Texas Tech regents Monday raised the possibility of a tax increase as an additional source of revenue to fill the predicted first 10-year operating deficit of $47 million for the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Regent chairman Dr. Judson Williams said, "If it means a tax increase, now is the time to talk about it."

But Tuesday, Lubbock County commissioners—who have budgetary control over the hospital district—reacted unanimously with a "never" to the idea of a tax increase for the financially troubled teaching hospital.

Commissioners noted that the current 75-cent per $100 valuation tax rate is the statutory limit set by the Texas Legislature in creating the hospital district.

Tech regents were presented with the Caraway report at their Monday meeting. That report paints a cloudy financial picture for the successful operation of the hospital.

Williams said the two big problem areas in the report that make the financial future of the hospital so grim are the estimated percentage of occupancy and the estimated collection ratio on inpatient services. Williams called these two problems "vital areas that must be worked out."

Max Caraway—who was hired by the regents and the hospital district to forecast the financial future of the hospital—also had more bad news.

When regent Clint Formby asked if the hospital can open as scheduled in September of next year, Caraway's answer was, "No, I don't think so."

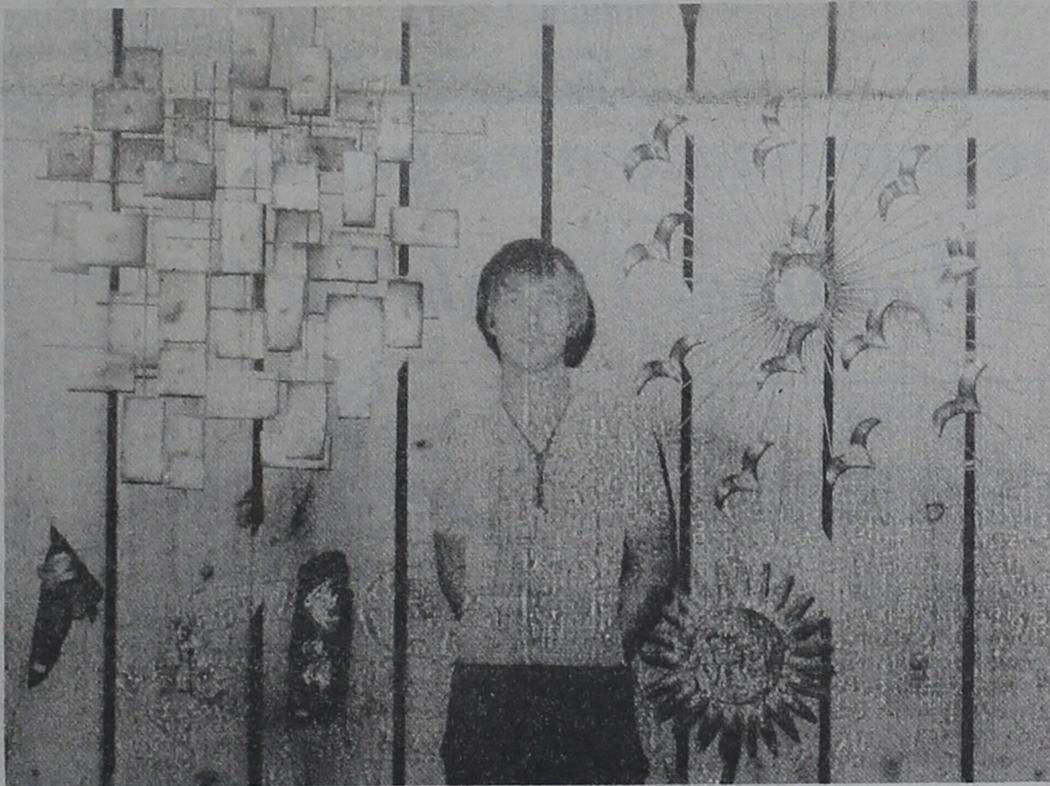

Medical school vice president Dr. Richard Lockwood said, "The hospital opening date is essential to the med school. The date effects our plans to develop teaching programs and we want to get active as soon as possible."

Regent J. Fred Bucy said that "the opening date needs as much study as we've had so far on the financial situation. Tech is a part of the problem because of some monkey shines that have been going on."

Tech President Dr. Cecil Mackey displayed a bit of temper

Ropes Artist Expresses Himself in Metal Sculptures

by Mary Alice Robbins

When Steve Kimberlin looks around at his environment, his mind is busy envisioning how Nature's creations will look as metal sculptures.

Birds, tree and plants—all have captured the young Ropesville artist's interest and have been transformed into metallic art works. He even builds metal cotton plants complete with cotton bolls.

Kimberlin exhibited a large number of his metal sculptures during an art show staged last week at South Plains Mall in Lubbock. Sculptures ranging from abstract works to realistic creations were featured in his display.

A 1971 graduate of Ropesville High School, Kimberlin first became interested in metal sculpture about four years ago. Some friends were working on the welded art form, and Kimberlin decided to try his own hand with the torch.

