SETS DAMAGED SHIP DOWN IN NORTH IRELAND

LONDONDERRY, Ireland, May 21.—Through rain and fog with an engine that slowly was giving away to the strain of many flying hours, Amelia Earhart Putnam today drove her red Lockheed monoplane safely across the Atlantic to a landing in a pasture outside this city.

NOT MUCH MONEY

By AMELIA EARHART, AS TOLD TO UNITED PRESS. LONDONDERRY, Ireland, May 21.—I felt confident I would reach land safely and I was not afraid in spite of the trouble with the plane. My chief regret is that I did not get to France.

Asking Equal Suffrage

"I shall ask nobody to vote for me because I am a woman. But I do insist that nobody shall vote against me for that reason. I am not asking for woman suffrage. I am asking for equal suffrage. I think all this talk about men running the state so much better than women has all been exploded more or less. Just let your mind ramble back for eight years with men and then remember the two years with just one woman and you will be ashamed that you ever said anything against a woman. If you think the last six years was not a fair sample of men, then go back to the six years before my administration. I had to clean up after that six years of Hooby and Neff, and now I have to do the same after two more of the same kind."

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

COME ALL THE WORLD:—Come, and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul.—Psalm 66: 16.

FARISH AND THE PETROLEUM INDUSTRY.

All thinking men realize that the oil industry probably means as much to any industry to the general prosperity and commerce of Texas. W. S. Farish, president of the Humble Oil and Refining company, delivered a very interesting address before the 20th annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce at San Francisco. Pres. Farish is widely known in petroleum circles and he dealt frankly with his subject and is said to have covered it thoroughly and completely. Now what was his subject? "What the Oil Industry Needs." It is the deliberate judgment of the Humble executive that the oil industry currently is in sounder economic condition than any other large industry in America. Further, that over the past two years, in the face of the greatest potential over-supply of its raw material, crude oil, "which it has ever been obliged to contend with, the oil industry has succeeded in controlling production to the point that it has actually reduced its burdensome above ground stock."

In his address, Mr. Farish asked his audience to compare this achievement with its record for the preceding 10 years during which, with a relatively much smaller potential supply, the industry despite its best efforts to avoid it built up a staggering load of excess crude and products in storage. Then he asked this question: "If our products are so essential to modern life that the demand for them continues undiminished through the stringent period of this greatest of all depressions, and if the collective intelligence of our industry has risen to a level which has enabled us so far to control the potential burden of new crude supply of overwhelming proportions, are we not justified in facing the future confidently and with equanimity?"

He admitted that with all its advantages the oil industry is beset with distressing and acute problems and advises that the prompt solution of these problems is imperative to its continued welfare. He declared no profit attended its last year's operation, and that financial reports for the year just ended showed meager earnings or actual losses for all the major companies in the industry. There was a reason for it, he said. Withdrawals from stocks were prompted by the anxiety to improve cash conditions, to turn inventories into cash.

As a result of this action, he pointed out, competition for volume of sale became so keen that prices were forced down to unprofitable levels. In the judgment of the president of the Humble company the fundamental cause of these low prices lies almost entirely in the fact that "for several years the current supply of crude oil in the United States has been so abundant so as to give refiners everywhere cheap raw material with which to make more gasoline than they could sell," and "the availability of crude oil has stimulated new refinery construction and new refineries as well as old have expanded their marketing facilities in order to dispose of their additional gasoline." Now what was the result of these activities? Let the president of the Humble company tell it. "The net result has been overburdening of these facilities throughout the industry and throughout the country as a large part of our population is served with a separate individual filling station for each 150 automobiles under license today."

His review of the world's oil business is one of the most interesting chapters of his address. For instance, nearly two-thirds of the present demand for oil rises in the United States, in other words, to quote the speaker, "the rest of the world consumes a little more than half as much oil as our country uses." Visible reserves of petroleum, we are told, aggregate some 20,000,000,000 barrels, less than one-half of which are situated in the United States, and the speaker predicted additional reserves are certain to be found in the future as they will have been in the past but in what quantity new reserves are to be expected or when they may be uncovered no one can predict with security. All in all, the Farish address covers all the ground from the viewpoint of an experienced and time tried executive who is identified with the petroleum game.

