How It Was Practised in Chicago-Thousands of Dollars Borrowed on One

Cheap Dwelling. Robert Hertel, a young Germanl, was ar. rested yesterday on a charge of obtaining $3000 from the Illinois Trust Co. by false pretenses. His arrest has brought to light a real estate swindle never before attempted in Chicago, and one which, by its simplicity, has victimized some of the shrewdest business men in the city.

Hertel owns four lots on Fremont street, between Garfield avenue and Center street. These lots are numbered 6, 8, 12 and 13. He purchased them since March last from Seth Green, through his agent, E. W. Zander, 69 Clinton street. All of the lots were purchased on contract, about $200 cash being paid on each. and trust deeds taken for the balance. He paid $1200 each for lots 12 and 13, $1180 for lot 8, and $1100 for lot 6.

balance. He paid $1200 each for lots 12 and 13, $1180 for lot 8, and $1100 for lot 6.

During the last summer Hertel built a three-story brick house on lot thirteen, worth $5500. Herman Zimmerman was the contractor. He and Hertel live together at 158 Crystal street, and from all developments are evidently business partners.

Hertel mortgages this house and lot for $3000 to Felsenthal, Gross & Miller, bankers, at 80 Fifth avenue. The firm paid $900 of an incumbrance on the lot, and gave Hertel $2100 in cash. It is supposed that with this money he purchased the other lots.

After this mortgage was made Hertel represented to Haugan & Lindgren, bankers at 154 Lake street, that he had a house on lot twelve, and desired to borrow on it $3500. Mr. Haugan visited the premises, and was shown the house on lot thirteen. Believing that the house was on lot twelve, the loan of $500 was made by the firm, and the mortgage taken. Since then a house similar to the one on lot thirteen has been erected on lot twelve.

Hertel next located the house on lot 8, and asked of Leopold Mayer, banker at 78 La-Salle street, a loan of $3000. Mr. N. A. Mayer visited the premises, and was also shown the house on lot 13. He accepted Hertel's statement that the lot was No. 8, and the loan was negotiated. This was on Sept. 25.

and the loan was negotiated. This was on

John J. Mitchell, president of the Illinois Loan and Trust Co., was the next victim. This time Hertel had his house on lot 6. The premises were visited as usual, the house satisfactorily located on the right lot, and on Sept. 26 a loan of $3000 was made by Eugene E. Prussing, a lawyer representing

Eugene E. Prussing, a lawyer representing the trust company.

The house was now on four different lots and mortgaged for $12,500. In each case the abstract showed the title to be good in Hertel's name, with a small incumbrance in favor of Seth Gage, which was paid by each purchaser. All of the lots and the house were thus paid for, and Hertel and Zimmerman had about $4000 clear cash. By the arrangement of the last mortgage, however, both men were trapped.

purchaser. All of the lots and the house were thus paid for, and Hertel and Zimmerman had about $4000 clear cash. By the arrangement of the last mortgage, however, both men were trapped.

Mr. Prussing paid to Hertel, besides cash, $1500 in two checks. One was for $1100, payable to one Zimmerman (not Herman Zimmerman), a carpenter. The other was for $400, payable to Charles Breyer, a plumber on Milwaukee avenue. These checks were presented for payment by Herman Zimmerman to Felsenthal, Gross & Miller. Both were indorsed. They were paid. The firm now claims that Zimmerman forged both indorsements. The checks were cashed last Tuesday. At this time Hertel proposed to Mr. Felsenthal to mortgage lot 7 and the house on it. Hertel had not purchased this lot, but had begun the erection of a house on it. Mr. Felsenthal soon learned from the abstract makers that Hertel had no title in the lot, and began investigating all of Hertel's mortgage making. Hertel eventually confessed that he had no houses on lots 6 and 8, and laid the authorship of the scheme on his partner. He was arrested yesterday by Constable Deal. Mr. Mayer and Mr. Mitchell entered judgments against him in the Superior Court for $6150, the executions being levied on the house on lot 13.

Hertel is also the supposed owner of three lots on Crystal street. The house at 159 is on one of these lots. John Buehler, banker at 76 Fifth avenue, thinks he has a mortgage for $1,500 on this house and lot. Greenebaum's Sons, bankers at 72 Dearborn street, have a mortgage on one of these lots and the alleged house on it for $1,300. Charles Kozminski, banker at 170 Washington street, have a mortgage for $1,500 on a house and lot on which they held mortgages.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of supposed to be in this vicinity. None of these gentlemen were able yesterday to positively identify the house and lot on which they held mortgages.

