A BOY THAT MISUNDERSTOOD

As a boy, I was always disturbed by this Biblical passage in Matthew: "For I have come to set a man against his father and a daughter against her mother . . . He who loves father and mother more than me is not worthy of me."

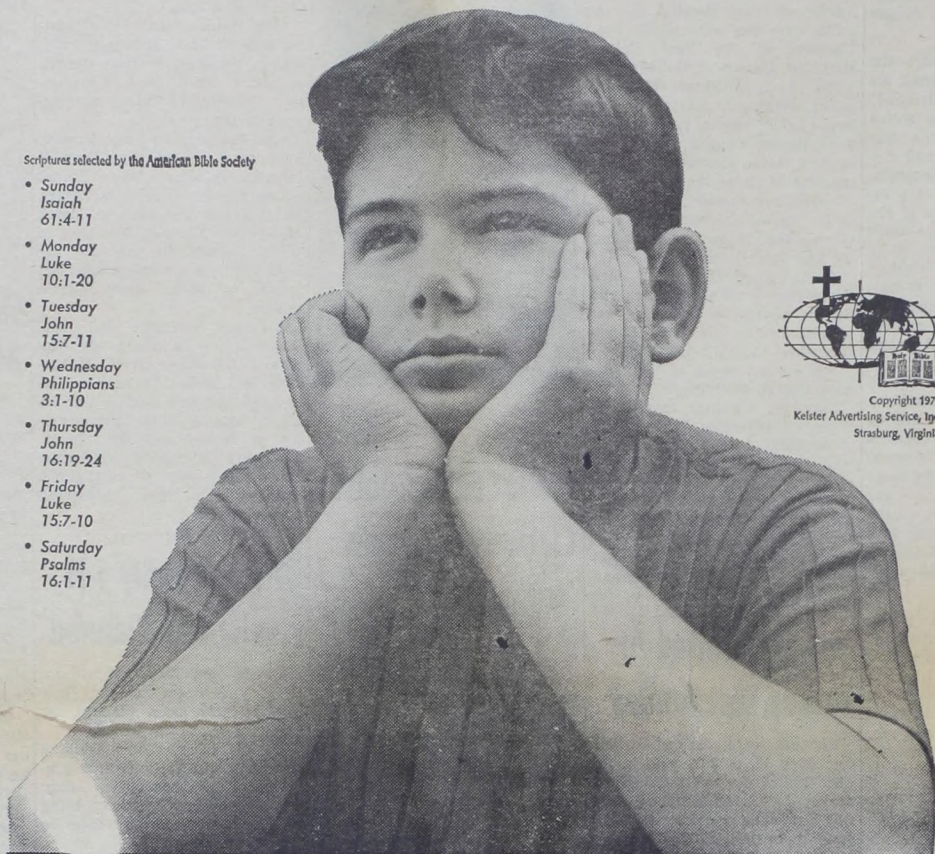

In those days of innocence, it seemed that my greatest love should go to Mother and Father. They gave me life, love and visible physical needs that seemed all-important.

But what I did not understand was that this life of mine came directly from God through my parents. I had tried to separate God's love from the love of Mother and Father. It was through Him that they received the great gift of human love. And because a mother has God's love implanted in her heart, she will instinctively love me. Matthew was emphasizing the fact that God's love must come first and that human love will then follow in its proper perspective.

Take your child with you to church and church school so that both may gain a better understanding of God's will. One who really loves God supremely will invariably develop a deeper love for family, friends and neighbors.

 Otho Stubbs Is

"The art word, given to taking of an artist's credit, usually slips aside out of respect when a man of impeccable background and ability appears on the scene. Such a new face in the Panhandle art world is 62-year-old Otho Stubbs, for the past 60 years a resident of Turkey, Texas, where he farms his own land and paints the West. He has known with color reality flavor that draws rare attention."