Betty Gow is in the land of the living. She did not commit suicide. She did not kidnap the murdered idol of the Lindbergh home. Betty Gow is in excellent health. Betty Gow was not exiled by the Lindberghs after the disappearance of the child. Betty Gow has held her place at Hopewell since the kidnapping. Betty Gow has the confidence and esteem of the Lindberghs. Betty Gow is of their household staff. Betty Gow has had her hands full in helping the other members of the staff in caring for a full house. Betty Gow daily accompanies Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh on her walks about the estate.

All this for the fiction writers. All this for the manufacturers of stuff which has been broadcast or has been given space in tabloid or turgid newspapers. Betty has been vindicated. She is not even a suspect. Now the cold-blooded traffickers in golden fleece as well as in the tears of distracted parents should be placed behind the bars. Why should mercy be shown them? It has been misquoted that money is the root of all evil; that gold maketh man mad. This is not true. It is the love of and the use of money that is the root of all evil. If there is a doubter then he is invited to read the contributions to Lindbergh literature by Curtis and Means and others of the tribe who were born with itching palms.

FIXING THE BLAME

THIS is a story about a little boy, a group of gangsters and a nation of 120,000,000 people. The little boy was born with a silver spoon in his mouth and died in a lonely thicket off a country road in New Jersey.

The gangsters slid up out of the underworld, stole the little boy from his parents, killed him—and made $50,000 out of the job.

And the nation of 120,000,000 people helped to call the gangsters into existence, helped to support them while they waited the chance to pull the job, and helped them, all things considered, to get away with it.

It did it without meaning to, without knowing what it did, without knowing, indeed, that it was doing anything except follow the easiest course.

It makes a House-that-Jack-Built sort of story, when you stop to think about it.

The House that Jack Built, of course, is that broad charming, energetic, upright and occasionally thoughtless country known as the United States of America. If you'll read to the end of this little story, you'll see why the House that Jack Built is a good name for it.

This, then, is the House that Jack Built.

Next, of course, we have the little boy who lived in the House that Jack Built. Then we have the gangsters who stole and murdered the little boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

Back of them we have the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

Next in line come the rackets—the booze racket, the gambling racket, the vice racket, the thousand and one allied rackets, but first and last and most important the booze racket—the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the house that Jack Built.

Then there are the crooked cops who tolerated the rackets—tolerated them partly because they got paid and partly because the higher-ups told them to—tolerated the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

Next we have the politicians who found the underworld useful, and who got a cut on its illegal earnings, and enlisted its leaders in their political machines and protected them and made it possible for them to thrive—the politicians who controlled the cops who tolerated the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

Back of the politicians we have the Big Shot—there's one in every big city, and sometimes more than one, and in each city this Big Shot has all of the town's important illegal activities right under his thumb—the Big Shot who fixed the politicians who controlled the cops who tolerated the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

Then we have the bootlegger—the ordinary, undistinguished bootlegger, who sometimes peddles his liquor from a suitcase and sometimes maintains a speakeasy or a beer flat—the bootlegger who paid the Big Shot who fixed the politicians who controlled the cops who tolerated the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

And then, last of all, looking quite innocent, we have the ultimate consumer; the bootlegger's customer, who gave the bootlegger the money which the bootlegger passed on down the line to the Big Shot, and which the Big Shot used to fix the politicians—

It's clear now, isn't it?

This is the man who bought the booze that enriched the bootlegger who paid the Big Shot who fixed the politicians who controlled the cops who tolerated the rackets that supported the underworld that produced the gangsters who killed the boy who lived in the House that Jack Built.

This is the man . . . who is he? Who but—you and I!

came from a class room one day, inquired: "What makes Mr. Brandon blush so?" "He told Mary she had poor form." "Well?" "She showed him where he was wrong."