One of Kimberlin's primary goals is to keep his metal sculptures from being copies of other artists' work. "I get ideas from other people, but I don't copy," he said.

Although he must cater to public tastes somewhat, the Ropesville man hopes to reach people with some of his own design ideas.

Kimberlin uses a variety of metals in his work—chiefly stainless steel, steel, brass and copper. Stainless steel is the hardest to work on, he said, because the metal scars easily and allows no chance for even a slight error. When working with any of the metals, Kimberlin takes pains not to get any fingerprints on the surfaces—they always show on the completed art piece.

Most of Kimberlin's work is done in a small workshop in Ropesville. Some of his happiest moments are spent at his workbench, welding the metal pieces into works of art.

Kimberlin's chief helper is his wife, Debbie, who spends her spare time cutting out the metal forms. "I also give him suggestions," she said.

Between now and Christmas, both Kimberlin and his wife will be busy readying sculptures for art shows. A lot of late nights are in store for the young couple, who predicted they will participate in one or two shows a week in the next two months.

But Kimberlin doesn't mind the hard work because the metal sculptures provide him a means of self expression. And sculpting is more fun than a 9-5 job, the artist added.

West Texas Chamber of Commerce Survey Shows Ford Favored

West Texas Chamber of Commerce President W.H. (Bill) Collins of Midland announced this week at the WTCC mid-year meeting in Brownwood that a West Texas Chamber of Commerce mail survey of its membership shows Ford favored by better than ten to one margin.

In a mail survey of the WTCC membership that was mailed Oct. 13 and based upon a return of 27.6 per cent as of Tuesday, the presidential voting intentions showed Ford receiving 88.6 per cent, Carter 9.8 per cent, undecided 0.6 per cent, other candidates 0.6 per cent and only 0.3 per cent not going to vote.

When asked to comment upon the survey, J. Fike Godfrey, WTCC executive vice president, said, "We were surprised by the lopsided results, but the real reason for the survey will be achieved when the final breakdown of actual votes by West Texas counties and demographic affects can be compared with the survey results. These comparisons will enable the WTCC to adjust future surveys for county and demographic affects."

A portrait painting workshop will be taught by Rosie Alford Nov. 1-4. The class, which is offered for all levels, will meet from 9:30 a.m.-noon and 1 p.m.-3:30 p.m. Cost of the 20-hour course is $30.

Paul Milosevich will teach landscape and portraiture in oils from Nov. 1-3 and Nov. 8-10. The 18-hour class meets from 7 p.m.-10 p.m. and costs $27.

All classes meet at Municipal Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University Ave. Call 762-6411, Ext. 363, for more information.

"Returns will continue to come in and indications are that this will be a record number of returns for any WTCC survey. Late returns are not expected to materially change the results," Godfrey added.

Commissioners Take Steps To Solve Health Problems

Lubbock County Commissioners took steps Tuesday to assure enforcement of the county's private sewage facilities will be an ongoing program.

Enforcement of the sewage regulations has been carried on by personnel at the Lubbock City-County Health Department. But the recent dissolution of the city-county joint health service threatened to disrupt the regulatory program.

Tuesday, commissioners authorized County Judge Rod Shaw to write the Texas Department of Health Resources, requesting permission to utilize the services of the state-employed engineer assigned to the local health unit to assist with the septic tank regulation program.

Commissioners also okayed a job description for a county sanitarian to oversee enforcement of the private sewage regulations and other environmental health programs. The sanitarian may be called on to run the county's vector control program and inspection of retail food establishments in the rural areas.

Shaw was authorized to advertise for applicants for the sanitarian's post. Although commissioners discussed the possibility of setting the sanitarian's salary between $11,000-$13,000, Commissioner Arch Lamb recommended the salary be left open for negotiation.

Commissioners plan to meet with applicants for the sanitarian's job at their Nov. 8 meeting.

In other business, Lamb cited an increase in the dumping of trash on county roads. "It's a very expensive process to go around and pick it up," he said, noting that the trash problem also can cause a health hazard.

"I think legally we could prosecute someone for dumping trash," Lamb told fellow commissioners. The biggest problem, he said, is getting testimony that would assure conviction.

Commissioner Les Derrick noted that dumping trash on county roads is a violation of state law. Under state law, a conviction for dumping trash along a state highway carries a fine of from $10-$200.

Lamb suggested that Shaw write a letter to Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin requesting the prosecution of any individual found throwing trash on roads in the county.

FRENCH ONION SOUP GRATINEE

French Onion Soup Gratinee is a flavorful potage with a crust of bread and a sprinkling of cheese. Brasseries and restaurants in Paris are filled to the brim with late-night diners who enjoy a crock of onion soup to end an evening of theater or boutique shopping.

The French Onion Soup Gratinee shown here is made by sauteing golden onion rings in peanut oil then adding a seasoned beef broth. Before serving the soup is topped with slices of crusty French bread and grated Swiss cheese and broiled until the cheese is browned.

Both French and American cooks favor peanut oil for cooking. It is the lightest of the polyunsaturated cooking oils and its delicate taste enhances the flavors of other recipe ingredients.

