Poisoning Plot, With All the Sensational Horrors Spoiled.

The Hired Assassin Weakens-The Plotters in Jail-Mrs. Coolidge's Desperate Scheme to Secure Mrs. Mellin's Fortune.

Boston, Oct. 26 .- For the past week the entire force of inspectors connected with the Chief of Detectives' office, under the direction of Chief Inspector Hanscome, have been engaged in working up ONE OF THE MOST SENSATIONAL STORIES ever known in the criminal annals of Boston. They have been aided by detectives in New York and Baltimore, Several extra sessions of the full Board of Police Commissioners were held in regard to the affair. Every man connected with the police lepartment was notified that his head vould be summarily cut off if he breathed a word about the case. There have been some ten or twelve reporters hard at work upon the matter for three days. Last night, at 11 o'clock, the first slight clew was obtained. It was ascertained that several arrests had been made and that the parties arrested were locked up at headquarters and no one allowed to see them, even for the purpose of carrying meals to them, except the chief of police and his confidential secretary. One of the prisoners is a woman who is well known in the city and has always stood well in ssciety. She has a relative—a young lady of an aristocratic line-who was left a large fortune. The woman under arrest would come into the property in the event of the death of the heiress. A plot was hatched between the arrested woman and one or two of her relatives to murder the heiress, and thus get the property of which she was about to come into possession.

A PROCESS OF SLOW POISONING was resorted to, but the physician to whom the young girl went for a diagnosis of her case, discovered that she was being poisoned, and gave her antidotes which saved her life. She suffered considerably from the effects of the poisoning, and will probably never recover entirely from its effects. The physician said nothing to the heiress about the poisoning, but gave her such advice and directions about her diet and place of residence that it became impossible for the conspiritors to succeed in their plot. Their next move was to procure the services of a young man, of fairly good standing and poor scruples, whom they introduced to the heiress. Then a scheme was put on footto have the heiress summoned to Baltimore on business in connection with her new estate. The young man was to be telegraphed to at the same time to come to Baltimore on a very important case in court. He was to volunteer to act as escort for the heiress, and was to receive several thousand dollars.

MURDER HER IN SOME WAY. from the effects of the poisoning, and will

MURDER HER IN SOME WAY. His pet idea was to shove her off the end of the Pullman car as the train passed over the Delaware River at Havre-de-Grace, Md., where all the passengers go out to view the magnificent scenery. Had he done this the crime could easily have been attributed to an accidental fall. Failing in this he would have contrived to have some other accident befall her. As the hired assassin became better acquainted with the heiress his conscience began to quicken and he regretted the bargain. On the day before the scheme was to have been put into operation the young man

REPENTED OF HIS BARGAIN, went to the conspirators and told them they must get some one else to finish the job. There were angry words, and before the young man left the conspirator had sworn to protect with his life the woman whom but a few hours before he was scheming to murder. He said: "I'll be d—d if I don't put my life against hers; and I'll save her, too, from you villains!" He went immediately, while in the heat of passion, to the chief inspector office and made a clean breast of all he knew about the conspiracy. The detectives at once went to work on the case and followed up the clews night and day. There was great difficulty in so tracing the matter as to draw the cords tight around the parties interested in the conspiracy. The man who was to assassinate the heiress had come in contact with only three of the conspirators, and the detectives did not believe that these were the principals in the There were angry words, and before the spirators, and the detectives did not believe that these were the principals in the affair. Owing to the fact that the proposed assassin had had a break with those with whom he had negotiated, it was with great delicacy that the detectives gatheged up the tangled ends and got the whole plot of the story. After a week's work the CHIEF CONSPIRATOR, A HANDSOME WOMAN, very stylish and bearing every mark of re-finement, was arrested late Saturday night. At first she denied all knowledge of the con-spiracy, and persisted in this up to early last evening. Just after supper she called the chief inspector into her cell, and burst-ing into tears.

ing into tears, TOLD THE WHOLE STORY.

The inspector refused to state what her story was or to give any names at all in the case. United Press reporters were out all the evening working on the case, but they the evening working on the case, but they could learn nothing definite until after midnight, and then only the outlines of it here given. The other reporters did not get a single clew in the case. The heiress in the story has always lived in the most elegant section of the West End in a handsome brown stone front house, which was a part of the legacy the conspirators had expected to obtain through the abduction and murder of the young woman. The chief conspirator will be arraigned in the Police Court, and then the story will probably come out, with all the details of names and abundant evidence.

THEIR NAMES AT LAST. The police have just given out the names of the plotters. The woman under arrest is Mrs. Emma Coolidge, wife of Officer James Coolidge, of this city. She is a Southern woman, aged 33, and Coolidge is her second husband. The intended victim is Mrs. Charles J. Mellin.

BENNETT ON BASE BALL. FALL RIVER, Oct. 26 .- Henry Bennett, of the pension office at Washington, a director of the National Base Ball Club, is in this city on business. In conversation to-day, Mr. Bennett said that the action of the League and the American Association Clubs is very detrimental to the prospects of the Nationals. Said he: "It has taken $10,000 out of the pockets of the four of us. We have a nice plant and a fine club. I went to the New York conference sanguine that the Nationals would be in the American Association next year, but the League had all they could attend to in taking care of Detroit, Providence and Buffalo. The Nationals played well, and have given the visiting League clubs good receipts. They gave the New Yorks several defeats and nearly $2000. Now these league clubs like to have places like Washington, where they can rake up an honest penny, but they didn't dare to protect us. I don't blame the leagues, for they treated us quite square, but I have no clubs." "It has taken $10,000 out of the

"A clean steal. They are going to shake together all the best fruit, shoot us if we attempt to get near, and give us all that is left rotting on the ground. Such generosity would make a crocadile weep. They can dodge the salary easily enough. We shall sell out our plant, and then with Barr and the other good players in Washington for a nucleus, we can get up a club that will make it lively for visitors."

THE CONKLING INTERVIEW

Lord Roscoe Says Its Publication Was Unauthorized.

Mr. Thoman Resigns-The Cincinnati Situation-General Political News.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Referring to the in] terview with Roscoe Conkling, printed in several newspapers yesterday, and which was sent out by the United Press on Saturday night, the Brooklyn Eagle, apropos of Mr. Conkling's reported denial that the interview was authorized, says editorially today: "Hon. Roscoe Conkling says the interview with him, published on Sunday in the Eagle and other papers, was unauthorized. 'Unauthorized' is a very elastic term. It may mean all or any of several things, and it both piques and increases the public interest, which Mr. Conkling undoubtedly enjoys. The Eagle received the interview from one of the best known, and, meritedly, most trusted newspaper man in the United States, with assurances that it was the expression of Mr. Conkling's views, made by Mr. Conkling to him on matters contained in it. The expression coincides with what are known to be the views abundantly and prodigiously expressed by Mr. Conkling to others, not newspaper men, on the same subject. Of the truthfulness of the interview there is no reason to doubt. Not an impeachment of its truthfulness is uttered by Mr. Conkling. Yet 'unauthorized' is a very convenient word—explicit or evasive, something or nothing, as one prefers. We presume that Mr. Conkling, on reflection, wishes to avoid the responsibility for saying some things which he will be entirely pleased to let have their due effect, and that after the election he will not regret it if the effect should prove to be as great as he has reason to expect it to be."

AT REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS. New York, Oct. 26.—Among the callers at Republican headquarters this morning, was Senator John A. Logan. Capt. Chester S. Cole is very desirous to have Gen. Logan make some speeches during the coming week, but no dates have as yet been fixed. Gen. Carr and others also called at the committee's room.

THE CINCINNATI DEAD-LOCK.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 26.-Judge Buckwalter this morning refused to dissolve the restraining order against the Returning Boord from issuing certificates of election to the Democratic candidates to the State Senate. He overruled the demurrer and continued the restraining order in force until such time as the Circuit Court will be able to decide the mandamus proceedings. The Circuit Court is now in session, considering the mandamus to instruct County Clerk Dalton what are proper returns to receive and canvass in the senatorial vote. The importance of these proceedings arise from the fact that the Republicans will have a majority in both branches of the Legislature if the Hamilton County Senatory of certificates: county Senators get certificates; otherwise will be divided.

The mandamus cases of the Republican candidate for Senator and for the Common Pleas Judgeship were up before the Circuit Court this morning. Judges Cox, Smith and Swing-the full bench-assumed charge of these cases. The bench is unanimously Republican. Thomas McDougal and Dr. Ansen Wulsin appeared for the Republican candidates and ex-Congressmen Jordan and Follette for the canvassing board. It was agreed that the election of the four Senators asking for mandamus should be consolidated. Mr. Jordan then announced that he would file an enswer in abatement setting would file an answer in abatement, setting up the fact that the court had no jurisdic-tion, the Common Pleas Court having as-sumed full jurisdiction in the matter.

THE CLEVELAND-THOMAN CORRESPONDENCE. WASHINGTON Oct. 26.—The following is the correspondence between Hon. Leroy D. Thoman, of the Civil Service Commission, and President Cleveland, respecting the former's resignation, which the President has accepted, to take effect Nov. 1: Washington, Oct. 20 .- Sir: Respectfully referring to a conversation had with you as early as March 10, in which I expressed the wish to be relieved of my duties as a member of the United States Civil Service Commission, and also to the apparent fact that it was not then your pleasure to consider my request, I now have the honor to tender formally my resignation, and earnestly to beg an early consideration of the same and its acceptance. While thus asking release from so honorable a trust, I desire to record my gratification over the the proved practicability and remedial effectiveness of the reform procedure. Tried veterans in political warfare view with amazement the facile, though radical, de parture from the familiar methods, from the poils system of distributing patronage trenuous and sincere argument, and als eliberate perversion, mark the opposition Spoils system of distributing patronage. Strenuous and sincere argument, and also deliberate perversion, mark the opposition of different groups of antagonists, and yet it must be concluded that a majority of the political leaders in either party is in accord with the Pendleton law, if its original enactment and emphatic indorsement by a subsequent Congress were honest legislative expressions, and not the coercion of moral cowardice by popular sentiment nor partisan legerdemain. In the great task of administrative reform which you have undertaken in accordance with personal and party pledges the people will give aid. It has been my pleasure within the last two months to visit quite a number of the States and Territories of this Union, and it was my good fortune to meet with many of their citizens. It is gratifying to know that the people confide in the unequivocal intention of the President to sustain the merit system in the civil service. They had condemned the evils of the former methods. Long experience had made their knowledge accurate. They welcomed the inauguration of the new. The distinctive features of the present reform appealed to a typically American sentiment, which commends and advances merit. With the precise details of the new procedure their acquaintance was not so intimate. To this they are fast succeeding and the result will be cordial approval. The inception and maintenance of great reforms are with the people. I believe that the fundamental idea of civil service reform is characteristic of American thought. Popular hesitation over the acceptance of statutory details suggests merely a safe conservatism. In the initial stages of this reform that was a response through out the nation. Political contests assumed a new tone. Old time methods of corruption were discouraged and bossism was grasped with fresh vigor. The improvement is yet marked. Officious elements still seek obtrusion into elections. The chances of their success have been lessened. The reform spirit is militant, and advances to mak sened. The reform spirit is militant, and advances to make complete success. Corruption by official patsonage has been removed. With the imparting of a purer life to official circles, the power of the private purse to purchase political honors will be less dangerous. Public appreciation of the fact that this reform does not trench upon sturdy partisanships came late. It was sedulously maintained that the civil service was to be composed of men who should about the composed of men who should be composed of men who sedulously maintained that the civil service was to be composed of men who should abjure certain rights of citizenship. With the gradual but inevitable refutation of this false view, the outlines of the reform at last stood forth in clearness—a reform which views the civil service as a vast business agency; its search is for the best attainable merit. In business, which is not political, it enforces no tests of party.

