A Shocking Accident.

CINCINNATI. Oct. 20.—A distressing accident occurred at the corner of Central avenue and Perry street, at 7:30 this evening. A number of boys were playing around the corner, among them Willie Schwenker, aged 10, who lives with his parents at 24 Perry street, and Albert Edgar, whose home is No. 171 Central avenue. These two were handling a toy pistol, called a flobert, when young Schwenker playfully pointed it at Edgar and snapped it three times—the last time with a loud report—and the how fell. Edgar and snapped to three times—the last time with a loud report—and the boy fell, mortally wounded, with a bullet through the brain. Willie Schwenker, horrified at what he had done, threw the pistol away and ran home crying. He was found by an officer and locked up at the Central Station charged with murder.

FUND FOR FIGHTING FRAUD. CINCINNATI. Oct. 20.—The committee of 100 have received about $8000 since last Tuesday in contributions ranging from 10 cents to $100. This is an average of about $1000 per day. All classes are responding to the call for subscriptions to defray the expense of the committee in prosecuting illegal voters and those who violated the alection laws election laws. LOCATING THE FRAUD.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 20.-Joyce, the Demo cratic County Clerk, says it is pretty well known who the parties are who perpetrated the frauds by increasing the tallies of the Thirtieth Ward tally sheets, and that the parties are in close quarters. Republicans agree on this, and do not hesitate to say some sensational arrests are liable to occur to-day. The better class of Democrats and Republicans are determined that the guilty parties shall not escape.

RETURNS FORWARDED.

Seventy-three counties have forwarded returns of the election to the Secretary of State, and they are being verified. There are fifteen counties yet to hear from, and the work will probably not be completed before the first of next week.

MR. EVARTS ON THE STUMP BUFFALO, Oct. 20 .- Hon. Wm. M. Evarts arrived in this city last evening. Mr. Evarts speaks at Main street rink this evening On Wednesday evening he speaks at Syra cuse, and from there he goes directly to

New York to resume court duties on Thursday. Mr. Evarts will deliver but three poday. Mr. Evarts will deriver but three po-litical addresses in this campaign—one to be given in New York the week before elec-tion. In response to an inquiry as to his views concerning the State ticket Mr. Evarts said: "I have felt all along that we could carry the State this fall if we had good men on the ticket. I think the ticket is a most satisfactory one, and I approve of it as the choice of a free convention." HERE HE IS.

Senator William M. Evarts this evening addressed the first and only grand Republican mass meeting of the campaign in Buffalo. Four thousand people met at the skating rink, whither Mr. Evarts was escorted by the Republican League. Hon. James D. Warren presided. Evarts spoke in an argumentative vein, until near the end of his two hours' talk, when an allusion to "the two hours' talk, when an allusion to "the candidate who was with Tweed" opened the flood gates of his humor. He was given a fine reception at the Genessee House after the meeting. Mr. Evarts speaks but twice more during this campaign—to-morrow night at Syracuse and just before the election in New York City.

GARLAND ON VINCENT. WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.-The Post this morning publishes an interview with Attorney General Garland, who acknowledges the receipt of a dispatch from Judge Vincent, of New Mexico, in which the latter expresses a desire to visit Washington and presses a desire to visit Washington and vindicate himself. The Attorney General also says he has received dispatches from members of the bar of Colfax County, New Mexico, and from friends of Mr. Vincent in Illinois and other places, protesting against the suspension of Judge Vincent, pronouncing him the best possible Chief Justice, whose acts are unimpeachable, and requesting an immediate investigation. Mr. Garland in the interview said Judge Vincent had been "suspended generally," and that his appointment of Ex-Senator Dorsey as a nad been "suspended generally," and than is appointment of Ex-Senator Dorsey as the belief that he was not entirely unembar-rassed in his judicial position. Judge Thoman called upon the President this afternoon, but de clines to talk about his possible resignation as a member of the commission or about the organization of the commission. He talks freely, however, about his trip, and says what he saw and heard in the Northwest leads him to think that belief in civil service reform is growing among the people of that section. The masses of the people wherever he traveled believed the President has taken a firm and proper stand for civil wherever he traveled believed the President has taken a firm and proper stand for civil service reform. A few of the politicians here and there find fault with the President's policy, but the people generally applaud his course and conduct enthusiastically. The Civil Service Commission has addressed a letter to the President calling his attention to the attempt made by the Pennsylvania Republican Committee to collect political assessments in the Departments, and suggesting the propriety of making an investigation of the matter with the view of punishing all parties connected with it who can be reached by the law. They say that it is their belief that Chairman Copper, who is responsible for the begging circular, is not an employe of the government, and discuss the propriety of asking Congress to discuss the propriety of asking Congress to extend the law so as to cover such cases.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

POSTAL REGULATION AMENDED. Special to The News.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The following has been issued from the Postmaster General's office:

Ordered: That section 639, of the Postal Regulations of 1879, be amended as follows: Sec. 639. Railroad companies are required to take the mails from and deliver them into terminal postoffices and all intermediate postoffices located not over eighty rods from the nearest station or point at which passenger trains, or trains in which mails are carried make regular stops, the distance to be measured by the shortest wagon road, and the length of the route will be computed and paid for from terminal office to terminal office, as at present. The department will provide for the delivery of mails to and receipt thereof from offices located beyond such distance of eighty rods and to and from offices which receive mail from parties other than regular stations, or at which passenger trains or trains on which mails are carried do not make stops and from flag stations, do not make stops and from flag stations, and at such points the railway companies must speed of trains sufficiently to admit of the exchange of mails with safety.

The persons employed by railways to convey the mails between postoffices and stopping places when required by this regulation are agents of the companies, not employees of the postal service, and need not be sworn as such, but must be above the age of sixteen years and of suitable intelligence and character, and postmasters will promptly report to the proper division superintendent of the railway mail service or to the general superintendent thereof any violation of this requirement. Ruling 752, on page 703 of the Postal Guide of Jan. 21, 1885, is superseded by this regulation.

CAUSES OF CHOLERA.

Consul Strobel, at Madrid, transmits to the State Department the report of Dr. W. T. VanVredenburg, of New York, on the causes of the cholera outbreak in Spain. Dr. VanVredenburg traveled in Spain during the time of the cholera epidemic and attributes it almost wholly to the neglect of sanitary precaution in sewage and drainage, personal cleanliness and intemperate habits, unnutritious and unsuitable diet. To secure immunity from the disease in this country he urges more thorough sanitary CAUSES OF CHOLERA. country he urges more thorough sanitary inspections and regulations concerning the collection of garbage, disinfection, etc., together with specially careful attention to the maintenance of a pure and healthy Reported Aliance Between Bulgaria and Servia -Serious Complications Between Austria and Russia.

ENGLAND.

ALL INDICTED. London, Oct. 20.—The grand jury has found true bills against all prisoners

A serious misunderstanding has developed between Russia and Austria in regard to the Eastern question. In spite of the efforts of Bismarck and Salisbury to harmonize the two powers, it is authoritatively stated to-day that their relations are increasingly unsettled and precarious, and that negotiations for a fresh conference between the two cabinets have been fruitless, owing largely to Servia's sudden developments of a menacing attitude, which gravely compromises the chances of a peaceable sattlement.

settlement. BULGARIA AND SERVIA.

Communications between Bulgaria and Servia, twice opened and twice broken off, have been reopened on the basis of a union of both countries against Turkey. The actual movement of troops are shrouded in mystery on both sides of the Servian border, a rigid press censorship having been simultaneously established in Servia, Bulgaria and East Roumelia. Turkey is now declared by the Department of War to be in a position to claim her rights of occupation as suzerain state over the Balkan principalities, conferred by the treaty of Berlin.

KING THEEBAW THREATENED. Theebaw four days in which to comply with the ultimatum. Interference with the escort bearing the ultimatum or failure to comply within the period designated will be accepted by the Viceroy of India as a declaration of war; relations will be broken off and the Burmese fortresses attacked. The expeditionary forces consist of 8000 combatants, 1500 men for transport, tele graph, commissarat and other services, and 1500 men to reinforce British posts on the frontier. The field column comprises seven battalions of infantry, two batteries of field artillery, two squadrons of cavalry and two companies of mounted infantry, and consists mainly of Madras troops officered by natives and British, with a sprinkling of British infantry. The cavalry is native and the artillery exclusively British. cort bearing the ultimatum or failure to Sir Charles Dilke, in a speech to-night, de clared that while the Liberals were in favor of entire unity between the colonies and the mother country, the party did not favor the principle of colonial federation, which they believed to be impracticable. employed workmen to-day marched in procession to Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's house for the purpose of enlisting the sympathies of the Radical leader in their cause. The crowd showed signs of ill temper, many of them proclaiming that they would insist on Mr. Chamberlain's report and that they would not leave until their request had been complied with. The police, in consequence of these threats and fearing that violent measures might be resorted to, hurried by a shorter route to the rescue and surrounded the house. After hesitating for some time Mr. Chamberlain decided to receive a committee of three, who were passed through the police lines and admitted. They stated their grievances and demanded support. Mr. Chamberlain listened patiently, and then coolly told the malcontents that the row they were making would certainly alienate not only his own sympathies, but those of all orderly citizens. He concluded by refusing to attend the proposed meeting at the Town Hall for the purpose of aiding the distress fund. As soon as the committee reported the non-success of their mission to the crowd outside there was a great uproar, but the men finally dispersed, howling threats against the democratic leader.

THE ULTIMATUM EN ROUTE. It is impossible for the messenger bearing the British ultimatum, who left Rangoon yesterday, to reach King Theebaw in less than two weeks. Large bodies of Burmese troops have already been sent into British territory, and it is deemed advisable by the ministers to invade Irra Waddy with Dunken vessels.

FRANCE.

THE ELECTION RESULTS.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Although the result of the elections throughout France are unsatisfactory and have caused much discontent in government circles, it is believed that the matter will pass over without any resignations in the present ministry. THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

London, Oct 20.—The crisis in France is passed. A monarchical success would undoubtedly have precipitated a Radical outbreak, and the results might have justified the fears of the most pessimistic prophets. The strain which would have occasioned such violent action on the part of the most rabid anti-monarchists has been prevented by the people themselves, and the peace loving element of the Republican party. who were really the cause of the consternation, have revised their wholesale attacks on the Radicals and thus forestalled a conon the Radicals and thus forestalled a consequence of their anti-Radical action, which would have been the very thing that they were trying most zealously to avoid. The Republican majority, which is now assured, has dismissed all fears of disturbances in Paris, and the moderate party has won a certain victory and the exclusion of the consummation of the plans of either extreme monarchist or radical. One of the results of this has been that Brison, Clemenceau Flouquet and Bert are elected to double seats. The second ballot shows that that part of the public who voted the conservative ticket on the ballot shows that that part of the public who voted the conservative ticket on the first ballot, with the idea of crowding out the violent radicals by making, at least a large and formidable conservative minority, and thus mark their approval of the opportunist policy, took an opposite course as soon as the full result of their victory became evident. They turned square around when it was seen that this policy had nearly restored monarchy and laid the foundation for a new revolution. Some Cabinet changes are certain, however, despite the victory of the Republicans. M. Grevy only consented to contest the Presidency on condition that M. De Freycinet should also become Premier in the re-elected administration. M. Grevy intends to soon resign in favor of De Freycinet, thus retiring from the government without causing the commotion and uncertainty which would have resulted from his refus-

SAW A SEA SERPENT.

A Veracious Captain Relates His Experience with a Marine Monster and a Water Spout.

New York World. Capt. Albert N. Smith has been at sea for ipward of forty years. He is 53 years old, has always borne the reputation of a sober, steady man, yet he saw a sea serpent. For many years he has been in the employ of H. W. Rowell, No. 21 South street.

"I sailed from New York in the schooner E. H. Harriman, on my passage out to Nuevitas, on Sept. 9," he said. "On the 19th the mate called my attention to a disturbance in the water, which I took to be made by a school of whales; but as I could see no 'blowing' or throwing 'flukes,' I concluded I was mistaken. Taking a marine glass I went aloft and from the foretopmast cross-tree saw a sight such as I had read of but never seen. First a head simread of but never seen. First a head similar to a serpent's rose out from the water a distance of nearly eight feet, and a forked tongue protruded from a hideouslooking mouth. Undulating on the waves, the body lengthened out until I calculated that it was at least 300 feet long. At intervals of about seventy-five feet three distinct bumps or protuberances could be traced along its back. In wake of its track the water was lashed into a foam, and the white caps resembled such as are made by a school of dolphins or porpoises. When about one-half mile to leeward of the schooner the monster snake sank out of sight, and when it rose again was to windward, going at a it rose again was to windward, going at a rate of over seventy-five miles an hour.
"When I came on deck," continued the Captain, "the mate and four men were gazing at the object with intense interest, and

Captain, "the mate and four men were gazing at the object with intense interest, and we all concluded that the monster seen was a veritable sea-serpent."

Then Capt. Smith grew serious and said: "I know the majority of folks will think I was laboring under a delusion or had been drinking. To the former idea I call on my crew for verification, and to the latter thought I can refer confidently to my owners and employers for reputation. I believe this sea-serpent to have been the object that has often been reported by sea captains to be an island in the Gulf Stream, and the humps on its back were taken for mountains umps on its back were taken for mountains

Captain Smith is now in the employ of F. Captain smith is now in the employ of F. H. Smith & Co., No. 31 South street, and arrived on Wednesday last in command of the schooner E. H. Harriman, from Nuevitas. The vessel is three-masted, 250 tons burden and lays at the foot of Seventh street, East River. Not only did he see the serpent, but he came near losing his vessel by a waterspout by a waterspout.