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

For the last four weeks I have been endeavoring to get some photographs of big catches of fish at Lake Cisco this season from J. T. Elliott, Elliott, as city commissioner and general utility man for the lake, is charged with the responsibility of securing the necessary publicity for the resort. One may write reams of wordage about the thrill of snatching a fighting bass from the waters of the big resort and reservoir but there is nothing like a picture of the fish to put the spring fever in the veins of the sportsman. Now for four weeks I have been trying to induce Elliott to obtain some of these pictures. Elliott elected Dr. D. Ball to catch the fish. Dr. Ball, an expert at fly fishing, with numerous magnificent prizes to his credit, has agreed to do the catching if Elliott will row the boat. So far there haven't been any pictures.

W. M. Miller, former Cisco police chief and a candidate for sheriff in opposition to Virge Foster and "Kid" Hammett, conducts his campaign like a Frenchman cultivates his garden. He doesn't neglect the corners. In this instance the "corners" form a good-sized slice of the whole. At Bluff Branch Friday night there were 40 voters and 30 candidates. Miller spoke to the voters and canvassed the candidates. He figures that if he can cop the votes of the office-seekers he will win the election.

Sixty-four graduates of Cisco high school, in ranks of sober grey before the footlights of the high school stage Friday evening, heard an outstanding educator of the southwest deliver one of the most wholesome addresses I have ever heard made to a graduating class. Dr. E. M. Waits, president of Texas Christian university, laid down no specific rules of conduct or advice for the students.

"The set of the soul, and not the goal, determines the way you go," he quoted and told them that the great principles of truth and right direction will govern the success that each makes of life.

It occurred to me as I sat there listening that the percentage of profit from commencement addresses is so small that it is a wonder we have commencement addresses at all.

How many of those 64, bubbling with enthusiasm, happy with the false sense of release that the occasion implied, really took to heart what the grey-haired educator said? Very few perhaps. But the one or two that did profit are worth all the effort, the expense, the consecration that provided the courses of training and instruction whose completion was symbolized by the diploma that J. E. Spencer, secretary of the board of education handed out as the members of the class were presented by Supt. R. N. Cluck.

"Emerson," said Dr. Waits in the course of his address, "was of the opinion that civilization is but the lengthened shadows of a few great men." If such is the case one worthy graduate in a class of 64 is worth the price.

While the long line of youngsters, garbed in formal caps and gowns, filed from the corridor down the long aisle to the stage, the shrill voice of a small negro standing near the door, was heard above the excitement: "Boy, ain't they graduatin', though!"

H. Brandon, once taught English, but the ambiguity of the language forced the serious-minded professor to quit the chair permanently. Someone, noting his blushes as he came from a class room one day, inquired: "What makes Mr. Brandon blush so?" "He told Mary she had poor form." "Well?" "She showed him where he was wrong."

LETTERS TO SPECTACLES.

Dear Editor: It is said that the "Eastland County Confederate Association" was the first organization of its kind in the state of Texas.

The preliminary meeting was held in County Clerk John T. Yeargin's office in Eastland on February 8, 1886. Those present were Dr. S. H. Stout, Col. George W. Shannon, John T. Yeargin, W. H. Day, Harry Hallum, J. T. Hammonds, C. R. Johnson, Capt. J. I. Steele and Jim Kimble.

The constitution and by-laws were adopted at a subsequent meeting held in Eastland on April 3, 1886. At this time more than a hundred Confederate soldiers met and ascribed their names on this honor roll.

Later there were 493 names on the membership roll. This organization owned five and a half acres of land just north of the Texas & Pacific railroad depot at Eastland. For more than 25 years the annual reunion and picnic was the most important event in the annals of Eastland county. Finally dwindling numbers caused the association to disband and surrender its charter.

There is no doubt but what there are several hundred unmarked graves of these Confederate soldiers in Eastland county. The United States government through the war department will now furnish a handsome headstone for any unmarked Confederate soldier's grave. These headstones are from the Georgia marble quarries and measure thirty-six inches in height by sixteen inches in width and have the name of the soldier with his rank and date of death in the marble slab.

These headstones are furnished absolutely free, even the freight to the destination is paid. No, of course you would not. Then is it

If any friend or relative of a confederate soldier will give us the information we will be pleased to make out the papers and send them to Washington to get one of these headstones. There is absolutely no expense in connection with this service.