FRENCH ONION SOUP GRATINEE

- 6 tablespoons Planters Peanut Oil
- 7 cups thinly sliced onions
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 3 cans (10 1/2-ounces each) beef bouillon diluted and heated

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 12-16 thick slices French bread
- Planters Peanut Oil
- 1 clove garlic, halved lengthwise
- 1 cup grated Swiss cheese

Heat 6 tablespoons peanut oil over moderate heat in Dutch oven or saucepot. Add onion. Saute until golden brown. Sprinkle flour over onions and cook, stirring for another 30 to 40 minutes. Taste for seasoning. Add salt and pepper if desired.

Arrange bread slices in a single layer on baking sheet. Bake at 325°F. for 15 minutes. Brush lightly with oil on both sides, turn and bake for an additional 15 minutes. Rub each slice with garlic and set aside.

To serve, place soup in individual ovenproof soup bowls or tureen. Top with bread slices and grated cheese. Bake at 375°F. for 10 to 20 minutes, until cheese is melted. Place under broiler until cheese is browned. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Can we afford four more years without effective leadership?

There is a critical decision to be made on November 2nd. It goes far beyond the question of which Presidential candidate can govern with integrity and honesty. We must determine which candidate has the ability and strength to lead our country out of economic chaos, and the vision to see that all Americans—not just the powerful and influential—have a better future.

During the past two years, the middle class has paid far too dear a price for a President lacking that ability.

Since Gerald Ford took office, the unemployment rate has risen 50%, from 5.5% or 5 million people, to 7.9% or 7-1/2 million jobless Americans.

Today's inflation rate of 6% is higher than it was at any time between the Korean War and the inauguration of Richard Nixon.

The 1968 food dollar is now worth 57¢.

Mr. Ford's budget will account for the largest single deficit and more than 1/3 of the public debt incurred during our entire 200-year history.

Real GNP has actually declined during each of Gerald Ford's two years in office.

And who is most affected by these distressing statistics? Not the Washington establishment, or the economic elite courted by the Republicans. The burden falls on the person who can least afford it: the average American.

Jimmy Carter means to change all that. As President, he will make government responsive to your needs.

Tax Reform: "The average family in this country actually pays a higher proportion of their income in taxes than the average family that makes more than a million dollars a year. That's disgraceful. We need to move toward a truly progressive and simplified tax system, with reduced tax rates for the average American."

Economy: "We'll never have a balanced budget nor an end to the inflationary problems as long as we have 7-1/2 million people out of work. Employment needs to be the major thrust of the whole domestic policy of our government."

Efficiency in Government: "We now have in the federal government the most bloated, confused, wasteful bureaucracy ever created. There's no way to get an answer out of Washington and no way to understand what's going on there. We need to reorganize completely the executive branch of government, making it fair, efficient, effective, and responsive to our people's needs."

Housing: "No government that cared about our neighborhoods would stack the tax deck against them. A landlord can let a building run down and make a good living on tax breaks. But when a home owner spends a little hard-earned money fixing up his home, the assessor raises his taxes. And the FHA no longer cares about families getting started in their own homes. I intend to restore the FHA to the time when, for a down payment, a family could get a mortgage which the government would insure."

Health Care: "We need a nationwide health care delivery system which will make adequate health care a right for all people."

Jimmy Carter has the strength to take charge of our government. If you are tired of paying the high price of Republican ineffectiveness, you have only one choice on November 2nd, and that choice is for change.

Vote for JIMMY CARTER. A leader, for a change.

Scout-O-Rama Set

Hundreds of Cub Scouts, Scouts, and Explorers will participate in the "Scouting Heritage" Scot-O-Rama Nov. 6 in five area locations, announced Bill McAlister, show chairman.

Indian dancing, woodwork, pioneering, mountain climbing and pinewood derbies are just a few of the many subjects that will be on display in action booths during each show.

A Scout-O-Rama is an action booth type show where Scouts in all communities come together to put on scouting skills.

Part of the Scout-O-Rama program is the chance for boys and girls to learn to meet the public and develop salesmanship by selling tickets for the show. Tickets are selling for $1 each. Not only is experience gained, but a portion of the ticket money is returned to the unit in sales commission to help young people pay their own way.

Locations for the shows are Hale County Agriculture Building in Plainview, 2 to 7 p.m.; Ralls High School Gym, 1 to 6 p.m.; Agriculture Building on the Fair Grounds in Levelland, 1 to 6 p.m.; Lamesa Boys Club, 1 to 6 p.m.; and this year's Lubbock show will again be at Reese Air Force Base from 1 to 6 p.m.

Don't forget to visit one of these great Scouting shows on Nov. 6. All tickets are good for any of the show locations. Tickets will be available at the gate for each show.

The acid test of business isn't whether it's big or small: the real question, "Is it honest?"

Wisdom is the art of proportion.

Darrell Boswell Certified to Teach

Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Boswell were in Amarillo Thursday and Friday at the Central Church of Christ where Boswell was certified to teach a Christian Women's Course. He has also been certified to teach a men's Leadership course.