Mr. Cregier's Thrilling Experience. A few days ago Mrs. Cregier, the worthy wife of the Commissioner of Public Works, gathered her brood about her and hied off to a suburb for a few days. Her husband. however, was too busy with the water and sewage problems to accompany her, and so remained behind. After he had partaken of his lonely meal and smoked (with the aid of a porous plaster) a middling strong cigar, removed a part of his clothing, laid down on the sofa, and began to enjoy life. John O'Neil dropped in, and the two cronies discussed the order of Knights Templar to their hearts' content, and both agreed that to be a 33-carat Mason should be the highest aim of a man's ambition. The visitor left, and the worthy Commissioner of Public Works began disrobing for bed. As he had nearly completed his preparations a tremendous yowling smote his ear It came from the roof where a party of cats seemed to be holding a progressive euchre party. Mr. Cregier paused a second to see if the disturbance would cease, but it did not. On the contrary, it increased. "This will never do," said Mr. Cregier; "I shall have to chase them away." He did not stop to draw on his trousers, but slipped into his slippers, wrapped a dressing gown about, him, and ascended to the roof by means of a stepladder and the scuttle. He stuck his head out and could not help a shiver as the

"It is Mile. Amelot, uncle."
"Indeed! That is far better than an angel. She is a brunette, tall and slender, with dark, velvety eyes. I do not disapprove the object."
"Ah, uncle, if you only knew her heart!"
"Throw, I understand—and does she pay you back in kind? as they used to say. Is that what you young folks call it nowadays?"
"Othat, uncle, I do not know."
"What! Not know? My unworthy nephew? You have gone to see her everyday and you do not even know whether she loves you!"

"She does not even know whether she loves you!"
"She does not even know, uncle, that I love her."
"Oh, you are mistaken as to that, my handsome nephew; you know nothing at all about that. She knew it at least a quarter of an hour before you knew it at least a quarter of an hour before y to get down?" No one answered the question, and the wind began playing upon his exposed limbs like an Æolian harp. He tried again to lift the trap-door, but failed as before. Then he tried to attract the attention of the men in the waterworks, but they couldn't hear him. Then he went to the rear of the house and began throwing gravel at the servant's window, but the domestic became alarmed and set up a wild shriek of alarm. By this time the wind was blowing forty miles an hour, and the commissioner's dressing gown and shirt stood out like the spinnaker boom of the Puritian, while his frame shook like a human dice box. He could hear his servant rushing about like mad in the room below, and suddenly he heard her shriek from a front window: "Help! Thieves! Police!" By this time Cregier was running about the roof, and just as he had made his third lap he saw three men rush out from the waterworks and cross to his steps while a fourth rapped on a lamp-post with a brick. The servent exclaimed: "Help, there's thieves on the roof. They've killed Mr. Cregier and robbed the house. A policeman ran out of a saloon on Rush street and turned in an alarm. As Mr. Creiger watched the patrol wagon come tearing down Chicago avenue his skin turned "goose-fleshy" as a nutmeg grater. He leaned over the front wall and said: "My good friends this attention of yours is very kind, but I don't deserve it. I am Mr. Cregier and—" "Do ye moind the chake av the baste?" said the policeman. "Kim down aff av that." "I would if I could, but I can't." said the chattering commissioner: "Break open the doer and push open the scuttle." By this time one of the waterworks men recognized his superior's voice, the door was broken in, and the commissioner was taken down to more comfortable quarters. "Honest John" O'Neill certifies to the correctness of the above.

ONLY TWO DAYS

Public Sale of Town Lots PECOS CITY,

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1885.

PECOS CITY

is located on the TEXAS AND PACIFIC RAILWAY, where it crosses the Pecos river, 432 miles west of Dallas and 400 miles west of Fort Worth, and 215 miles east of El Paso. It is geographically so situated that it is bound to control the trade up and down the river for hundreds of miles.

COUNTY

THE VALLEY OF THE PECOS.

That vast territory lying east of the Guadalupe, Davis and other mountains of the Rocky range and west of the Sand hills, extending from Santa Fe, New Mexico, to the Rio Grande, is properly speaking the Valley of the Pecos.