Letters From Our Readers

Editor Cisco Daily News:

Fellow citizens, men and women of Texas, the time is fast approaching when you must decide who is to be your representatives in state government for the next two years; issues are so vitally important in the every day life of every citizen of this state that you cannot afford to sit idly by and let the other fellow think and vote for you. If your house was on fire and your baby girl was in an up-stair room of that house, would you sit idly by and let the house burn? Of course you would not, you would tear the very shirt off your back trying to get that baby out. My friends, that is exactly what is going on in Texas today; right now! Your house and mine are on fire, your children and mine are in jeopardy such as the world has never seen before in the history of men. Are we going to submit to sit idly by and see our homes and our families robbed and pillaged before our very eyes. For God's sake, men and women, wake up, think where we are, and what has happened to us. Go to the July primary 100 per cent strong and vote, vote a rebuke to the rascals who have put you into this plight, that they will go down like the "Titanic," that great steamship that was sunk in 1912, with all its vast cargo of human freight when 1630 innocent people met their fate. My friends, would you go back to the bank with your deposits of money earned by the sweat of your brow, time after time when that bank had gone broke and swept away your little deposit? No, of course you would not. Then is it possible that you will go back to same old gang in control of our state government, who have robbed you year after year and re-instate them to do it over again and again? I know you will not do that if you stop to think the matter through, and if you do not think this year I submit this fact to you: It will be everlastingly too late to do it next year, or the next. You'll be so thoroughly smashed you cannot do it then. If I had the voice of the thunder I would send the warning into the remotest corner of our fair state, like Paul Revere of old I would try to warn you of the impending danger. If I could take the "Wings of the Morning" I would fly to you with the message: For God's sake, for the sake of your family and yourself, think.

The immortal Washington said, "everlasting vigilance is the price of liberty," men and women of Texas that warning stands today as it

the MAN HUNTERS BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY Susan Carey, 20 and beautiful, has become engaged to Ernest Heath, her former employer. She is secretly in love with Bob Dunbar, millionaire's son whom she met at business school.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII

Ernest Heath did not fully understand the impulse that drove him to call on Susan before dinner. He could not have explained it to himself, but here he was rushing along in a taxi through the familiar, shabby streets. It was curious, he mused, that this drab environment could have produced a girl such as Susan.

He felt suddenly humble, suddenly afraid. He had never expected life to be so good to him. He had given up hope and now, amazingly, a whole new vista had been shown him.

Heath dismissed the driver at the corner and paid the fare. Suddenly he began to feel rather foolish about his unannounced visit. It was simply that he had felt he must see Susan at once. There was no rhyme or reason to the impulse. He was moved by one of those inexplicable promptings which occasionally change and color an entire life.

That was Susan's voice. There was trouble in it and pain. "Go. Without meaning to, without conscious design Heath listened. What was that she was saying? "I can't possibly do it now! I've given my word and I mustn't go back on it."

The girl's voice sounded as though she had been weeping. "I can't! I can't! I tell you!" Wildly the words went on. "Oh, why did we find each other too late? Why couldn't you have told me all this last summer? I would have been so perfect then."

The man in the shadow waited to hear no more. Quietly he went down the steps. So that was the way of it then! He felt no anger, only a deep and abiding sadness. What a fool he had been! Of course the child would turn to someone of her own age. Why shouldn't she? It was as natural as a flower turning toward the sun.

Simon began to ask questions but his employer stopped him brusquely. "I've changed my plans, that's all," he said. "Get along like a good boy and drop that in the box."

land walked in the park, scarcely knowing which way their steps led them. They had argued but Susan had been adamant. It was no use. She could not break her word at the eleventh hour.

There was something of the martyr in her peripatry. As any rate she had not been able to bring herself to give Bob the promise he wanted. He had been angry. He had said some cruel and cutting things. And then locking sideways at her down-cast profile, he had begged her pardon. There had been a poignant sweetness about this intermittent quarrelling and reconciliation. A true lovers' meeting. But Susan had stiffened her spine and sent him away at last. What she was to do later when her high courage ebbed, she did not dare to think.

