Cisco Schools Begin New Term Monday at 9 o'Clock

CHANGES IN COURSES OF STUDY MADE

The public schools of Cisco will open their doors to students for the 1931-32 term tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock with exercises at the various buildings. The program at the high school has been designed as much for the patrons of the schools as for the students. Information for the benefit of both will be given at that time. Supt. R. N. Cluck announced.

This will include explanations of the various changes that have been made in the system of instruction and the organization of the school, as well as information on other and minor details concerning the operation of the institutions. Every person who is interested in the conduct of the schools is urged to be present at these exercises.

Enrollment of pupils will not begin until Monday morning immediately after the exercises. Experience has shown, Mr. Cluck stated, that registration of students before the opening day does not eliminate the necessity of devoting the opening day to this work because of the large number of students who do not present themselves before hand. Consequently it has been deemed advisable to refrain from planning class work for the first day and to devote it strictly to registration and classification.

Seniors and juniors will be registered Monday morning and the afternoon will be devoted to registration of sophomores and freshmen. All new students are directed to bring their report cards and book cards with them.

Laboratory fees have been reduced from last year. Library fees will remain the same. Students are expected to bring their fees with them when presenting themselves for registration.

In view of the reorganization of the courses of study, freshmen should advise with their parents before determining upon the courses they are to take. Mr. Cluck said.

New Grouping

This new grouping of courses of study has been announced as follows: Beginning with the session 1931-32, students in the high school will be graduated from departments. Special attention of sophomores and freshmen is directed to these new groupings as outlined below, so that there will be no difficulty in meeting the requirements. The change, although instituted this year, will be applied flexibly for the first year so as to assist the students in adjusting their work to its requirements. It was pointed out.

Under the provisions of the change a student who has taken a certain course for a year, will be permitted to change, if he desires, but in such case he must meet all of the requirements of the new course and this, in instances, may entail loss of units already obtained.

The first three courses outlined here are designed for pupils expecting to attend college after completion of the high school work.

Science Math Course

AS "BLUEBEARD" TOLD HOW HE KILLED FIVE

As "bluebeard" confessed — Harry F. Powers, suave 45-year-old West Virginian, is shown here, right, with Detective Carl Southern of Clarksburg as the confessed mass murderer of five signed the confession in which he told how he lured his women victims through a matrimonial agency and then hanged them in his garage.

Hangman's noose — A corner of Powers' garage where he says he hanged his victims with the rope indicated by the arrow and then dropped them into his subterranean chamber.

CISCO SCHOOL PRINCIPALS SEEK TO ESTABLISH CLOSER CONTACT BETWEEN SCHOOLS AND PATRONS

In response to request of the Daily News the following principals of the schools in the Cisco system have written articles dealing with various questions concerning relation of the public to the schools. By this means the News has endeavored to bring closer together the public and those charged with responsibility for the successful conduct of the schools and to increase a sense of the public interest and the need of cooperation between patrons and school officials and teachers.

CHANGES IN POLICY

By H. BRANDON
Principal of High School

Realizing that certain changes in the administrative policy of the high school are greatly needed in order to promote higher scholastic attainment, we think it wise to make changes relative to our recitation periods and the plan of graduation. It is hoped that these changes will create an incentive on the part of the students to reach a higher scholastic level and that the patrons will cooperate with the administration in raising the standards of our school.

The Hour Recitation Plan

The experiments of other schools have proven this plan to be very effective in making the pupils more efficient in their work. Under this plan, approximately one-third of the hour of the day will be devoted to supervised study. If the teacher makes it the proper use of this time, the pupil who is ordinarily slow in grasping the work will have an opportunity for a more thorough explanation than could be given in the old forty-five minute period. Not only will it be an advantage for the slow pupil, but it will tend to make the more alert child more efficient.