As soon as plans are completed, the nine weeks courses for both the men and women will begin. Cost is $35 for the men and $40 for women.

The course will be open for anyone that would like to take it. Boswell is minister of the 12th St. Church of Christ.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

You began to wonder, was either team able to stop the other and, if it kept up, was a break going to decide the outcome? And then Texas Tech's defense woke up and began to play.

"We weren't aggressive on defense," Coach Steve Sloan said long after the game had ended. "In other games this year, we had been aggressive. We were doing too much standing around. The tackling wasn't good and neither was pass defense."

About the only adjustment Tech coaches made at the half was to tell the players to wake up and start playing defense. They did, and they did it so convincingly that Arizona managed only a "gimme" touchdown with six seconds left in the game.

The Wildcats managed only 91 yards total offense the last half, while Tech was piling up 270 out of their game high total of 564. It was an impressive showing.

The way the Raiders moved the ball was impressive, and yet, surprising. The offense had done well in prior games, but nothing like it was against Arizona. Tech didn't have to pass much, but the passing was good and receivers were open.

In rushing, Billy Taylor and Larry Issac both went over the 100 yard mark, and Tech hasn't had this in earlier games. It was reassuring to see the offense do so well.

The fact that the Raiders were able to move the ball so well offensively is bound to give the offense a boost. It should give the players confidence and make Tech a better team.

And when Tech could put both offense and defenses together, it made the entire team more capable. It can't help giving the Raiders the type of confidence needed for the rest of the campaign. And, with the games they have left, they'll need it.

Friday night one of the Arizona writers asked me if I thought that Tech players might be looking for revenge. The reply was the obvious. I said that I didn't see how any player, who had been in Tucson the year before, could forget the treatment they received.

Yet, the way Tech's defense stood around and seemed lethargic made you wonder if they remembered—or cared. Still, when they did get untracked, it was all over.

Coach Sloan was asked Saturday night if there would be any special preparations made to get Tech players ready for Texas this week.

Steve paused a moment and you wondered what the answer would be. The late Vince Lombardi probably would have cast a withering look at the questioner and snap "what kind of a stupid question is that?"

But Steve answered quietly that he thought that the only thing they had to do was let them know the game was going to be played.

There is no need for mental preparation. Texas is here for a Saturday afternoon game and that's really all you have to say. The Raiders know how big a game this is. So do the Longhorns.

Both teams are undefeated in conference play. The Raiders are off to their best start since 1938, when they went 10-0. Texas has been having its troubles, but is 3-1-1 and is still the team to beat—until the Steers are beaten.

Arkansas took a big step Saturday when it beat Houston, which didn't derail the Cougars, but did slow them. None of the top four is out of the race yet and it could be that even A&M isn't out of it, nor Baylor, even with two losses.

The Razorbacks have a tough schedule, meeting A&M, SMU, Tech and Texas on consecutive games. Both A&M and Tech, though, will be home games and that will help the Hogs.

The Texas-Tech game is the big game this week and nothing can be taken for granted. Tech is doing better than anticipated; Texas is not doing as well. But, they're still the Longhorns and they get their share of the breaks.

This Raider squad believes in itself, though, and it should win. I think Tech has too much speed for the Horns, as well as too much passing. The Raiders slowed A&M; they should do the same thing to the Longhorns.

And so the upsets in college football continue. Now it is Oklahoma State doing the improbable and beating Oklahoma. Maybe the Sooners didn't bother to spy on the Cowboys, huh?

Missouri's upset of Nebraska was not that surprising, because the Tigers have been making it a habit.

At least one Cotton Bowl official is pulling for Tech to remain unbeaten, because it would make it possible to get a better opponent, as

Republican Senatorial Nominee Charges "Bentsen Hedges"

Charging that "Bentsen hedges," Republican senatorial candidate Alan Steelman launched an attack on U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen here this week.

Steelman, a two-term congressman from Dallas, cited what he called Bentsen's tendency to sway back and forth on issues, during an address to Lubbock Jaycees at noon Monday. Following the luncheon, Steelman also spoke at Texas Tech University Center.

In his criticism of the incumbent, Steelman noted that six years ago Bentsen criticized Ralph Yarborough for being a "big spender" and said he believed in fiscal responsibility. But Bentsen's record shows just the opposite, according to Steelman. He said the Democrat is one of the biggest spenders in all of Congress, with a voting record that ties with Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Steelman also noted how often Bentsen has changed his mind on the right-to-work law. In 1970, the incumbent said he was for the right to work, but in 1975 he said he was against it, the GOP contender observed. Then, he added, Bentsen swung back the other way this year, saying he favored the right-to-work law.

"Around Texas, they call this Bentsen hedges," Steelman quipped.

"I think we don't need a man for all seasons—we need a man to stand up for principles," he added.

Reaffirming his own stands on issues, the 34-year-old Steelman said he believes in a fiscally responsible federal government with a balanced budget and free market economy. "We need to tell the Secretary of State and George Meaney to stay out of the economy," he told Jaycee members.