Mrs. Milton was in the dining room helping a young colored girl to lay the table cloth.

"No, you've got it on upside down," Feeny. Mrs. Milton said patiently. "Turn it over again. You may as well do it right while you're about it."

She followed Susan into the room which the girl was sharing with Rose.

"That Feeny doesn't know whether she's coming or going," Mrs. Milton complained. Then her attention centered on Susan. "You haven't been wandering around in that outfit!" she exclaimed, scandalized.

Susan was aghast. She had completely forgotten she was wearing her wedding clothes. When Bob had come earlier in the afternoon and urged her to go for a walk so they might talk, Susan had agreed without thinking. Now it seemed to her she had been intensely disloyal.

"I completely forgot," she murmured in confusion.

Mrs. Milton's shrewd eyes narrowed. "I said to myself when I heard the front door slam, 'Susan has got rid of that caller in double quick time.' Then I waited and waited and when I went into the living room and didn't find you I couldn't imagine where you'd gone."

Susan was scarlet. "I guess I'm fairly willful," she said.

To her relief, Mrs. Milton quizzed her no further. The woman said as she turned to go, "Well, I guess a girl has a right to behave queerly the week before she's married. Most of 'em do. I notice. Just don't mislay yourself. That's all I ask."

"I won't," Susan promised fervently. With the door shut on her hostess, the girl went to the mirror and stared appraisingly at her own reflection. Surely the dullest observer could have guessed what had happened. Her skin glowed with a faint luminous quality. Her eyes were starry under their preposterous lashes. Her breath came and went quickly as she thought of what Bob had said. He had been masterful and she liked him to be. But she was glad to remember that she had stood out against him proudly. She almost laughed, remembering the fierce set line of his jaw at what he had termed her stubbornness.

She shrugged her shoulders, determining to put this scene away in some quiet corner of her memory. She could not with honor go on thinking of Bob. With a new sobriety she took off the lovely suit and hung it away, slipping into her sober office dress for the evening meal. Tomorrow Aunt Jessie would be home and the hours would be crowded until Monday morning when she would be married.

Married! The word struck on her heart like a knell. Susan was glad when Rose bustled in a few minutes later, bundle laden and bringing with her a breath of cool, night air. "Is your man coming tonight?" Rose wanted to know. Susan said he wasn't. He had had to go to a dinner at the club.

"Well, I won't say I'm sorry," cried Rose. "We can have a comfortable, gossipy evening. What have you been doing all day?"

Susan said, "Nothing much." She had been for a walk. She hoped her voice did not betray her.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON JACOB, ESAU RECONCILED

Text: Gen. 33:1-11 The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for May 22.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.

The reconciliation of Jacob and Esau came late, but it was very effective when it came. Probably it was made possible by the fact that both men had grown in wisdom and also in moral outlook and character since the day when slackness in the one man and duplicity in the other had brought tragic separation between the brothers.

On the whole, the story of the reconciliation is more creditable to Esau than to Jacob, and it does much to restore the balance in one's estimate of the character of the man who sold his birthright.

Esau was the aggrieved party; the concessions were almost entirely on his side. Jacob approached their meeting with fear—a fear that was born of a guilty conscience. He knew that he had wronged his brother and his common sense led him to expect a "warm" reception.

However, Jacob had largely outgrown his selfishness and his trickery. Responsibility had sobered him, and it was to his credit that he was evidently more concerned for the safety of the women and children than for himself. At any rate, he protected them and went forward himself to meet the risk and the possible wrath of his brother.

He bowed himself to the ground seven times in token of his humility the great company with Jacob he was moved further. The things that Jacob had brought to win his favor he refused to accept, pleading that he had enough and offering rather a present on his own behalf.

It is a delightful interlude, or climax in the story of the two brothers. The narrative lights up the whole drama like sunlight pouring through the clouds on a dark and troubled day.

The man of aggressive, selfish ambition may become a strong and noble character when he is purged from his meanness and duplicity; and on the other hand a man who lacks ambition, who is rather slack and indifferent, may become a very gentle and admirable character when he orders his life aright, faithful in the things that are needful, but unselfish, and generous, and free entirely from greed and acquisitiveness.