The Plan For Graduation

In order to give public recognition to the attainments of the graduates, the class will be graduated in groups as follows: those who graduate with high honors; those graduating with honors; and those who merely graduate. To facilitate the proper grouping, we are instituting the Point System. Under this plan a grade of 90 and above will have a value of 3 credit points; 82 through 89 a value of 2 credit points; and 75 through 81 a value of 1 credit point. The semester grades of each pupil that are recorded will be converted to credit points at an early date in order that each pupil may know his or her official standing.

To be eligible for graduation, a student must have earned 16 affiliated units and a minimum of 45 credit points; 32 of which must be based upon literary work. The remaining 13 points may be earned either through extra-curricular activities or superior grades. A minimum of 4 credit points for extra-curricular activities will be required of all graduates.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL HAS UNIQUE PLACE

By O. L. STAMEY
Principal of Grammar School

A few days hence the school buildings of the nation will become centers of activity for the training of our nation's youth.

The Grammar school of Cisco, as other schools of its type, has a unique place in the program of education. It has to do with the "in-between stage" and at that particular place in the school life of the individual, everything becomes extremely interesting; the pupil in turn making it interesting for parents and teachers.

There is one principle upon which all people who deal with children can agree and that is the desirability of training them. The child of from ten to fifteen certainly should be no exception in this process of training, for his guidance is of vital importance and must be carefully done. It is with this idea in mind and this end in view that the faculty of the Grammar school works.

Another thing to be considered is that this is the "Awkward" age, and the age of "imagination" during which time the child cannot be pushed aside or suppressed without lasting injury, he should have sympathy and

STERLING TO CALL COTTON SESSION TUES.

HOUSTON, Sept. 5. — Governor Ross Sterling said tonight that he will call the Texas legislature in special session at noon Tuesday to consider remedies for the cotton situation. The governor was at his home here.

"It will be a farmers' session and they'll have to ramrod it themselves," said the governor. "I'm going fishing tomorrow."

"They say 19 of the 31 state senators favor a special session for acreage reduction, but I haven't heard from that many," said the executive.

Sterling's call for the legislature came a week after Governor Huey P. Long rushed here by airplane to urge a call for a session to consider the possibility of relief from the overproduction which had sent the price of cotton to 6 cents.

Through the spectacular Long plan precipitated the agitation which resulted in Sterling's decision to call a special session there appeared little chance tonight of its being adopted by the legislature.

Officials of the Texas cotton cooperative association tonight said that the so-called McDonald plan of a 50 per cent reduction in acreage had been favored by 20,000 farmers at mass meetings this week in preference to the Long plan of a complete ban on cotton for a year.

GEORGIA SESSION IS CERTAIN

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 5. — A special session of the Georgia legislature to consider cotton relief became a mere formality late today when Governor Ross Sterling of Texas announced he would call the Texas legislature in special session for September 8. Governor Richard B. Russell, Jr. of Georgia, announced earlier in the week that all he was waiting upon was the announcement from Texas.

Couple Killed for Revenge, Say Police

HOUSTON, Sept. 5.—C. A. Jones and his pretty wife were slain to avenge the "ride" killing of Johnny Cherris.

That was the theory advanced by officers today as they sought one of the two men charged with Cherris' murder.

A. J. Jones, brother of C. A., was charged with Cherris' murder late yesterday, after being closeted with the grand jury for hours. He made a long statement which officers believed cleared up one angle of Houston's three gangland slayings of the week.

School Organization Changes Explained

By R. N. CLUCK
Superintendent of Schools

The opening of a new school year is at hand. As we enter this new year, our object should be to make it the very best school year in the history of Cisco. In order to accomplish this, it is necessary to have the cooperation of every student, teacher, school executive, and last but not least, the cooperation of every parent is needed. The enthusiasm, the ambition, the interest, and the patience of parents will go further toward our goal of making this a successful school year than any other element in school administration.

Of course, we need excellent teachers who are fully qualified and wholly capable of directing the student in his educational life. Certainly we need ambitious wide-awake studious pupils who are really eager to be guided by these teachers; but these two factors, as necessary as each may be, are inadequate. Their untiring efforts are partially futile when that other very influential factor, the cooperative parent, is not present. Parents can either make a school by their enthusiasm their interest and their close association with it, or they can break it by their disinterest and dilatory. A successful school is the result of the right kind of parents more than the right kind of teachers and pupils. If the patrons of Cisco could realize fully their responsibility as educators, our hardest problem of educating would be solved.