The quote above is from a review from the High Plains Art Gallery of Amarillo, where a large collection of the artist's paintings are being displayed. Previous to being moved to the High Plains Art Gallery some of his paintings were displayed in the lobby of the First National Bank in Quitaque. One of his more recent paintings has been purchased by the bank and now hangs in their lobby.

Stubbs' paintings are the kind that a weatherbeaten old cowboy can stand before and identify with. A horse and rider struggling to free themselves from the quick-free sand bog along the Little Red, a cowboy who has thrown too wide a loop and caught the wrong part of a thousand pound steer, a branding scene on the Bell Ranch—these and a host of other paintings are reconstructions of his and his friends' experiences on the range. And they're genuine.

Otho Stubbs Is New Face In Panhandle Art World

"The art word, given to talking of an artist's credits, usually steps aside out of respect when a man of impeccable background and ability appears on the scene. Such a new face in the Panhandle art world is 62-year-old Otho Stubbs, for the past 60 years a resident of Turkey, Texas, where he farms his own land and paints the West he has known with color reality and flavor that draws rave attention

The quote above is from a review from the High Plains Art Gallery of Amarillo, where a large collection of the artist's paintings are being displayed. Previous to being moved to the High Plains Art Gallery some of his paintings were displayed in the lobby of the First National Bank in Quitaque. One of his more recent paintings has been purchased by the bank and now hangs in their lobby.

Stubbs' paintings are the kind that a weatherbeaten old cowhand can stand before and identify with. A horse and rider struggling to free themselves from the quicksand bog along the Little Red, a cowboy who has thrown too wide a loop and caught the wrong part of a thousand pound steer, a branding scene on the Bell Ranch—these and a host of other paintings are reconstructions of his and his friends' experiences on the range. And they're genuine.

Stubbs paints almost exclusively of the West—the West he has known intimately as a cowhand on ranches in the Panhandle and New Mexico, the west as he came to know it while living with the Navajo, the Hopi and Apache Indians during the thirties while recovering from a lung ailment. And when his subject requires it, he doesn't hesitate to dip his brush into the dim past to picture the life of a bygone era.

For he is a historian as well as a painter. Much of his time is devoted to searching out lost clues to the past. Sketching trips are as much archeological explorations as trips to capture the color and lines of the picturesque West Texas countryside. He is a stickler for truth and accuracy, researching tirelessly before applying his brush to canvas. If it is of a Comanche buffalo hunt, you can be certain that every detail, from the Indian's moccasins to paint markings on his body and face, are correct.

He paints mostly the country he has lived in and loved all his life, and which he knows as well as any man—the Quitaque and Turkey country of West Texas—so long neglected by recognized West Texas artists. The red breaks of the Little Red, the Quitaque and Pease, and the picturesque peaks and valleys of the Caprock, form backdrops for the Western drama he brings to his canvas.

As a young man, Stubbs worked on farms and ranches, including the Matadors, the Shoe Bar, the Mill Iron, the LX and the Bell Ranch. He draws much of his inspiration from these days. But many of his paintings were inspired from his life in New Mexico and Arizona, where he was able to study the modern Indian closely. One of his most outstanding paintings, according to Otho, depicts the Hopi Indian Snake Dance, a seven-day ceremony designed to ARTIST AT WORK—Although he doesn't restrict himself to West Texas in his art, by far the larger number of his paintings picture the country that he has known so long and loved so much. When the subject requires it, he doesn't hesitate to dig back into the dim past to depict the life of over a hundred years ago.

pay tribute to the rain gods. This painting had to be done strictly from memory, as no one is allowed to make pictures, take notes or make sketches. So secret are the rites, that the public is allowed to witness only the final day. However, Stubbs, through the help of a Hopi Indian friend, was permitted to witness five days of the dances, during which he made careful mental notes as his friend explained the various movements and the ceremonial body markings and dress, as the Hopi performed clapping live rattlesnakes, as alive and deadly as when picked up from the Arizona desert. As soon as possible, he put his observations onto canvas and the picture now hangs in the office of a Midland, Texas businessman.