The story is a record of how men of very diverse natures and characters may, under the operation of right forces, alike come to the better way of life. And it reveals how the finer things of character—fairness, courage, unselfishness and magnanimity—outlive all achievements of aggressiveness and acquisitiveness. Men are remembered ultimately for what they have been rather than for what they have gotten.

CISCO SOX MEET BRECK AT 3:30 P. M.

This afternoon at 3:30 the Red Sox will play the final game of a three game series with Breckenridge. So far this season the two teams have broken even, Cisco winning the first game 4-3 and losing the second by the same score. The Dynamoes have bolstered their team until it is one of the strongest in the state and are out to take the sugar game from Cisco. Red Cockrell, the Breckenridge ace has been returned to them by Pine Bluff and is slated to do the twirling. Charlie Bryan is due to pitch for the Red Sox.

The Cisco infield will be the strongest put on the field in several weeks due to the return of George Van Horn at his position on second base. Van Horn has been out of the lineup temporarily due to an old football injury which early this season. His position has been capably filled by Leonard Hill, Red Sox utility infielder but so far Hill has shown a weakness hitting at curve balls, however he is the type of hitter who is dangerous and has been valuable for three seasons as a utility man. Van Horn is the best lead-off man in the state, getting many walks and is at present hitting at a .400 clip. Phippen on third the Red Sox will boast a classy fielding aggregation and one that packs power at bat.

The price of admission this season has been cut to twenty-five cents with women admitted free. The team is backed by the John Williams Butts Post of the American Legion, this organization deserves credit and support from the people of Cisco for the work that they have been doing the past few years toward helping unfortunate people and for the town in general. Cisco is getting a class of baseball that is as good as any class C or D League in the country and fans of the national pastime are promised a season of high class baseball.

2 TEXANS WIN APPOINTMENTS TO WEST POINT

AUSTIN, May 21. — Richard Henry Carmichael, Austin, and Cecil Combs, Dallas, have each been awarded one of the 20 presidential nominations to the United States Military Academy at West Point which are given annually to members of state national guard units.

Carmichael and Combs won their appointments by making highest grades in a series of competitive examinations which began last summer at the Texas national guard encampment. In the first examination they were highest of 12 boys selected to represent Texas. The 12 were then sent to the West Point Preparatory school at Fort Sam Houston where a second examination was held in November. Carmichael and Combs again led the class and were designated by Governor Ross Sterling as his nomination.

The third and final test came in March with more than 100 boys from every state national guard in the union competing for the 20 appointments. The Texans again survived, and will report on July 1 for admission as cadets.

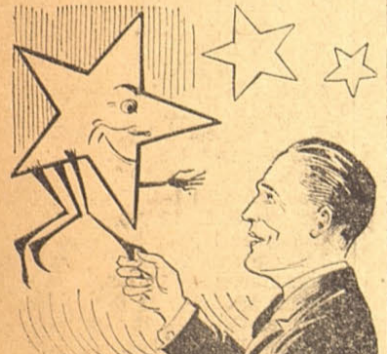

Carmichael is a staff sergeant in the Texas National guard while Combs ranks as a corporal. They have received a letter of congratulation from Governor Sterling on their appointments.

Carmichael is the son of Lt. Col. H. H. Carmichael, assistant adjutant general.

The two Texas youths will report at West Point academy on June 1.

CANDID TAX ASSESSOR

John Hart, whose name appears in the announcement column of this paper is one of the best known Eastland county's people. He is making the race for tax assessor and asks a careful consideration of his candidacy by the voters.

Having been honored by the people of the county in the past by being elected tax collector in 1929, and that he filled the office in a manner that was a credit to himself is proven by the record he left. He declares this can be verified by the immense savings to the tax payers by rechecking the tax rolls and finding double veriditions on the same property amounting to thousands of dollars. While collector Hart instituted a notification system of sending out cards advising the tax payer the amount of his current taxes, also a poll tax order, thereby enabling him to fill out his poll tax order and pay his taxes through the mail. While this was a small matter, yet it proved a great convenience and saving to the tax payers, especially those that live away from the county seat and didn't want to make a trip there in person in order to pay their taxes. Especially was this true as to payment of poll tax, and many voters retained their privilege of voting by filling out one of the poll tax orders and dropping it in the mail.