While in the gulf stream on Sept. 23, he encountered a hurricane which lasted forty-eight hours. In the height of the storm, one dark night, three composants, or, as the sailors call them, Neptune's lanterns, rested on the mastheads of the schooner. They were so bright and large that they lighted up the deck for a number of minutes. Suddenly they vanished, as quickly as they had appeared. Then the storm commenced to break and by daylight there was but little wind. At noon a dead calm prevailed, leaving a tremendous sea. Dead ahead a waterspout mendous sea. Dead ahead a waterspout commenced to form, and its variegated colors resembled those of a rainbow, but it was dangerously near. There was no gun on board or other instrument for making a noise, by which the spout could be broken, and the schooner was being gradually drawn toward the maelstrom formed by the and the schooner was being gradually drawn toward the maelstrom formed by the absorbing waterspout. When the peril of being drawn into the vortex was imminent, a breeze sprang up from the southward and assisted her out of the attraction. President Cleveland and Tammany.

Special to the Times-Democrat.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—The hand of the Cleveland administration is at length palpable in the control of the city political canvass. An order from Washington for the obliteration of Tammany is as visible as though issued in handwriting for public perusal. The County Democracy, which is the organization of the Democratic party made under Tilden's directions by William C. Whitney, now Secretary of the Navy, has refused all offers of fusion with Tammany this fall, but has put a complete municipal ticket in nomination. Tammany has therefore combined with the only other faction, Irving Hall, and in forlorn hope made up a ticket. The belief is that, a has therefore combined with the only other faction, Irving Hall, and in forlorn hope made up a ticket. The belief is that, a month ago, a letter was borne to the President from John Kelly, declaring that Tammany had been faithful in the last national canvass, and would pledge herself to anything for harmony. This action was taken at the instance of Gov. Hill, who strongly desired to reunite his party for the sake of his own chances in the present State struggle, but it did not bring Cleveland to a forgiveness of Kelly and Tammany for their Ben Butler exploit, and through Manning and Whitney directions came to ignore Tammany. The result is awaited with great anxiety by city statesmen. The County Democracy look upon the circumstances as favorable to a final and complete crushing out of Tammany, which is weakened by the desertion of some leading members and the absence of its boss. They are reasonably confident of electing their ticket, and never have the preparations for vigorous work been more extensive. Tammany will be satisfied if she polls enough Democratic votes to insure a victory for the Republicans, for that would prove that she is necessary to her party. Kelly is in town, but perfectly secluded, and the struggle between his wife and his political friends over the question of his taking command of Tammany is one of the interesting incidentals. Under the doctor's orders that he shall receive no visitors, she stubbornly denies admittance to everybody, and is especially vigilant against the Tammany magnates. She opens her husband's mail, too, and no letter on a political topic reaches him. letter on a political topic reaches him.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 20.—Taylorsville, in this county, is intensely excited over the shooting at 1 o'clock last night of Ex-County Commissioner Abe Kyle, a wealthy farmer. Kyle was just about to get into his buggy when a man, whom Kyle stated was Barney McEvenue, approached him and said, "I intend to kill you for swearing a lie against me," and with that shot, the ball passing entirely through the upper part of Kyle's body sideways and lodging in the right shoulder. He then struck Kyle over the head with the revolver. The two had recently had a suit in court. No one saw the affair. Kyle is still alive, but cannot recover.

KILLED BY A LAWYER. Hot Springs, Oct. 20 .- A shooting affray took place near the city last night between Reid Gantt and A. B. Sullivan, in which the latter was mortally wounded. Sullivan was a tenant of Gantt's mother, and the diffi-culty arose over the rent of a house oc-cupied by Sullivan. The two men met last night when Sullivan accused Gantt of insulting his wife about the rent. Gantt slapped Sullivan's face, and almost imme-diately thereafter the shooting occurred. Gantt claims that Sullivan had threatened him, and that the shooting was in self dehim, and that the shooting was in self de-fense. Sullivan leaves a wife and six chil-dren destitute. KNOCKED IN THE HEAD .. St. Louis, Oct. 20.+An affray occurred at the City Hospital last Thursday in which Wesley Walker struck David Keefe, a fellow employe, in the back of the head fellow employe, in the back of the head with a section of steam pipe, fracturing his skull and rendering him unconscious, in which state he has been ever since. To-day his skull was trepanned, but the case is pronounced hopeless. It is not known in what direction the murderer escaped, and no chase of him has been undertaken as yet. The authorities at the hospital claim that the police department was notified but that the latter have kept the matter from becoming public, fearing the murderer may escape should it be published.

A BRUTE SHOT IN A COURTROOM. Indianapolis, Oct. 20.-Last Saturday night a negro hostler, Harrison Tasker, inveigled a German girl, named Helen Huendlend, into his room and brutally outraged her. He was arrested Sunday for the crime, and this morning was taken into court for examination. While the case was progressing Meinrod Huendlend, the girl's brother, drew a revolver and shot Tasker in the body, the ball penetrating the right abdominal wall, and producing a probably fatal wound. Before another shot could be fired the infuriated German was seized by the officials and disarred. A scene of confusion ensued, and armed. A scene of confusion ensued, and, of course, court adjourned. Tasker was conveyed to the County Hospital. The physicians give no hope of recovery. Huendlend was remanded to the custody of the Sheriff and ledged in icit and lodged in jail.

A CONNECTICUT ELOPEMENT.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 20 .- It is announced today that W. A. McDowell, of St. Louis, Mo., a graduate of Yale College in the class of 1884, and Miss Mamie Donnelly, a clerk in a photograph gallery in this city, have eloped. The young lady is described as graceful, accomplished and vivacious, with remarkably beautiful black eyes. Her age is twenty-two years. Her father is Patrick Donnelly, a tailor by occupation. The parents of the young man are said to be very wealthy, beyond which nothing is known of him in this city.

"MURDER WILL OUT." MANCHESTER, N. H., Oct. 20.-Forty

years ago a resident of this city named Parker was mysteriously murdered. The affair created a sensation of a year's duration, but was never cleared up, and is remembered only by the oldest residents. Mr. Butler has revived interest in the case by relating to two Manchester gentlemen a secret which he has kept for years. He says | market reports.

that a client of his named Pierson, who was hung for wife murder, previous to his execution confessed to him that he killed Mr. Parker because the latter had refused to return him certain money which Pierson had placed in his hands for safe keeping, or to get it out of the reach of Pierson's creditors. Pierson, after failing to get his money, drove to Manchester from Lowell, called Parker out on some pretext or other, and when the two were on the way to Janesville killed him with a shoe knife. Gen. Butler was counsel for the Wentworths, who were tried for the Parker murder,

POLAR EXPEDITIONS.

Lieut. Schwalka Talks Interestingly of Past and Prospective Ventures. Courier Journal.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—It has been rumored for some time that Lieut. Schwalka and Engineer Melville are about to undertake another expedition to discover and open the Polar sea. Lieut. Schwalka, who arrived here to-day, says that, so far as he himself is concerned, the rumors are without foundation.

"How about Engineer Melville?" he was asked.

"Engineer Melville," he replied, "is, I believe, contemplating forming an expedition for the purpose of further explorations. How far his plans have progressed I cannot How far his plans have progressed I cannot say. It will require a great deal of money. He asks for from $100,000 to $150,000 I believe from patrons, and I think that is too large a sum to be raised for the purpose. Besides there will be no material gain in discovering the North Pole unless you can find the South Pole as well, and our ships have been nowhere as near the latter as the former."

"What are Engineer Melville's plans?" "His object is purely pole seeking. It is quite natural that, after having been a subordinate officer in one expedition that failed, he should want to be commander of one expected to be successful. His idea is to proceed to Franz Josef's Land by ves-, and beyond that point by means of reached it only to be stuck fast and abandoned."

"Do you disapprove entirely of further polar expeditions.?"

"By no means. It is an unfortunate idea that the public has that all expeditions to the Arctic regions are pole seeking. This is not the case. There are a number of expeditions now proposed. One of these is the establishment of a magnetic North Pole. It would be a splendid achievement, an important data to which to refer, and of great value to navigation. This point should be between King William's Land and Victoria Land, at a place fifty to one hundred miles north of Cape Felix, the northernmost point of King William's Land. I have been in sight of the place myself when the compass failed to work, the needle remaining wherever placed. Then the gain in determining from this magnetic curve elsewhere and the establishment of a determined magnetic pole would be of great value. Magnetism is coming in as a great force and power everywhere, and to determine any point of terrestial magnetism would be a great event. An interesting fact that New Yorkers may not generally would be a great event. Iron Men Fear Tariff Changes. PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14.—The American Iron and Steel Association, through its Executive Committee, to-day adopted resolutions opposing any revision of the tariff. They approve the letter of Secretary Manning asking for figures on the cost of production, and will hasten to supply all information necessary, in the belief that these figures will demonstrate the necessity for the tariff now existing. They regard the present tariff, which was enacted three years ago, after two years of Congressional agitation, as in the main a wise law, and they want no tinkering if it will bring on agitation; but there are some defects they would like remedied, if it could be done quietly. They would favor a judicious substitution of specific for ad valorem duties, and the correction of such errors as the low rate on tin plate, which, they allege, prevents any American from manufacturing that indispensable article. They hope the President and Secretary Manning will officially announce at once that they do not favor tariff agitation. Otherwise they fear the improvement in business will be checked. ning asking for figures on the cost of pro

FORT WORTH FEELS WELL

Over the Appoinment of a Democratic Postmaster.

Captain Julian Feild Heartily Congratulated. Arrested for Swindling-Houston Street To Be Opened-An $80 Robbery.

Special to The News.

THE NEW POSTMASTER. FORT WORTH, Oct. 20 .- The announcement of the appointment of Capt. Julian Feild as postmaster of Fort Worth was received here with satisfaction. Nobody was surprised, as it was well understood that the Captain was the strongest candidate, and but very few of Mrs. Burchell's friends indulged in the wild hope that she would be re-appointed.

Capt. Feild was being heartily congratulated all day, and it was with difficulty that THE NEWS correspondent could get a five minutes conversation with him.

"No," he said, "it is no surprise to me; although I hardly expected the appointment so soon, I knew that I would be selected when it was made. The entire Texas delegation indorsed me, and my friends in Fort Worth did all they could for me."

gation indorsed me, and my friends in Fort Worth did all they could for me."

Capt. Feild further stated that he will probably enter upon his official duties on the 26th inst., when the term of the present incumbent, Mrs. Burchell, expires. He will make no changes to the prejudice of the service, but will retain all the present employes, if satisfied that they are fully competent. He was emphatic in his declaration that he would make the best postmaster that Fort Worth ever had.

Capt. Julian Feild is by birth a Virginian and came to Fort Worth in 1854, and was then appointed postmaster, being the first of a few years residence at Mansfield, in this one the town ever had. With the exception county, he has lived in Fort Worth ever since. His name has always been connected with every movement tending to the advancement of the city, and being of high standing socially and financially he is respected and esteemed by every citizen of Fort Worth. Capt. Feild's Democracy has always been sound and his voice has ever been lifted for the best interests of the party. That he will make an A No. 1 postmaster and furnish a most efficient service is the opinion of all.

ARRESTED FOR SWINDLING.

ARRESTED FOR SWINDLING. W. T. Maginnis was arrested this afternoon on an indictment charging him with having, through misrepresentation, pro-cured the endorsement of R. E. Beckham and B. B. Paddock to seven promissory notes, aggregating about $2800, on July 1, 1884. It appears that Maginnis, with F. L. Crosby, had purchased the job office of the Fort Worth Publishing Co., and it is alleged in the indictment that they executed the seven notes to this company endorsed by George B. Loving, and that Maginnis obtained the endorsement of Beckham and Paddock to these notes by representing to them that J. M. Hartsfield, S. M. Fry. Max Elser, and either Mr. Littlejohn or Mr. Martin, of the firm of Littlejohn & Martin, all good and solvent parties, had agreed to and would endorse the said notes. The indictment further alleges that these representations were false and that the parties named had refused to go on the notes and had stated to Maginnis positively upon his first application to them that they would not do so. Mr. Maginnis was released on a recognizance bond of $600, with J. J. Kane, J. A. Bergin and S. I. Monarch as sureties. It is stated that when default was made on the notes, Judge Beckham and Capt. Paddock took possession of the job office and realized from it the full value of the notes within about $600. Crosby, had purchased the job office of the

The Correlless slayers are still safely ensconsced in Piedras Negras, Mex., but it is not absolutely safe for them, even there, as the precedent of 1877 will show, according to the treaty of Dec. 11, 1861, made by Hon.