His passion for truth in his paintings has gotten him into trouble at times, and almost cost him his life in December of 1969. On a sketching trip in the peaks of the Caprock northeast of Quitaque, soil on which he stood gave way and he fell for about 30 feet. Aside from many cuts and bruises and several broken ribs, his right arm near the wrist was broken. This was his painting arm and caused him some concern; he practiced constant exercises by manipulating a sponge-like pad prepared by a friend.

Stubbs' technique is his own, developed after 45 years of painting the rolling plains, the river breaks and peaks of the Caprock. Even before he started to the Turkey schools, he recalls, he was drawing pictures of horses, cows, and cowboys with whatever he could find at hand for a medium.

After graduation from Turkey High School, he was one of the first students to enter Texas Tech in 1925. A health factor caused him to move to New Mexico, where he studied art at the Hill and Canyon School of Fine Arts at Santa Fe for two years, and six months with Emil Bistram in Taos.

When he realized the art he was acquiring was in direct conflict with the style he needed to present the West he knew, he took his problem to an artist friend who advised him to go back to his original methods. So, after a careful survey of his past two years' work, he made a pile of them, burned them, and went back home to Turkey to resume painting in his traditional manner.

Although he hasn't, as yet, received the recognition of many western artists, his works have been well received and drawn good reviews wherever they have been shown. During an exhibit in Tulsa, Oklahoma in 1954, where hundreds of American artists were being exhibited, his oil paintings were ranked among the top 40. His works are well known and appreciated among collectors of the true Western scene—ranchmen, sportsmen and businessmen who are familiar with the real West. His reputation has spread slowly, but widely, principally by word of mouth, and his studio in Turkey has been visited by persons from many sections of the country. His paintings are to be found in Dallas, Fort Worth, El Paso, and in many sections of the Southwest.

Stubbs is accomplished in nearly all art forms. He has done wood carving, and has in his studio a steer carved from native mesquite. Although oils are his principal medium, he also paints in water color. These are used principally as proofs for clients who have commissioned paintings.

His work, from the canvas to the frames themselves, are all his. He makes his own framing material, starting with raw stock and carving and finishing these into quality picture frames for his pictures.

He has never been able to stop his painting or sketching for any length of time. During World War II he was with the fifth Armored Division, and made the Normandy Beach D-Day Invasion. He was in the combat drive in France and Germany after D-Day, including the Battle of the Bulge, and still managed to follow his desire to sketch. His battlefield action drawings include one of men on a half track dismounting to fight remnants of soldiers of the German Fifth Army. One, called Hurthen Forest, shows trees shredded and tanks destroyed after a long battle.

Because of his health he has had to spend as much time as possible in the open. He has farmed, ranched and done carpenter work—following the carpenter trade and farming during the years since World War II. He has traveled extensively in the western states, talking with him his camera and his sketch pad and going to no end of trouble to get a good picture of the West.

For a time he was a scoutmaster for the local troop of Boy Scouts, serving as guide and counselor for many camping trips into the broken country at the foot of the Caprock.

During his explorations about the countryside, in West Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, he has discovered a large number of Indian artifacts, which he has care-

A GAS outdoor grill gives food a tangy outdoor flavor without the time and bother of charcoal fire. Char-broiled flavor comes from the smoke of meat juices dripping on hot briquets. Charcoal itself provides no flavor.

Permanent ceramic briquets in the gas grill reach cooking heat in a few minutes, and there is no long wait to start cooking. The heat is regulated manually so there is no need to move a grill up or down.

The project extends from FM 2534, southward to FM 1043, and from Munday southeastward to the Haskell County Line. George R. Wall of Munday is the Highway Department engineer in charge of the project which will take an estimated 150 working days.

Ivan Dement, Inc. of Amarillo was awarded a contract for grading, structures, foundation course and hot mix asphaltic concrete paving on 11.8 miles of State Highway 86 in Briscoe County. Low bid was $478,784.26.