With confident trust in the success of your administration, I am, your obedient servant.

UPPER CIRCLES EXCITED.

Sensational Developments in Divorce Proceedings in Which Three Cities are Interested. CLEVELAND, Oct. 26.—High society in this city received a severe shock this morning by the publication of a sensational bit of history in the press. Mrs. Martha L. Carey keeps a respectable boarding house on Courtland street, and was engaged to be married to Capt. Lacey, a wealthy fire brick manufacturer, and who is connected with some of the wealthiest families in Cleveland. The two were introduced about two months ago and immediately became engaged. Mrs. Carey thereupon commenced a suit for divorce from her husband, Francis T. Carey, who is connected with a wealthy Southern family in New Orleans, and who served with distinction in the Confederate army, claiming that she thought him dead, the divorce proceedings being a mere formality. Lacey's family meantime sent a detective to Chicago, where the Careys formerly lived, to investigate. Carey was finally found in Joliet, Ill., where he had become a prominent and respected citizen. He was brought to Cleveland, and said that he had met Mrs. Carey, who claimed she was the wife of Wm. Mowry, a very wealthy citizen of Pittsburg, shortly after the war. He claimed that she had lived with him (Carey) as his mistress for some time until she procured his release from jail, where he had been confined for stabbing a man in the T. Carey, who is connected with a wealthy been confined for stabbing a man in the Sherman House in Chicago, on his agreeing to marry her. They then came to Cleve-land, where, he claims, she has had crimiland, where, he claims, she has had criminal relations with several prominent ettizens. Mrs. Carey makes counter charges against Carey, claiming he had misrepresented her, and that he embezzled $2300 from Edward Townsend & Co., of Cleveland, which she paid up herself, and that he was afflicted with foul diseases when she married him. Lacey is still loyal to his flance, and says he will have the the case sifted to the bottom. Meanwhile the upper circles in this city, Pittsburg and New Orleans are awaiting developments, which are promised soon.

Boston, Oct. 26 .- The Taber divorce case came up again this morning. The courtroom was crowded and hundreds of would be spectators were unable to gain admission. Fred. J. Taber was called and testi-

Reflected in the mirror he saw criminal intercourse between Mr. Downs and Mrs. Taber. The witness testified as to the condition of affairs in Mrs. Taber's room, 7 Derne street, when she and Downs were surprised by her husband and the detective. Mr. Taber told substantially the same story as the officer did, except his description of Mrs. Taber's apparel was of a more damaging character. The line of defense to be adopted was indicated by questions of counsel touching Taber's intimacy with a Mrs. Lincoln. Counsel for Mrs. Taber stated that she intended to show matrimontal misconduct on the part of Taber. The court open the transom over the door, climbed misconduct on the part of Taber. MAN ON THE TRACK.

Determined to Fight Against a Railroad Company and Suit and Counter Suit. Special to The News.

TEXARKANA, Oct. 26 .- Dr. H. M. Beidler, of this city, was arrested this morning, at his residence, on a warrant issued from the United States Court presided over by Judge Caldwell, at Little Rock, charging Beidler with an attempt at train wrecking. The latter recently won a tract of land in a law suit between himself and the Iron Mountain Railway Co., on which a number of the company's tracks are situated, after a litigation extending through a period of eight years. The company failing to purchase the land or remove their tracks therefrom, Beider betook himself to the task of stopping their operations along said track, and for this purpose had a large wooden pin driven into the center of one of the tracks, extending twenty inches above the roadbed, and upon another for two or three nights past has made his bed, sleeping upon the track with only a pillow under his head. Along the latter track the freight trains and yard switch engines approached several times near the sleeper, but he on each occasion lay firmly in the middle of the track and yelled at them to come on, that his life was well insured; he was on his own land, and that he had a wife and family who could enjoy the insurance money as well as the amount of damage that would grow out of his death. Beidler has lately sued the railroad company for $35,000, and now avers that he will increase his claim to $100,000. The case against him for attempt at train wrecking is set for Nov. 13. Beidler along said track, and for this purpose had BLOODY BUSINESS AT BROWNWOOD. A Passenger Refuses to Pay a Hack Bill and Kills the Driver.

Special to The News. Brownwood, Oct. 26 .- A dastardly murder was committed here this morning at 1 o'clock at the bayou just outside of the city. A hack driver, was almost instantly killed by one Chambers, a desperate character. It seems that Chambers had ridden down from town in the hack and refused to pay the fare, 25 cents. Upon the driver insisting upon it, Chambers drew a forty-five caliber revolver and shot him through the abdomen, the ball making its exit over the right hip. He immediately left for parts unknown, but Deputy Sheriff Nat Perry discovered his trail early this morning and captured him near Blanket postoffice, this county. The slain man is Frank L. Hunnington, of New York. He is supposed to be of good family, from letters found on his person.

SERVIA'S DENIAL. Advices just received from Belgrade state that Servian authorities officially deny that any body of Servian troops has crossed the frontier into Bulgaria.

CONFERENCE POSTPONED. The delay in holding the conference at Constantinople, which is again postponed until Wednesday, leaves the field of war open to the hostile forces without any immediate check, and the attack of the Servian army on Bulgaria already begun is likely to precipitate the war before it can be stopped. Already within Bulgarian territory, the Servians will probably make an united assault upon the Bulgarian forces tomorrow. The principal point of attack is expected to be Widden, in the northwest corner of Bulgaria. In view of this, strong detachments of troops been placed at Widden to receive the Servians and all the Roumelian artillery is massed there. The town will be able to withstand a long siege. The Bulgarian army is stationed all along the frontier between Widden and Sofia, which is near the Southwestern corner of Bulgaria and close to the frontier of Roumelia. The distance between the two cities is over 100 miles, and this is protected as well as possible by the forces under Prince Alexander's command. These are numerically much superior to the Servian forces, but in fighting capacity they are inferior to King Milan's army. they are inferior to King Milan's army. The one exception to this comparative quality of the two armies is at the Dragoman Pass, about thirty-five miles northwest of Sofia. This is an important point, and not only are excellent troops stationed here, but the Bulgarians are reported to be under the command of German officers. Since the departure of the Russian officers from the service of Prince Alexander by the orders of the Czar, the Bulgarian soldiers have remained practically unofficered. FERD WARD'S TRIAL.

Jury Completed and Taking of Testimony

Begun-Court Scenes. NEW YORK, Oct. 26-The trial of Ferdinand Ward was continued this morning Counsel for accused and the people are examining citizens to fill places left vacant by jurors Nos. 11 and 12, who were excused or surrors Nos. 11 and 12, who were excused on Saturday. Ward looked pale and weary as he sat alongside of his counsel looking over papers bearing upon the case, directly in front of Warden Kiernan. About a dozen citizens were examined before a juryman was found who suited prosecution and defense. He was Meyer Rosenthal, a tobacconist, He was familiar with case, but had formed no opinion. He made the eleventh juror. enth juror.

THE JURY COMPLETED. At 3 p. m. the twelfth juror in the Ward trial was obtained. He is Simon Weel a fancy goods dealer. District Attorney Martin opened the case for the people. While he was reading the statutes defining grand larceny, James D. Fish was brought into court by his custodians and was given a seat within the bar.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. Martin's definitions Gen. Tracy, for the defense, moved the discharge of the jury, on the ground that the District Attorney had made an illegal and unwarranted statement in regard to what the prosecution intended to show regarding Ward's guilt.

FISH'S TESTIMONY. Judge Barrett denied the motion and Mr. Fish was called to the witness stand for the prosecution. When told to look upon the prisoner Fish turned and glanced savagely at Ward, who lowered his eyes and grew red in the face and nervous. Assistant District Attorney Purdy pre-sented a check of $71,000 to Fish, and asked if he recognized it.

The witness identified it as the check made by Ward and certified by the Marine Bank.
He said that when he received the check he

"How about that check for $71,000?"
Ward replied: "It's all right, send it through; the money is in the First National Bank."

Fish thereupon ordered the check to be certified. This was on May 5, 1884, about 2 p. m. Witness also identified a check for $80,000, which Ward had deposited on May 3, against which he had obtained on May 3, against which he had obtained a certified check on the First National Bank, and which he had then withdrawn, telling Fish that the check had not been paid. An hour later the certified check was presented for payment, showing that Ward had lied and used the check. Fish telephoned Ward, who replied:

"It is very strange; I can't understand it."
Gen. Tracey cross-examined witness and endeavored to show that he must have known that Ward's account was overdrawn

THE TELLER'S TESTIMONY.

Benj. Fish, brother of the preceding witness and paying teller of the Marine Bank testified to hearing Ward tell J. D. Fish that there was $75,000 in the bank to meet the $71.800.

$71,800. Witness on cross-examination admitted that he had been ordered to certify Ward's checks without reference to his accounts, but he did not do so in regard to the $71,800 and the $80,000 checks, because he had a few days before been told to be careful about certifying Ward's checks; that the account was overdrawn. The witness was positive he could recognize Ward's voice through the telephone, though Ward was talking to 1 D. Fish and witness stood vas talking to J. D. Fish, and witness stood foot away.
The prosecution announced that to-mor-

DEEP WATER DELIBERATIONS. The City Council will meet to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock in the council chambers as a committee of the whole to discuss the proposition of Engineer Peeler, as presented to the Council at its last meeting, looking to the establishment of a harbor by means of a 300 foot channel across the island and extending to deep water in the

NEW COTTON TRADE SYSTEM. The track down Postoffice street to the Factor's Press is completed, and last week cotton was, for the first time, unloaded at the door of that press from the Santa Fe. This inaugurates a new era in the cotton business of Galveston. It relieves cotton ot the heavy embargo of expensive handling, which is just that much more in the pockets of the interior merchant and the cotton producer. This will enable the compresses here to offer better rates for compressing, which was practically anticipated some time since when the price for compressing was reduced to 50 cents per bale all around. Notwith to 50 cents per bale all around. Notwith standing this unloading at the presses and yards, the receipts are so heavy that it is almost impossible to find enough drays and floats to move the cotton. This item may interest those who held to the opinion that running the railroad tracks to the presses and yards would throw draymen and labor ers out of employment.