The following figures show the number of cattle, horses and sheep in the Pecos Valley, tributary to Pecos City:

Delity Bulletin William C. Europe M. Att	HORSES.	CATTLE.	SHEEP.

Total	20,000	272,500	121,500

making a total of 424,000 head of stock. The supplies to care for this stock must be furnished from Pecos City, and the products shipped from that point.

IRRIGATION—Reeves county has a frontage on the Pecos river for 100 miles. Toyah Creek runs through the county for about 40 miles. It is estimated that 275,000 acres can be irrigated in Reeves county alone. There are 10,000 acres in Reeves county and 7500 at Roswell, N. M., now under irrigating ditches. All the cereals, fruits and vegetables are raised to perfection.

That part of Pecos Valley which may be irrigated is from two to eight miles wide, on either side of the river, and embraces almost its entire length. The PECOS VALLEY LAND AND IRRIGATION COMPANY, chartered under the laws of Texas, will open twenty miles of ditches in the near future. The soil of the valley is a sandy loam, from 15 to 20 feet deep. The upland soil is a gray loam, underlined with gypsum and rotten limestone.

WATER—Wells are being dug in Pecos City, and good water is found at a depth of from 15 to 20 feet. The water is impregnated with mineral ingredients, not unpleasant to the taste, and possesses valuable medical properties, being a sure cure for dyspepsia and diseases of the throat.

CLIMATE—The climate of the Pecos Valley is delightful. The winters are mild and free from northers, and the summers are more pleasant than the weather in the Northern States during the same season. The altitude is about 3000 feet above the level of the sea. Bronchitis and catarrh disappear in this climate.

In grocery and retail lines there was a rush for human provender, owing to sharpened appetites occasioned by the brisk weather that tent though the signs are that there will be a row. This staple is being picked rapidly and circular just to hand, says, among other things:

The National Cotton Exchange crop report for September was issued Tuesday,6th inst., and the condition placed at $7½, as against $1$ for August. This was considered too favorable, and but few placed any confidence in it, preferring to await the report of the Agricultural Bureau, which was posted to-day, and the condition of the crop placed at 78, as against $7 last month—a fall of $9$ points—which would have caused a sharp advance had not the supplementary remarks in a great measure contradicted the actual figures, thereby leaving the real result a complete mystery. The unsettled condition of European politics exerts an unfavorable influence, but on the other hand we think the strike at Oldham must soon end, because the poverty of the operatives will soon force them to resume. Frost also may be daily expected, and either occurrence would create a general desire to buy and result in an advance.

iid. The stock market this morning was active ind buoyant. Prices advanced from the opening on good buying of all leading speculatives, and at noon the figures were up % to 2% percent as compared with the closing of Saturday. Not since 1883 has there been such active trading in stocks as this morning, 306,000 shares changing hands in the two hours from the opening until noon. The buying was generally well distributed, and some large blocks of stock changed hands in the leaders. Since midday a fractional reaction has occurred.

CHICAGO WHEAT REVIEW.