Thos. Corwin, of Ohio, representing the United Slates, and Don Sebastian Lerdo Tejada, representing Mexico, it was stipulated that no citizen of the one country could be extradited and tried in the other for the commission of a crime in his foreign country. To cover the loophole offered criminals, Mexico enacted laws for punishing her citizens who had escaped to the United States after the commission of certain malfeasances. In 1877 a private soldier in Falcon's army named Sefrim Avaroles, became intoxicated, and vowing he would kill somebody before sunset, jumped into a skiff and was rowed over to this side of the Rio Grande, and landing, he walked up to a blind Mexican beggar sitting on the river bank, ordered him to pray for his life; but the beggar was too slow to suit his caprices, and Avaroles pulling his pistol shot him through the head, killing him. Avaroles jumped into a skiff and made a boatman row him over the river at the muzzle of his pistol, and disembarking he went to his quarters. The United States government made requisition in due form on the Mexican authorities for Avalores, but they refused to deliver him. However, all the papers in the inquest on the beggar's body and the depositions of the witnesses were presented officially to the Mexican authorities and Avaroles was tried and sentenced to be shot. An appeal in his case was taken to the State Court, when he was sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary by that court. This decision was afterward overruled by the Supreme Court, and the only resource now was the pardoning power of the Governor of the State. A petition for the pardon of Avaroles was taken out at 7 o'clock the morning following the refusal of the pardon, to the outskirts of Piedas Negras, six soldiers were called out of the ranks, who each selected a gun from a stack only one of which held a blank charge, and blindfolding Avaroles and seating him on his coffin, a volley from the detachment soon finished his miserable existence. TWO ACCIDENTS AT LONGVIEW.

Special to The News. LONGVIEW, Oct. 20.—Shortly after dinner to-day, as L. E. THE LEHIGH VALLEY DISASTER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20 .- No more bodies were found this morning at the scene of the wreck on the Pennsylvania Road at Marion, New Jersey. Up to 1 o'clock the Lehigh Valley locomotive had not been entirely removed from the meadows. The belief is still held that when the wreck has been removed several more bodles will be found. Pratt, the operator who caused the collision, remains in custody. It is the opinion of his friends that he will plead guilty to manslaughter, without offering any exculpatory excuse.

CLEARING AWAY THE WRECK. NEW YORK, Oct. 20 .- A gang of men are still at work clearing up the wreck on the Hackensack Meadows, where the terrible collision occurred Sunday night. No more bodies were discovered to-day, but it is believed that a body will be found to which the detached leg belongs, which cannot be fitted to any of the bodies now at the morgue. Trains are now running regularly past the spot. The injured at St. Francis Hospital, Jersey City, are getting along well, and will all live. Pratt, the telegraph operator whose error caused the accident, was visited to-day by his wife yesterday celebrated the event by filling and several friends in his cell at police headquarters. His mental suffering in reflecting upon the consequences of his carelessness seems to be acute. He is excessively nervous. Coroner Hughes, of Bergen Point, who will have charge of the inquest, will begin the investigation Thursday. While not wishing to prejudice the case, he ventures the opinion that others may possibly have to share with Pratt the responsibility of the disaster. He intends to sift the rumors about Flagman Rhodes, of the emigrant train, failing to run back with a lantern to protect his train as the rules require in all cases when a train stops on the main track. Crowds of emigrants surrounded the wrecked engine all day, watching the progress of the work, and anxious to know what the investigation will reveal. The commissioner of emigration lice headquarters. His mental suffering in anxious to know what the investigation reveal. The commissioner of emigration has offered to defray the expenses of burying the victims. Special to The News.

GALVESTON, Oct. 20 .- In conversation with one of the directors of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe to-day a News reporter was informed that it is hardly probable that the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Railway will accept the franchise over Avenue A to the Eastern portion of the city under the conditions as prescribed by the report of the committee on streets and alleys, as made to the Council Monday night, granting the franchise conditioned upon the Santa Fe paying to the city one third of all revenues to be derived from dockage that may be charged by the road in locating wharves along the franchise. The report seems to have been made with a view of placing the Santa Fe Co. on an equal footing with the Galveston Wharf Co., which now pays one third of its dividends to the city, but the Santa Fe people cannot see that there is any parity of reasoning in the proposition. It is hinted that this character of report was made merely for the purpose of getting the matter fairly before the Council, as opposition from some quarters was anticipated. The report has been referred to the ordinance committee, with a view to having an ordinance framed granting the franchise, and at this meeting it is proposed to invite a conference of the full Council, the City Attorney and the directory of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe, that an understanding may be had looking to a better understanding of all parties in interest. Amendments and conditions may then be decided upon which will be satisfactory to all concerned; but if the ordinance be framed literally to conform to the committee, it is safe to say the Santa Fe will not build to the East End, where they had prepared to establish wharf facilities. but the Santa Fe people cannot see THE FIRE ALARM TELEGRAPH.

To-day Mr. J. C. Smith, of the Baltimore and Ohio Telegraph Co., in company with Mr. Skinner and Chief Oldenberg, of the fire department, made a test of the system with what is known as a tangent galvenometer and Wheatstone bridge. Much complaint has been made of late of the defects of the alarm system, and as a matter of fact it is now becoming a rare occurrence when a correct alarm of fire is turned in, so faulty is the system becoming. The test was made to show the insulation and conductivity of to show the insulation and conductivity of the wires and resulted in showing a very faulty condition of the circuit, though the defect has not yet been definitely located and it is not known whether it is in the boxes or the wires. The circuit, however, shows a very heavy leakage and an unusually heavy resistance. Another test will be made soon to definitely locate the defect. As it is at present the fire alarm system, in its defective condition, is almost worse than having no system at all, as no reliance can be placed on it. The city has determined to remedy the evil at once.

At the meeting of the City Conncil Monday night upon the proposition of Engineer Peeler to establish a deep water port in Galveston, by digging a channel across the west end of the city to the deep water in the gulf, the matter was referred to the Council as a committee of the whole, together with a letter from Mr. F. V. Daniel, of Austin, representing Major Edward Roemer, the prominent Prussian engineer. Neither the prop osition of Mr. Peeler or the letter of Mr.

osition of Mr. Peeler or the letter of Mr. Daniel was read, both being referred to the committee of the whole, with instructions to investigate thoroughly the question in all its bearings and report their work subsequently to a meeting of the Council. The proposition of Mr. Peeler has been before published, and the letter of Mr. Daniel is in substance an advocacy of Major Roemer for the work.

The general sentiment of the Board seems to be to take the question of deep water by the horns, and, while not acting precipitately in the matter, give it a thorough investigation in all its bearings, in order that the city in its municipal capacity may allign itself with the most feasible plan that may be suggested, during the present administration, for securing for Galveston this desideratum, generally regarded as the very soul of her future existence. The Council, acting as a committee of the whole, will probably also confer in this matter with the committee of representative citizens who were in conference with Congressman Crain during his recent visit here, looking to the framing of a bill to be presented to the next meeting of Congress.

IMPORTANT RAILROAD LITIGATION. A motion for a continuance was argued at great length in the District Court this morning in the case of Shirley vs. the Tap Railway. It was overruled and the cause taken up. The case will probably occupy the court for the balance of the week. The proceedings in this case are voluminous. The record makes over 2400 pages of legal cap. The action is to recover damages for breach of contract, estimated at $150,000. Shirley alleges that the Waco and Northwestern Railroads, successors of the Waco Tap Railroad, voluntarily and illegally disrupted the contract after he had been at work under it some four or five months. The Houston and Texas Central Railway constructed the road for the Waco and Northwestern Railroad, after Shirley's contract had been disrupted, and took a deed of trust for $600,000 to secure it under its contract to construct. In 1878 the road was sold out under the deed and the Houston and Texas Central bought it, and now claims it as the northwestern division of said road. The Houston and Texas Central also claims and holds the land grant of the State to the Waco and Northwestern Railroad (about a half million acres) as having passed to it by the deed in trust and sale. Shirley al. way. It was overruled and the cause taken Waco and Northwestern Railroad (about a half million acres) as having passed to it by the deed in trust and sale. Shirley alleges that the lands did not pass to the Houston and Texas Central, and that the sale of the Waco and Northwestern to the Houston and Texas Central was fraudulent, and seeks to subject the land and property to his debt.

The case has been won twice by Shirley, being awarded in each instance $100,000, and on appeal has been remanded for rehearing.

CORSICANA CULLINGS.

Busy Meeting of the City Council-Real Estate Transfers-Sale of a Library-Police Items.

CORSICANA, Oct. 20 .- The City Council met in regular session this evening. A good deal of miscellaneous business was transacted.

The City Assessor and Collector presented a list of property sold by him for taxes, and on motion the owners of such property was given until Jan. 1, 1886, in which to redeem the same by paying the amount of the tax and the cost already accrued.

ACTORS' CONTRACTS.

Documents that Members of the Profession are Required to Sign. Philadelphia Times.

The darlings of the stage, worshipped from the front of the house, have a side to their lives, irrespective of sex, with which the public is not familiar. Back of the scenes no one worships anything, and the manager has no veneration for anything but large receipts. When the curtain is up the leading man seems to own the earth, while nothing in the world is too good for the leading lady and the fascinating fair ones who attend her; yet the fact is that under the system of traveling combinations actresses are bound as tight as galley slaves. The contracts signed by the members of the profession have always been jealously cancealed from the public eye, the result being to very largely create the impression that with a favorite of the people the agreement with the manager was the merest for mality, without the slightest binding force It may surprise come of the initiated, even, to learn upon what shallow foundations this opinion rested.

Yesterday a reporter secured a copy of the contract signed by every member of a minstral combinution for the season of 1885-86. It is a fair specimen of the castiron collar worn by the prafession to-day. It is remarkable for the absolute surrender of all liberty which it exacts from those who sign it. It gives everything to the manager, and leaves what he can get to the performer. In the first clause it binds the performer not only to his original employer, but to the heirs and assigns of that employer, to serve him or them in the capacity in which he or she was engaged for a specified period. It also provides that this period may be extended at the option of the manager or sharply curtailed, also at his option, upon a few days' notice. The manager also reserves the right, in the same clause, absolutely to annul the contract, capriciously or otherwise, the single consideration given to the performer being a notice several days in advance of the event that upon a certain date his head will fall into the basket.

The performer also agrees that he will not assist in any performance, charitable or otherwise, without the permission of the proprietor, and, finally, he waives every right guaranteed to him under the law by subscribing to a covenant, of which the following is a copy: of all liberty which it exacts from those who lowing is a copy:

And for the true performance of all and every the covenants and agreements aforesaid, the said party of the second part doth hereby bind his (or her) heirs, executors and assigns to the party of the first part, his heirs, executors and assigns in the sum of $300, which is hereby agreed upon as stipulated damages, and not penalty for the breoch of the above contract and agreement. And the said party of the second part hereby authorizes an attorney of the courts of this commonwealth to appear for him, his heirs, executors and administrators, in the said court or elsewhere in an action of debt, there or elsewhere brought or to be brought against him, his heirs, executors and administrators, at the suit of the said proprietor, his successors or assigns, on the said obligation, as of any term or time, past, present or any other subsequent time, there or elsewhere to be held, and thereupon confess judgment for the sum of $300 debt besides cost of suit.

A paragraph follows acquitting the proprietor of all responsibility for errors of any sort that might have been made in his proceeding against his employe, and this clinched by the concluding clause, which sounds like the exclamation of a man about to plunge into the river. The clause reads: "Hereby waiving all rights to the benefit of any laws now made or hereafter to be made exempting personal property from property and sale." owing is a copy:

And for the true performance of all and

THE CAPITOL LANDS AS AN EN-GLISH INVESTMENT.