EXPOSITION ENTERPRISE. The joint committee of Aldermen and citi ens met to-night at the Ball school building to formally inaugurate some plan for having Galveston represented at the coming North, Central and South American Exposition, to be commenced in New Orleans next month. The general sentiment prevailed that Galveston could ill afford not to be represented at the coming Exposition, and those interested in the movement displayed a determination to carry out successfully the object for which the committee was created. PROBABLE ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE About a week ago a young man arrived in the city and took quarters at the Washing ton Hotel, where he registered as J. D Poundstone, from St. Louis. Yesterday at 6:30 a. m. he was found in the vicinity of the Texas Cotton Press lying on back, with streams of blood flowing from his throat and a knife his side. There is every indication of an attempt at suicide, and subsequent investigation proved this beyond a doubt. From what could be learned concerning him at the hotel, it seems that he came here to take a position as telegraph operator in the Galveston office. His native he came here to take a position as telegraph operator in the Galveston office. His native city is Cincinnati, though for a time he resided in Rushville, Ind., had performed the duties of a telegraph operator at Okean Station, Ark., and has also been a railroad clerk. He had been alling ever since reaching the city, and to all appearances seems to have been on a protracted spree, and he remarked to the hotel clerk that he was endeavoring to wear off the effects. He had been expecting his wife down every day, but had not seen or heard anything about her. He went to the telegraph office one day, but was too nervous to write and returned to the hotel, where he became so weak that the clerk found it necessary to have him conveyed up stairs to his room. After that he grew very despondent and continually complained of feeling badly. Two days after he was discovered as above described and conveyed to the City Infirmary, where he was examined by Dr. Fisher, the house surgeon, who pronounced his injuries severe but not fatal. George and Addie Missing.

Columbus, O., Oct. 26.—The police are ooking for Miss Addie Crapo and George Federer, who mysteriously disappeared from their homes this morning. Federer's people believe he has been made away with for some purpose. Miss Crapo is a very hand-some girl, about 18 years old, and had no special friends that she would be likely to depart with.

Arrested for Shooting a Woman-Pardons by the Governor and Why Pardons Are Issued.

Special to The News Austin, Oct. 26 .- J. S. Coombs, a white man, whose occupation is that of a cook in a Pecan street restaurant, was arrested this morning, charged with shooting Alice Davis, a mulatto woman, with whom he has been living. The woman says Coombs came to her room last night and accused her of being unfaithful to him. She saw he was mad, and fearing violence, she at tempted to leave the room, when he shot her. The ball entered her back and was extracted from her left breast. The wound will likely prove fatal. CASTIRON FOR THE NEW STATEHOUSE.

The Penitentiary Board met to-day and accepted the terms offered by the capitol contractors for supplying castiron work from Rusk Prison Iron Works for the new Statehouse. The board, however, reserves the right to throw up the contract if terms can not be made with the Texas Traffic Association by which lower rates of transpor tation from Rusk to Austin can be obtained than are now charged. The castings for the main building are laid down at Austin at 2% cents per pound, and for the dome at 4 cents. Col. Goree went down this evening to see Major Waldo about special rates. The Capitol Commissioners contribute a perspective drawing, 6x8 feet, of the new capitol for exhibition at New Orleans.

The Governor pardoned Wm. E. Beck, of Bexar, convicted of embezzlement. His term of two years has nearly expired, and the pardon is extended for the purpose of restoring Beck's citizenship. The Governor has written a lengthy paper, giving reasons generally for granting various pardons and commutations, and for refusing others. One reason for pardons in special cases is the illegal convictions ruling of Court of Appeals, that indictments by a jury of Mrs. Oatman complained. Mr. Matter defended. Judge White heard the case and Mr. Matter paid $10. The velocipede has not been heard from.

ones are always better than salt for they do not shrivel in cooking), strain them from the liquor and put in a bowl and add to the liquor and put in a bowl and add to them a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Then put the liquor of the oysters, together with the beards, into a saucepan, adding a little whole mace, four or five peppercorns, a pinch of cayenue pepper, a very little grated nutmeg and a piece of lemon rind the size of a "nickel." Place the saucepan over the fire; let the liquor simmer gently for fifteen minues, then stain it, and thicken it with a teaspoonful of flour, in which an ounce of butter has been smoothly rubbed. Now add a gill of cream, and stir the liquor over a gentle fire until it becomes thick and smooth. Then put in the oysters, and let the pan remain only long enough for them to be heated through. Do not allow them to boil or they will shrivel and become tough. As soon as they are heated, have ready some slices of toast on a hot dish, and over these pour the oysters, with their gravy, and serve immediately.

An oyster stew with a few mushrooms added is always an acceptable dish at luncheon, or, indeed, at most other times. We have discovered, however, that in lieu of the mushrooms, slices of cucumbers can be used to advantage and almost successfully rival, in point of excellence, the mushrooms. Prepare the cucumber this way: them a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Then

Select a good sized one, such as would be used at table. Peal it and boil it in salted water for ten minutes. While hot cut it fato thin slices, slightly salt and pepper each, and drop them into the stew five minutes before taking it up.

Oysters—or more properly speaking, the liquor in which they are stewed—should never be cooked more than fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Walkup's Case. Chicago Herald.

Kansas is about to go through the motions of trying a young and handsome woman for the murder of her husband by poison. The evidence against Mrs. Walkup is entirely circumstantial. The evidence in her favor is in plain view of the court and jurors in her own person, which is said to be most attractive and altogether too lovely to permit a very strong suspicion that she can be guilty. The State will prove that she married Mr. Walkup thinking him rich; that he ried Mr. Walkup thinking him rich; that he died soon afterward of poison; that she purchased poison on several occasion from local druggists, and that she conducted herself generally in a way calculated to arouse suspicion. The defense will put the beautiful and tearful young lady on the stand and ask who saw her administer the poison, and, nobody answering, it will ask the jurors if they honestly believe that so charming a creature could do such a thing. It will then produce evidence going to show that Walkup was in the habit of using arsenic himself, and that he once came very near death by reason of it. The arguments will follow, and the acquittal will probably follow the arguments.

Poison is an instrument of murder which laws have not succeeded in reaching, Handsome women have used it successfully in all ages, and if the jury of Kansas farmers takes the circumstances in Minnie Walkup's case seriously into account it will differ greatly from most of its predecessors.

CALL FOR A NEW DEAL IN STATE POLITICS.

An interior paper wants a new deal in State politics, but follows up the announcement with an argument in favor of an entirely new set of players, a new deck and a new game. The game of politics is largely a game of brag, in which as one of the players loses his stakes he gives us his place to the spectator, who probably has stood in with the other players to freeze out his predecessor. The interior editor wants the board cleared completely and the old set of office-holders all retired to private life. No promise is given of better material, names to select from are not furnished, but the object appears simply to obtain a complete revolution of the party wheel by which a new set of men will be rotated into office without claiming for them fitness or experience above their predecessors. Were public affairs managed with any degree of satisfaction an experiment of this nature would be deemed extremely hazardous, and yet, with this hazard fully appreciated by the public, there is unquestionably a willingness, more general than the players will admit to make the experiment. It is not reasonable to suppose that the people of almost wholly chosen from carpet-baggers Texas are satisfied with their State govern- from the South or from a miscelleneous rab ment. It is a failure in the management of | ble of hungry partisans, who should continthe most important interests confided by I ually make it a practice to abuse, revile and the people to its care. No business concern would long exist under such management. The stockholders would call for a new deal most assuredly, or make an assignment forthwith. There may be no good sense in substituting untried men for those who have experience, but after awhile it is demonstrated that experience is of no advantage to some men, and if this be shown in the State government it will be in order to call for the new deal. Those who pay the taxes and who are most deeply interested are understood, as party affairs are managed, to have the least to say in selecting candidates for the offices, and though they may desire the new deal ever so much, they are not consulted, their wishes are disregarded and their interests neglected. This is because they fail to exert themselves in shaping the affairs of their party. It is not likely that they now feel the weight of misgovernment sufficiently to induce unusual attention to public matters. While not satisfied with the results of government under the existing regime, these results do not directly bear so onerously upon taxpayers as to precipitate the revolt which this class is fully competent to lead successfully against obnoxious party management. In the present instance also is to be considered the fact that there are officials and officials; that in the financial measures of the past three or four years some officials are responsible for grave errors, and some officials are on the record as advising measures which would have produced better results, and as opposing the measures that have proved disastrous. This, it is believed, is also true with respect to these officials in the management of the lands. Hence it may be folly to call for an entirely new deal or new game, as the case may be. If, however, interests are to be pooled, there is sufficient reason for the demand for a sweeping rotation. The strength of the position of the official who has exhibited capacity and fidelity ought not to be used to protect the incapable or delinquent member of the Cabinet. Every individual should stand upon his individual merits. In a government that acts through boards and bureaus it is difficult, however, to judge of the merits of the several members. Each member claims credit for all that is good and shifts the blame to the board for what is bad. The only safe plan where there is no way of attaching responsibility to the individual members is to hold the pool accountable and demand a new deal altogether. There is, however, as intimated, in the present condition of affairs, a disposition at least upon the part of the friends of some members of the pool to challenge individual criticism, to refer to individual acts and opinions, and to claim superior individual fitness for public business. This course can not but detach those indicated, and assure them a much more ment to the administration of President Cleveland. The Weekly, however, claims to be convinced that the great body of the President's party is not in sympathy with him. This is evidently a mistake. The noisy wails or growls of spoilsmen must not be accepted as the voice of the Democratic masses. The spoilsmen of both parties have, in a general sense, a common cause and common objects. They have no principles at stake beyond their own immediate personal welfare, and this can only be attained by appeasing their appetite for office. Spoilsmen are like coyotes; a few of them can make noise enough to cause quiet people sometimes to imagine that there is a vast herd of them assembled, but investigation will reveal that there are really but a few of them. In the strongest Democratic States it is noticeable that the voice of the spoilsman is feeble. In the Republican States the spoilsman is a little more active, and in the so-called doubtful States he is most alert and vociferous. The doubtful States have done more to demoralize and lower the standard of American nolitics than almost any other agency. Take New York, Ohio, Indiana and Virginia, as examples, known as doubtful States, and compare them with Texas, Kentucky, Georgia and South Carolina, reliably Democratic States, and a different strain of expression regarding the policy of the President will be found to exist. This is not the result of any profound cause, but the spoilsman imagines that in the doubtful States he will have a better chance to get in his work and levy political blackmail. Commenting on the general belief that the States of the South are in accord with the policy of the President, Harper's Weekly takes occasion to say that "the sincerest support which the President's reform policy has received from his own party has been in the Southern States. In Texas, Georgia, South Carolina, Louisiana and Florida an honest Democratic voice for reform has been heard. This is not surprising when it is remembered that the Confederate constitution required that, except in the case of the Cabinet, the reasons for every proposed removal should be submitted to the Senate. So much had been learned from experience of the spoils system." This is true. The people of the South generally have no sympathy with the spoils system in politics, but it should be remembered that the class of federal officials inherited by the South from Republican administrations were not as a rule in sympathy with the people of the South in anything, and habitually made it a part of their duty to misrepresent the feelings of the South to the people of the North. Harper's Weekly no doubt is an earnest advocate of civil service reform, but how would it feel if the federal officials in the North were misrepresent the people of the North to their fellow citizens of the South? Would Harper's Weekly think that genuine civil service reform meant the retention in office of such incumbents, especially if, in addition to the facts noted above, these officials were loud-mouthed in asserting that the party of the President was composed of "traitors" and "rebels"? The quiet, thinking masses of the Democratic party are in hearty accord with the President, and only the spoilsmen, who are in an inconsiderable minority, are really displeased with his civil service policy and profess to be aggrieved by it.

