WAYLAND FLYING QUEENS ARE SMART. TOO!

The Hutcherson Flying Queens, reigning National AAU and Na-tional Collegiate champions, have set many records for other teams to shoot for, not only in basketball but also in the classroom. Records in basketball are set every year but how many teams on the college level can boast an overall average of a solid "B"?

Final grades for the year reveal that the Queens had a collective total of 49 "A's," 44 "B's," 20 "C's", and only three "D's" and no failures. That averages out to a 3.15 grade point on Wayland's 4.0 scale. WBC is noted for its high so today we will point out three characteristics that we lose as we grow up.

First, we cease to be receptive. A child is taught by everyone and everything with which he comes in contact. He learns from his parents and other adults, from his peers, from nature, and from his own experiences. These lessons are retained and referred to time after time as he grows older. Adults are not so receptive. They do not learn as easily as a child and do not retain the lessons that are learned. Time after time adults make the same mistakes. Or they hold to old prejudices when those prejudices are proven wrong. "I know I'm wrong, but I can't help feeling the way I do," is their confession. We must be receptive if we are to grow spiritually for

Matthew 19:14

We have all read this passage of scripture and wondered at its meaning. Later in life, we may have had an inkling of its full scabing for us.

A child accepts things at their face value. If he is told something, he accepts it as truth. "I know it is true, because so-and-so said it was," is often heard as the child's defense of a questioned statement. He has faith in those who are around him and in what We know that a child sees things in a different light from the one in which adults see things. So today we will point out three characteristics that we lose as we grow up.

Now is the time to: Start get equipment ready so you can avoid delays when your garden is ready. Cheek your canning jars. Use only jars which are designed for canning as they have been tempered to withstand the high heat Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Gregg and Mrs. Marie Boling of Silver-pered to withstand the high heat of canning. Packers jars (those that other products come in) are made of thinner glass. They also have a narrower sealing edge that lessens the chance of a good seal. Use these "packers jars" for pickles or jelly or any other foods which you do not process.

Look through the bottom of each jar toward the window to check for cracks. Don't confuse the seam in the bottom with a crack. A crack will reflect the light, the seam will not. A crack-ed jar will break when heat is added.

Check your supply of screw bands. Discard any rusty or bent ones. The screw band is designed to apply pressure evenly to the lid and sealing edge of the jar. A bent or rusty one will not apply pressure evenly.

Faulty screw bands actually prevent some lids from sealing.

Take inventory of your freezing containers. Do you need to purchase some additional ones? Do it NOW. Life gets tense when the beans are ready and you have to run to town for boxes or bags. Your local merchant may have just sold the last package.

Many people have said they are inhappy with their frozen green beans. First, select a good variety for freezing. Gather beans a little less mature than you would for canning. Take the vegetables from the garden to the freezer as fast