Steelman also took a strong stand on national defense, saying the United States must remain strong to continue its influence for peace in the world. He recalled Teddy Roosevelt's advice to "speak softly, but carry a big stick."

On the issue of land use, Steelman said this should fall within the realm of states' rights. He favors leaving land use planning up to the state government.

Program Slated By Planetarium

The Royal Family of constellations in the winter sky, plus other favorites of the night scene above West Texas, will be depicted in a new program, "Stars of Fall and Winter," to begin Saturday at Moody Planetarium of The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The programs are shown at 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, and the new program will continue through Nov. 28. Tickets, are $1 for adults and 50 cents for students, go on sale 30 minutes before each showing.

The Royal Family of constellations includes Cassiopeia or the Sacred W, Cephus the King, Andromeda, Perseus and Cetus well as to put still another new face in the Jan. 1 game. We hope that the Raiders make his wishes come true!

Rich Bullock was the last rookie to be cut by the New York Knicks and probably, on any other year, he wouldn't have been, is considering an offer to play in Europe.

The word we get is that Bullock has been offered $40,000, which isn't peanuts, even for what's-his-name running for the presidency. I don't know the details, but it sounds like a pretty good deal for the former Texas Tech star.

"Gas Light" To Be Presented By Tech

"Gas Light," Patrick Hamilton's Victorian melodrama, will be presented in the Texas Tech University Lab Theater at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Oct. 29 through Wednesday, Nov. 3, with two performances on Wednesday.

The play, set in Victorian London, is the story of the handsome Mr. Manningham who is driving his wife mad under the guise of kindness. Inspector Rough visits Mrs. Manningham and proves to her that her husband is a maniacal criminal suspected of murdering a wealthy aunt for the famous Barlowe rubies 15 years before. Inspector Rough discovers the evidence needed to convict Manningham of his crime.

British author Hamilton writes Victorian literature with special emphasis on crimes of that era.

"Gas Light" was first performed in 1938 in London. The play ran three years on Broadway. Two "Gas Light" movies were produced in the 1940's.

The lab's production will be directed by Jack Bilbo, doctoral candidate in theater at Tech. The play will be the Lubbock student's first for public performance at the university. Bilbo has written a full-length play and directed several plays for class projects.

Tickets for "Gas Light" are on sale at the University Theater ticket office. Prices are $1.00 for Tech students with I.D., $1.25 for high school students and $1.50 for general admission.

Tax Hike . . .

when he responded to a statement by LCHD board chairman Marshall Pennington that "the hospital will be ready Sept. 1, but it is useless unless the medical program is ready."

Mackey snapped, "The medical program is well underway, but there are decisions remaining that can't be made until we know when the hospital will open and if it will stay open—it all depends on the hospital."

Bucy asked, "What are we going to do about facing up to an opening date?"

Williams replied, "It's unlikely we'll be able to establish a firm opening date until the financial problems are worked out."

Another vital area needs to be worked out, Bucy said. "Which comes first—patients or doctors? This is a question we need to get settled, and nothing productive is being done at this point."

Bucy said the key factor in solving the hospital's troubles is to straighten out the financing. "We cannot make it without help from the legislature."

An attempt is underway to get legislation passed that would enable the state to pay for the educational costs involved in teaching hospitals. Most estimates place the "teaching costs" at around 40 per cent of a teaching hospital's budget.

Although both the hospital district and the regents feel that such legislation stands a good chance of passage, Williams said that "we're only whistling Dixie" if they expect the state to aid to offset more than a small portion of the costs. Williams said that other teaching hospitals already established in Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Temple and Waco will be sharing in any state funding along with the Lubbock facility.

Bucy—who has been meeting with Pennington to get negotiations between the med school and the hospital district off dead center—said, "The community must understand that we don't have the answers now. We're in this thing together and we've got to get together to work on the strategy on how to get the hospital financed, but we can not be successful without the help of the community."

Mackey said the community did not realize at the time the hospital district was created the full meaning of its commitment. Passage of the referendum was only an indication of its willingness.

"I am optimistic because I'm convinced that the community will arrive to the occasion," Mackey added.

According to Mackey, the much publicized differences between the med school and hospital district have been a "red-herring" that has led to public confusion over the real issues.

Both Tech and the hospital district agreed to a concentrated public information program to inform the community of the crisis facing the hospital-med school complex.

Options being pursued at the present time, according to Pennington, are either to offer the hospital to the medical school to operate or for the hospital district to operate the hospital and lease the service facilities from the med school.

Either of these options, Pennington said, would result in a single entity being involved in the administration of the hospital. The third option would call for dual administration of the hospital with the med school selling services to the hospital district at cost or community rates.

"Texas Tech would be willing and happy to accept the hospital after questions about the legality and financial bridges are crossed, Williams said. "We believe that single entity administration is the answer."

Pennington said other sources of revenue for the financially troubled hospital were being looked at. He listed state support, revenue sharing, tax increase, community contributions, enlargement of the hospital district and payment by counties outside Lubbock for their medical indigents as possibilities.