One day he saw a poor girl, and she was so attractive and agreeable in her manners that he became smitten with her. This so overjoyed the poor girl's family that they babbled about the coming mar riage with the rich man. The babbling reached his ears and he was displeased. He broke off the engagement, and never thought more of woman and her wiles. Such a man was evidently incapable of entertaining the tender passion, or he would not have cared for the family's talk.

Some men think that because the President is of their party he must give them appointments for their favorites, fit or unfit. The President appears for a time to have thought that agreement in political faith was some guarantee of honest representations. He has been deceived in certain instances; hence he will but do his duty by scrutinizing closely all recommendations.

THE change in the cotton business from the hands of factors to those of spinners' agents is noticed quite as distinctly in cotton that goes by New Orleans and by St. Louis as in cotton that goes to Galveston The New Orleans factors are making a fight for supremacy, but they feel the force of that competition which results from the determination of consumers to establish direct relations with producers. Some correspondence from Mississippi to a St. Louis paper shows this contest to be going on just the same there as in Texas, with considerable influence on the business of factors in St. Louis and New Orleans.

This definition has been agreed to by both political parties, and yet the representatives of the Republican party, Mr. Sherman and Mr. Logan, will go to Virginia to perpetuate it. Mr. Conkling's announcement that his old party has gone to pieces glitters with truth.

"Hello," exclaimed the politician, "why, I never knew that hogs drink!"

THE lugubrious articles appearing in the Republican newspapers about the sad condition of Mr. John Roach are written more from a hatred of Whitney than sorrow for the broken shipbuilder.

KING THEEBAW has looked up from his meal of boiled mother-in-law to merely request France to adjust such misunderstandings as exist between him and England.

THE impression gains ground that Denew speaks not so much to show under what obligations the Republic is to Grant as to show that Depew was a confidant of Grant.

IN ALL probability Mr. Depew will be wanting some one to assist him in getting loose from the Johnson-Grant matter ere many weeks have fled. The testimony of Gen. Grant in the impeachment trial is published and not a syllable of the deep dyed villainy of Johnson is there touched upon.

RIEL received the news of the dismissal of his appeal with some excitement. It was natural.

SHERMAN's declaration that the South is still in rebellion, and that this fair land is still engaged in fratricidal war, will be used in the next Congress to back up the necessity for the perpetuation of the war tariff.

IF Sherman would go to Canada he might find Americans who have leisure to talk.

A LARGE audience, composed of journalists and business men, listened to a lecture by Mr. Henry Sell in London last week on the subject of "Advertising and Its Relation to Commerce." That portion of the speaker's discourse which referred to newspapers and newspaper advertising in America was listened to with closest attention. The enterprising American can give any country on earth points on liberal and judicious advertising.

MR. CONKLING was not practising with his gun. He was not shooting at anybody, but Davenport, Blaine and others were walking that way and received the contents of the Conkling gun. He is sorry, but it was entirely the fault of Blaine, Davenport and others who walked in range.

IF Mr. Conkling really backs down from his interview he will be called "The turkey cock of the Senate," alias "The dunghill of the United States."

SENATOR WALTHALL, of Mississippi, made a speech at his old home in Coffeeville a few days ago, in which he took strong grounds in favor of silver and railroad regulation. He declared the party would stand by the himetalic standard to the last and that the gold men could not accomplish anything as long as the Democrats have a majority of forty members in the Lower House of Congress.

THERE is one striking similarity between Mme. Judic and John A. Logan. Mme. Judic does not speak English.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONER THOMAN has tendered his resignation, which the President has accepted, to take effect Nov 1. This winds up the commission appointed by President Arthur, and leaves President Cleveland free to organize a commission of his own selection, which will be announced within a few days. As the present commission is composed of two Republicans and one Democrat, the new commission will probably be composed of two Democrats and one Republican, unless a mugwump should accidentally slip in and upset all calculations.

It is the deliberate conviction of Ohio Democrats that Sherman's victory in Ohio is a barren one, his return to the Senate being by no means assured. The feeling among the Democrats against the color bearer of the bloody shirt brigade is so intense that they will spare no effort to compass his defeat, and as the Republican majority on joint ballot is so very small it is didate obtained a nickname which may be thought the task will not be difficult. It is rendered as Hoggy. the Legislature, which can be relied upon to oppose Sherman's ambition, Foster being as anxious as the Democrats are to retire Sherman to private life. There are other able Republicans in Ohio who have senatorial aspirations, and the report is that they will not willingly stand aside for Sherman if they see a fair prospect of defeating him.

Mr. Conkling probably means that he didn't authorize the publication of his remarks on Blaine, Davenport and others. But Mr. Conkling has been in public life long enough to know that when he bugles such music the notes are bound to appear in print. Mr. Conkling is honest, Mr. Conkling is intelligent above ordinary men, and we are sorry that Mr. Conkling feels called upon to stick a white feather in his cap. Still it is not a square back down. Had he desired to crawfish he would have stated that he did not make the remarks credited to him. He means to say that he entertains the opinions expressed, but is too refined to engage in the rudeness of publishing them.

JUDGE LYNCH is not a safe and reliable justice, for the reason that his summary vengeance is not infrequently wreaked upon innocent victims. Recent developments in Manitoba furnish an illustration. In September last a nameless outrage was committed in Dakota and a man arrested on suspicion was seized by an angry mob and hung for the offense. Two days ago a nomad of bad character was arrested in Manitoba who, for various reasons, is believed to be the perpetrator of the outrage for which the Dakota man was lynched. The matter is undergoing investigation, and the result may make .some persons feel very uncomfortable.

THE Democrats of Cincinnati must be a very wicked lot. A Kansas City paper says they "not only stuffed the ballotbox, after the election, and not only changed the returns after the count was made, but run in illegal voters from Kentucky." The way minority Democrats do bulldoze and cheat majority Republicans in this great American country is one of the saddest features of our republican form of government. The inference seems to be that courage, brains and muscle are more than a match for mere numbers, even in a wicked city like Porkopolis, where Republicans lay no claim to any other merit than respectability.

What the Interior Papers Say.

The San Antonio Express says: The controversy over the Depew letter has been begun. The letter is an exemplification of the wisdom of letting sleeping dogs lie. For weeks the air will be thick with the bones of this dead issue.

It seems as if the dead issue will never die. Its revival in Ohio is bad enough, but scarcely worse-hardly as bad-as the interminable stories of the brigadiers and others who are fighting their battles over again in newspapers, magazines and books. They have already kept up the racket longer than the Trojan war lasted, and threaten to keep it up longer than the thirty years war in Europe. People generally feel like the little boy who said when he was scolded, "I'm sick of a fuss." Let us have a rest, if we can't have peace. A short truce would be refreshing.

story of screw worms:

A German woman living near St. Mary Church, about three miles from this place, last week complained of a severe pain about the head. Dr. East was called and on examination found that serew worms nostrils. By a prompt application of certain chemicals, the worms were made to cease their work of destruction and were removed by the skillful doctor. On examination he found that he had extracted some 150 fully grown screw worms. The woman then felt some relief and rested quietly for some time until she felt a pain near the right ear. Dr. East was called again and removed another worm, which was the last. The lady is doing well. The Austin Journal of Homeopathy for

Mr. L. M. Cole was in a well digging, thirty-one feet below the surface, and a man named Thos. Dilley drawing up the loose earth in a keg. Dilley lost control of his windless while hoisting the loaded keg, and it went thundering downward to the bottom where Cole was working. Dilley shouted to him to look out. When Cole saw the keg it was about twenty feet above him, and seeing by its course that it would certainly ng by its course that it would certainly trike the side of the well, he waited, know ing that his existence depended on dodging the weight. However, when it struck the side Mr. Cole sprang to the opposite side and threw up his left arm to ward off the expected blow. The keg struck his shoulder and arm, inflicting severe and painful wounds. Mr. Cole then with one hand tied the rope around his body and was drawn up, where kind hands awaited him to bind his injured limb. The El Paso Times discusses the Chinese question, and says:

We have always considered the buncomb policy of our government in sending the American flag into Mexico and other countries to protect every sheep thief that may be caught as the very dregs of nonsense. We said some weeks ago that an adventurer certainly had no right to lead the country into complications, risk and expense for the purpose of increasing his own fortunes. Let him stay at home and work for his living, or take his own risks in Mexico or elsewhere. The Cameron Herald says:

The temperance pound party last Saturday night very successfully filled the mission it was intended to perform—that of inducing more members of the council to attend, and making the meetings more pleasant and interesting. The pound party feature will doubtless hereafter be quite frequent.

The beauty of a pound party is in allowing every visitor to select what article of a pound in weight he shall contribute. It is like a donation party to a preacher, and a tea. "A pound's a pound," said Dame Eleanor Spearing. It is not its equivalent— a pint—at a temperance festival where liquors are not taken except from cups that cheer but not inebriate.

The Gospel Flame is still illuminating the people of Corsicana. Its leading editorial is headed "The World of Fire." Others dispute about the way baptism should be administered by water, but the Flame says: The qualification that God gives to His

The Cleburne Chronicle prints another open letter from that chronic sufferer from cacoethes scribendi who was the Greenback candidate for Vice President, and indulges in half a column of satire at his expense, ending with the remark:

The Colonel is a kind of a dare-devil, don't-care-a-continental sort of a man, and the only one of his kind that ever dived into the fathomless depths of the figures that indicate the national debt of Mexico, and exclicate the national debt of Mexico, and explained to that God-and-Liberty Republic how to pay off her debt, come out head and tail up and have a balance to her credit. These open letters are never addressed to smaller game than a Pope President of the United States, Member of Congress, or an editor of a daily paper.

Brick Pomeroy is not so far gone as to have none to do him reverence. The Brownsville Cosmopolitan quotes from his paper.

> Moody on Practical Theology. New York Tribu

Mr. Moody, by a special invitation, visited the Union Theological Seminary in Park avenue yesterday and addressed the stu-"A young minister is apt to be too stiff," he said, "both in and out of the pulpit. Many men concentrate everything on the sermon, and stop there. We have to get hold of the unconverted man's heart, and that is only done by laying your heart alongside of his. The great fault with the Established Church in England is that it creates a deep gulf between the common workingman and the Church by the formality of its service. If a poor man comes into church, he goes bungling through the prayer book hunting for the place till he feels ashamed: then not having the place he loses interest, gets mortified at his own ignorance and does not come back. That influence has not yet reached this country, but it is coming. Work with your people individually, man by man; dig them out of sin if you have to use a pickax. The way to help them when once obtained is to set them at work. The most successful men are those who know how to make other men work. We need a school in this country to teach men how to lead. I have found Sunday night the best time to preach Gospel sermons, because people seemingly do not expect to be converted by a Sunday morning sermon. Then the singing must be in a known tongue; a great deal of it is unknown nowadays. We must deal of it is unknown nowadays. We must also wipe out the patronizing air of building so called missions. People imagine that they are looked upon as paupers if they go to a mission church. Call it anything but a mission. It is a good thing to have separate meetings for the sexes at times. If a young man comes to church with his sweetheart be man comes to church with his sweetheart ne doesn't want her to know that he is a sinner, and vice versa. A minister to be successful must get rid of all personal ambition; it is a long road for a man to get to the end

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

How Railways are Run in Foreign Lands.