A long report of a meeting of the stockholders of the Capitol Freehold Land and Investment Co., limited, held at the offices of the company in London, Eng., Oct. 2, is published in the Financial News, of the English metropolis. The Marquis of Tweeddale, chairman of the company, presided and addressed the meeting, reviewing the condition of the company's affairs This is the company that now owns 3,000,-000 acres of the Texas capitol lands. In his remarks the chairman claims that the Panhandle is a portion of the "province of Texas," and geographically the best region in America for cattle-raising, it being in the latitude which in the highest degree combines the advantages of the large increase of the warm South, with the heavier growth and the greater freedom from disease of the cooler North. This was ascertained, he stated, to be a fact by the grass commissioner, Mr. Henry Grierson, sent out in 1888 to report upon the capitol lands situated in that portion of the province The native free graziers, however, had dropped on to that racket long before this date, and the State Land Board has had and also of any one recommended by the veniently near, to see that they behaved suspicions on the subject a couple of years. From the chairman's ad- that their man is not tainted with partisan- sent away without any assurance of sympa-dress it appears that the company has issued two series of bonds, or debentures, to purchase stock and pay for the lands. The company has acquired the fee simple of 438,700 acres, and is entitled to exclusive possession and use of the entire 3,000,-000 acres. The chairman calculates that the lands will support 300,000 head of cattle. Some 65,000 head had been purchased and the balance of 120,000 head with which it is proposed to begin operations are shortly to be purchased. An issue of $2,000,000 of bonds had been offered the public in England and America, and $1,460,-000 had been taken. The following is the calculation of profit submitted by the chairman: Expenditures will be, interest on the bonds issued to pay for cattle, say, $100,000; interest on $438,700 of bonds to pay for land, $21,935, and for wages and other expenses, $120,000; or a total liability of $241,935 for the year ending Dec. 81, 1886. The profit will be, increase in value of the herd and increase of calves, $667,500, leaving a net profit of over $425,-000, with the property, as "my lud" remarks, only about one-third stocked. He then proceeds to figure out the annual net profit when the property is fully stocked, and it is only a little above $2,000,-000. Mr. Brogden, M. P., complimented the noble marquis, and was delighted with what he termed the unique statement of the company's affairs. He, however, thought the lands could not be devoted solely to cattle breeding. It was a tract that would extend a distance equal to that from London to Liverpool, and twenty-five miles wide all the way. It would be reached by railways and population, and cities and towns would spring up, which would increase the value of the property enormously. Mr. Brogden, M. P., moved a vote of thanks to the noble chairman, but there was nothing said about thanking the Texas Capitol Board for giving up the lands before they had been paid for. Certainly a vote of thanks to the board was in order. The chairman, acknowledging the compliment of the vote of thanks, and referring to the views of Mr. Brogden, M. P., reproached himself for having taken rather a calm and cold view of the prospects of the company. It is evident that the Marquis and the M. P. regarded an annual dividend of $2,000,000 as but a niggardly outcome from a ranch situated in the Panhandle portion of this province, the paradise of cattle breeders. The Marquis compliments Texas on the great extent of its territory and infers that on account of its 274,356 square miles and its 2,000,000 of people, the State "naturally desires to possess a parliament house in accord with its extent and importance." He goes on to say that the tract of land set apart for the purpose amounts to 3,000,000 acres, but means, of course, that the land is bargained for the parliament house, and not required to build the house upon, as might be inferred. A large house is wanted, one that will hold the Texas parliament of the future, with the numerous boards and bureaus of a province that seems to be developing wholly into that kind of shoddy government furniture; but a 3,000,-000 acre capitol square or plaza is not wanted. At present a capitol square of about twenty acres answers all the purposes of keeping in active employment a superintendent of buildings and grounds on a salary of some $2000 per annum. If 3,000,-000 acres had to be superintended, the office-seekers to make an indiscriminate use of the term "offensive partisan." If the expression had needed any definition, which, to a reasonable mind, it does not, the necessary explanation could have been derived from the merest perusal of the pointed utterances of the President regarding the business-like conduct of the civil service of government. The political press for the most part is unfortunately in too intimate relations with office-seekers, and in consequence its tendency is to the officeseeker's idea of offensive partisanship, which has its parallel in the well-worn definition of heterodoxy. Offensive partisanship is the partisanship of the other party, and the next thing to it is worsenamely, inoffensive non-partisanship. The latter is as utterly obnoxious to a spoilsman office-seeker as faithful stewardship to a prodigal defendent. Even the word "rascal" is coming to mean in politics little or nothing more than one of the opposite party in office—that is, one who prevents the folks of "our doxy" from practicing rascality in the new technical sense. So much stronger than words are human inclinations. They make sport of vocabularies, call that virtue which is insulting to decency and destructive of moral integrity, and brand as political sin a faithful service made doubly odious to the covetons eve of office hunters by the modest and unobtrusive presence of honestly entertained political opinions. To determine who are offensive partisans it requires that spoilsmen expectant of place should not sit as judges to try the issue. They cannot be both suitors and jurymen in their own cause. Senator Beck showed a sense of honor and dignity when he stated that he would not stoop to present charges of offensive partisanship against a Republican postmaster whom he desired to see removed to give place to a Democrat. The present incumbent of an office may be an offensive partisan, and in that case his removal as such may properly be asked, but not by those seeking the office, for their motive constitutes offensive partisanship, as viewed by impartial public opinion in connection with their active exertions. In such cases they are informers, and a common informer is held by traditional honor among the people to be worse than a thief, especially the informer whose object is reward. In such cases the charge made against incumbents suggests specifically the exclusion from the succession of any one who is among the informers.

gree of partisanship which they condemn. Judgment in such cases, to be really impartial, will view all party spirit but that which is inspired by disinterested devotion to distinctive party principles as a unity under all its various forms, phases and manifestations—a unity in its thirst for spoils not less than in its habit of self-assumed virtue and dramatic parade of inveterate prejudice.

If the reports of newspaper correspondents from the front are to be relied on, there is no longer any doubt as to the result of the approaching election in Virginia. Mahone is devoting all his energies to the effort to secure the election of a Legislature that will return him to the Senate, but with small chances of success. A complete triumph for the Democratic party of the Old Dominion is confidently predicted by one who claims to have been over the ground and to know whereof he writes.

THE election of Foraker in Ohio will. probably be accepted as an indorsement of Halstead's letter recommending the assassination of Lincoln.

THE New York Tribune perhaps intends a little humor in declaring that the Ohio election was a pointed rebuke to the national administration. As a spoils organ, it doubtless intends to say that the national administration had not satisfied the spoilsmen in the opposition camp, and thus offended the whole craft in both camps.

THE State of North Carolina derives a evenue of $100,000 from a tax on drummers. A provision of the law gives a resident drummer a rebate, the effect of which has just been pronounced an unjust discrimination against non-residents, and the law is, therefore, declared unconstitutional.

THE Richmond, Va., Dispatch considers the tobacco tax akin to a sumptuary law, and at the present rate of 8 cents per pound it appears to be about 100 per cent on the selling price of the leaf. Virginia planters are interested in getting this tax removed, and the votes in Congress will show that they have nothing to expect from the party with which Mahone is allied; but the Democrats have been rather generally opposed to the continuance of that tax.

ATTORNEY GENERAL GARLAND is disposed to let Judge Vincent down easy. Judge Vincent is the recently appointed Chief Justice in NewiMexico who selected Steve Dorsev a jury commissioner to draw the jurors in cases in which he is alleged to have pecuniary interest, and for this offense he was suspended. Judge Garland does not accuse the justice of being corrupt, but he thinks him not altogether unembarrassed in his judicial position. This probably means, in plain English, that Justice Vincent is, or was, under some obligation to ex-Senator Dorsey, or that there was some entangling alliance between them. Mr. Vincent's suspension may be regarded as permanent.

THE London grand jury found true bills against all persons charged with the abduction of the girl Eliza Armstrong. This includes, of course, Editor Stead, of the Pall Mall Gazette, who arranged this abduction merely to demonstrate how easily such things could be done and thereby to show that such things had been done, as charged by him in his exposures. Mr. Stead was a bold detective and reformer, but he went a little too far when he committed the same crime he had so vigorously denounced the authorities for not suppressing, and ran his neck in the halter he had prepared for others. Mr. Stead's social reform, so much lauded at the start, was thus clouded and smirched and his liberty is imperiled, "all on account of Eliza."

Ir is hinted that Blaine and Logan are not splitting their sides with merriment over the Ohio result. Both have aspirations, and they are thinking about the effect Mr. Sherman's "personal victory" may have on the Republican nominating convention of 1888.

POLITICAL nomenclature is not by any means the same in England as in this country, and no more are the politicians. The State Department has information of the bad treatment of missionaries and the boycotting of native Christians in the Celestial Empire. RECENT evidence of clairvovance from the Chicago Times:

the Chicago Times:

The wife of a well-known citizen, on a morning a couple of weeks ago, soon after rising, and while still engaged in dressing, asked her husband, "Do you know anybody named Edsall or Esdale?" A negative reply was given, and then a "Why do you ask?" She answered: "Because I dreamed that a man by that name was found drowned." At the breakfast table the morning paper was read, and in one of the disappearance of a young man named Esdale, and whose remains, some ten days later, were found in the lake. This is a bona fide occurrence, just as related. Neither the husband nor wife had ever heard of the name, and the first time they ever saw it was in the announcement of the mysterious disappearance of a person who bore it. Is this merely a singular coincidence, or is it connected with a clairvoyance which perceives events and things beyond the reach of the average human vision? reach of the average human vision?

It is claimed in some quarters that the gold standard can in no case become oppressive because commercial expedients measurably counteract the tendency to increased power of gold over prices. The argument is fallacious. If commercial and banking talent accomplishes so much it deserves its reward in emancipation from the arbitrary power of gold, silver or any other flat standard, and not in maintaining the statu quo with more or less success. Should inventive intelligence be content, when it has contrived a useful machine, that it retains the same reward for labor because monopoly takes only about what the machine enables its inventors to produce beyond what they produced before?

While pretending to be very angry with each other and refusing all offices of diplomacy, it is alleged that they are really maturing plans for a joint attack upon the Turkish lines, and that the envoy whom King Milan declared he would not receive as a mediator, is now on his way to Servia with propositions for an offensive and defensive alliance. We believe that nine-tenths of the counties that have established poor farms for paupers have been satisfied with the experiment. There is no need of buying a large or expensive farm for such a purpose, or in fitting it up extravagantly; nor should a superintendent be employed to attend to it the expects to make more money out of it han the county does. That is not the kind of manager that is needed, and having such uperintendents we think, is why a few superintendents we think, is why a few poor farms did not prove successful. Lamar County furnishes an argument in favor of poor farms. Though a populous county, they have only five paupers on the poor farm; whereas, before they got possession of the farm, their pauper list ranged from fifty to seventy-five annually.

THE NEW INDUSTRIAL IDEA.

A Talk at Tyler on the Farmer Reaping the Reward of His Own Labor-Other Notes. Special to The News.

TYLER, Oct. 20 .- Mr. John R. Long, a prominent Grange man of Rusk, Texas, spoke at some length in the courthouse here to-day to quite a number of farmers. He advocated the policy of farmers shipping their cotton directly to Galveston or other wholesale markets in their own names and without the intervention of the retail merchant, whether the cotton be mortgaged or not. He said the retail merchants could not afford to pay them as much for their produce as they could realize in the wholesale markets, and only did so when the farmer agreed to "trade out" a considerable portion of the proceeds, in which case they were compelled to make up their necessary loss by overcharges. He advanced, further, the idea that the economy demanded for the cause of husbandry, was not a further stinting of the economy demanded for the cause of husbandry, was not a further stinting of the farming classes in food and raiment, but it was a more judicious direction of their labor and economic disposition of their produce. His speech was well received by his auditors, and seemed to suggest to them new and appreciated ideas.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Expressions of Opinion About Newman and Murray.

Railroad Men and Business Men Rejoice at the Appointment of These Two Texans—Both Managers Will be in Dallas a Month.

Perhaps no piece of information has ever given more universal satisfaction in Texas railroad circles than that announcement tele graphed THE NEWS yesterday morning that Oscar J. Murray had been appointed general traffic manager of the Gould lines in Texas and Western Louisiana, to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of W. H. Newman to the general traffic management of the entire system of Missouri Pacific Railways.

Capt. A. Faulkner, general passenger agent of the Houston and Texas Central, while in Dallas yesterday on business, said to the Rumbler:

"I have known Murray since he first went to Galveston. I knew him when he was first ticket agent on the Galveston was first ficket agent on the Galveston, hearly twenty years ago. I became better acquainted with him afterward when he was general passenger and freight agent on the Galveston, Houston and Henderson, and subsequently filled a similar position on the Santa Fe. He is a gentleman to the backbone and a thoroughly posted railroader in every detail of the business. He wins men by his manners and gets their respect and confidence by his business grasp and the mastery he shows over the most intricate cases that come up for him to adjust. The years he has spent in the traffic management of the Santa Fe have posted him thoroughly on all the minutæ of Texas, with two Texas men like Murray and Newman in high executive positions on the Missouri Pacific, cannot help but be more pleasantly and advantageously carried on, as far as the general public are concerned, than ever before."

E. P. Turner, union ticket agent of the Missouri Pacific, wore a broad gauge smile on his face when the Rumbler entered his cage yesterday morning.

"I never felt better in my life," he observed, touching his ticket case caressingly with his lame hand. "I am done with the dengue and Oscar Murray has been appointed general traffic manager of our roads in the State. Do you know, sir, that is one of the cleverest men I ever knew; business Houston and Henderson at Galveston, and no more airs about him than a granger."

G. H. Turner, division freight agent, stood chatting in his shirt sleeves with Mr. McEnnis, in the hallway outside his office.

"I have just got back from Tyler," he said, "where I have been on a little business trip. I think things are coming our way now. I can see every morning when I get up that Dallas is getting to be a bigger and bigger railroad town. Just look at the cotton coming in! Do you know I feel (and so does he himself feel, I believe,) a regret that Mr Newman is to be taken out of Texas. He had given such general satisfaction all the way round, and we all were used to his ways of doing business and liked them. Besides, Mr. Newman was looked upon by railroad and business men all over the State as a Texan in feeling and interest. He had been in the State so long, and had made so many strong social and all over the State as a Texan in feeling and interest. He had been in the State so long, and had made so many strong social and business ties in it, that it was, I am sure, a struggle for him to consent to go to St. Louis. Newman is a man of strong friendships. He had managed the traffic affairs of the Missouri Pacific roads in Louisiana and Texas so long, that the service had got to be compact and running smoothly; he knew every man in the service and all his strong points, and he had wonderful success in placing his men where they would do the most good. I hate to see him leave us, so does the rest, but one thing is consoling. The Texas lines of the Missouri Pacific will be handled from headquarters in the matter of freight and passengers by a man who understands what Texas needs, and who will do whatever he can compatible with the impartiality which belongs to his office to assist the people of Texas to build up their commercial, agricultural and manufacturing interests. I think the appointment of Mr. Murray a very fair one. He is well known to both Mr. Hoxic and Mr. Newman, and both no doubt and transferred failly his marits and shillities. fair one. He is well known to both Mr. Hoxie and Mr. Newman, and both no doubt understand fully his merits and abilities. Texas should feel proud of the share she is receiving lately in the managerial force of the Missouri Pacific. Hoxie, Newman and Murray are all Texans."

Several of the leading business men, Alex, Sanger, T. L. Marsalis, L. A. Pires and others all expressed themselves as delighted with the elevation of Mr. Newman and the appointment of Mr. Murray to his former place on the Missouri Pacific.