The project extends from the intersection of SH 207 in Silverton, eastward to top of the Caprock. Harry E. Hart of Matador is the Highway Department engineer in charge of the project which will take an estimated 150 working days.

CAST OF TEXAS REHEARSING EIGHT HOURS A DAY NOW

The 92 people in the 1971 cast of "Texas" are rehearsing for eight hours a day. Margaret Moore, the Associate Director, is working intensively with the actors to help them perfect their speaking parts. Royal Brantley, the musical director, has taught the music, and is now drilling and polishing—listening for precision and balance—so that the choirs will be ready to make the recordings for the dream sections of the show. He has already presented the delightful contrapuntal exercises which the cast uses for warm ups throughout the season. Neil Hess, the choreographer, has led the dancers through the figures—fresh new routines—which he has devised for this year's production. Before practicing these the entire cast warms up with simple steps—building their endurance to the point where each one can run a quarter of a mile for an entrance and appear on the stage singing and dancing and not out of breath. Sometimes these warm ups are directed by Jim Holston, assistant to Neil Hess.

Under Charlotte Brantley, the costumers are shaping the clothes for the scenes.

Under Jim Kemmerling the technical crew is getting the stage and sets ready—handicapped a little by a sudden wind which rolled the train a short distance on two wheels and sent chairs sailing through the air.

Under Pat Jarrett the sound and light crew is checking wiring and testing speakers, and experimenting with lighting effects.

These preparations are leading to the opening of the sixth season of the musical drama by Paul Green—the "Texas" show—which played to more than 350,000 people during its first five seasons in the beautiful amphitheatre

BOOK BEARS CLOSE TIES WITH PROMINENT EARLY-DAY PHYSICIAN, DR. E. P. RUMPH

A book titled "This Man David" bears close ties with a prominent early-day Quitaque physician, Dr. E. P. (Gene) Rumph. Dr. Gene came with his family to Quitaque and practiced here until his death May 20, 1943. David of the story was the father of Dr. Gene.

"This Man David" is being published by Quality Printing Company in Abilene, and was written by Juanita Daniel Zachry. It is a biography of David Rumph who was a southern planter in Georgia and sets forth the life of one man and his family during ante bellum days, the Civil War and the struggle for survival during days of Reconstruction. The economic condition is seen as the family experiences a continued rise in tax rates, decline of farm production due to neglected cotton fields and loss of slave labor. The inevitable is seen when taxes soar far and beyond their annual income. Finally, the family seeks a new home on the frontiers of Texas.

A lineage table containing over one thousand family names is included for those desiring to trace ancestry and an index for easy researching. There is an Appendix showing maps of Randolph County, Georgia, with David's vast plantation lands set out in heavy lines. Other maps and legal papers are shown, also an epilogue telling something of each of the families of David's surviving heirs. Finally a list and places of practice of the 20 physicians who number among David's progeny.

Regular price of the book will be $8.95. Pre-publication price is $7.95 plus 34c tax. Copies may be ordered at the pre-publication price by sending name and address with check or money order to: Quality Printing Co., P. O. Box 1060, Abilene, Texas.

Here comes the winner! Can he hold that first-place position? Or will he fail? Victory is the most important thing in the world for these youngsters right now. Everything hinges on the outcome of this contest.

Enthusiasm is an important part of successful living. It can stimulate the imagination and inspire the mind. And it can be a contagious thing, too. It can affect your co-workers, your friends and your family. That is why it is so important to instill enthusiasm in any successful organization, as well as in individuals.

One of the greatest institutions on earth, the Church, has inherited a rich spiritual enthusiasm which has been handed down through the centuries. Its members, working together, fired by the enthusiasm of Faith can give you renewed inspiration which you in turn, can pass on to others.

Plan now to attend church next Sunday. Become a part of this great fellowship of believers who can instill and impart enthusiasm into our lives, our community, our world.