Notes of Travel-Men of Mark in the Railroad World-Track Laid.

FOREIGN RAILWAYS.

We understand that Mr. William Shelford, engineer of the Great Eastern, has gone to Winnepeg to investigate the feasibility and cost of building a railroad to Hudson's Bay, which is to be done by English capitalists, if the cost will not exceed £5000 per mile.—Herepath's Railway Jour-

It is officially announced from the French from the French colony of Cochin, China, that the railway from Saigon to Mytho has been duly opened to traffic, with transhipment by steamers across to Vaico at Ben-Luc pending the repair of the bridge. A regular service of two trains per day is guaranteed. A postal service by this route has been established, and hopes are expressed that the opening of the line will familiarize the Annamites with railway enferprise.

Several large Russian traders doing considerable business in Central Asia have asked for a concession to enable them to construct a railway from Mikhailovsk to Tashkend within three years from the date of the concession. The length is 1240 versts and the cost is estimated at about 33,000,000 roubles. They ask for a 5 per cent state guarantee, and undertake to complete the railway to Merv within eighteen months. They also demand that the already completed Central Asiatic Railway, which is 217 versts in length, may be ceded to them for about 6,000,000, and likewise the ancient naval fleets and material.

The French railway returns are a striking proof of the dullness of trade and the falling off in the number of tourists. Up to Sept. 2 the receipts of the Northern Railway show a decrease of 4,139,000f., or about 25 per cent on last year's return, which itself showed a decrease as compared with the figures for previous years. The Lyons Railway has a decrease of 9,493,000f., or nearly 5 per cent; the Western a decrease of 2,340,000f., or 2½ per cent; the Eastern a decrease of 5,618,000f., or 6 per cent; the Orleans a decrease of 3,540,000f., or 1½ per cent, and the Southern a decrease of 618,000f., or 1½ per cent. A considerable sum, it is likely, will have to be paid by the State at the end of the year to make up the guaranteed dividends.

TRACK LAID.

Baltimore and Ohio-Tracklayers on the Baltimore and Philadelphia road building east have reached Chester, Pa., seven miles beyond the Delaware line, track having been laid last year through Delaware from the Maryland line, a distance of twenty-one miles. A temporary bridge has been erected over Chester Creek and construction trains run into the City of Chester. The grading between that place and the Philadelphia city line, ten miles, is about finished, and nothing remains but to lay the track and to erect bridges, the abutments of which are already completed.

Burlington and Missouri River—The branch from Republican, Neb., southwest to Oberlin, Kan., a distance of 78 miles, has been completed and opened for business. It penetrates a new and promising region and will doubtless develop a large cattle business for the Chicago, Burlington and Onincy system.

Minneapolis Sault Ste. Marie and Atlantic—This Wisconsin road has now been completed and opened to a station called End of Track, 68.4 miles east from Turtle Lake, and 22.7 miles beyond Lace, the terminus at the commencement of the year. As no further extension is expected this year, it appears that 1885 has not shown much progress in this enterprise which contemplates some 400 miles of road. The time table just issued shows that one train is run daily each way between Turtle Lake and Deer Tail, and that on Wednesdays and Saturdays only it runs between Deer Tail and End of Track.

HOW TO HANDLE A MOB.

Practical and Forcible Hints from Fitz John Porter.

North American Review. Upon whomsoever devolves the duty of suppression, let this be his first effort: Check at the very beginning; allow no tumultuous gatherings, permit no delay; a few stern, resolute words; if these be not heeded, then strike resolutely, boldly; let there be no hesitation; if necessary, take life at the outset. It will be more merciful to take one life then than to suffer the mob to take the lives of many, or be compelled to sacrifice the innocent with the guilty at the point of the bayonet, or in the discharge of musketry or cannon. But the necessity to take life will not arise unless there be inactivity and in decision at the outset on the part of the authorities.

Before the time shall come when it will be necessary to use musket ball or bayonet, the opportunity will be afforded to suppress the riot; perhaps at the sacrifice of a few proken heads, or by the imprisonment of some of its leaders.

In every large city, in fact in every city where a police force is employed, a perfect drill should prepare policemen to meet the exigencies arising from any tumultuous assemblage of the people; so that at a moment's warning, these conservators of the peace will be ready to act. and to act understandingly and promptly. It will be found that a few determined policemen, placed in the field at a moment's notice, will prove one of the best and most direct methods of quelling a mob. These, by skillful maneuvers, can take a mob in fiank, or in rear, or in front, if necessary, and so employ themselves and their clubs that almost before the mob would know what was impelling them they would be driven from the field of action. This drilling, advised to be used with policemen, can also be used to excellent advantage with the militia of every State, so that in case of emergency they can be used with as good effect as policemen. It has often been found in the history of the riots of this country that when the soldiery have been brought in the face of a mob, even the officers were so unacquainted with their duties as to evince the most ridiculous ignorance of what was required of them and their men in the exigency, and they and their troops have been driven ignominiously from the field. They would have known what to do without hesitation had they been in the face of an enemy; but surrounded as they were by a frantic mob, they failed—and for the lack of necessary drilling. where a police force is employed, a perfect drill should prepare policemen to meet the

How Wonderful!

THE LAMBTON WORM.

BY SIR CUTHBERT SHARPE.

Chicago Inter Ocean. The park and manor house of Lambton, belonging to a family of the same name, lie on the banks of the Wear, to the north of Lumley. The family is a very ancient one. much older, it is believed, than the twelfth century, to which date its pedigree extends. The old castle was dismantled in 1797, when a site was adopted for the present mansion on the north bank of the swiftly flowing Wear, in a situation of exceeding beauty The park also contains the ruins of a chapel, called Bridgeford, close to one of the bridges which span the Wear.

Long, long ago, some say about the foureenth century, the young heir of Lambton led a careless, profane life, regardless alike of his duties to God and man, and in particular neglecting to attend mass, that he might spend his Sunday mornings in fishng. One Sunday while thus engaged, having cast his line into the Wear many times without success, he vented his disappointment in curses loud and deep, to the great scandal of the servants and tenantry as they passed by to the chapel at Bridgeford. Soon after he felt something tug at his line, and trusting he had at last secured a fine fish, he exerted all his skill and strength to bring his prey to land. But what were his horror and dismay on finding fine fish, he exerted all his skill and strength to bring his prey to land. But what were his horror and dismay on finding that, instead of a fish, he had only caught a worm of most unsightly appearance. He hastily tore the thing from his hook and tung it into a well close by which is still known by the name of the Worm Well.

The young heir had scarcely thrown his line again into the stream, when a stranger of venerable appearance passing by, asked him what sport he had met with, to which he replied, "Why, truly, I think I have caught the devil himself. Look in and judge." The stranger looked and remarked that he had never seen the like of it before; that it resembled an eft, only it had nim holes on each side of its mouth, and, finally, that he thought it boded no good.

The worm remained unheeded in the well till it outgrew so confined a dwelling place. It then emerged and betook itself by day to the river, where it lay coiled round a rock in the middle of the stream, and by night to a neighboring hill, round whose base it would twine itself; while it continued to grow so fast that it soon could circle the hill three times. This eminence is still called the Worm Hill. It is oval in shape, on the north side of the Wear, and about a mile and a half from old Lambton Hall.

The monster now became the terror of the whole country side. It sucked the cows milk, worried the cattle, devoured the lambs and committed every sort of depredation on the helpless peasantry. Having laid waste the district on the north side of the river, it crossed the stream, and approached Lambton Hall, where the old lord was living alone and desolate, His son had repented of his evil life, and had gone to the wars in a distant country. Some authorities tell us he had embarked as a crusador for the Holy Land.

On hearing of their enemy's approach, the terrified household assembled in council. Much was said, but to little purpose, till the steward, a man of age and experience, advised that the large trough which stood in the courtyard should wiser man; returned to find the broad lands of his ancestors waste and desolate, his people oppressed and well nigh exterminated, his father sinking into the grave, overwhelmed with care and anxiety. He took to rest, we are told, till he had crossed the river and surveyed the worm as it lay coiled round the foot of the hill; then, hearing now its former opponents had failed, he look counsel in the matter from a sibyl or wise woman.

At first the sibyl did nothing but upbraid im for having brought this scourge upon is house and neighborhood; but when she erceived that he was indeed penitent and perceived that he was indeed penitent and desirous at any cost to remove the evil he had caused, she gave him her advice and instructions. He was to get his best suit of mail studded thickly with spear-heads, to put it on, and, thus armed, to take his stand on the rock in the middle of the river, there to meet his enemy, trusting the issue to Providence and his good sword. But she charged him before going to the encounter to take a vow that, if successful, he would slay the first living thing that met him on his way homeward. Should he fail to fulfill this vow she warned him that for nine generations no Lord of Lambton would die in rations no Lord of Lambton would die in

The heir, now a belted knight, made the vow in Bridgeford Chapel; he studded his armor with the sharpest spear heads, and, unsheathing his trusty sword, took his stand on the rock in the middle of the Wear. At the accustomed hour the worm uncoiled its "snakv twine" and wound its way toward the hall, crossing the river close by the rock on which the knight was standing, eager for the combat. He struck a violent blow on the monster's head as it passed, on which the creature, irritated and vexed, though apparently not injured, flung its tair around him as if to strangle him in its coils.

Now was seen the value of the sibyl's advice. The closer the worm wrapped him in its folds, the more deadly were its self-inflicted wounds, till at last the river ran crimson with its gore. Its strength thus diminished, the knight was able at last, with his good sword, to cut the serpent in two; The heir, now a belted knight, made the vow the worm, unable to reunite itself, was utterly destroyed.

During this long and desperate conflict the household of Lambton had shut themselves within doors to pray for their young lord, he having promised that when it was over he would, if conqueror, blow a blast on his bugle. This would assure his father of his safety, and warn them to let loose the favorite hound which they had destined as the sacrifice on the occasion, according to the sibyl's requirements and the young lord's vow. When, however, the bugle notes were heard within the hall the old man forget everything but his son's safety, and rushing out of doors ran to meet and embrace the hero.

The heir of Lambton was thunderstruck;

The heir of Lambton was thunderstruck; what could he do? It was impossible to lift his hand against his father; yet how else to fulfill his vow? In his perplexity he blew another blast; the hound was let loose; it bounded to its master; the sword, yet reeking with the monster's gore, was plunged into his breast, but all in vain. The vow was broken, the sibyl's prediction fulfilled, and the curse lay upon the house of Lambton for nine generations.