A Strong Upward Tendency and Predictions that the Top Has Not Yet Been Reached-The Undelivered Spring Wheat Supply to be an Important Factor. Special to The News. CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—The "bulls" in the speculative wheat market on 'change have held the balance of power during the past week, and have kept prices pretty steadily on the up-grade. On the early days the feeling was rather easy on account of the 1,000,000 bushels increase in the visible supply, but New York came in with an increase of only half as much, and the leading dealers decided that in current reduced figures the effect had been fully discounted, so that instead of declining values started skyward. Northwestern millers sent in a small flood of "bear" messages on the heavy movement from first hands, lack of cars, etc., while their buyers continued to harp on the matter of dear wheat and cheap flour. This, however, had scarcely any effect, and later was turned into a "bull" argument when it was learned that a large part of the movement in that section was made up of millers' wheat which was being transferred from country warehouses to their mills, and that the association had been forced to advance its purchasing price 2 cents in order to obtain sufficient supplies. Then nothing was heard but "bull" talk. The "shorts" took to flight at once, and everybody was clamoring for wheat. Cables were strong and higher, while private advices from Liverpool said that the home crop was badly damaged, that English warehouses were fast being emptied, and that supplies must soon be drawn from America. The amount on passage to the United Kingdom and the Continent was found to be 35,000 quarters less than a week ago, and this steady decrease, which in the past four months has amounted to about 18,000,000 bushels, seemed to fully account for the willingness of foreign grain dealers to advance prices, while the uncertainty prevailing in political circles tends to discourage shipments from other wheat-producing countries. Moreover, the "bulls" had what they have been wanting for some time—leaders. Nat Jones and "Old Hutch" were active buyers and passed around dispatches from St. Louis to the effect that stocks there were very light and concentrated in a few hands, and that country millers were obliged to come in and pay advanced prices for grain to ship back into the country to meet daily requirements. All this produced a very strong market, and when the news that the boom was on got cut into the country the grangers rushed in their buying orders and helped cause a "bear's" stampede. Toward the last of the week Lester & Coand other private wire houses who have been sating for the Well street "bull" clique America. The amount on passage to the and helped cause a "bear's" stampede. Toward the last of the week Lester & Co. and other private wire houses who have been active for the Wall street "bull" clique came to the front as sellers and gossips said that the Woerishoffer party was unloading. If this was so it had little effect, prices ruling firm to the finish and "Old Hutch" remarking: "It makes no difference who "covers' or who 'unloads,' wheat is going up, because there is a demand for it and because there is not enough to go around." Last night the crowd still appeared to have "bull" fever, but some good men think the advance has been much too rapid to last. Seaboard advices declare the export demand to be even less than it was a month ago. Holders conduct things on a whoop principle and talk of dollar wheat before the month is out, but it is already estimated that the visible supply this week has increased 1,500,000 bushels, so that unless the consumptive and foreign trade picks up sharply the highest point the visible supply reached last year will soon be equaled. On this point the market is likely to hinge. If receipts at spring wheat points should increase, prices can scarcely help receding, as is the rule around the edge of winter when the locking up of lake navigation is staring the trade in the face and the absence of competition advances rail freights. On the other hand, should the smallness of the winter wheat movement lead to great conservatism of the part of holders in the Northwest, a goof advance may be in order.

Corn is supposed to be cornered, and movement lead to great conservatism of the part of holders in the Northwest, a goog advance may be in order.

Corn is supposed to be cornered, and "Sid" Kent is supposed to be the power behind the throne. Poole has been a heavy buyer right along, bidding for any amound and in any sized parcels. In this he has been assisted by Jim Worthington, and the gossip now is that if receipts are anywhere within bounds lively times may be expected before December.

Essex, of McCormick, Kennett & Consays to-night: "With light receipts, small stocks and a sharp shipping demand, the legitimate corn situation is very strong."

Provisions also rule firm, in sympathy with other articles. All advices, however, report the country full of hogs, and big receipts are predicted for the winter packing season. Still many good men are inclined to believe the lowest prices for produce have been seen.

Successful Balloon Steering. Paris News.

A third and seemingly conclusive trial of the steering war balloon was made on Tuesday evening. The balloon arose from the aeronautical establishment of Chalais, in the park of Meudon, at 4 p. m., with Capts. Paul and Charles Renard, of the Engineers, and M. Dute-Poitevin, aeronaut, in the car. During half an hour the balloon went through a series of evolutions to test the screw, and at 4:30 the machine was headed against the wind to the north, passing over the Meudon station and crossing the Seine at Point du Jour. As a proof of the headway made it may be mentioned that the ballast thrown out, instead of falling perpendicularly, formed a kind of horizontal tail to the balloon as it shot up in the direction steered. At Point du Jour the balloon was seen to veer round and make its way back with the wind to Meudon. It descended at the point of departure without the slightest accident. The experiment is to be repeated shortly, and by permission of the Minister of War the balloon this time will steer to some predetermined spot over gineers, and M. Dute-Poitevin, aeronaut, in will steer to some predetermined spot over

To the Public.

It is the desire of the management of THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS to have that paper on sale, in sufficient quantities to supply the demand, on all railway trains running into or connecting with trains to and from Dallas. The traveling public are kindly requested to bear this fact in mind and report to the business department any failure on their part in being able to purchase copies of the paper in the manner indicated, giving date, train and other particulars.

To City Subscribers.

We beg to announce that the failure of our city circulator to call upon a number of citizens for their subscriptions is not due to oversight, but is the result of his finding it necessary, for the time being, to devote his entire time and attention to the systematizing of the routes, and the supervision of his carriers, to insure the prompt delivery of the paper each morning to the subscribers already obtained This work has prevented him from making a thorough canvass of the city. He expects, however, to resume this canvass this morning and continue daily until every section of the city has been visited. In the meantime be pleased to send names and addresses to the counting room, where they will receive prompt attention. Subscribers failing to receive their papers with regularity and promptitude will please notify us.