After a hasty visit to the points of interest the guests once more embarked and enjoyed a sail down the Hudson by moonlight. During the trip an elaborate dinner was served on board, which was furnished by Mr. Starin, who was unfortunately prevented from joining the party. After dinner a very witty speech was made by President Stephenson, who welcomed the guests and referred to the ladies as an unexpected addition to the attractions of the day. He briefly outlined the intention of the committee in arranging the excursion, and reviewed the work accomplished during the previous day's session. Mr. Stephenson concluded with a humorous reference to several prominent guests, and introduced Mr. I. D. Barton, his coadjutor, as the second speaker. He was followed by E. S. EAT CROW OR FIGHT. The Central passenger committee held its October meeting at the Southern yesterday, when matters of considerable importance were to be presented for the committee to adjust—if they can be adjusted—the most important of which was to ascertain whether or not the committee is strong enough to enforce its own by-laws. About the first thing the committee did after effecting a permanent organization was to adopt a penal rule which contemplated a fine of $50 or each violation of the agreement to main tain the authorized schedule of rates. A good many fines have been assessed since the rule was adopted, but in many cases the offending lines have failed to pay their fines, and there seems to be no way to compel them to do so, for should the matter be pushed too far these lines would withdraw from the committee and thus break up the organization. On the other hand, if line members are to be left to determine for themselves whether fines imposed by the committee as a whole are just and should be paid, little good can be expected to come of these monthly meetings. At the September meeting, held at Louisville, fines aggregating about $1000 were imposed upon lines that did not pretend to deny their guilt, or if they did it was in a way that went to confirm the truthfulness of the charge and the justice of the penalty inflicted, but for all that only a very small percentage of these fines have been paid, and it is not likely that any more will be secured. Thus the committee is powerless to enforce its own rules, depending entirely many fines have been assessed since the rule sectred. Thus the committee is poweries, to enforce its own rules, depending entirely upon the honesty of each individua line member to keep the faith, and past experience has shown that that kind o ty is exceedingly unreliable. At the time, it will be admitted that, as past experience has snown that that kind of security is exceedingly unreliable. At the same time, it will be admitted that, as a rule, rates have been better maintained under the Central Passenger Committee than under any former organization. Nevertheless, it will continue to rest upon a very slippery foundation, with the chances largely in favor of being wrecked, unless something is done to enable the committee to enforce rules and regulations of its own making for its own government.

There was another matter to be settled yesterday, with which the committee proper will have nothing to do, although line members representing the St. Louis east-bound passenger roads will have all to do with it. In has been an open secret for some weeks that the July 13 agreement was giving anything but satisfaction, and that it was being observed only because of to-morrow's meeting, at which it is hoped that a basis would be established recognizing differentials for all the lines as against the Pennsylvania on New York business. The Wabash wants a differential of at least $2 as against the Vandalia, while the Ohio and Mississippi demands that the right be ac corded to it to sell as low as the lowest, and the Bee Line contends that it should have an open rate of $21 if the Pennsylvania quotes $22, and that that difference should be recognized whatever the agreed rate may be. The general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Line West is on record in a hundred places as opposing the principle of differentials, and it is understood that he will be more determined than ever at this meeting to resist all demands of that kind. From this it would seem that the Bee Line, Wabash and Onio and Mississippi will have to back down and take their dish of crow or fight.

SHERMAN'S NEW SCHEME.

SHERMAN'S NEW SCHEME. Special to The News.

SHERMAN, Oct. 20 .- At the railroad meeting held to-night in the Binkley House parlors the utmost enthusiasm was manifested. The idea of giving the Marshall and Northwestern $90,000 was hooted at and spirited speeches made in favor of building a standard gauge road to Mount Pleasant. A motion made to revive the Texas, Louisiana and Western was lost. A motion to appoint a committee of five to open a new set of books and solicit subscriptions with stock at $25 per share was carried unanimously. The following gentlemen were appointed; R. G. Hall, T. W. Randolph J. M. Cullers, J. lph, J. M. Cullers, J. W. Stewart, and J. R. Cole.

ne utmost confidence is placed in the new move, and it is virtually settled that work will be commenced on a road from Sherman to the pineries inside of sixty days at the extreme. The committee of a report to a mass

A COSTLY RAILROAD.

Special to the News.

New York, Oct. 20.—The following report, emanating from Philadelphia, was circulated in Wall street to-day: "The Pennsylvania company has offered to advance $10,000,000 for the rehabilitation of the Reading Railroad, on condition that the ironclad agreements respecting tariffs should be adopted by the latter company." At the office of the New Jersey central division of the Reading Railroad, Treasurer Walcon said that $10,000,000 would not be sufficient to put the Reading upon a good basis. He was inclined to doubt the authenticity of the report ticity of the report.

O. G. MURRAY'S RESIGNATION. FORT WORTH, Oct. 20.—The report of O. G. Murray's resignation as general freight and passenger agent of the Gulf, Colorado and Santa Fe Road created but very little surprise here, as many well informed railroad men have known that the Gould people have been after him for a year. Many surmises are indulged in as to who his successor will be, but the general opinion favors James N. Fuller, general eastern agent of the Santa Fe at New York. Mr. Fuller was in Dallas some years ago as the representative of the Hoosac Tunnel line.

KANSAS AND GULF SHORT LINE. LUFKIN, Oct. 20.—This place is receiving 20 bales of cotton per day local and 200 bales per day from the terminus of the Kansas and Gulf Short Line Road, which is now completed within two miles of here. That road will finish the grade to this point to-morrow, and track laying will be completed this week.

VISITING OFFICIALS AT WACO. WACO, Oct. 20 .- W. H. Hoffman has succeeded J. E. Strong as local agent of the Pacific Express, and Mr. Strong has been assigned to duty at Texarkana.

Receiver Fordyce and other officials of the Texas and St. Louis Railway returned here at noon from Gatesville. The object of their visit was chiefly to inspect the lines in Arkansas and Texas and make arrangements at various stations for accommodating their increasing business, accommodating their increasing business, which is somewhat in excess of their facilities, especially as to rolling stock for moving cotton. Another object, too, was to note the preliminary work on bridges, trestles and roadbed, looking to the widening of the gauge. The following officials constitute the party: S. W. Fordyce, receiver; Mr. Buchanan, chief engineer; L. B. Fish, treasurer; John W. Dickerson, superintendent of the Texas Division; Fred R. Place, superintendent of telegraph: H. Fanders. superintendent of telegraph; H. Fanders, ex-superintendent of the Texas Division. At 5 o'clock the special train went east.

NOTES FROM DENISON. DENISON, Oct. 20.—It now requires but nine hours to constitute a day's work at the Missouri Pacific shops in this city. This change went into effect yesterday.

The Missouri Pacific pay car paid off here yesterday and the boys are happy.

THE COURTS.

The case of Grier M. Boyd against the Houston and Texas Central Railway, which has occupied the attention of the District Court for several days, was brought to a conclusion yesterday. Boyd was traveling on the road in 1880. When near Hutchins the train, which was running at a speed of eighteen miles an hour, jumped the track and ran about fifteen feet out on the right of way. Mr. Boyd, who is a Virginian, alleged that he was damaged to an extent that would require $10,000 to repair him. The jury, after diligent inquiry, agreed that he was not hurt as badly as he thought, and brought in a verdict for the defendant.

AN OLD SUIT. The District Court yesterday evening was taken up in trying the case of Brown vs Flynn. This case is for title to a lot in the southern part of the city, and has been on the docket for eight or nine years. It has been tried two or three times but a verdict was never reached but once. Flynn then gained the suit in the lower court, but on appeal the case was reversed. It generally consumes two days to try it, and the court will probably be wrestling with it all day

What Boys and Girls Cost.

From the Baltimore Herald. Two fond parents, well fixed in life, who live adjoining each other on Park avenue, were discussing the relative cost of keeping a boy and a girl. Both spoke from practical experience. Said one: "I believe it costs more to keep a boy."

"And I believe it costs more to keep the girl," replied the other.

So they began to figure it up.

"Now let us take the case of our own children," said the former. Take my son Charley, for example. He's going into his 19th year. He is not extravagant in his dress, nor does he do any work to soil or particularly wear out his clothing. During the past year his items of expense have been about as follows, as near as I can come without reference to the bills:

The Wrong Man Made a Count.

A new anecdote illustrating the care with which noblemen are made, and the poor material which Kings often use in making them, is related in a Sweedish contemporary. When King Gustavus III was in Paris he was visited by a deputation of the Sorbonne. That learned body congratulated the King on the happy fortune that had given him so great a man as Scheele, the discoverer of magnesium, as his subject and fellow-countryman. The King, took small interest in the progress of science, felt somewhat ashamed that he should be so ignorant as never even to have heard of the re-nowned chemist. He dispatched a courier at once to Sweeden with the laconic order, "Scheele is to be immediately raised to the dignity and title of a count." "His Majesty must be obeyed," said the Prime Majesty nust be obeyed," said the Prime Minister, as he read the order; "but who in the world is Scheele!" A secretary was told to make inquires. He came back with very full information. "Scheele is a good sort of a fellow," said he, "a lieutenant in the artillery, a capital shot and a first rate hand at billiards." The next day the Lieutenant became a Count and the illustrious scholar and scientist remained a simple burgher. The error was not discovered until elf had only known of him for three or four weeks.

MEN WHO WRITE RISKS.

St. Louis Organizes a New Non-Stock Board-There has been so much complaint about the lack of insurance facilities in St. Louis that the announcement that an enterprise in that city is engaged in the organization of a new stock company, with a paid up capital of $200,000, will be very gratifying to the business public. One of the promoters of the company is Mr. N. O. Nelson, president of the Manufacturers'. The first talk of the new concern was only a few days ago, but without going autside of a very small circle there has already been secured a guarantee of $75,000, and, in addition, what few merchants and manufacturers have been approached on the matter have spoken very encouragingly of it and have intimated that they will take stock in it and give it all the assistance in their power. The object is to write heavier lines than can be placed it the smaller city mutual companies. The plan of work will be something after that of the Mutual Fire of New York, through salaried solicitors independent of agencies During the past year husiness men hay During the past year business men have found it necessary to send all over the country for insurance, taking companies not legally recognized in St. Louis and not doing business in Missouri, and it has even been necessary to go to Europe and place risks in companies having no regular agencies there. The business placed in that way The most prominent company which is worked in that way is the Lloyds of London. It is one of the strongest in the world, and does a business almost exclusively marine, but has, notwithstanding that fact, taken surplus lines through regular companies in this country, having no knowledge of its own of the risks, but being protected by unusual conditions in its policies. In view of all this trouble to get insurance, any increase in the facilities of St. Louis herself and this trouble to get insurance, any increase in the facilities of St. Louis herself will be a great addition, and the prospectus of the new concern, which will be issued in about ten days, will, it is thought, be only a forerunner of other like enterprises. It will be independent and entirely outside of the St. Louis Board of Fire Underwriters. Mr. A. B. Carpenter, general agent of the Illinois Mutual, and also connected with the new company, said Saturday night, that the opposition to the Board of Underwriters would greatly assist the gaining of new facilities, and, he thought, would be the means of making a very marked reduction in rates after Jan. 1 next. As it is now there has been a practical advance of 25 per cent in rates since 1883. The advance has not been general, but has been made by the fixing of special tariffs. the fixing of special tariffs. Up to two years ago there were no special ratings, except general building, but now there is a tariff for almost everything to be insured. The advance and the system of ratings has been the cause of large losses of business to board agents, and while it has gone to non-board men generally, the agents who have lost it have labored under the idea that other agents were breaking the ratings and taking risks from them, and as a conseuence there have been numerous charges investigated by the board, none of which have been sustained. The principal charges have been against Martin Collins, H.C. Carroll and E. S. Greenwood, two against the former. It was also learned that charges had been preferred against Roselyn & Robyn. That firm has been one of the most prominent in enforcing board rules. The charges against them, and also against Mr. Greenwood, are yet to be heard rules. The charges against them, and also against Mr. Greenwood, are yet to be heard from. The last charge against the latter, as given by Mr. Carpenter, is for writing a risk for A. Moll at 1.2 when the board rate is 1.5. Mr. Moll's insurance amounts in the aggregate to $40,000 to $50,000. He has been getting it for years at 1 straight, in the best companies, but his rate was suddenly jumped up to 1.5. He says he will close out all his board risks at the close of the year. Mr. Carpenter says he wrote the risks himself, half in the Illinois Mutual and half in the Manufacturers'. He says that his risks, with those placed by Mr. Benj. Kimball, will amount to $200,000 premiums for the year, largely residences, the safest for the year, largely residences, the safes risks that can be secured, and that having carried on the war so successfully thus far they will push it with as much vigor as possible

BOCCHERINI'S MINUET. The summer garden fades away,
And dreamily I close my eyes,
While softly as the fountains play,
Beneath the star-bewildered skies
Of Italy, I hear the flow
Of rhythmic music sweet and low.

From dim Verona's gardens old
There comes the breath of deep perfume,
And cavaliers in lace and gold
Move lightly thro' the gilded room,
And to the stately measures beat
The dainty touch of satined feet.

Behind the mask with Romeo
I watch a form in robes of white,
And see the soft and slumb'rous glow
Of eyes divinely, darkly bright.
(Hush, in the house of Capulet Breathe not the name of Juliet.)

The vision fades into the gloom,
And lo! instead I faintly trace,
Far off in a Parisian room,
A calmly beautiful dead face—
And over Juliet, lying there,
The music sobs into a prayer.

No more the balcony will know
Her whispered passion and the pain,
And in the orange grove below
Will Romeo wait, alas, in vain.
Ah! list, and hear the music sigh,
How sad it is that love must die.