Now nine ascending generations would exactly reach to a certain Henry Lambton, Esq., M. P., and it was to that Henry Lambton that the old people of the neighborhood used to look with great curiosity, marveling whether the curse would "hold good to the end." He died in his carriage, crossing the new bridge of Lambton, on the 26th of June, 1761; and popular tradition is clear and unanimous in maintaining that during the period of the curse no lord of Lambton ever died in his bed. THEATRICAL SHOES.

Facts About the Footgear of Some Famous Actors and Actresses.

Correspondence of the Mineapolis Tribune Chancing to look up as I was strolling through Broadway, New York, the other day, I saw protruding from the second story of one of the business houses a show window filled with satin slippers of many colors, black and yellow buskins and sev eral pairs of turret boots. Over the window was painted the sign "Theatrical Shoes." Under the sign and behind the glass was an old lithograph of Adelaide Neilson. It almost made me start. For one does not often nowadays see lithographs of the beautiful actress, upon whom when in her prime death laid his hands, and her portrait brought up suddenly before me the graceful and elegant figure of Viola, the lithograph representing Miss Neilson in that Mounting the stairs, I entered the theatriral shoemaker's shop. There I found a greater profusion of the articles of footgear, which I had seen in the show window. A ouple of men were stitching away at leather of various colors, and a woman was sewing what appeared to be uppers on a sewing A man, who appeared to be the head of the concern, was at a desk making entries from a stack of letters in a book. I approached the counter, he closed the book, and advancing to meet me said with a strong German accent: "I subbose you is one of de amateurs, and want shoes for one of de blays of Shakespeare?"

"Do amateurs usually play Shakspeare!"

"Dey begin with him. Ven amateurs vich aave money get up a company, dey come lere and get up a full set of shoes for some Shakspeare play. But dey rarely get another set. Dey play Shakspeare once, and lever again."

Looking around the room, I noticed that the walls were adorned with lithographs of distinguished actors and actresses. Among them was a duplicate of that of Miss Neilson in the window. "Did you make shoes or her?" I asked, pointing to her portrait. "Ah, yes; poor, dear lady!" he exclaimed. "She was always so particular to get a neat, pretty shoe. You see, she often blay in the parts in which she dress up like de men, and so her feet dey showed. She's often sat on dat sofa. I made a dozen pair of shoes for her shoost before she started abroad, for de last time. Another of my customers for whom I shall never make shoes again—for, though he's living, he shoost as good as dead—vas John McCullough. He had a fine foot—not very small, and not too large, but shoost fitted to his size."

"I suppose," I said, "that it's part of a theatrical shoemaker's art to make women's feet appear smaller?"

"Vomen?" he said. "Vhy do you say only yomen? Let me tell you that men are as yain as yomen. I make the feet look smaller.

"Vomen?" he said. "Vhy do you say only vomen? Let me tell you that men are as vain as vomen. I make the feet look smaller for both. Don't ask me how, for dat is a se cret of de craft. Most people dinks de high heel doos it, but it's more dan dat. You must get de heel shoost so. I also makes people taller, Dere's Janaushek—I fill her up with cork and sawdust."

"Fill her up with cork and sawdust."
"Dat is de shoes of her. I make her two or dree inches higher dan she is."
"Have you measured the feet of many distinguished actresses and actors for shoes and boots?"
"Oh, year! Day, in the sawdust."

"Oh, yes! Dere is Mary Anderson—she gets all her shoes from me. She ordered dem even vile she has been abroad. She has a fine foot, like McCullough—I don't mean so big as Mr. McCullough—S—but shoost fitted to her figure. She is tall and large, and a small foot would look silly on her. Here is one of the shoes I make for her." He showed me a long, slim shoe, of white satin. "Den I make shoes for Minnie Palmer. Shoost now I got a letter from her, from Glasgow, for shoes. She has a very small foot. So has Lotta. Sadie Martinot, who is one of my customers, has a very who is one of my customers, has a very pretty foot. But de nicest, fattest foot is dat of Aimee. See always sends for me to take her measure in de morning, in her boudoir.

De little dog of hers always barks at me. Den, also, ven I vas making cheaper shoes, I vas often sent for to go into der ballet dressing room and measure de girls for de new piece."
"Wasn't there a rumpus when you en-

"What kind of a foot has she?"

"She has de English foot."

"Small or large?"

"Shoost de English foot."

"Is that a long, slim"—
"Shoost the English foot." I made a mental note to observe carefully Miss Coughlan's foot the next time I saw her act. I also ascertained from the shoemaker that he works for Edwin Booth and Barrett, both of whom he says have sharely fact. he works for Edwin Booth and Barrett, both of whom he says have shapely feet, Barrett's being the finer of the two. Prominent ballet dancers like Cavalazzi, Cornalba and De Rosa are among his customers, and as they use up sometimes two pairs of shoes a week it is an important branch of the trade. The feet of many prominent dancers have peculiarities in their shape, and hence have to be carefully made to order. A peculiarity of the shoes of most dancers is the box toe, which gives the shoe a stunted appearance. For circus performers shoes without any heels are made; for clog dancers shoes with wooden soles; for jig dancing, shoes with plates which rattle. As I was about to leave, the shoemaker detained me to tell me his experience with Tomaso Salvini. He said he had been engaged to do some work for that actor, and that the work had to be done in the actor's room, because he wore so many real and room, because he wore so many real and valuable jewels on his shoes.

"Didn't he pay you extra for such work?"

"No. He tried to get me to knock off a dollar here and fifty cents there."

After this glimpse at the weakness of a great man, I departed, fearful lest I should be disillusioned in regard to other popular horses.

The Art of "Shadowing." Chicago News.

"Shadowing," says a Chicago detective, is the most difficult and the most scientific work in my profession. In all of his great cases Allen Pinkerton depended mainly on what he learned by shadowing. If a man is well shadowed for two weeks so much can be discovered concerning his habits, his associates, his inclinations, his secret acts, in short, of his inner life, that almost a perfect short, of his inner life, that almost a perfect biography of him can be written. Every man does many characteristic things when he thinks he is alone that he never would do in company, and the 'shadow' learns a man's true character by witnessing his natural life, More people than you imagine have been 'shadowed,' for the information of both friends and enemies. Many curious, and sometimes suspicious, wives have their husbands 'shadowed,' and many a husband has locked up in his office desk a mirror of his wife's private life in the form of a 'shadow's' report. Nearly every man in Chicago prominent in business, politics, or religion, has been 'shadowed,' and there is somewhere filed away a document that would makes the eyes of the subject open could be read it.

somewhere filed away a document that would makes the eyes of the subject open could he read it.

"Every man connected with a bank, from the president down, is 'shadowed.' Large business firms get periodical reports on the private lives of trusted employes. I suppose Marshall Field can tell any of the heads of departments in his store whether they drink brandy or mead, smoke cigarettes or opium, play penny ante in a friend's parlor or faro in a gambling house.

"I know that the head of a well known detective agency in Chicago has been 'shadowed' by nearly every other agency in the city, and they all have his record.

"It is hard work to 'shadow' a man. You have to get up an hour earlier than he does in order to get your breakfast and lay for him at his home. You follow him to his office, to lunch, on his business rounds—everywhere. When he is on the street you never take your eyes off him, and I tell you this makes your head swim. You follow him home to supper and down town again in the evening. You note everybody he speaks with and every lady to whom he bows. You must stay with him till he goes to bed, and then write out your report before you get to sleep.

"Men are oftenest shadowed when they are in trouble, and they rush here and there, talk to scores of men, enter scores of places, and get up early and go to bed late. A good lively subject will lead the shadow a wild and merry dance, and two weeks of it will wear a good man out."

Players Reserved by the League and American Association. Washington Special President Young, of the National League, has sent out the reserve lists of the clubs of the National League and American Association. The lists include only the names of players who have been reserved for next year, and say nothing of the players who nave been released. In the list of men who have not been reserved are several old players, notably Shaffer, of the Athletics; McGinnis, of the St. Louis Browns; Quinn and Baker, of the St. Louis League team; Clinton and White, of the Cincinnatis; Gunning, Purcell and Poorman, of the Bostons: Nolan, of the Philadelphias; Meegan, of the Alleghenys; Hayes, of the Brooklyns; Maskrey, of the Louisvilles, and Crothers, of the Metropolitans. These men were all elegible to contract with clubs in either association after Oct. 20, but according to the new national agreement no club can sign any of these players at a salary of over $2000. Players who are now reserved can be released later, and the player released by a club can be approached by any club in the association of which his club was a member for ten days after he has received his release, and should any club in his association want his services then no club in the other association can approach him with a view to securing his services. This part of the agreement insures Buffalo's big four remaining in the league. It will be noticed that in the reserve lists that all the players who were on the black list for breaking the reserve rule have been sent back to the clubs that originally reserved them. Bradley goes back to the Athletics and Gleason to the Louisvilles. The "Big Four"—Brouthers, Rowe, White and Richardson—have been reserved by Buffalo, and this without reference to all past transactions on their part. President Young is authority for the statement that all the players named in the reserve lists will have either to play with the clubs reserving them or quit the profession. This statement covers cases like that of Dunlap and Radbourne, both of whom have said they would not play in St. Louis and Providence respectively, not even if the clubs of those cities reserved by the Providence and Dunlap by St. Louis, and they will play in those cities, says President Young, or not at all. The following is a full list of the players reserved by the clubs of the National League and the American Association for 1886, and it is safe to say that every player will play with the club reserving him:

Indian Wheat. Chicago News.

There are factors at present controlling wheat values which, in view of the present condition of the trade, Chicago operators would do well to take account of. One of the principal of these some two or three years ago the Daily News called attention to. It is the effect which the marked decline can now obtain gold value in Europe for his purchases in India made on the face value of the silver rupee.

A late London Standard describes as in actual operation this stimulation of Indian exports which we long since predicted. It shows that the fall in the value of silver acts as a bounty on the export of Indian wheat, and so materially helps to depress prices in England. The international exchange value England. The international exchange value of the rupee, which circulates in India at its full nominal value of 2 shilling sterling, is now only I shilling and 6 pence. Consequently the shipper of Indian wheat can buy 2 shilling's worth of that grain in India, at Indian market prices, for I shilling and 6 pence. This gives him a bonus of 25 per cent on every quarter of wheat he ships to England, and enables him to send wheat to be sold there at the current low prices, which he would not be able to do if the rupee were worth 2 shillings sterling in England, as it practically is in India. It is to be noted that the Indian ryot pays rent, interest, taxes, and other expenses in rupees of full nominal value, and he is satisfied if he sells his wheat on that basis. On the other hand, the American, Russian, or German farmer has no such bonus as the Indian ryot in his favor, and so is placed at a marked disadvantage as a seller.

Does not this condition of the wheat trade in the English markets at least partly account for the falling off in our exports of wheat, the decline in which last month was 60 per cent compared with September of last year? of the rupee, which circulates in India at

COMMERCIAL.