Pennington also said it might be possible to stretch out repayment of the hospital's bonded indebtedness—thereby reducing the size of the payments and freeing more money for hospital operation.

Caraway's report predicts that unless some additional sources of revenue are found, the hospital district's current rate of income would cover only $16 million of the predicted $47 million deficit in the 10-year period.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Williams appointed Don Workman, Bill Collins and Clint Formby to work with committees from the hospital district and the Chamber of Commerce to look for possible solutions to the many problems facing the future of the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Jayne and I have lived and raised our family here in West Texas. We love this country. But we're afraid our children won't have the kind of opportunity we have had if Congress continues to allow big government to grow unchecked. The bigger the government—the less freedom we leave to our children.

The future of America is bright—if we make it so . . . and the future of America is now.

AUSTIN—In my opinion the state should explore all avenues in cutting costs. One proposal I would like to be given serious consideration is a study which involves joint use of state facilities.

Recently Texas Woman's University authorized a study by an internationally-known consulting firm. The thrust of the study was to determine if there would be a savings if Texas College of Osteopathic Medicine and a proposed medical school for TWU used a joint site for their facilities. It is my opinion that the study made in that instance is just the tip of the iceberg.

This type of 'piggy-backing' might be extended to the field of education and to all of our state agencies. At least such a study would give us the opportunity to find out just what kind of savings we could expect. We would know after completion of the study not only what would be good about combining services and facilities but also any major drawbacks to sharing.

The list of possible areas of savings is unending. We would eliminate the need for a double set of streets. Utilities could be combined. Fire and security protection, libraries, auditoriums, cafeterias, parking lots, computer systems, laundries, maintenance, administrative offices and major equipment are examples that readily come to mind. Additionally there might be a savings in the making of cooperative purchases.

In this day when inflation keeps us cash short and on the lookout for savings, such a study might indeed provide the beginnings for huge savings of taxpayer dollars.

I am not saying that joint site location would work in every case, but by exploring every side of a given situation we would be able to determine any savings and efficiency that might be available. It might be worth investigating the possibility that every plan for a new state structure include the feasibility of co-existing with compatible state entities.

The reason such prudence with state dollars is needed goes back to the people who pick up the ticket for every project—the taxpayers. These funds were collected so that government can operate for the good of the people. Government can work efficiently only if those working in government strive to protect the taxpayer by looking in every corner for a savings. I believe a study of this type could be a tool for government to assist in monitoring its spending.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

There's a marvelous, nerve-wracking motion picture in town that you must try to take the time to see. It is a movie that is not for the squeamish, the faint-of-heart or the romanticists that doted on "Love Story" and the like. It is belly-tearing, shocking thriller, first class in its genre, and it is homing at the Fox Theatres complex for now and, I think, some weeks to come.

It is a movie from a novel by William Goldman called "Marathon Man" and it has a superlative cast, superb camera work, intricate detail of directorship by John Schlesinger ("Midnight Cowboy") and musicianship of a most inventive and emotional quality by Michael Small, production design of stunning choice by Richard MacDonald and complementary departmental work of excellence by many technicians.

This is a movie of complexities as was Goldman's novel, from which he wrote the screenplay admirably. It is seldom that an author himself can adapt his own work to the wider demands of the camera than Goldman has done here. His novel, as his film, takes a lot of doing on the reader's or the viewer's part, to "get into" what all is going on. That is precisely what Goldman intended. But, once the piece of the baffling puzzle suddenly slide into place, the full horror and the seat-squirming tension of the rest of the story come easily.

To try, and not easily, to summarize the plot of the film is challenging enough. Babe Levy is a Ph.D. student-candidate at Columbia University. He is also a dedicated runner-trainee for marathon races on foot. He works out around a New York City reservoir that becomes the climactic scene of his ultimate involvement.

His father has committed suicide by pistol some 20 years previously, when this young man was a boy, a victim of harrassment by the remembered McCarthy persecutions. His older brother, Doc, beloved and worldly, is in "oil," but, in truth, a worker as counterspy for an agency, "Division," between the FBI and the CIA.

None of this does Babe know. Babe is to be an historian and political analyst when his doctorate thesis is done; he is a world child in many ways. He still possesses the pistol that was instrumental in his father's death.

Other forces are at work. His brother transports an important package to Paris, is party to murder at the opera, to a fight to the death in his hotel suite, to exposure to a fatal (to others) bomb plant. Violence is the key.

Doc returns, ostensibly from Washington, to visit his brother, meets with a former Nazi dental technician of Auschwitz, who founded his fortune in diamonds from the gold from Jewish teeth. This evil man has disguised himself and come to reclaim his diamonds from a New York City lock box.

Doc is knifed in a stunning scene by the cool, imperturbable ex-Nazi, staggers to his brother's room to die without a clue.