The storm of plaudits, wave on wave,
Brings back my wand'ring soul to me,
With one last glimpse, a grassy grave
Beyond the sullen English Sea,
Where Juliet dreams of Montague,
Beneath the roses and the dew.

THE THREE WAVES.

A Basque Popular Tale, from the French of Araquistain.

Fifty years ago I was a sailor on a fishing boat at Deva. The captain and proprietor of the boat was my paternal uncle, Thomas who had taken me to his family at the death of my parents. I was just eighteen, and my fishing comrade was a boy of fifteen, named Bilinch.

Rough and stern as my uncle was, he had the noblest and most generous heart one can imagine. He had married a young woman whom he loved with the deepest tenderness, and they had a daughter of about my age, as sweet and good as an angel.

That year we had the most extraordinary ill luck in fishing. In vain we were the first on the suitable spot; our nets took nothing but dead fish, small and of no value, while other boats by our side were obliged to throw overboard all their ballast to make room for their fish. It continued thus the whole season, day after day. It was impossible to blame the boat, which could not sible to blame the boat, which could not have been better, or the nets, which were chosen with the greatest care, or the crew, which was composed of the most famous fishermen between Machicaco and the cape of the Figuier. We were in despair.

One night Bilinch and I were on the jetty at Maspe, making ready for the departure of the boat, which usually took place at 3 o'clock in the morning. When everything was ready we saw that we still had a long time to spare, and we lay down in the boat. I fell very soundly asleep. Suddenly I was abruptly awakened by my companion, who was pulling my arm violently. I was about to teach him gentler manners when I was struck with terror by the deep fear I saw printed on his face and by the inexpressible anguish that contracted his features.

pressible anguish that contracted his rea-tures.

"What is the matter?" I asked anxiously.

"Did you not see them? Did you not hear them?" he murmured, his eyes starting from their sockets from fright.

"Who? Who?"

"Marie—and the other. Fly, Thomas, and do not look at them!"

Not understanding his words, I was about

Not understanding his words, I was about to ask more explanation, when the hour for our setting out struck. I was obliged to postpone my questions.

"Come away! come away!" screamed my companion. "Be still, Thomas; they are waiting for us."

The crew was already on the jetty, but, before the boat had touched, Bilinch sprang ashore and began to run toward the village. He met Uncle Thomas and threw himself upon the ground at his feet, crying: "I cannot! I will not! I am not going to sea!" A sailor raised him up, took him by the ear and forced him to enter the boat.

"What is all this?, asked my uncle." "This lazy fellow wants to fish for birds to-day," replied the sailor.

But the poor boy writhed at the captain's feet, begging to be put ashore. The sailors, seeing nothing in it all but a trick to avoid work, made sport of him. But, I still under the impression of the strange manner in which he had interrupted my sleep, went to my uncle and told him quietly that I was anxious in regard to the boy's health. My good and thoughtful uncle quieted the men and spoke gently to Bilinch.

"Now, be calm, my boy, and tell me why you do not want to fish to-day."

"Oh, master, it is impossible for me to tell you, but I swear that I cannot and must not go with you."

you, but I swear that I cannot and must not go with you."
"But that is not enough. You are bound to me for the season, and you cannot miss a single day unless you have a good reason to give."

"I have one, sir; I have been told that if I sailed to-day I should be drowned without pity."

But how?" "But how?"

"In shipwreck."

"Then if you drown the whole crew will perish with you."

"Yes, and for that reason you ought not to go out to-day."

"Come, boy, this is not serious. Either you are fooling us or you know something important that we all ought to know."

"But I cannot tell it."

"Very well; you will run no greater risk than the rest of us—"

"For heaven's sake, master—"

"For heaven's sake, master—"
"Be still, you coward! your life is worth no more than ours."

And taking the helm my uncle gravely gave the signal for setting out.

Thirty oars dipped at the same instant, and the boat leaped forward. She had gone a good distance, when Bilinch begged the captain again to stop, adding that he would tell him all.

My uncle gave the order the silver life.

captain again to stop, adding that he would tell him all.

My uncle gave the order, the sailors lifted their oars, and the boat passed gently opposite Urazandi. The captain sat down and said to Bilinch, who was weeping bitterly:

"Come, Bilinch, be quiet, and tell us what has happened."

"I will do so, master, and God grant that no evil befall us!

"This morning at 2 o'clock, Thomas and I had finished our preparations for to-day. We stretched ourselves out on the deck and in a few moments Thomas was soundly asleep. I would not have been long in following his example if I had not been suddenly aroused by the presence of two women, who seemed to have dropped from the clouds. I was mute with fear, motionless and hardly dared to breathe. That saved me, for, leaning over us and examining us attentively, they thought me asleep like my companion. The elder one said 'Let them sleep. That is what we want. They shall not awake now until I permit them.'

them.'
"Immediately I felt that the boat was taken up and I was passing through the air. After flying along quite a time we came down again quite gently, and stopped finally under the thick leaves of a great olive tree.

"The two women came and looked at us

"The two women came and looked at us attentively a few moments, then left the boat, and I saw them no more.

'In spite of my great fear my curiosity was so strong that I could not keep from opening my eyes to look after them. As I raised myself I struck against a branch that hindered my movements. I cut it off and hid it under the seat. I then could see outside of the boat, and through the darkness I saw that we were in a great olive grove, and in the distance I could see figures gliding in the shadow.

"'It is some dance of Lamia's,' I said to myself, and I was about to awaken Thomas when I hearp approaching footsteps. Thinkthat it might be the two women, I lay down and did not move. It was they. They came into the boat, which immediately began to move.

'In a few moments we were again at the

this time they will all be at the bottom of the ocean.'

"But the ocean is as smooth as oil.'

"Nevertheless, before they shall have passed the Point of Arrangatzi I will cause to rise three huge waves—the first of milk, the second of tears and the third of blood. They will escape the first two, but nothing can save them from the last. It is my fate to hate them. I have persecuted them all winter, removing the fish from their course, and since my power over them ends to-morrow evening, I will end by burying them under the waves. I shall have mercy on no one. You must not forget that it is our mission to abhor them all, and above all others, those who love us best.'

"'Let us then yield to our fate! But what if by some unhappy chance they should not go to sea to-day—'

"'Hugh fool! It is impossible! They "'Hush, fool! It is impossible! They will go, and they will perish. There is but one single way by which they might escape from the fate that threatens them; but they from the fate that threatens them; but they do not know it."

"'What is the way, mother?"

"By plunging a harpoon into the midst of the last wave, the wave of blood; for that wave will be I, myself. I shall hide beneath its waters, and the blow that should strike that wave would pierce my own heart."

"Oh, mother, what if they knew it?"

"That cannot be, since no one knows this secret but you. They shall all be mine, and at our next nocturnal festival no one shall be able to boast of a success comparable with mine!"

with mine!'
"With these words she bade us awake, and they both vanished with shrieks of loud and they both vanished with shrieks of loud laughter."

The boy ceased to speak. Some of us did not believe a word he had spoken; others explained his tale by a dream and mocked him. "But, tell me," said he to the latter. "does any one of you know of an olive grove within a circle of ten miles of this place?" They knew of none—but Bilinch drew from under one of the seats an olive branch and waved it triumphantly, saying: "Look. here is the branch is cut when I raised my head; I hid it here that you might believe my word and know that these two women are not the product of a dream."

No one could say a word against such positive proof, for no clive tree grew within less than ten miles. The fatal branch was handed silently from one to another. A superstitious terror seized the most incredulous, and we repeated, shuddering, "a Lamia, a Lamia!"

The captain rose, and, taking the helm, commanded silence. Then, turning to me. Stand at the prow with open eyes and a firm arm. At my first order strike firmly into the water, and you others, to your oars."

Our boat cut the waves rapidly. The trembling light of the dawn smiled on the surface of the water, which was not rippled by the lightest breath of air. The boat flew onward, and through the morning fog the trees and shrubs on the shore seemed to be taking a strange flight.

We doubled the point, and reached the bar. There was no trace of danger on any side, but nobody dared to speak.

All at once, two fathoms in front of us, there rose an enormous wave, as high as a mountain, as white as snow.

"Attention!" said the captain, with his eyes on me. "It was true!" he murmured with a trembling voice. "The wave of milk!"

Thirty oar blades dipped into the water at once, and the boat leaped in the wave. The boy ceased to speak. Some of us did with a trembling voice. "The wave of milk!"

Thirty oar blades dipped into the water at once, and the boat leaped in the wave. Her prow disappeared in a cloud of foam: but before the third stroke of the oars another wave rose before us, greater than the first, as clear as a crystal; from it rose a vapor that caused our eys to smart.

As before we hung for an instant suspended above the deep, and then the wave rolled on to break roaring on the sand.

"The wave of tears!" said my uncle. "Open your eyes, Thomas!"
The boat swept on and the fatal spot was almost passed, when we saw, enkindling the whole horizon, the terrible wave of blood coming toward us and drawing us into its horrible embrace with an irresistible power. Oh? my friend! it would be impossible to you the terrible anxiety, the overwhelming fear that held us all in that supreme moment.

sible to you the terrible anxiety, the overwhelming fear that held us all in that supreme moment.

"Strike firmly in the middle!" cried my uncle, crossing himself. I closed my eyes, and with a trembling hand I hurled my spear into the midst of the bloody wave.

A lamentable groan was heard. The wave, parting before our prow, broke furiously on the shore and covered it with bloody foam.

That day our arms ached with the labor of emptying our nets of fish, and I assure you that we took enough to make up for our losses during the whole winter.

But when we came home that night my uncle and I sought in vain for two loved faces. Neither my aunt nor my cousin were there. We exchanged uneasy glances.
My uncle asked for his wife and learned that she was suffering. "I feared it," he said, hastening toward her chamber, and I followed him, weeping. She lay on her bed with her face to the wall. When she heard us enter she raised her head, cast on her husband a look of inextinguishable hate, covered her face with the sheet and died with a fearful groan.

Her unbanny husband cast his arms about overed her face with the sheet and thed rith a fearful groan.

Her unhappy husband cast his arms about her body, and sought by his caresses to ring it back to life again. The sight hierced my heart and I went out of the puse.

I met my cousin. A horrible transforma-on had taken place in her. Her angelic ok was displaced by a frightful expression bitterness. Seized with nervous trembbitterness. Seized with nervous tremb-ng, I asked her what was the matter. "Curses on you, assassin!" she cried, and anished from sight.

"Who," I asked him, "were the two women ou saw last night?" 'Marie and her mother," he answered in a low voice.

My poor uncle took his bed a few days later and soon died of grief and chagrin.

THE IRISH PROPAGANDA.

It Claims to Have Stirred up the Roumelian St. Louis Republican.

A Republican reporter yesterday received an intimation that Gen. J. D. MacAdaras. who is now residing in the Southern Hotel in this city, and who will be remembered generally as the gentleman who was charged with being the "No. 1" of the Irish revolutionary conspiracy, had received some interesting information concerning the recent trouble in Turkey and the general uneasiness throughout the Balkan Peninsula. The General was found at the hotel confined to his bed with a neuralgic headache. He received the reporter, however, and, after a few questfons, seemed to be in the mood to discuss the Eastern question as far as it related to Ireland. "It is said," remarked the writer, "that King Milan of Servia has crossed the fron-

"That may or may not be true," replied Gen. MacAdaras. "If it is true, it is good news to every Irishman. If it is true, it means the tearing to tatters of the treaty of Berlin, and a complete new arrangement of Berlin, and a complete new arrangement of the map of Europe. Mind, I have no sym-pathy with the King of Servia. He is play-ing Austria's game, while Russia is our friend, and Russia will be forced to oppose the Austrian scheme. Milan is merely a a piece moved upon the chess board. Aus-tria wants Albania and she wants above all-things Salonica. Russia cannot afford to let her get to the sea in that direction. She must fight first."

"Have you heard anything recently from the East, General?"
"Nothing that I am at liberty to com-municate."
"Its it true that in this recent outbreak on the Balkan peninsula

THE IRISH REVOLUTIONARY PARTY has had a hand?"

"I see no reason why I should not talk frankly with you on this subject. It is well jetty at Maspe.

"After having moored the boat the elder | hence it can do no harm to let the rest of ings, boxes, etc., bought, sold and exchanged the world know it, that there is an Irish propaganda in Paris which has been busy both in the Balkan Peninsula and in Afghanistan recently-just as it was busy in the Soudan some time since-in adding to English difficulty wherever that difficulty can be increased or her troubles fomented. Yes, we have, fortunately, been able to do something in Turkey towards the voiding of the treaty of Berlin. It would be nonsense for me to say that the revolution in Eastern Roumelia was all our work. It was a great popular uprising of an enslaved people who seized their freedom. It is also true, however, that we did know that the revolution was about to take place, and did do all in our power to help bring it about. Irish agents have been at work in the principalities for the last two years with this aim alone in view. We were not the only ones who were at work, but our colleagues will admit that we did our share."

"Do you know this to be a fact, General?"

"I know that I traveled throughout the Balkan Peninsula from Belgrade to Constantinople two years ago, and saw with my own eyes what was going on."

"Were you engaged in this work yourself?"

"I will answer your question by saying simply that I did not go to Turkey for place." Yes, we have, fortunately, been able to do

"I will answer your question by saying simply that I did not go to Turkey for pleasure. I went there for work."

"And the fruit of the work is now to be seen?"