Fals Attitude

It is a false, yet very prevalent attitude among parents here and elsewhere that they have no part in the education of the child. Their task, as they conceive it, is to send the boy or girl to school, place him in the hands of the teacher, and expect these two, the teacher and pupil, to work out a successful educational program for the child. This is a mistaken conception of what actually constitutes the essential elements of education. It is the parents who owe it to their children to see that each one of them receives at least a free high school education. To fulfill this obligation they must realize that parents are the real educators of their children.

Recognizing the significant place that parents have in the school program of this our new year, we have published for your benefit just as

Honor Point System

Another element which is certain to make for a stronger school in the literary phase is the honor point system. As has been explained elsewhere, the honor point system means that a student graduating from this school must have a certain number of honor points. At the concluding exercises of the school, there will be three types of graduates: first, the high honor graduates composed of the boy and the girl who have highest honors; second, honor graduates, those who have a certain number of honor points; third, graduates, those who have completed the course prescribed for the eleventh grade. The object of the honor point system is to rid the student of the idea of simply getting by. In order to graduate, he must have a certain number of honor points. This will raise the literary standards of the school. The student's mind will be free from the idea of simply getting by and he will strive to get as many honor points as possible. We feel that any student who has spent four years in high school and does not give a higher average than 75 over his work needs to spend another year in high school.

Beginning with this year, we are initiating in the high school new requirements for graduating, or in

Woman Charged in Thefts From College

BROWNWOOD, Sept. 5. — Miss Jewel Casey bursar of Howard Payne college was at liberty here tonight under $5,000 bond to await grand jury action on two charges of embezzling the college's funds.

Thomas H. Taylor, president of the Baptist school, said about $36,000 of its funds had been "taken" during the last several years. Miss Casey however, is charged only with embezzling checks for $154 and $164 last December.

She has been bursar of the college since 1920.

Newcastle Newly formed Farmers' Cooperative association bought Keith Gin.

PROPERTY AT SIXTH AND E IS ACCEPTED

The treasury department of the United States government Saturday announced selection of the Guy Dabney proposal property as the site for the federal building to be located here. Mr. Dabney served as agent for three participating owners of the property, which will be purchased for an announced price of $12,500, according to the United Press dispatch.

The property abuts the north and west lines of the intersection of E. avenue and Sixth street, fronting 250 feet on Sixth street and 115 feet on E avenue. It contains 23,200 square feet and consists of lots six, seven, eight, nine and ten of block 53 of the original townsite.

Owners of the property are Mrs. A. F. Slater, Wm. Reagan and the Twentieth Century club. This property was reliably reported to have been priced $2,000 less than the next acceptable site offered.

The city commission, according to records at the city hall, some time ago adopted a resolution to pave around any site selected by the government. If that is carried out, the city will have one-half block on F avenue and an alley.

Plans for the Cisco building are practically completed. It is understood and actual work is expected to begin on the structure by the first of January.

WES HODGES, YOUNG BRECKENRIDGE EDITOR, DIES

Wesley D. Hodges, 24, editor of the Breckenridge American, died Saturday morning at 9:50 o'clock at a Breckenridge sanitarium from an attack of peritonitis following an appendicitis operation Thursday. His condition until Friday evening was considered normal but the complication which set in at that time rapidly became grave. Saturday morning at 9:50 o'clock attending physicians announced that hope of his recovery had been abandoned. Forty minutes later the youthful newspaperman expired.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the First Methodist church at Breckenridge. Interment in the Breckenridge cemetery will follow. The Rev. Kenneth Pope, pastor of the First Methodist church, and the Rev. Ross Smith, pastor of the First Baptist church, of that city, will officiate. The funeral will be preceded by prayer services for the family at the home.