Life for Babe becomes a torment from now on, a terrifying break-in of his rooms by unknown adversaries while he is naked in his bath as his cheap door is being unhinged from beyond, taken by force to a place where the diabolically-cool dentist, thinking he knows more than Babe does (he known nothing) tortures him by means of dental equipment, drilling through to nerves centers to force the supposed truth from the distraught young man, climaxing in a harrowing chase over freeways and beyond, with even Babe's Columbia co-student girl proving only a decoy.

Then the former Nazi makes an ill-fated trip through New York's Jewish center to price diamonds for conversion of the fabulous collection of diamonds he still has not reclaimed from his lock box. Here on the streets of the crowded quarter an old Jewish woman suddenly penetrates his disguise as the infamous dentist. She cries in vain for help. No one hears; she is hit by a car. Here a jeweler's assistant, with the Auschwitz prisoner code tattooed on his wrist, seeks his familiarity with this white-haired distinguished man only to discover too late and tragically that his memory was right.

And it is this trip to the ban lock box that brings Babe Levy and this arch enemy to a frontal confrontation, diamonds and all, and the taut, stunning and shocking conclusion to all of "The Marathon Man."

I can't, of course, do justice, in this short space, to the walloping impact of the whole picture. It is a film, R-rated, of violence. It has a cast that follows Schlesinger's direction impeccably. It has as Babe Dustin Hoffman, never better, as the tormented, suffering victim of what he knows not; Roy Scheider of "Jaws" and "The French Connection" at his top form as Doc; William DeVane as the puzzling government agent; Marthe Keller as the questionable girl at Columbia; and a host of comparable players. But, and in a way, best of all, it has Lord Laurence Olivier, at the top of his famous form, as the awful Szell. He plays with all the expertise that has made him the ranking English-speaking actor in the world today and he plays it with icy calm and chilling beauty. It is worth the price of admission simply to watch a master at work.

There is, I grant, much that is not explained fully in this 125-minute block buster from Paramount Pictures, but in the long run, who cares? The book left questions open; its author did not waste time on nit-picking. He went to the core of the matter as fast as he could achieve it and in his screenplay he followed the dictates of his imaginative concepts. It was a sturdy, shaking concept as a novel; it is equally so as a filmplay. And Director Schlesinger and his super-cast have given him back the values that he had achieved as author.

As I said in the beginning, this is not a film for pantywaists. It's a rough-go and a shocker, but, it you can take it, you'll be at once fascinated, repelled and riveted to your seat by "Marathon Man." They don't come along very often like this one!

Maybe, that's just as well. MY nerves couldn't stand it!

Consumer Tips To Get Most Meat For Money

Meat takes the biggest "bite" from most food budgets. Some guidelines may help you decide the amount of meat you need to buy. Three to three and one-half ounces of cooked meat is considered a serving. Some members of the family may need more than one serving to satisfy their appetite. Meat cuts with no bone and little fat generally provide four servings per pound—ground beef, ground turkey, stew meat, cutlets, frankfurters, cold cuts, liver and most variety meats. Meat cuts with little bone and/or visible fat provide three servings per pound—round steak, pork steak and heel of the round. Meat cuts with medium amount of bone and/or visible fat provide two to three servings per pound—chops, shoulder steaks and whole turkeys. Cuts with much fat, bone and/or connective tissue provide one to two servings per pound—short ribs, spare ribs, shank, brisket, lamb breast.

Consumer Tips For Selecting, Cooking Broccoli

Fresh broccoli tastes best when the heads are dark to purplish-green with compact bud blusters, or heads. Broccoli has passed its prime if the bud clusters are yellow and form flowers. Look for stems that are crisp and tender, not tough or woody. To make overmature stems edible, simply peel off the outer tough portions of the stalk before cooking. Stems that are large but not tough can be split to speed up the cooking process.

For more uniform cooking, try putting the stems into a small amount of boiling water about two or three minutes before the heads. Since the heads cook faster, this prevents overcooking them. Total cooking time varies from 5-15 minutes, depending upon the size of the stalks. The key to a flavorful product is cooking until tender, not mushy—and cook without covering. One stalk provides lots of Vitamins A and C, but only 45 calories.

Veterans May Be Missing Dividend Checks

Many veterans retired from military service and paying premiums for U.S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI) or National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) from monthly retirement checks may be missing annual dividend checks, the Veterans Administration reported. The VA insurance center at Philadelphia reported there are several thousand military retirees who each month pay insurance premiums by allotment from their retired pay. In some cases, the monthly deduction becomes so routine the veterans fail to notify the VA when there is a change of address. This is particularly true, a spokesman said, when a retiree's check is sent to a banking institution. Annual dividends paid on USGLI and NSLI policies often result in some checks being returned to the VA for lack of a current address, the Spokesman said. Military retirees paying their GI insurance premiums by allotment should send changes of address, with policy number to the Veterans Administration Center, P.O. Box 8079, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101.

HORSE TALES

Hall of Fame

Roddy Thomas and Steve Waller

by Steven Wilson

Sophomores are now the subjects of the Hall of Fame. More specifically there are two sophomores, Roddy Thomas and Steve Waller. This is their first year on the varsity and you can bet that they are looking forward to the next two years.