"You may draw your own conclusions.
Don't put me in the attitude of saying that

THE BLAZE IN THE EAST was kindled by the Irish propaganda alone. That would be foolish. We have worked in sympathy with a people struggling to be free, and with a great nation who is our natural ally. We have done our share and

"What do you mean by the 'Irish propa-

"It is the body of Irishmen who from the headquarters at Paris are working independently and by themselves for the same end for which the parliamentary party in Ireland is working—legislative independence for Ireland. There is no concert of action, no understanding between the two parties. Their goal is the same as ours, and we strengthen their hands whenever we can. Any man must see that with the East afire and the imminent danger that England may be dragged into a long and bloody war, that country is in no condition to do any fighting in Ireland. She will make any concession to pacify the island, even to conceding home rule. The Irish propaganda in Paris devotes itself to diplomacy wholly. It takes its part and it plays its role well in the international politics of Europe."

"But what can you accomplish?"

"The English govertment knows. Do you remember how Grattan's Parliament was wrung from the England in 1782? Concessions were secured only when England was menaced from abroad. She was at wareverywhere and the parliamentary concessions given then were pendently and by themselves for the same

FORCED BY FEAR and not by favor. This condition of things will have to be again brought about. If the British government has to fight for the road to India she will give Ireland anything to be quiet. It will be the cheapest way and the best way to prevent a fire in the rear.'

"It seems hardly reasonable to believe that the Irish colony, or propaganda, as you term it, at Paris could be able to do this work."

"Some time I may tell you what this body of men has done. Whether it has been able to do anything or not, England thinks it worth watching closely. I have had the honor myself to be dogged by detectives all over Europe. I have been followed on the steamer all the way to America by detectives. Spies have watched my house in Paris and feed my servants to find out who visited me and whom I visited. We have played a double game, and one which was of the utmost imbortance, simply as an amusement. Their detectives watched me, and our spies watched theirs—and got their and our spies watched theirs—and got their reports, too!"

"Then you hardly stand in very high favor with the English government."

"I have broken no law of England. I am not an English subject. I defy any man to prove anything against me—even the detectives."

"You have evidently studied the Eastern on it; how will this trouble end?" "I believe that it will end in war. If the King of Servia has crossed the frontier then Russia will surely again cross the Pruth. I have been in Russia lately, and I assure you that there is but one sentiment among the Russians, from the highest to the low est. Russia is a unit in the belief that the nefarious treaty of Berlin must not stand. Constantinople is the legacy of Peter the Great, and Russia will have it yet. The treaty of San Stefano was signed in the very suburbs of Constantinople, and it was the abrogation of that treaty and the signing of that treaty of Berlin, I verily believe that cost the Czar his life. The Rusing of that treaty of Berlin, I verily believe that cost the Czar his life. The Russian idea is Stamboul, and you know how men will fight for an idea. Germany would like to see Austria fighting for Salonica. Bismarck would hail anything that would take Austria out of Germany. He would even help them to get Constantinople and to form a Slav and Hungarian empire. You will see, however, that as soon as Austria moves Russia will enter the Dardenelles. When a blow is struck—when the first gun is fired the echoes will reverberate in Herat, in Cabul, in Delhi and in Cork. The tributary States of India may yet give home rule to Ireland. Our policy is plain. England's difficulty is Ireland's opportunity. No body of men could find a more patriotic or praiseworthy task than to make that difficulty, to add to it, to help it. This we are doing in the East, and this we will do until our end is accomplished. Be sure of one thing, and here I speak of not what I believe or what I think, but of what I know—Russia is Ireland's ally."

A Georgia negro has strong views on the efficacy of prayer, maintaining that it depends entirely on how the petition is worded. He illustrates his position forcibly, thus: "If I ask the Lord to send me a turkey I won't get it, but if I ask Him to send me after a turkey I always get one before daybreak."

DALLAS, Oct. 20.-There was life and bustle to-day. Business was generally good, and merchants expressed pleasant opinions for the outlook. The wire is more freely used than for many seasons, as goods are wanted and have to come without unnecessary loss of time. For the middle of the week the activity in all lines is up to the expected average.

Hides are not coming in as freely as traders wish. Every skin of any sort of animal is eagerly taken at quotations given. The Bos-ton market, to a great extent, governs this market, and, in fact, governs nearly all Texas. To a small extent producers in far western counties sell at El Paso, and in that case the movement is toward the Pacific cities, in many instances. However, Dallas buyers re-ceive some hides from El Paso and at this time an attempt is on foot to induce the local buyers at El Paso and at the nearer points of New Mexico to send all their hides and pelts to this market. There is growing a disposition here to promote the particular line of trade referred to in every possible manner. A leading shipper of hides remarked to-day that an important topic of discussion at the approaching national convention of cattle raisers would be the subject of the branding iron. The great splotches deeply burned on the sides of animals causes heavy losses.

In fact it amounts to the destruc-tion nearly of that side of the hide. By reducing the size of the iron and by applying it to the neck or on the thigh instead of centrally on the flank, as the practice goes,

While the grain market here does not respond to an appreciable extent to fluctuations at the North and at Eastern centers, hides and wool are as sensitive as cotton to those influences. The late advance in wool and hides quoted in the East found immediate sympathy here. Prices paid daily for both products are better than has been the case for more than two years. In respect to fur yielding skins the season is not yet opened. A vast number of skins of opossums, raccoons, skunks, cats, foxes and prairie dogs are annually bought in this city, and this year greater attention than ever before will be paid to that class of wares. The demand is healthy and growing and trappers find plenty of game

NEW YORK DRY GOODS MARKET.

NEW YORK DRY GOODS MARKET.

New York, Oct. 20.—Review of the week: Owing mainly to the unseasonably mild weather business in the wholesale branch of the dry goods trade was quiet the past week. For fall and winter goods there was only a moderate inquiry by local and out of town jobbers. Fabrics adapted to the coming season were, however, in fair demand and were placed (for future delivery) with the commission houses. Convertors continued to operate with considerable freedom in certain makes of cotton goods, and a substantial improvement in the export demand was reported. The jobbing trade was spasmodically irregular. An event of the week was an auction of about 7000 domestic silk handkerchiefs. The bidding was brisk, and the entire offering was quickly disposed of. Collections in most of the sections of the country continued easy. The tone of general market remains steady.

MARKETS BY TELEGRAPH.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET. CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Wheat opened weak on the posting of 2,000,000 bushels increase in the visiprices. Against this is the fact that many of our largest houses are buying wheat and will sustain the market should any attempt be made to force a decline.

Oats were dull and a trifie lower.

Corn was heavy under a lighter cash demand and prospective large receipts. November was pressed for sale, Walker, Schwartz & Dupree leading as sellers. May is steady and firm. For to-morrow there are expected 220 cars of corn and 120 cars of oats.

Provisions were rather firmer.

Although there was no rain to interfere with trading, the condition of this market was no better than it was yesterday. Fresh receipts were small, but quite a number of cattle remained over from the day before, making a fairly liberal supply from which to select. Among these there were several loads of good and a few that were really choice, but the bulk of the offerings consisted of common, thin Southwest stuff and poor native cows and heifers. In fact, the market is and has been overburdened with the common grades, and though values have been forced down to avery low figure, it is hard to get buyers to take hold of them, and the movement in consequence is very dull. Local dealers were slow in taking hold and buyers of the best grades are not in the market at present, Mr. Mike Burns, buyer for Eastman & Co., of New York, being expected to-morrow, and Jack Enoch, late buyer for Eastman & Co., of New York, being expected to-morrow, and Jack Enoch, late buyer for the dressed beef works, but now with Monroe & Sons, not being quite prepared for business. These two buyers, with Londsley & Rippen, will benefit the trade very materially, giving a free outlet to the better grades of heavy cattle which they have not had of late, salesmen being largely dependent upon the dressed beef works. The early movement was small, and sales that were made were altogether to local traders in small lots and at low prices.

JAMES B. SIMPSON,

The Morning News.

THE CITY.

No one is authorized to make any purchases for our account or have work performed for any department of our establishment without the written order from the business manager, and these orders should invariably accompany monthly statements rendered at the close of each A. H. BELO & Co. month.

Dallas, Tex., Oct. 16, 1885.

To the Public.

It is the desire of the management of THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS to have that paper on sale, in sufficient quantities to supply the demand, on all railway trains running into or connecting with trains to and from Dallas. The traveling public are respectfully requested to bear this fact in mind and to report to the business department any failure on their part in being able to purchase copies of the paper in the manner indicated, giving date, train and other particulars.

Notice to the Public.

THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS will work off its weekly issue this (Wednesday) forenoon, commencing operations about 10 o'clock. Residents of the city and visitors from the surrounding country are invited to call at the office of publication to-day, where they may see the operations of The News' fast Bullock perfecting printing press, now in good working order. All having a taste for fine machineryshould come and witness the workings of this press, which prints both sides of the paper at the same time and easily cuts, folds, pastes and delivers at the rate of 200 copies a minute. THE NEWS is now in smooth running order, and will be glad to have the public look over its establishment.

To City Subscribers.

We beg to announce that the failure of our city circulator to call upon a number of citizens for their subscriptions is not due to oversight, but is the result of his finding it necessary, for the time being, to devote his entire time and attention to the systematizing of the routes, and the supervision of his carriers, to insure the prompt delivery of the paper each morning to the subscribers already obtained This work has prevented him from making a thorough canvass of the city. He expects, however, to resume this canvass this morning and continue daily until every section of the city has been visited. In the meantime be pleased to send names and addresses to the counting room, where they will receive prompt attention. Subscribers failing to receive their papers with regularity and promptitude will please notify us.

A Wild Man. Tom Botter, who lives in the neighborhood of Mill Crossing, on Elm Fork, came to the County Attorney's office yesterday evening and wanted advice. He said that an Italian by the name of John Spiengy. living near him, had become insane a few days ago. He had been running through the woods, climbing trees and refusing any nourishment. An effort had been made to catch him, but, as he would not go in a house and was fleet of foot, all efforts in that direction were futile. He imagines that he is pursued by men who want to kill him, and he runs away whenever he sees any one. Botter filed a complaint, and a warrant was issued that he may be tried for lunacy. As he is poorly dressed, fears are expressed that if he is not caught the present cold nights may cause his death.

present cold nights may cause his death.

Emory Has Gone. It appears that there was much more in the case mentioned in yesterday's News in regard to the abduction of Cora Randall by her stepfather, Emory. There seems to be ao doubt now that the girl was abducted for mmoral purposes, though Emory stoutly lenied that such was the case. His employ ers, Messrs. Brand & Logan, believed in his nnocence and vouched for his character as 1 good workman. They readily went on his bond for $500, and he was turned loose. This norning he had disappeared, Diligent earch was made for him without effect. His bondsmen procured another warrant for him, and telegrams have been sent over all the lines of railroads to watch out for They also offer a reward to have him

The price paid was $50.

THE CITY COUNCIL

Meets in Regular Session and Transacts but Little Business.

Recommends Each Committee Go Back and Do Its Work Over Again-Resolves Itself into an Executive Session.

The City Council met in monthly meeting last evening. Mayor Brown being sick, Acting Mayor Spellman presided. On the roll being called, there were present Aldermen Bookhout, Gibson, Linskie, Loeb, Lonckx, Williams, Peterman, Rauch and Spellman. Absent, Aldermen Carter, Daugherty and Keller.

The order of business being read, a petition from the paid Fire Department was read. It asked that the wages of the force be increased for the following reasons: First, because the fatigue suits and other uniform required by ordinance had about taken all their wages, and, second, because the approaching cold weather would necessitate on their part for clothes, etc., that would eat up future wages. They therefore asked an increase of $10 per month in their wages. Referred to committee on Fire De-wages. Referred to committee on Fire Department.

Dr. Carter presented a protest in the shape of a petition asking that the City Council prevent the damage done his property on Ross avenue by the excavation thereon preparatory to grading it. The protest sets out that egress to his premises had already been cut off, and that it was impossible to get a wagon loaded with fuel any nearer to his woodshed than the side walk. The petition was referred to the committee on streets and bridges.

A petition from the Merchants' Exchange asking that a gas lamp be placed in front of the entrance to the exchange on Lamar street that the public may convenienced of nights in going to the telephone office and other offices in the building. Referred to the committe on gas.

The reports of committees and officers were then called for:

The Treasurer reported a balance on hand on Sept. 1, which had been swelled by Oct. 1 to $80,773 56.

The committee on fire department reported suggestions of the Chief, which were briefly that hose cart No. 3 was in bad re-on Sept. 1, which had been swelled by Oct. 1 to $80,773 56.

The committee on fire department reported suggestions of the Chief, which were briefly that hose cart No. 3 was in bad repair; that a shed room should be built in the rear of the City Hall for a storeroom for old articles belonging to the department which now encumbered the fire department room; that a watchman for each engine house be hired to take charge of the buildings during the absence of the firemen on duty; that the salary of the assistant chief be raised, as also the wages of the men, in accordance with their petition; that the men were sleeping in cots, and they should have mattrasses and warm covering.

Alderman Bookhaut moved that the matter be recommitted to the committee for a further report, and Alderman Gibson moved the substitute that the bedclothes, mattrasses, etc., be purchased at once. The substitute was accepted and the rest of the report recommitted.

The committee on municipal affairs reported that the East Dallas engine house was in bad condition and needed repairs. Engineer Johnson was ordered to examine it and report at the next meeting.

