Mental Health Code Revision Introduced

Senator Ray Farabee (D-Wichita Falls) introduced legislation a few days ago revising the Texas Mental Health Code, calling on the state legislature to modern-ize the code to keep up with the medical advances of the past 25

"When the original code pass a model act for sed in 1957, it was a model act for the other 49 states. However, two decades of medical progress, the development of new treat-ment systems and recent legal challenges have made these revisions a necessity for the protection of both the public and the mentally ill," Farabee stated. The Senator, noted for his long standing involvement in the mental health area, emphasized that many of the changes his legislation proposes focus on clearing up organizational and consistency problems. The major substantive changes are listed

*Changes in voluntary in-pa tient services would allow par-ents to admit children under age 16, permit minors 16 or over to seek care by themselves, and let courts initiate involuntary commitment if certain criteria are

*Modifications in emergency procedures would allow a warrentless apprehension by peace officers for 24-hour detention if an imminent risk of serious harm is perceived. Changes in the protective custody orders require a "probable cause" hearing within 72 hours of detention before that detention can continue its full 14 days.

*Alterations in court-ordered mental health services would require evidence of mental illness and specific evidence of present danger to self or others or severe deterioration and dis-tress before care can be ordered. Other changes include using the least restrictive appropriate treatment setting available and uniform procedures for both short and long-term duration

*Proposed additional patients' rights include presumption of legal competency, freedom from unnecessary or excessive medication, a humane and safe treatment environment, the right to refuse to participate in research and the right to participate in an individualized treat-

The changes we are looking at will balance two primary goals of the mental health system. We the mental health system. We want to protect the public from persons with serious mental illness. We also want to safeguard the rights of mentally ill citizens by ensuring that no one is deprived of their liberty or overmedicated when it is not processary. The archeology of the control of t necessary," Farabee explained.
The code revisions would include permanent changes providing a constitutional procedure for protective custody orders, parts of which were ruled unconstitutional earlier this unconstitutional earlier this year. A similar temporary measure has passed the legislature and is awaiting the Governor's signature, but it expires August 31, 1983.

HIGHTOWER TO MAKE DEFENSE TRIP TO MIDDLE EAST

Congressman Jack Hightower announced last week that he will be making a short 13-day defense inspection trip to five key Middle East countries in connection with his responsibilities on the House his responsibilities on the House Appropriations Committee and particularly as a result of his new Defense Subcommittee assign-ment. The trip will start the third week in February when no legislative business is scheduled in the House of Representatives.

"My committee assignments involve various kinds of appropriations and one of the reasons for the trip is to see first-hand how some of our money is being spent and whether we need to spent and whether we need to make some serious adjust-ments," Hightower said. "We have U. S. troops now in the Middle East, in Beirut where we're going, and I want to talk with some of them to get their own assessment of whether they should be even those and here. should be over there and how should be over there and how long they should stay." The defense trip will include stops at U. S. military and diplomatic posts not only in Beirut, Lebanon, but also Egypt, Israel, Saudi Arabia, Tunisia and Italy.

Arabia, Tunisia and Italy.
"We have the AWACs planes
in Saudi Arabia, foreign assistance going to Egypt and Israel, critical Middle Eastern oil fields important to the Western democracies, and a number of hungry countries that I would like to see purchase more of the 13th District's farm commodities," Hightower said. "I think I'm Hightower said. "I think I'm going to get better answers to questions my constituents are asking if I talk face-to-face with some of our people over there as well as our allies and adversaries," Hightower said. While on the Appropriations Committee, Hightower has been directly involved in subcommit-tee work effecting U. S. trade, promotion of U. S. exports, drug enforcement programs, and espe-cially the effort to improve security for American personnel and communications at U. S. and communications at U. S. missions and embassies over-seas. Hightower will be accom-panied by other members of the Committee and by Undersecre-tary of State Jerome Van Gork-om and Sheldon Krys, Executive Director of Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs.

"As most people know, last year I voted against the Reagan Administration's foreign aid bill, the largest ever, and I think we the largest ever, and I think we need to take a very hard look this year at foreign aid in general because of our own domestic economic situation," Hightower said. "I think a trip of this sort can help us focus on where American military aid should be provided, and where we should restrict or end it."

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith accompanied their daughter, Mrs. Willie Bradshaw and daugh-ter, Anna Leta, of Floydada to ter, Anna Leta, of Floydada to Waxahachie over the weekend to visit Mrs. Smith's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Montgomery.