Roddy Thomas plays on both offense and defense and loves the game very much. Roddy uses his 5 feet 7 inches and 200 pounds very well, hitting hard and hustling. Roddy is the center on offense while playing in a tackle slot on defense. He plays both positions well giving it all he's got and more. Roddy has a lot of determination with a great desire to win. Roddy should do great things for Shallowater in the next two years. Watch for him, he'll be wearing number 51.

Steve Waller also plays on both sides of the coin. On offense Steve is a wide receiver and a good one at that. He will give it his all to catch the ball and go with it. Defensive halfback is Steve's other position. His being a wide receiver helps him in this position. Steve is a very explosive player, especially as far as his temper goes. Steve will do good things in the future so watch for number 87. Steve is 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighs 180 pounds.

Shallowater Rustled

by Steve Wilson

The Mustangs invaded Plains Cowboy territory Friday and were rustled. Shallowater went against a very highly ranked state team. The Mustangs were kept from putting any points on the board while Plains got their share with 48.

Plains spread out their scoring over all four quarters without one being dominant. There were seven touchdowns in all with two in the first quarter, three in the second, and one apiece in the third and fourth quarters. Only one extra point was missed. All extra points were one-point conversion attempts.

The Mustangs worked hard, but never got things going their way. O'Donnell is the next opponent for the Mustangs. This will be third of four district games. Shallowater is 0-2 thus far in district competition.

J.V. Results

by Claudett Lamb

Shallowater J.V. was defeated once again with a 14-6 loss. This time Plains was able to break through two different times during the night for touchdowns during the first and fourth quarters. Neal Lusk was able to break through to make our only touchdown in the first quarter.

The boys will be playing O'Donnell this week. Good luck boys we will be cheering for you.

A Stomping Win

by Gloria Lara

The 8th grade Ponies traveled to Plains last Thursday night to go against the Plains Cowboys. The Ponies had worked out hard during the week to show the Cowboys that they were ready for them. We scored during the first quarter to make a score of 8-0. The Ponies broke through their defence to let Marcus Lara go in for a touchdown and the extra points. The Cowboys saw that the Ponies were tough so they held hard but the Ponies were just a little bit tougher and they didn't let them break through. This week they go against O'Donnell so let's go out and support our strong team. Good Luck Ponies!

Another Upset

by Gloria Lara

It was another upset for the 7th grade Ponies this past Thursday night. They went against the Plains Cowboys and they lost by an upsetting score of 34-6. They play at home this Thursday night when they go against O'Donnell so let's go out and support them. Good Luck Ponies!

Educational Excursion

by Alison Terry

Last Thursday, Mrs. Carol Witcher, counselor for Shallowater Public Schools, and Alison Terry, senior student at Shallowater High, attended a meeting to discuss Bulletin 560. This concerns revisions in accrediting secondary and elementary schools in Texas. The event was held in the Education Service Center located in the Texas Commerce Bank building. It was sponsored by the Texas Education Agency. Others attending this gathering were superintendents, board members, parents, and other counselors, teachers, and students from various school districts in the area.

After the meeting, Mrs. Witcher and Alison had a lovely lunch at Gardski's Loft. They both agreed that this was the most enjoyable part of the whole excursion!

What's For Dinner?

by Debbie Paul

That was the question asked when the Roosevelt Spanish Cub invited the Spanish Speech classes of our school to a Mexican dinner with some of the other area schools.

They all had a lot of fun and an excellent dinner and singing. They also had a speaker, Miss Linda Leos, who spoke of her experience in Mexico at the University of the Americas in Pueblo, Mexico. Overall, they had a lot of fun and met many new friends.

Dr. Ray Santos, Lubbock physician and surgeon, spoke to the 4th, 5th, and 6th grade classes during a program in the Shallowater Auditorium last Friday.

Dr. Santos told the students they should make the most of the capabilities they have and that in this country we are able to be what we want to be. He related some of his experiences in Pearsall, Texas where he was reared and attended public school. When in high school he arrived at school at 6:00 each morning and worked as the janitor until time for classes to begin. Then during the lunch period he worked in the cafeteria in order to pay for his lunch.

This desire for an education and for achievement came to him from three sources, he told the students. His mother's hope and inspiration; his purpose to achieve the goal in his life he wanted most, to become a doctor; and a loving God.

He went to college at what is now University of Texas at El Paso and worked to pay for his room and board. After he paid for this each month, he had $4 left for spending money for the month. But he wanted to be a doctor, and he did.

Being the best of anything, whether it is the best student, the best carpenter, or the best homemaker is an outstanding goal, Dr. Santos said. However, being a person who cares for other people is also important, he stated, because everyone caring for each other is what will turn our country into a place that will be stronger and a better place to live.

Keith Lostroh, 6th grader, led the students in the Pledge to the flag, and Mrs. Kay White, 5th grade teacher, directed in the singing of several songs. Mrs. C.E. Pair played the piano for the assembly.