At the last meeting of the Council the question of the extension of the gas mains, and also the establishment of more lamps in different parts of the committee on gas n different parts of the city, came up and was submitted to the committee on gas ights. That committee made its report as lights. That committee made its report as follows:

Your committee on gas lights, to which was referred the proposed extension of gas mains to the different portions of the city, also the proposition of the Dallas Gas Light Co., beg leave to report that they have conferred with said company and have agreed on a plan set forth in the accompanying map.
Your committee think that said plan covers all the leading thoroughfares to the different portions of the city. The company will have to lay four miles of main and erect about seventy lamps. We recommend that the said proposition of the company to make the proposed extension and the contract now existing be merged in the proposed contract, which is for five years, and that the same be accepted.
The map alluded to could not be procured but, from hearsay, it contemplated the placing of seventy lamps on the different large streets. To do this, the Gas Light Co. desired a further extension of their present contract with the city to five years. That is what the report aims to say, and suggests desired a further extension of their present contract with the city to five years. That is what the report aims to say, and suggests that the Council agree to it. Mr. Schneider, representing the company, wanted some assurance before the company went to such an expense that it would be repaid in such a contract. He asked the sense of the Council on the subject. Aldermen Williams, Bookhout, Gibson and Louckx said they were unwilling to enter into a contract for five years. The other members did not express themselves opposed to it. The question was recommitted to the care of the committee, with the engineer added, with instructions for a report showing where the lamps are to be located and the distances between them.

City Engineer Johnson reported that Father Martinier objected to the city running a sewer through the Catholic Church property, on Bryan street. He further reported that at an expense of $75 he could run the sewer 175 feet further and avoid delay and trouble. Submitted to the committe on streets and bridges, with power to act. On motion of Alderman Bookhout the Council went into executive session and the reporter was gently escorted down stairs. At the end of the session the Council adjourned without transacting further business.

THE SPORTING CLUB'S WORK.

A Dallas Growth-What it Has Done and is Doing.

The annual meeting of the Dallas Hunting and Fishing Club was called at the Merchant's Exchange this evening, but as there were only about seven members present the meeting was adjourned over till Thursday evening next at 4 o'clock. The business of the meeting was to elect officers for the ensuing year and to receive reports as to the affairs of the club. The club is now about a year old. It was organized with twentyfive members, and about 360 acres of land bought about two miles from Hutchins, but on the east side of the river. On this land was a lake of about 150 acres. By building a levee the depth of water was increased and the acreage to about 230 acres. The lake lies at the foot of a postoak ridge, and is covered with bulrushes, flags, water lillies, etc. There are open places in it of several acres, and roads have been cut through it. The lake is a great roosting place for ducks, these birds coming for miles to hide in the flags. They also feed here in great numbers. The club have about a dozen skiffs and boats on the lake, a fine boat house and all kinds of fish nets, decoys, etc.

A large house, forty feet long and twenty feet wide, with a partition making two rooms, has been built for the use of the members. Closets are arranged for guns, ammunition, etc., and in each room is a large fireplace of the old-fashioned, comfortable kind, which will take wood four feet long. A comfortable house for the keeper is located about seventy yards from the club house, The keeper is hired by the month. He furnishes meals to members of the club at 25 cents per meal. The rooms are supplied with comfortable beds, and everything is in a homelike fix. The club inclosed its property with a wire fence. It has never had any trouble with the neighbors, and no one has ever trespassed on the property. This spring new members were taken in and the club concluded to build two large lakes for fishing and bathing at a point convenient to the city. A farm, known as the Coombes place, just two miles from the city, west of the guns, ammunition, etc., and in each river, was selected on account of its fine springs. The property was bought, esti-mates made to build the dams, and work will commence within two weeks. The lakes mates made to build the dams, and work will commence within two weeks. The lakes will be about ten acres in area, and one of them will be twenty feet deep at the dam. It is the intention of the club to stock these lakes with bass alone. Bath houses will be built, the place sodded with Bermuda grass and planted in flowers. An experienced gardner has already been employed. A half mile track for the benefit of those who desire to drive good horses—not for racing—will probably be made. The property already has a good stone house on it, which is to be remodeled and improved. The property is but a short distance from the present turnpike, and parties living in the vicinity have offered to furnish stone gravel to make the turnpike complete to the lakes. The object of the club is to have a place at which visitors to the city may be entertained. As said before, the work on the dams will commence in a week or more, the lakes stocked with fine fish, and the premises prepared to "receive" by the first of March remises prepared to "receive" by the first

CURRENT TOPICS.

Brief Interviews With People One Meets In a Day's Walk.

"With respect to the present cold snap," said an Elm street grocer, "I don't think it has come any too soon or that it will do any material damage to any farming or other industry. It may shorten the top crop of cotton a little, but as the crop was about made the injury cannot amount to much. A hard freeze would have a very beneficial effect, I think, on the general health. In the city, especially, the cold weather is very welcome, as it will tend to put a quietus to the too prevalent dengue. I am not sorry to see this change in the weather, although I must confess that I did not take time by the forelock, and prepare for it by having my stoves up and fuel handy. We never think about fires, you know, until the weather turns cold."

BOYCOTTING CINCINNATI. "Yes," said a "Goober Grabbler" from Atlanta, yesterday, "there is a very strong disposition on the part of people in our section to withdraw their patronage from Cincinnati and other Ohio cities and transfer it to some other market where the purchasers are not regarded as barbarians, slugs and cut throats. Of course the Atlanta papers encourage the feeling of resentment against Ohio as much as Halstead's bloody shirt paper does and from motives, perhaps, equally selfish. It is not that Ohio is Republican in politics but because she is made so by hatred of the South and by the persistent and malicious libel of Southern people by such papers as the Commercial Gazette of Cincinnati, which is supported and sustained by the advertising patronage of zette of Cincinnati, which is supported and sustained by the advertising patronage of the very merchants and manufacturers who send their drummers into Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia to solicit the trade of these same murderous, disloyal Southerners. Certainly the paper reflects their sentiments. Otherwise it would not meet with such encouragement as to justify a continuance of the course for so long a time. I traveled a while in that section for a Cincinnati house, and I know how the people feel about it. It is not in a spirit of intolerance or of dictation of the political opinions of any others that the disposition to boycott Ohio merchants and Ohio products is manifested, but in a spirit of self respect. The section I speak of is tributary to Cincinnati, and has heretofore drawn mainly upon that market as its basis of supplies, but nati, and has heretore drawn mainly upon that market as its basis of supplies, but there is now a very apparent and emphatic determination for a change to markets which will welcome the trade with a more cordial and kindly sentiment. That's about all there is in the boycott move against Cincinnati."

THE CAMPAIGN IN NEW YORK. "The present political campaign in New York is one of the most exciting in many years, and the result of it is extremely doubtful," said a gentleman who has traveled a good deal in that State recently, and who was a close observer of events. "I think the odds are against the Democratic nominees, because the Republicans are united and the Democrats are not. I think so, too, because the betting in that State is $100 to $80 on the Republican ticket, and that is usually a very good indication. However, the Democratic party has one element of strength which was, in a large measure, opposed to it in 1884, the labor vote. In nominating Cleveland for the presidency the party may be said to have presidency the party may be said to have exchanged the labor vote for the mugwump vote. In nominating Hill this year the party of the party may be said to have exchanged the party may be vote. In hommating this this year the party alienated the mugwumps, but attracted the labor organizations, which have indorsed his candidacy in their conventions. This last exchange may prove to be a most advantageous one, as the workingmen in New York far outnumber the noisy and fastidious mugwumps."

The Bear is Sold. Mr. Meyer, of Meyer's Garden, has sold his bear. The inquiry "what bear" will not be asked. This particular bear has made character and reputation in Dallas for being as attractive as a paid fireman. He was introduced to his late quarters when a youth, and he put in all his time to the present moment in making acquaintances. He wore a smile at all times, and wanted to shake hands with every man, woman and child that came his way. He had funny ways, too-the funniest that a bear ever had—and it was the custom among our citis zens to stand by his cage and see him loll zens to stand by his cage and see him loll on his back and slap at flies, dance a jig, feel around in the next cage to toy with the coon and do a thousand and one amusing tricks. A printer, one of those knowing kind who corrects the editorials and expresses his private opinion by changing the head lines, was showing a country friend how much more he knew than the bear, when the animal seized his right dexter finger and bit it off at the first joint. That printer lost his case, and the bear became the warm friend of the newspaper reporter and editor. The man who bought our bear is a butcher. He didn't buy him to play with, and the animal seemed to know it. So when they came to pull him from his boudoir he kicked, as it were. Three Germans who had lived in a menagerie undertook to bring him out with a lasso and a rope and a hoe. They attempted it. He broke the rope, chewed up the rake and made the hoe a concave. They shut the door quickly, called for chains, more men and dogs. A chain was finally placed over his head, four men got hold of it and out he came. He felt the fresh air on his brow, and that day meat was good. He squeezed one of them until he was limp, broke another's rib and, seizing a bob-tailed country cur that was taking a hand in the fight, held him to his breast, with his head down, and chewed on the stump of his tail as if he were eating a sweet potato. Ropes were thrown over on his back and slap atflies, dance a jig, feel sweet potato. Ropes were thrown over him, and thus shackled and roped he was escorted to the butcher pen, followed by 400 small boys and every dog in town.

J. W. Fitch Married. At Louisville, Ky., yesterday evening Mr. John W. Fitch, well known throughout Texas, led to the altar Miss Emma Schwartz. daughter of Mr. Theo. Schwartz, a leading merchant of that city. The bridal ing merchant of that city. The bridal couple will leave Louisville on the 21st for an extended tour through the Southern States and Mexico. Mr. Fitch is popular throughout the South and has built up an immense trade as the general Southern agent of the Royal Baking Powder Co. His friends congratulate him on the happy event. He has many warm friends in Dallas whom he has made by his sterling qualities.

Local Temperature.

The following readings of the temperature of Dallas were taken yesterday at Reinhardt & Co.'s thermometer, on Elm street: At 9 a. m., 51°; 12 m., 66°; 6 p. m., MR. WATSON'S RETURN HOME.

Herewith is His Lachrymose Lament. Mr. J. D. Gaster and Mr. Cain, the officers who came here for the prisoner, Green Watson, who is wanted at Baton Rouge on the charge of murder, left with their prisoner yesterday morning by way of Marshall. Watson confessed to his name, his flight and his participation in the crime, but says what he did was done in self defense. It now occurs positively that he was tracked to Caddo, Indian Territory, by the interception of letters from his sweetheart Cynthia Bee. He had one of these letters in his pocket when arrested. Many wiser men than Green Watson have learned too late the "dangersomeness" that lies in making love through an ink bottle. He never read Anabel Bee in his life, but as he sniffed into his pestered bosom the fixed air of the Dallas "refrigerator" he may have been tor tured into shooting off the pistolary parody of

AH! ME.

AH! ME.

It was many and many a month ago,
In a parish near Point Coupee,
That a maiden there lived whom the fellows did know
By the name of Cynthia Bee—
And this maiden she lived with her ears unpierced,
And she went to a picnic with me.

I was a galoot, and she was to boot,

This maid who could climb a tree And shake a possum from the topmost limb, And thus won my heart from me. But we loved with a love that was rank and

But we loved with a love and sweet

As the honey of the bumble bee;
And all the hoodlums the settlement 'round Went envying Cynthia and me,
Till a day came when I got too quick,
With my pop and had to fiee

And leave the constables far behind—
Likewise my Cynthia Bee,

Still she longed with a longing longer than life To embrace me in Baton Roug-ee, And the police embezzled the letter she wrote— So that's what's the matter with me!

Yet Inever smell greens or baked Yankee Yet I never smell greens or baked Yankee beans,
But I'm 'minded of Cynthy Ann Bee;
And I ne'er see a pop but I think of the topKnot, of yaller haired Cynthia Bee.
And all the night tide,
On the cars I will ride,
Till I sit by the side
Of my darling, my darling,
My freekled faced bride,
In the jail at Baton Roug-ee.
Tho' I love my Cynth with a love as rich
As the wealth of the land and the sea, I would leave her to pine and whine with the

where the little stars shine, on the sweet pertater vine,
In her truck patch at Baton Rougee
If the cops didn't have hold of me

Put Back in Jail.

Edward Reese, colored, applied to Judge Aldredge for a writ of habeas corpus yesterday. Edward stands charged with the grave offence of perjury. Last spring Jim Walls, also of color, was tried for stealing a lady's cloak. Edward was one of Walls witnesses, and as far as a total indifference witnesses, and as far as a total indifference to truth was concerned endeavored to extricate his friend from the meshes in which he was entangled. Walls was convicted, and his punishment assessed at confinement in the penitentiary for two years, from which severity he appealed, and is now in jail. For his testimony George was indicted. The District Judge was not sufficiently impressed with his innocence to turn him loose yesterday, but fixed his bond at $300, which was $300 more than he could give.

A Dallas Invention.

Walter Crowdus, a young man of this city, and a nephew of Dr. J. W. Crowdus, a short time ago invented an electric street car box It was tried on the car lines of this city Monday evening and was so perfect in its workings that it was sent yesterday evening to St. Louis to be examined by the Convention of Street Car Men, now there in session. When fare is dropped into the box a bell rings till the conductor stops it, and when the fare is deposited at night, besides the bell ringing, an electric light is created. Those who examined the invention believe that it will be adopted by all street car com-panies. A company has already been formed in Dallas to introduce it throughout the country.
