HOOK & LADDER TRUCK BOUGHT

The Baird Volunteer Fire Department met in regular session last Monday, and it was decided that the Fire boys purchase a hook and ladder truck and it was moved and seconded that they accept a proposition from a Racine, Wis., house who promised to put in an excellent truck well equipped and nicely finished for $3000.00, cash at Racine, to be paid $150 down, and $75 per month on balance at 7 per cent interest. This truck will weigh over 1200 lbs. and will take about $30 freight to lay it down in Baird. The Fire Boys are buying and paying for this equipment themselves, and propose to raise the money to pay for it. Something over $300 will be necessary to make the first payment on the truck when it arrives which will be in about 90 days. Any donations by any one to the boys, for any amount will be more than thankfully received as they have something over $50 to raise at once. This is a heroic undertaking for our fire boys and should be liberally encouraged by every person in Baird.

GOOD RAIN.

A fine rain fell Tuesday night, which has changed things wonderfully as rain was badly needed.

The rain was accompanied by a good deal of small hail, but no damage was done. Wednesday morning it was cold and at 8:30 the thermometer registered 34 degrees. Wednesday night it cleared off and most every one bid goodly to foliage, fruits and flowers as every one thought the frost would kill every thing in the way of spring vegetation. The frost came all right, but at this writing if it did any damage we have not noticed it. It is not believed that any damage either to crops or fruit will result. This is, indeed, splendid; a good rain and an escape from damage by frost.

CLYDE NOTES.

April 17.—Receiving your solicitation for news items I have concluded to give you a few from Clyde.

Our town is steadily growing and coming to the front and we hope within a few years to have a good solid business place.

The new depot is now in process of building and will be completed in a few days, and we understand the building force will proceed to build a new school house as soon as the depot building is completed.

Mr. Ingle, of Abilene, has purchased the Leason & Eberhoffer grocery stock at the Jones house. He says he has come to stay and we hope the neighbors will give him a liberal patronage for we believe he is a good man.

Mrs. Haley is carrying quite a nice line of groceries and notions and seems to be getting a good trade.

There was a man here a few days ago looking for a location for a beer hall, but he did not meet with much encouragement at Clyde. Next, we do not need a good stock of dry goods in our town, and we can not see why some men with money and business qualifications can not see that this would be a good location for a business of that kind.

Our school is progressing nicely under the management of Prof. Darden as principal and Miss Nora Smith and Miss Mirtie May assistants. Pupils in regular attendance 98.

Farming is progressing nicely. We had a good rain this morning and if we can get some warm weather crops will soon be coming nicely.

We have good prospects for a fruit crop. Kirsendall says he will have a lot of strawberries ripe in a few days. Cal May has had a very sick child for several days, but we understand the little fellow is improving now.

We do not know of any other serious sickness in the neighborhood.

The remains of Mrs. L. J. Walden who died and was buried at Dallas about five years ago were shipped to Clyde last week and interred in Clyde Cemetery. Mrs. Walden was a daughter of Geo. B. Ely, a former resident of Clyde. Rev. A. E. Eaton of Brownwood accompanied the remains from Dallas and conducted the funeral service.

Mr. and Mrs. Baxter visited their daughter and now son-in-law, Prof. Easterling, at Patos Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Willford of the Rough Creek community, was in our town prospecting this week.

Quite a number of parties have been asking for prices on Iowa lots since the new depot started up.

BARN BURNED.

Mr. M. Summers' barn on his Vico farm was destroyed by fire Monday night. The barn and entire contents, feed, eleven sets of harness, three buggies and four horses were burned. We did not learn the total amount of the loss, but it must have been several hundred dollars. No insurance. We did not know how the fire originated and perhaps no one knows. There was a party at Mr. Summers' residence last night, possibly a cigar stump, cigarettes or something might have been unthoughtfully dropped in the barn and caused the fire.

MARRIED.

Even the most ardent admirers of Emperor William admit that he overdid the matter in his expression of sympathy for the Bohemians. An earthquake shook the building in which his Quaker Majesty was receiving in royal state, and the great sun of the large flag did not rise. He was not hurt. He is tough, and an ordinary jester does not move his heels. Still, Emperor William was evidently shocked by the earthquake, and he sent the following message:

"It is with deep emotion that I have just learned of the earthquake which was in the time of the Feast of Balaam and which so unfortunately has destroyed Your Majesty's precious life. In offering my sincere congratulations on Your Majesty's escape from danger, I cannot conceal my admiration for the admirable courage observed and the example of bravery given by Your Majesty to your subjects and to the foreigners present. I pray to the Lord to continue to hold Your Majesty in His gracious and holy keeping."

STORIES OF HARRISON.

Anecdotes of the Earlier Years of the Late Ex-President.

ABBOT BARRISTER AND BRIGADIER

How He Was Taught in a Log School—Why He Was Paid of Duck Shooting—His First Law Case, Score but Once.

Neighborhood reminiscences of the late Benjamin Harrison's school at North Bend, O., show him to have been much the same as other boys under like conditions. He engaged in the amusements of country boys and tramped miles to the district school, at which period he is recalled as a white-haired youngster of rather more than average intelligence. Each Sunday he regularly attended, with his parents, church at Cleves, four miles distant from his home. At times, with his brother Carter, he recited as a white shirt to Lawrenceburg with the family group.

A wisecracker of this latter place says that on one of those excursions he discovered some particular peculiarity in the boy and, putting him on the head, made the remark that he "would some day be president." Before he was 10 years old General Harrison went to school at College Hill, Gary's academy, or Belmont college, as it is now called, Oxford, Ohio, where he was a member of the Phi Kappa Psi chapter of the National Historical. Subsequently he went to Oxford college, Ohio, graduated and immediately took up the study of law in Cincinnati, and in a short time he moved to Indianapolis, where he has since resided.