A MAGNATE SIDETRACKED.

He is Extricated by the Rumbler Through the Instrumentality of the Telephone.

At 1 a. m. this morning the animated bustle in the "Brainery" of The News building had dwindled down to a dead calm. Two minutes passed and the dead calm shrivelled up into a subdued hush.

The fine Italian sunset observable in the countenance of the city editor under the bulbous radiance of the incandescent light took on a hue-and-cry color.

The society editor sat tailor fashion on a heap of abandoned exchanges, gazing up in a wrapt way into the indigo blue eyes of a cheap chromo of the Jersey Lily, in a lowquarter hurrah silk dress trimmed with callow lillies and embroidered with handpainted sunflowers, which dangled from the gas fixture above the Railroad Rumbler's rosewood escretoire and made the nearsighted society editor's billiard ball head glow with a blush of high art.

Over at his desk in the southerly exposure the horse reporter chewed the fireless stump of a nickel cigar and critically took in the contour of his elevated off hind foot with his Jay-Eye-See eye.

Long before the ghost editor had read himself to sleep over a treatise on "Lying as a fine art," and the religious editor was constructing an "Irishman's flea," a cunning device intended to be put on the noses of sleepers and set afire to make them paw the air and profane.

The telegraph editor sighed, for he felt much agony, and still the unuttered words which hung upon his wrathful lips as he wrestled with the base ball news would not, if put into language, have been classified as proper head lines for a sermon or a prayer.

as proper head lines for a sermon or a prayer.

To the unsuspecting eye of the onlooker who sees only the eternal fitness of things the commercial editor seemed to be poring over the latest issue of Bradstreets. To the suspecting eye of the managing editor he was doing no such thing. The figurative and festive figure editor was bathing his torpid imagination in a compilation of yellow-backed literature, entitled "Bat-Eyed Bill, the Blustering Blizzard of the Bahamas," while the sporting editor solaced his soul with a Sunday school selection, labeled "The Seclusive Shades of Sheol."

The Paragrapher, bent like an interrogation point, glared around at his fellow-laborers in the vineyard of literature, shook as violently as his lazy nature would let him with the dengue, suffered like a mule with the glanders, and was very funny with his feet.

All of a sudden the dead calm was sun.

All of a sudden the dead calm was sun-And of a suddent the teath was expanded, and the shriveled silence began to be swelled by the tinkling of the telephone. "Come away from there, Bucephalus!" yelled the Rumbler as the horse reporter

"Where's the fire?" asked the risk reporter waking suddenly out of a sound nap.
"I'll bet its me that's wanted," whimpered the society editor. "My best girl's got the hysterics, and I'm the only one can solw her."

"The high strikes you mean, Society," snarled the Rumbler as he walked boldly up and held his conch shell ear to the 'phone.

"Hello, hello, hello!"

"Well, well! That you, Rumbler?"

"There's a majority of him at this end.

Who are you, anyway?"

"Sh! don't talk so loud, you'll disturb Russel. Don't you recognize the high C in my voice. This is Jay."

"Well, Jay, old bird, how are you?"

"Not Jay Bird—Jay Gould. Your old friend Jay."

"Why, Jay, old boy, shake! Where are you located?"

"We're sidetracked at Hope."

We're sidetracked at Hope."

"Hope you'll hurry up."
"No, not there. Hope, Arkansaw, near Texarkana."

"Oh, I catch your flavor. He who enters Texarkana leaves Hope behind."

"Don't give me that hoary-headed chestnut by wire, please. It is unnerving, and I am far from well."

"How far is that? What's the matter? Why don't you come on?"