Area Business Review

Peoples State Bank

The greatest asset of any city or community is a sound and progressive banking institution, one fully oriented to the requirements of the area.

Since October of 1942, the Peoples State Bank of Turkey has stood for community progress and top grade service to individuals as well as business, offering them not only the protection of sound banking, but the convenience of the most modern banking facilities.

Assets of the Peoples State Bank have grown continually over the years. "But we consider our biggest asset the one that doesn't always show up on financial statements—a fine group of customers," points out Mr. Kenneth Cary, president. "From year end to year and, our first concern is for these customers' financial well being. And that is why, as a full service bank, we offer all the modern conveniences of banking institutions anywhere."

This is also why only recently the Peoples State Bank was completely remodeled, with panelling and carpeting throughout, and with new and attractive front decoration.

Mr. Cary's banking background well equips him for the job he is doing, coming to the Peoples State Bank three years ago from Lubbock, where he had served with the Lubbock National Bank.

To Mr. Lee Vardy, vice president and public relations director, the banking business represents a second career. Prior to entering the Peoples State Bank he had completed a total of 39 years of service as teacher and administrator in public schools. Seventeen of these years were devoted to the Turkey Schools, where he served as superintendent.

The Peoples State Bank, as the name would indicate, is for the people, and they welcome anyone in need of banking services—whether it is to open an account, a business or agricultural loan, or a loan for a home, car or farm equipment. They play no favorites. The small depositor is served as promptly and efficiently as the largest.

Whatever your banking needs, you'll like all the friendly folks at the Peoples State Bank of Turkey.

You can't live on love forever.

Okay, you're young. You've got all the love in the world and you're doing your best to live on it. Retirement? That's for when you're old, right?

It's for when you're old if you can afford it.

The kind of retirement you're after isn't the typical rocking-away-on-the-front-porch variety. You probably picture yourself taking extended vacations, pursuing hobbies, or buying that forty acres and living off the land. Pipe dreams? Not if you prepare now.

There's an easy, painless way to make your retirement dreams a reality. Join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work. That way, an amount you specify will be set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's an easy way to save.

And now there's a bonus interest rate on all U.S. Savings Bonds—for E Bonds, 5½% when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). That extra ½%, payable as a bonus at maturity, applies to all Bonds issued since June 1, 1970... with a comparable improvement for all older Bonds.

Now is the time to start saving. Money's a nice thing to have while you're living on love forever.

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America.
Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.

The U.S. Government does not pay for this advertisement. It is presented as a public service in cooperation with The Department of the Treasury and The Advertising Council.

Christian Asks For Governor's Veto

Rep. Tom Christian of District 75 in the Texas Panhandle has requested that Governor Preston Smith give consideration to a line item veto of the appropriated $200,000 for defense of the legislative re-districting bill.
In a letter to the Governor, Christian urged Governor Smith to veto H. B. 783, the legislative reapportionment act passed by the House and the Senate during the just completed 62nd Session of the Legislature. Christian requested the veto on the basis of the bill's violation of the one man - one vote concept set forth in Baker vs. Carr.

Shirttail Sermon

Someone wrote these words a while back that seem to me to be the most appropriate expression of our need today:

"And I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year, 'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown.' And he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than a known way.'"

If there ever was a need for faith in God, it is now. Man has never really been able to look into the future and know what was going to happen. But this is especially true today. With the world in revolution everywhere, and man as unpredictable as he is, anything can happen.

Man's security in the past as well as now, has been dependent on his faith in God and in the universe which he created. This old universe is just as dependable today as it was when Abraham struck his tents and headed toward the promised land, or when Moses set out for Egypt. Thomas A. Edison kept believing even when his associates gave up; and we are recipients of that faith.

One does not have to be a faithful christian or even a professed christian to be a recipient of this dependability of God's laws. One does have to be a faithful christian if we are to continue to have a world as we know it today, or to be a part of the kingdom that is to begin when we accept Christ. The only security we can have is to "Put your hand into the hand of God."