Some of the best stories of the late ex-president, however, are to be found in the biography written by him by General Lee Wallace and published some years ago. After leaving the first chapter to Harrison's illustrious ancestor General Wallace describes his life from first as a child, boy, student and then as a lawyer, soldier and statesman. Take this as a specimen, giving a glimpse of Harrison's boyhood, with a rugged environment of frontier life and days of drudgery in a log schoolhouse.

"In seasons when the crops were being planted and harvested he was, as a farmer's son, given such work as was suitable to his years. He fed the cattle, he did the milking, though he has since confessed that at this time the work was never a success. It should not be supposed that the attendance at school and work upon the farm were unaccompanied with pastime. The rivers flowing close by were well stocked in that day with fish, there were squirrels in the trees in their season ducks were plentiful, and in the pursuit of such game young Harrison became an expert shot, particularly with the rifle. Very frequent in the assisted the negro who served the household in the carrying of water, the carrying wood and water for him and helped the better serve the duties that he might be called upon to perform in a log schoolhouse."

In one of two places the biographer draws aside the curtain and gives a glimpse at the inner spirit of young Harrison's home life, made intimate by the character of the mother, whose presence followed it.

"His mother was a most Christian woman, of remarkable sweetness of temper, and her spirit pervaded the household. $500 REWARD

The following reward was offered by the Progressive State Association of Indiana for the arrest and conviction of any person who has committed a crime of this nature in this state in good standing. J. S. ...

needed his services in the dark hour of 1862. This is the late general's own story of that incident.

"I went one day to see Governor Morton with Mr. Wallace to see an appointment as lieutenant for a young man in the northern part of the state. After getting through with this last news Governor Morton invited me to sit in a inner room. He there spoke of the call and of no response being made there.

"The governor seemed quite daunted at the result of the interview, and, pointing over toward the Gallin block, where men were dressing stout, remarked that men were interested in their own business more than in the safety of the nation. I said right there, 'Governor, if I can be of any service to my country I am ready to go.' He said: 'You can; you can raise a regiment of men for me.' He went on to say: 'You have a good office and it would be too much to ask you to take it up; but you get up the regiment and we can find some one else to take it to the field.'

"I said: 'No, if I make a recruiting speech and ask any man to enlist I regard it as going with him and stay as long as he does. If I live so long.' 'Well,' said the governor, 'you can command the regiment.' I said: 'I don't know that I shall want to, I have no military experience; you can see about that.'

His regiment belonged to the Army of the Cumberland in Tennessee and Kentucky. It was attached to the Twentieth Army corps, General Joe Hooker's command, during the Atlanta campaign, and General Harrison took the place of General Sherman as corps commander. In the reports of his superiors he was commended for courage and skill at the battles of Mission and Peach Tree Creek.

As General Hooker rode the lines on the day after Fort Trenchard Creek he shook his hand and said, 'Harrison, you'll find me a brigadier general for this fight.'

Hooker soon after wrote a highly complimentary letter to the general of war. While on temporary leave of absence to visit his family General Harrison was cut off from Atlanta to Atlanta by the Confederate invasion of Tennessee and northern Georgia. On the night following the evacuation of New Hope Church, says Lee Wallace, Colonel Harrison had his dead collected for burial. His regiment was ordered to take to a little farmhouse standing a short distance in the rear, and he went for the supplies. Unfortunately he and his detachment from the command in the kitchen, selfless and sympathetic, in their absence the colonel turned court and himself. Talking of his coat and his shirt to his officers, he set to stitching the wounds. He says, speaking of the circumstance:

"I don't know whether I did any service. I tried to."

He caused some tents to be torn up for bandages and needed instruments several hours before the surgeons appeared. When they came into the improvised hospital, they found the general with the blood which he had poured over his face.

"In the dim, flickering light of candles stuck in the floor he looked like a match instead of a general. The survivors of his regiment never forgot his tenderness and the sympathy which he showed for his men and his men."

General Harrison was a lifelong member of the church and was never known to absent himself from church services. It was during the battle of Seces, when his regiment held the post of danger, that he was first brought under his tent the circumstance:

"Our colonel was with us, too," says Mr. Wallace, "and he was very kind to charge. 'He came right up behind us when we captured the four miles there—the only guns that were taken in the Atlanta campaign. We had to withstand the murderous fire of the rebel guns, and as the ground and showed the shot to pass over our heads."

"Then we rushed up, seized the works and took possession of the guns. The boys tell a story of the general which I guess is true. They say that when he went into the works Harrison was with us and that he grabbed a rebel gunner by the board and yanked him out, shouting, 'Come out here, you skunk! Skunk! Skunk!' and the skunk was rather sulphurous words. If I remember rightly."

Of his later life, his presidential campaign, his career as chief executive, his second marriage and his brilliant reentry to the practice of law by means of which he made the bulk of his fortune after he had passed the age of threescore—all this is more or less familiar. During that time he had become a well-to-do man, and his heart beat as warmly and as kindly as ever, and the recent announcement of his passing away brought sincere regret to more thousands than most people would have thought.

Remarkable Railroad Order.

The superintendent of the Duluth division of the Chicago Great Western Railroad company has issued a sweeping order to its employees which has caused a sensation. It prohibits them from using intoxicating liquors in any form or at any time. It applies to trainmen, station agents, foremen and others who had responsibilities. It prohibits the drinking, eating, or offering saloons or using liquor on or off duty, the penalty for any violation of this rule being a single discharge of the offender. The order also commands all employees to pay their hotel bills and all failures to do so cause their immediate discharge unless a reasonable excuse can be given.