"How far is that? What's the matter? Why don't you come on?"
"I can't just now. We're stuck. I'll tell you how it was. Al. Hopkins got mad at Russell Sage just up the road a piece. The locomotive stopped at a tank. 'What are we waiting for?' asked Al. "O, the team's tired and we're only stopped a bit to water the stock," said Sage. Hopkins threw a Little Rock Railroad sandwich at Sage. It flew out the window and struck a mule, hitched to a wood cart, in the abdomen. The owner of the animal wanted pay for his corpse, but Hopkins couldn't see it in that light. So the man ran down the road and greased the track ahead of the engine. You know a locomotive won't catch on to a greased pair of rails. Now, Rumbler, old boy, what'll I do about it? Hopkins the ma

In the Toils. Sheriff Smith was informed yesterday by wire from Marshall of the arrest of Reuben Arthur, over whom there stands an indictment in the District Court on the charge of stealing $20 from Messrs. Bowser & Lemmon's safe when in their employ as bookkeeper. It will be remembered that he was arrested last year on this charge and had an examining trial, after which he disappeared, leaving his bondsmen bewailing. At the following term of court an indictment was found against him, but he was nowhere to be found and remained with his head-quarters in the shadow until yesterday, when he was arrested by chance, growing out of the following circumstance: It is charged that Ben French last Saturday victimized an old graphlemen pages of Crumples. charged that Ben French last Saturday vic-timized an old gentleman named Crumpley to the extent of $20. French disappearing electric flashes were brought into opera-tion to find his whereabouts, which proved to be in Marshall, where he was arrested whither Deputy Sheriff Henry Lewis started on the next train to fetch him back. On the way from the railroad depot to the Marshall jail Mr. Lewis ran across Arthur, posing for a drummer, and arrested him. French and Arthur were brought in last night.

Matrimonial. Mr. Benjamin M. Foster and Mrs. V. Williams were joined together by the Almighty yesterday in the bridal chamber of the County Court, Judge Bower officiating. The happy couple, whose features wore an expression of joy supernal, were congratulated on all sides. As they took their departure, a sage who had come in from the country to buy blankets, took occasion to remark that the man who mar ries and raises a family in the fear and love of God, does more for Dallas and Dallas County than the fellow who only Wants a Divorce.

A petition for divorce was filed in the District Court yesterday by Ida M. Neimeyer vs. Charles H. Neimeyer, who, if the charges are true, is worse than a Mormon. Ida sets forth that she and he were married in Dallas May 17, 1882, the result of which is an infant girl, Beulah A.; that in her calling and as a wife she has always deported herself with becoming modesty, industry and fidelity, but that more than two years ago, and since their marriage, Charles H. indulged in lecherous associations with one put in twenty-five incandescent lights to illuminate the Idlewild ball next Thursday night, and to close a contract for the lights if their service proves satisfactory on that occasion. The floor of the large hall will also be put in first class dancing condition.

its father. She further alleges that on or about Sept. 27, 1885, Charley H., without provocation, knocked her down repeatedly with his fists and otherwise injured, wounded and bruised her; that since their marriage he has frequently beaten, wounded and bruised her in a wanton and cruel manner, and that about the 28th day of September, 1885, he took nearly all of the furniture from the house in which they lived and appropriated it to his own use, leaving the plaintiff and her infant destitute and homeless. The charges wind up as follows: "That the defendant is an intemperate, thriftless and immoral vagabond, and is wholly unfit to have the care of the child, Bulah A. Neimeyer; that since his abandonment of her and her child he has been living in adultery with one Mamie McKenzie, and that his treatment of plaintiff has destroyed her peace and mind, and has rendered her living with him as his wife insupportable.

Two society gentlemen of the Idlewild Club had a little interchange of courtesy yesterday, in which one of them wa knocked out. Clubs were trumps. Mr. Hugh McDougal, who on last Sunday was locked up in the calaboose for larceny, was yesterday transferred to more comtable quarters in the jail. He is harmless.

one of the county bloodhounds has been among the lost, stolen or strayed since yesterday, when it was seen following a solitary horseman. The canine is a black and tan with a white snip on his nose, white breast, and answers the name Bull He has rendered efficient services in dragging offenders before the bar of justice, in consideration of which the Sheriff offers a reward of $5 for his recovery alive.

A thrifty German named Keller, residing near Oaklawn, came to Dallas yesterday to borrow the Sheriff's hounds in an effort to trace out moonlighters, who have been un-hinging his gates, stoning his residence, turning his cattle loose and otherwise obturning his cattle loose and otherwise obsessing him like demons. The sheriff sent out the dogs, but they failed to find a trail and did not turn loose a tongue. Mr. Keller attributes his trouble to somebody unknown to him whose displeasure he may have incurred where no offense was intended.