DALLAS, Oct. 26 .- The threatening weather, together with the material relaxation that always succeeds a busy week, brought about a sluggishness to-day, which was expected. Nevertheless, trade in some lines was good. There was little doing in grain except the fill ing of orders from eastern points for seed wheat and oats. Louisiana farmers, especially those of Caddo Parish, look to Dallas for supplies in the last mentioned line.

New lumber quotations will be given in the issue following this one. Dealers have been divided for some months, but are about to agree on a fixed rate throughout.

The liquor market has become more settled into the late disruption of the need. There is since the late disruption of the pool. There is little change to note in prices. Business is active, especially in rye whiskies. Orders to-day were chiefly from New Mexico. Poultry is inclined to lower prices on account of unusually heavy receipts. Owing to strong buying for the northern account eggs are a little higher, From the present outlook the most marked changes that will occur in our subsequent re-ports will be as to liquor, lumber and dry goods. goods.

Dallas machinery dealers have booked orders for two complete outfits for steam flour mills, designed for new western towns, since last week.

designed for new western towns, since last week.

The receipts of wool at this point for the week ended Saturday are under the receipts for the corresponding week last year, and the quality received here lately is of a rather low grade. The price quoted is based upon actual transactions. It is lower than the price quoted at Abilene or at San Antonio. The former market has had an unusually handsome season in wool. Agents of the heaviest buyers thought proper this year to locate themselves immediately at the pens, and hence the falling off. The coarse wool that found its way here during the past few days was well paid for at 16 cents. The disposition to buy wool and cotton from first hands is a growing tendency with manufacturers.

COTTON MARKETS.

GALVESTON, Oct. 26.—General business continues to improve here, and the large orders received from the interior of the State show that Texas is prospering. A large commission house here states that last week's receipts were 25 per cent larger than during any pre vious week since they have been in business. Merchants report that country orders are in creasing every week, and some report a daily increase of orders, all of which shows a very prosperous state of affairs in the interior of Texas. There is no lack of money here seeking investment. It is reported on reliable authority that a building and loan association in this city has $150,000 to place on local real estate at not exceeding 8 per cent, but there are no offers. A large loan was made on local real estate last week for five years at the full valua-tion, for 6 per cent. The documents are here to prove these statements. A conservative business man estimates that Galveston has $12,000,000 owing to her, mainly for goods shipped to the interior points of Texas.

The stock market this morning was irregular at the opening. The tone was firm and in the first half hour, on a good buying price, advanced % to 1% per cent, the most strength being displayed by several of the low price specialties. In the hour to 11:30, however, there was a heavy selling of Lake Shore and a few other of the leading stocks, causing the whole list to weaken and break to the lowest figures in most cases. The decline ranged from ½ to 2 per cent, the latter in the stock named. In the next half hour to noon a fractional rally took place and prices at midday showed a net decline for the morning in all but a few of the inactive stocks of % to 1% per cent. The sales this morning amounted to 247,000 shares. The selling was resumed about 1 o'clock and continued with more or less vigor throughout the afternoon. Lake Shore, Canada Southern, Delaware, Hudson and Jersey Central were the features of the afternoon trading. Most of the business was in these stocks. They were heavily pressed for sale throughout and recorded marked declines. No reasons could be assigned for the selling of these stocks. The closing figures were within a fraction of the lowest of the day. The deline ranged from ½ to 2% per cent and was participated in by all but a few stocks. The specialties were irregular, some of them recording wide fluctuations. The sales aggregated 426,448 shares.

CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Wheat was very nervous all day, and fluctuations have been rapid and often through no apparent cause. Immerse CHICAGO, Oct. 26.—Wheat was very nervous all day, and fluctuations have been rapid and often through no apparent cause. Immense quantities of short wheat have been covered. The feeling that the visible supply will not snow so large an increase as has been looked for, and that receipts will now fall off somewhat, had much to do with this, while the warlike tone of the newspaper dispatches helped sustain the bull feeling. Most of the outside orders were to buy wheat, and the country has taken on a good deal during the day. No improvement in the export demand has taken place. Receipts at western points for the day were 680,000 bu. New York telegraphs that their visible supply will show an increase of 1,400,000 bu, which will make curs not much over 20,000,000 bu. The market closed very nervous and unsettled, with the crowd ready to follow any lead that may be presented.

The rank and file of Democrats get along very well with the average human-nature Republican. We can live side by side and speak to each other, and rather take pleasure in each other's up and downs. But the set of men who appear to be operating President Cleveland have always been distinguished for their incivility, want of candor and chivalry and love of insulting language and personalities. I refer mainly to their organs. They divide all mankind into two classes—saints and devils. There is no middle ground for them at all. They have generally held Democrats to belong to the rank of devils unless they can occasionally get one to use for their revenges on their political friends. Now this feeling is almost universal among the working Democrats of the State of New York, and Hill is going to get the benefit of it in an unexampled vote. He stands as the type of unchanging, regular party man. The President does not seem to have openly denounced him, but over the President's shoulder he is jeered at and poked up and made to appear the exact opposite of Mr. Cleveland. One is pictured as a saint for being less of a Democrat, and the other is a sinner for being more of one." dor and chivalry and love of insulting lan-

Wants a New Party. New York Staats-Zeitung.

New York Staats-Zeitung.

In the present case the control of the Democratic party by its worst elements is clearly established, without any doubt, and it is also clear that as regards our city the election of Hill would be a new victory for Tammany and Irving Hall. The Independent Democrats will, there fore, do all they conscientiously can to bring about the defeat of Hill. * * * As regards the compliment paid to the Staats-Zeitung in the article published by Harper's Weekly, we take occasion to remark that the Staats-Zeitung is not a Democratic but an entirely independent journal. We prefer the Democratic party in its relations to the tariff question, the liquor question and in its greater freedom from monopolies, but in regard to the currency question it is more objectionable than the Republican party. On the question of civil service we are prepared to give it a hard fight, and we cannot say that it has a general policy with which we can identify ourselves. We believe that the break in the Democratic party will come during Cleveland's administration, and it seems to us that the President's forced confession of loyalty can not defer it. We believe in the necessity of reorganizing for a new party and we felt for quite a time that we were no longer at home in the Democratic party.

THE CITY.

No one is authorized to make any purchases for our account or have work performed for any department of our establishment without the written order from the business manager, and these orders should invariably accompany monthly statements rendered at the close of each A. To the Public.

It is the desire of the management of THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS to have the paper on sale, in sufficient quantities to supply the demand, on all railway trains running into or connecting with trains to and from Dallas. The traveling public are respectfully requested to bear this fact in mind and to report to the business department any failure on their part in being able to purchase copies of the paper in the manner indicated, giving date, train and other particulars.

To City Subscribers.

We beg to announce that the failure of our city circulator to call upon a number of citizens for their subscriptions is not due to oversight, but is the result of his finding it necessary, for the time being, to devote his entire time and attention to the systematizing of the routes, and the supervision of his carriers, to insure the prompt delivery of the paper each morning to the subscribers already obtained This work has prevented him from making a thorough canvass of the city. He expects, however, to resume this canvass this morning and continue daily until every section of the city has been visited. In the meantime be pleased to send names and addresses to the counting room, where they will receive prompt attention. Subscribers failing to receive their papers with regularity and promptitude will please notify us.

SPECIAL MAIL SERVICE.

Observations of a Staff Correspondent Along the Route.

Reminiscences of the Special Train Service in South Texas-Meeting the Needs of North Texas.

Yesterday marked the first step in the move forward taken by The News to place its daily issue in the hands of its Fort Worth subscribers and in the hands of its patrons along the various lines of railroads concentering at that important point.

THE NEWS' special mail service train for Colorado City left the Texas and Pacific passenger depot promptly at 5:55 a.m. yesterday. It consisted of two passenger coaches, a baggage and express car. Long streamers of white duck, extending along the sides of the coaches, displayed in large letters, a foot and a half long, the sen-

The News Special Train.

This was the plain black and white of it. For when it became known to THE NEWS management that in order to make a sure daily connection with the several lines leaving Fort Worth north, west and south in the early morning, was necessary, the Texas and Pacific authorities were consulted, and by an arrangement involving considerable expense to The NEWS alone, the former agreed to extend the run of their Fort Worth-Colorado train to Dallas. Every morning, therefore, this train will leave for Colorado City, THE NEWS assuming the expense of the run between Dallas and Fort Worth. Yesterday the first News special mail service train was run to Colorado City, making connections at Fort Worth with the lines centering there. About thirty-five passengers took advantage of the opportunity presented of making close connection, and went over from ing close connection, and went over from Dallas on the new train, as did also The News and other Dallas papers, it being no part of The News' programme to exclude any publication from the eyes of those who desire to see it. It prefers, in a business like way, to extend to its readers the amplest opportunities for criticism and comparison with other newspaper applicants for public favor, fully assured that the popularity and success of a daily paper will be great or inconsiderable only according to the degree in which it fulfils all and EVERY REQUIREMENT of the present high standard of journalism. The run of the first News special mail service train to Fort Worth was almost barren of incident. At Grand Prairie a disabled freight on the main track, which the passenger in order to pass had to push over on the siding, caused a delay of about fifteen minutes. But this loss was made up by the time Handley was reached. Here a California east bound express being be-ind time. At Eagle Ford, Grand Prairie, Arlington At Eagle Ford, Grand Fraine, Arington and Handley large crowds were on the platform to witness the manifestation of The News' enterprise in North Texas. As the train bowled into the Missouri Pacific depot at Fort Worth a large crowd of citizens were congregated to view it, and many favorable comments on the pluck and push of The News were indulged in.

THE SPECIAL MAIL SERVICE TRAIN

IN LINE WITH ITS ENTERPRISE. The experience and enterprise of THE News in running a special mail service train to obviate the delays which unfavorable railroad schedules sometimes cause is no new one. It is no novice in this field of endeavor, and has shown itself in the past, as it shall continue to do in the future, no regarder of expense when the outlay in-curred has for its object the placing before its readers the freshest news and editorial its readers the freshest news and editorial topics of the day.

THE GALVESTON NEWS management had their first experience in running a "special" in 1879 between Galveston and Houston. The Galveston, Houston and Henderson Road had during the early part of that year put on an early train for Houston, leaving Galveston at 5 o'clock in the morning. This train took THE NEWS into Houston a few minutes after 7 o'clock each morning, and hundreds of its readers received it in time became a welcome visitor in households where it was formerly rarely seen. A decided increase in the subscription list was the result. A conflict between the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Railroad and the Houston and Texas Central Railroad resulted in breaking connection at Houston readwhich left The News and its Houston readers in somewhat of a dilemma; but The News management was equal to the emergency, and immediately rented from the Texas and New Orleans Co. a small steam car that they had for running short distances along the line. This liliputian locomotive was used for only a short time, as an order which had been given M. M. Bucke & Co., of St. Louis, for a somewhat similar, though much seperior, steam car, was quickly filled, and thus were the copies of The News carried

EVERY MORNING BRIGHT AND EARLY to Houston by its own locomotive. This was run until the Galveston, Houston and Henderson Co. put on an early train for the second time, when it was laid up and eventually sold for a small amount.

