An Attempt to Kill Guiteau.

A New York Times' Washington special of the 12th says another attempt was made last night to kill the assassin Guiteau. It was decided, a few days ago, among the soldiers, that he should be shot if he put his head at the window so that it could seen from the outside. John A. Mason, Company B, Second Artillery, was the man selected to do the shooting. Last evening, when the day guard was being relieved it was noticed that Mason was fumbling with the lock of his gun. The postoffices at Niegoldstown and When the wagon containing the guard reached the jail Mason pushed forward and reached a small hillock, raised his gun to his shoulder, took steady aim at Guiteau's window and fired. Mason said to the commanding officer, "I have tried to kill that dirty loafer in there; here is my gun and bayonet; take me in charge." There was much excitement about the jail. Guiteau was found in his cell on knees. "Do they want to murder me?" he asked. The warden assured him he had nothing to fear. "But I've been shot at," said the prisoner. "I was standing at the window when one of those soldiers fired at me. The ball passed by my ear, and went through my coat hanging up there, and tore in pieces a photograph of