When his tenure of office expired Eastland county people elected him sheriff where he made another record as that which he left in the collector's office in a clerical capacity.

While he was sheriff the most heinous murder cases in criminal annals of the county, with the possible exception of the brutal murder of Hugh Maples, occurred. These were the Shock murders and the "Santa Claus" bank robbery. It was while John Hart was sheriff that these charged with these crimes were arrested, tried and convicted, each drawing a capital sentence. While the public gives much of the credit of convicting criminals to the prosecuting attorney, yet behind the prosecutor is the sheriff's department who is never spectacular in the part it plays in being instrumental in convictions, but his is the part to gather up the evidence on which the prosecutor bases his prosecution and the pleadings to the jury that convicts criminals and protects society in the daily walks of life. Without an efficient sheriff your prosecutor could do but little, as he is the right hand bowler to the district attorney in all law enforcement.

Aside from his official record, which he points to with pride, Hart may be classed as a self made man, and he did not do so bad at that. A son of one of the most honorable couples of Eastland county, Mr. and Mrs. Ike Hart, his parents were of modest means and not financially able to give him the educational advantages his ambition craved, so he attended school and paid his own expenses by such honest labor as he could find. Often this labor was arduous, for whether it was janitor work for his tuition, farm work or cutting and hauling cord-wood, he tackled each job in the same manner that he exercised in his official capacity—Ever having as his motto "Whatever is to be done should be done most efficiently."

After finishing school he secured a teachers certificate and taught school for six years, then did postal work with the Cisco postoffice.

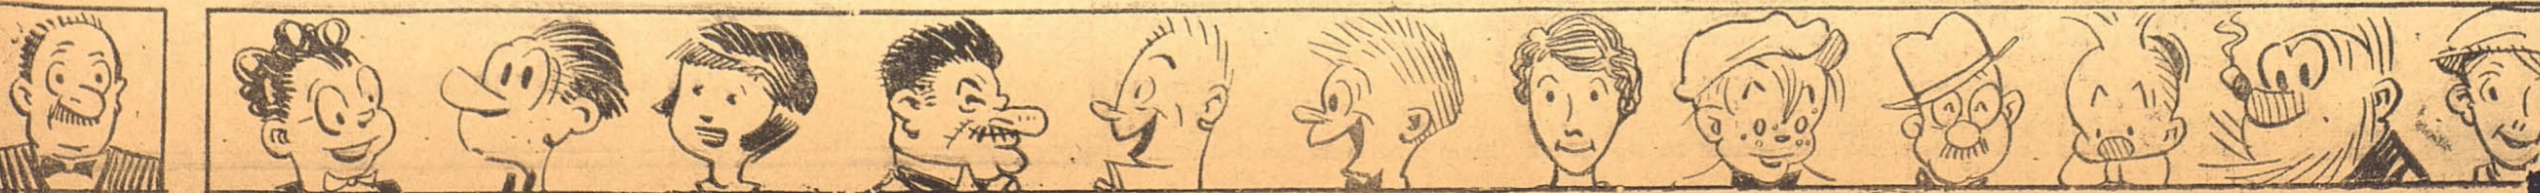

The call of the farm lured him, and after returning to the farm he was elected tax collector.

Now Hart is asking the people to elect him tax assessor. His experience, both on the farm and tax collectors office splendidly equips him for the office he seeks. He understands the technical features by reason of his official experience, and having been born and reared on the farm and being engaged in farming since retirement from public office his practical knowledge of farm life and farm values will be splendid experience in enabling him to make equitable assessments of farm and other property values. He knows values, as they were in prosperous years, and as they now exist.

But his experience will enable him to properly appraise personal and intangible values, so if you elect John Hart you are assured you will have a tax assessor who knows his duty and who has the courage to do it.