A "subscriber" writes The News as follows: "In your article on 10-cent postage you make mention of several towns, but what is the matter with Paris, Palestine, Laredo, Weatherford and several other towns that I could mention that in 1880 gave a census of 4000 and over. Please explain why they have not got the 10-cent delivery." It is probable that the postal authorities differ from "Subscriber" as to the population of the towns mentioned in 1880. At any rate they are not included in the list sent out by the Postmaster General. by the Postmaster General.

County Commissioners' Court.

The County Commissioners met in regular session yesterday to consult the interests of their constituents. They elected Mr. J. D. Miller constable for the Sixth Precinct vice T. S. Sliger, resigned, and passed on small accounts to the amount of about $900. They meet again to-day.

As the solid rural representatives sat around a table scrutinizing the large number of small accounts that it is their province to pass upon, it was impossible to avoid contrasting their silent caution with the uproar of the Legislature's committee of the whole when a proposition to of the whole when a proposition to put 400 electric lights in the blind asylum is the subject of economy, and "Mr. Speaker," "Mr. Speaker," rises above the din of a hurried scramble for fame! The old farmers—old has a granger significance to which Webster has not yet significance to which Webster has not yet caught on—while they may put on some airs with the pen when they come to town, weigh accounts in the balance as closely as they would a bale of cotton, and walk up and down, and ask themselves, "Is this right?" and when they know it is right they follow the injunction of David Crockett and go ahead.

Torn Out by the Roots.

Mr. Ramsey, the horse dealer, met with a painful accident yesterday. While he was in the act of leading a horse, with the halter tied around the first finger of the left hand, the animal took fright and tore away the finger. Dr. Veal dressed the wound, which is exceedingly painful. The singular accident set several people who had witnessed it to talking about the danger of anchoring one end of a rope to the human body while the other is attached to a motive power with a will of its own. One man said he knew of a Mexican in Southwest Texas who in lassoing a mustang had his arm torn from the body. Another related the case of a merchant marine captain who went fish-ing in the surf with the line tied around his waist, but a shark caught on and the fisher-man was towed out to sea, where his bones now rest among the diving bells if they were not chewed up by the shark.

Catching up With the Boom. The lumber yard of Mr. H. S. Matthews was sold yesterday for $16,000 to Mr. Joseph Marks, president of the Citizens' Bank of Texarkana. It is thought that the present management of the concern will be retained, and that this is but a step to further investment in Dallas by Mr. Marks.

THE COURTS.

The Mayor started in on a full docket this morning and emptied it down to the heels. Whisky penitents, with two exceptions, wore blooming noses, and seemed to be suffering for a blue lick or a lemonade with a stick in it; all of which they had in superabundance yesterday, when they should have been engaged in devout and pious practices, such being the opinion of the court chaplain. The Mayor, after arranging his spectacles, gazed a moment on the sufferers, and then, with all due court etiquette, proceeded to chasten. Effie Clide and Saddie Cooper were represented by a police officer, they being unable to appear on account of the headache, as the result of copious libations from the cups that inebriate. They were fined $5 each, the regulation dockage for wayward inebriates. Those of dockage for wayward inebriates. Those of the male persuasion, including Dave Clark, Tom Chaney, Bill Rowlin, S. Dumy, Jack Smith, J. Collins and L. Cole, were taxed at an average of about $3 a head. Then his honor had the gladiators trotted to the front in the persons of George Victoria, P. Harrigan and J. C. Johnson, each of whom had his angry spirits sublimated by a forfeit of $3. George Johnson, L. Battise and Jake Halloway, the latter a splendid authority on ghost stories, were waltzed up to the judgment seat for engaging in a quiet game of "range," contrary to the dignity of the city. The defense set up the plea that the three colored men did their gaming in a private house, which, set up the plea that the three colored men did their gaming in a private house, which, being proven, the dignity of the city was vindicated and the dusky prisoners permitted to go in peace. Several of their race took the hint and remarked with broad grins that the game of "craps" was about as interesting played in a private house as in an alley.