It may not be out of place to relate here what the running of that little engine accomplished in one particular instance. At that time the International and Great Northern trains arrived at Houston in the morning at 7 o'clock. A short time before the arrival of the train THE NEWS car had reached the Union Depot, and was then lying on the Galveston track. The newsboys were shouting, "Here's THE GALVESTON NEWS of this morning," and one of them asked Mr. W. D.

morning," and one of them asked Mr. W. D. Cleveland, who had just stepped from the train, if he wanted that morning's News.
Mr. Cleveland not being aware that The News sent its own special car to Houston, thought the boy wished to sell him a paper of the day before, and told him so.

The boy directed his attention to the date of the paper. When Mr. Cleveland asked him how it had been brought to Houston, the boy answered "by The News special car," and pointed out where it was then standing. While they were talking Dave Ryan, who had charge of the special, walked toward them, and Mr. Cleveland asked him if what the boy had told him, relating to the car, was correct.

Cleveland asked him if what the boy had told him, relating to the car, was correct.

Mr. Ryan answered in the affirmative.

"Well," said Mr. C., "if I did not feel that whatever money I may have to spend for advertising should be given to a Houston paper, I would certainly advertise in The News for the energy it displays in reaching its readers." This was a compliment, indeed, from such a man, as throughout the entire State W. D. Cleveland is recognized as one of the foremost business men within as one of the foremost business men within its borders.

But his good opinion of THE NEWS did not cease there. Not many weeks afterward he concluded that he would try THE NEWS as an advertising medium, although it was published in another city than

HIS OWN MUCH LOVED HOUSTON. Six inches of space was taken on the first page of The Daily and Weekly News, and the advertisement duly appeared. Mark the result. Six weeks after its first insertion Mr. Cleveland wrote The News that he had, through that advertisement, received three orders that gave him a profit sufficiently large to pay for its insertion for a year, and so well pleased was he with the investment that it was probable so long as he would remain in business his advertisement should meet the eye of every reader of THE NEWS, and it probably has, as it has been in every day since.

Some time last year the Houston Post at that time stopped publication, leaving that.

Some time last year the Houston Post at that time stopped publication, leaving that city without a morning paper. The News alone could supply the want felt, and as there was no early train then leaving Galveston, a special train was arranged for with the Missouri Pacific Co., and from that time to the present The News has been delivered in Houston every morning before 6 o'clock with scarcely a single exception. How much the good people of that city appreciate the enterprise is told best by the success it has met with, and, so far as known The News is the only newspaper in the world that runs its special train every day in the year. day in the year.

The Terry Case.

Thomas Terry was brought here and jailed at a late hour Sunday night by United States officials, who arrested him near Honey Grove, in Fannin County, on the charges of forging a signature to a postoffice order, of obtaining a letter containing a money order at the Honey Grove postoffice, and obtaining money under false pretenses, all of which are legally deducible from one alleged offense embraced in the following piece of fense embraced in the following piece of history furnished a News reporter by the government officials: They say that a year ago last September Terry, finding himself hard up at Honey Grove, resorted to the following expedient to raise funds: He had had a friend named Charley Plum, whose father, well-to-do, resided in Muscatine, Ia. He addressed a letter to Mr. Plum, as if coming from his son, informing him that he was sick, and asking for a remittance of $10 to bring him home. The father sent a money order for $50, and Terry took it to the postoffice, but was informed by the postmaster that it having been drawn on Plum, the latter would have to appear in person. The government charges that he saw his way out of this difficulty by signing Plum's name to the order and getting a man named Spivey to cash it and turn it over to him. Terry then went to Missouri, and, after remaining there for nearly a year, returned to Fannin County. In the meantime Mr. Plum, of Muscatine, having failed to hear from his son, wrote the Honey Grove postmaster, making inquiry of his whereabouts, with the effect of awakening the suspicion of the authorities, and finally leading to the arrest of Terry, Col. Norton, the well known mail agent, having worked up the case. Terry's examining trial is set for next Thurday. history furnished a News reporter by the up the case. Terr for next Thurday.

Recovery of Youth. The addition to the St. Louis Dime Museum, elsewhere referred to in the local col umns of THE NEWS, is equaled by a case of rejuvenation reported from White Rock Creek, about four miles east of the city. The prodigy is a colored woman, known as Aunt Polly Wilkerson, over whose head 112 summers have rolled without her ever ironing the shirt-cuffs of George Washington. At the expiration of her first century her eyes gave out, and years before she had parted with her teeth, her strength, and, to some extent, her mind. In this condition she lay a helpless wreck, waiting till the good Lord would take her in the ivory boat that floats on the golden sea. But this is an age of wonders, and Aunt Polly woke up about a week ago to find her sight restored, a new set of teeth in the act of sprouting and new strength re-stored to her worn out members. The gen-tleman who reports the case says that the negroes in the community are very much exercised about it, and are divided in their theories, some imagining that she is voudoued, while the religious sort attribute the wonder to camp meeting elixir. He, as may be supposed, is as much in the dark as they. The old woman, he says, is seemingly anioving the golden happy thoughts. ingly enjoying the golden happy thoughts of childhood, and has lost sight of the memories of a life time; in fact, is as frisky as a little negro baby, and seems to be a wonderful instance of the complete recovery of Amusement Notes.

The only attraction, and a good one, at the Opera-house this week will be the "Professor," a farcical comedy of the recent type. The chief characters will be sustained by Mr. Barrows and Miss Cheatham, the latter a charming debutante who has already achieved fame for herself as an actress and vocalist. The "Professor" will Friday and Saturday evenings.

The "Mikado" is coming, with the promise of a splendid cast, under Mr. Ford's man-of a splendid cast, under Mr. Ford's management. The "Mikado" is the joint effort of Gilbert and Sullivan, of "Pinafore" fame, and is undoubtedly a complete musical and comedy success.

Much interest is manifested in the early production at St. Louis of Gounod's "Mors et Vita," the last and grandest of the mæs tro's productions. The Globe-Democrat, with its customary enterprise, publishes the tro's productions. The Globe-Democrat, with its customary enterprise, publishes the music and words of the soprano solo, "Felix Culpa." The music is sombre and partakes of the gloomiest of Verdi's moods, but there is a wealth of melody and sublimity of conception in the extract published which promise a complete success for the great work, now offered for the first time to an American public.

At 9 o'clock, the moderator, Rev. Mr. Bloys, called the synod to order. Half an hour was spent in devotional exercises.

Rev. Dr. Little presented his annual report. This shows encouraging results from the labors of the past year. Remarks were made by a number of the members of the synod expressing a kind appreciation of Mr. Little's work. The Doctor was unani mously re-elected as superintendent of the synod's work for another year.

synod's work for another year.

By invitation Rev. W. B. Rankin, agent of American Bible Society, addressed the synod in reference to the Bible work in this and foreign lands. Resolutions were passed indorsing the work of the American Bible Society, and commending it to the liberality of the churches and all Christian people.

The annual report was received from the Women's Synodical Society, which showed encouraging advancement in the year's ork.

This society now consists of sixteen auxiliary societies in this State, which during the year contributed near $1500 to the cause of missions.

After reading and correcting the minutes of the four days' session, the synod adjourned to meet the fourth Thursday of next October at Brownwood.

A Living Curiosity.

Among the living curiosities at a St. Louis dime museum is the original and only Belle Boyd, who is posing this week as an extraordinary attraction. The prints on the wall represent the Dallas heroine as a dashing young girl, with abbreviated skirts and a huge head gear in the shape of a Mexican sombrero. She holds in her anxious clasp a death dealing gun, and seems on the qui vive for real game. The advertisement further recites that "Belle Boyd, the Confederate Spy, will at each performance relate her thrilling hairbreadth escapes while act-ing as spy for the most famous Generals of the Confederate army during the rebellion."

Attached.

Attachments were run yesterday in the District Court on Mr. A. Dysterbach's stock of groceries by Messrs. Schneider & Davis for $8123 90, and Messrs. T. L. Marsalis & Co. for $750. The attached house has been a popular one, and is the recipient of much sincere sympathy in its present troubles, which it is hoped it may be able to tide over

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

He said; "While Sidney went for Dreyfuss I had a picnic with Hurst, the finest I ever had in my life. They used crowbars, mallets and clubs, but I got Mr. Hurst's head in chancery and punched him. I'll tell you 'twas fun."

Mr. Sidney Reinhardt, on his part, said: "The disturbance was occasioned through a party of six men, who had come from Arlington to purchase a bill of goods, They first went to Messrs. Hurst & Dreyfuss, who lost the sale. They then came to us, and we consummated a sale aggregating $260. Of course we desired to treat them pleasantly, so we invited them to dinner. Passing by Messrs. Hurst & Dreyfuss' store, Mr. Hurst invited them in. They said: 'Very much obliged; we have already made our purchase.' He answered, 'You have purchased from a lot of stinking thieves.' I could not stand it. I went to dinner, ate it, came back and asked Mr. Dreyfuss if Mr. Hurst was in. He said he was not. I merely wanted a retraction of the insult; so I requested him to tell Mr. Hurst to come down to the store and see me. If he didn't I would, I said, come and see him. I went again in company with Mr. Burkenrood for the purpose of cowhiding Hurst, but he was not in. I went a third time, Mr. Burkenrood accompanying me, and I saw him. I said I would prefer if he would come out on the sidewalk. I made no bones of it, telling him I had come to get satisfaction for the open insult he had offered. Mr. Hurst snapped his finger, and lo! and behold! a policeman came out from behind the counter. I then said, 'Mr. Hurst, I am very sorry; but I will see you some time.' Mr. Hurst addressed the policeman, saying, 'Arrest those gentlemen; they are trespassers.' The policeman told us we were arrested, and we said, 'Very well, sir.' While under arrest Mr. Dreyfuss caught Mr. Burkenrood then made a lick at him. Mr. Dreyfuss pulled a club out of his pocket, but he struck the policeman on the arm by mistake. The fuss was then general. Mr. Burkenrood got Mr. Hurst's head in chancery, forced his tongue out and pounded him good."

I remained there a while and then started off, telling them that I was, off my beat and did not see any occasion for me to remain there any longer. After I started one of them came to the door and called me back. I went back and found young Mr. Reinhardt and Mr. Burkenrood in the house. They were wanting Messrs. Hurst and Dreyfuss to go out on the sidewalk and have a fight out there. Mr. Hurst or Dreyfuss—I do not know which—asked me to arrest the gentlemen, and one of Mr. Reinhardt's men said, 'yes, arrest us.' Said I, 'come along, gentlemen.' The other men then seemed to come from the counter and one of them made a break on the prisoners. Then there was a general fuss, and as fast as I separated one pair I had to go for the other. The man with the club got struck with a whip, and he (Mr. Dreyfuss) struck several licks with a club. He was full of game and fought like a badger. I got two heavy licks on my arm, trying to separate them. Finally, with the calaboose; two marching in front of me and two behind me. They were let out on their own recognizance