Justice Kendall fined fined F. T. Vinage and Jeff Mitchell $1 each and costs for disturbing the peace, and a party by the name of Simmons $3 for being drunk and disor-

The October term of the District Court commenced yesterday, and the scene in and around that palace of justice was one of animation. The docket is very large, but there are no need of inviting lawyers from the neighboring towns to come to the rescue. As his honor Judge Aldridge called over the docket the congregation of lawyers resembled the closing exercises at Temple bar. Of the 120 councellors and attorneysat-law present fully $0$ per cent were dressed in broadcloth and fine linen, which statement is made as a matter of fact and not to draw raw material to the law school of the State. University. The Dallas bar, considering that a large per centage of its membership were at home with dude fever, presented an appearance of strength and intelligence that Blackstone hardly dreamt of when he tried to lasso the servant girl with a hog chain. Conspicuous among the fraternity yesterday was County Attorney Clint, small of stature, but with his sleeves rolled up and his hair cut short. If he were less game the contemplation of the fact that he is to be matched in turn against each—in some cases against three or four—of the brethren matched in turn against each—in some cases against three or four—of the brethren might extinguish the fire in his eyes and flatten out the curl on his lips, but he seems to have no fear, and in a few days his melodious voice will be heard from the court-house to away down yonder. Showing how house to away down yonder, showing how the fellow did it and what ought to be done with him.

The docket disposed of, there was a bar meeting looking to the assignment of cases and the manner in which it should be made. The old committee made no assignment, believing—so it is reported—that their term had expired, but Judge Alvord yesterday decided otherwise. It is hinted that the committee failed to act out of respect to the views of certain members hinted that the committee failed to act out of respect to the views of certain members of the bar who desire a radical change in the modus operandi, so that there will be no possibility of forwarding some cases and running others down to the heel of the docket. In this connection it is fair to state that the utmost confidence is expressed in the justice of the retired committee, but a beginning had to be made sometime, and it might as well be now as hereafter. Accordingly a committee of five was created to draw up a plan of assignment from week to

He is negotiating with other industries with the certainty of success and is restricted by certainty of success, and is satisfied that the city will be splendidly represented.

Gored by a Mad Cow. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Lee Cohn's little seven-year-old son, Alfred, while homeward bound from the Synagogue School, was attacked by a vicious cow and badly gored. The cow threw the helpless little fellow into the air and then rushed at him as he lay in the street, but was driven off by the party who had the hardhood to drive such a mad brute through the heart of the city. The little boy was cut on the nose and sustained several severe though not dangerous bruises.

350 00 Fighting the Ticket Speculators. New York World.

Theater goers have for many years taken it for granted that they cannot obtain good orchestra seats for any leading attraction without paying a premium to ticket speculators. Managers have at different times made efforts to put a stop to speculation but usually with little success, as the men take out regular licenses and are legally permitted to carry on their trade. To protect themselves by an opposition to the outsiders most of the New York managers have employed men to sell tickets at advanced prices in the theater lobby, but, it is claimed, they never made anything additional from this source, which has certainly not benefited the public.

Mr. John Stetson, of the Fifth Avenue Mr. John Stetson, of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, has just devised a plan which he hopes will entirely destroy the speculators' business. During the present successful run of "The Mikado" as many as fifteen men have solicited patronage at one time at the Broadway entrance. Mr. Stetson was out of town last evening, and Mr. Charles out of town last evening, and Mr. Charles Burnham, who acts in his place, explained the new system to a World reporter. Instead of selling seven single tickets to those who apply at the box office for a number, the purchaser will be given a single admission ticket about the size of a bank check with a coupon, on which the numbers of the seats will be written and the name of the buyer. buyer. A stub is left in the book from which the ticket is torn, and on it the same information is written. For all seats sold in this way the printed tickets will be de-

DALLAS-BURK & WOODS, Managers, to-day, is wonderful. He says that he went fishing in a sharpie, near the mouth of the New Haven Harbor, Monday evening, but suddenly discovered that the heavy wind and tide were driving out into the Sound. He saw a log floating near him, and tried to make for it. In doing so the boat got into the trough of the sea and a strong puff of wind caused it to lurch and throw him out. When he came to the surface the sharpie had drifted away from him and he clung to the log for his life. After that he knew no more until he recovered consciousness Wednesday afternoon in the house of Dennis Sullivan on Summer street, New Brunswick. Sullivan told him that he was left in his charge by the crew of the schooner, the name of which he did not know. They picked him out nearly twelve miles from the place where the boat capsized, and had been tossing about on the sound in very rough weather for seven hours. His friends in this city had given him up for dead, and when he reached here this morning there was great rejoicing among them. He is still suffering severely from the effects of his experience. AND