Active pall bearers will be M. Smith, L. D. Deane, J. D. Sandlin, Jr., Porter Daniel, John Ward and E. Henrich.

Surviving are his widow, whom he married at Breckenridge about two years ago; his mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. R. N. Hodges, of San Angelo, and two brothers, Robt. H. Hodges, of Breckenridge, and Mr. Hodges, who came to Breckenridge from San Angelo in 1928 as a porter on the American. In that capacity he served until about ten years ago when, with the resignation of A. Garland Adair as editor he was promoted to that position.

As editor of the Breckenridge paper he early gained the esteem of his townspeople his contemporaries in the oil belt and elsewhere. He proved himself an energetic, diligent and conscientious journalist, a booster and believer in his community and one who promised with long experience to achieve a brilliant future in the profession.

His unexpected death has come as a shock to the profession and to those who came in contact with him who work.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

A SAFE FORTRESS:—As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even for ever.—Psalm 125: 2.

A SECRET RETREAT:—Hear my voice, O God, in my prayer; preserve my life. Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked.—Psalm 64: 1, 2.

WE NEED ACTION.

Some time ago the Daily News spoke editorially upon the urgency of undertaking a satisfactory settlement of our municipal bonded debt question. The News pointed out that the uncertain and threatening conditions that hang over the city as the result of this question are stifling our municipal spirit and restricting the natural growth to which, by advantages of location and resources, Cisco is entitled. It further pointed out that the responsibility for undertaking a settlement of this question is indubitably imposed upon the city commission. The members of that commission were elected with that responsibility in mind, and every citizen who cast a vote, cast it in the conviction that he was voting for action. He was not voting simply to give some other citizen a job, or to provide the elected with a political sinecure to be perpetuated through carefully constructed political rings and machines ironically justified by the "voice of the people."

Cisco has had enough of political rings. The great mass of its citizens, the real mind of the public, which is not expressed through anonymous, ill-informed and purposely destructive propaganda inspired purely for a political purpose, is deeply resentful of the very term.

Yet there are conscientious public officials who tremble every time some self-styled spokesman of the "masses" mentions the "voice of the people," and vacillate on issues that demand above everything common sense and honest, single-minded effort. For the benefit of these it should be pointed out that "the voice of the people," as sacred a thing as it is, does not know how to get what it wants. The very system of government under which we operate is evidence of that fact. The public, bearing in mind its constitutional guarantees of the rights of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," denies its mass ability to achieve these objects and delegates powers to constitutionally authorized agents whose responsibility it is to provide the means, recognizing at the same time their stewardship and the necessity of giving an accounting of it at regular intervals.

It should be clear to our commission that it cannot look without itself for a solution to the pressing question that confronts it. In view of the very object of its existence it alone can undertake that solution. It cannot sit supinely down and wait for the solution to come to it. Its duty is to make an honest effort, regardless of thought of political consequences, and unless it does that it is shirking its responsibilities.

The News has always sought to support the elected representatives of the people. It has and will continue to exert its influence to help them in the performance of their duties for the interests of Cisco. It has not made a practice of carping criticism, of unjust censure that hampers them. The men who compose our present body are fine, able men, conscientious and, above all, honest. They deserve the support of the public and they will gain that support in a definite, determined movement toward the accomplishment of the purpose for which they were elected.

Obviously the first essential to a settlement of this problem is a well-defined, if flexible, plan of operation. Some major steps have been taken in this direction but the lack of a united purpose seems to be the most apparent feature of these steps. If the commission has not and is unable to provide itself with such a suitable program, its members by all means should consult capable and experienced authorities for direction.

The News deems it its duty, as the recognized medium of local public expression and information, to point out these facts, kindly, but none the less firmly. To censure is not part of its intention. Instead it stands willing and eager to help in any able program of relief. But, on the other hand, it does not intend to stand supinely by and countenance, unannounced, delay and uncertainty that threaten to prevent the necessary action until it is too late.

LAW ENFORCEMENT.

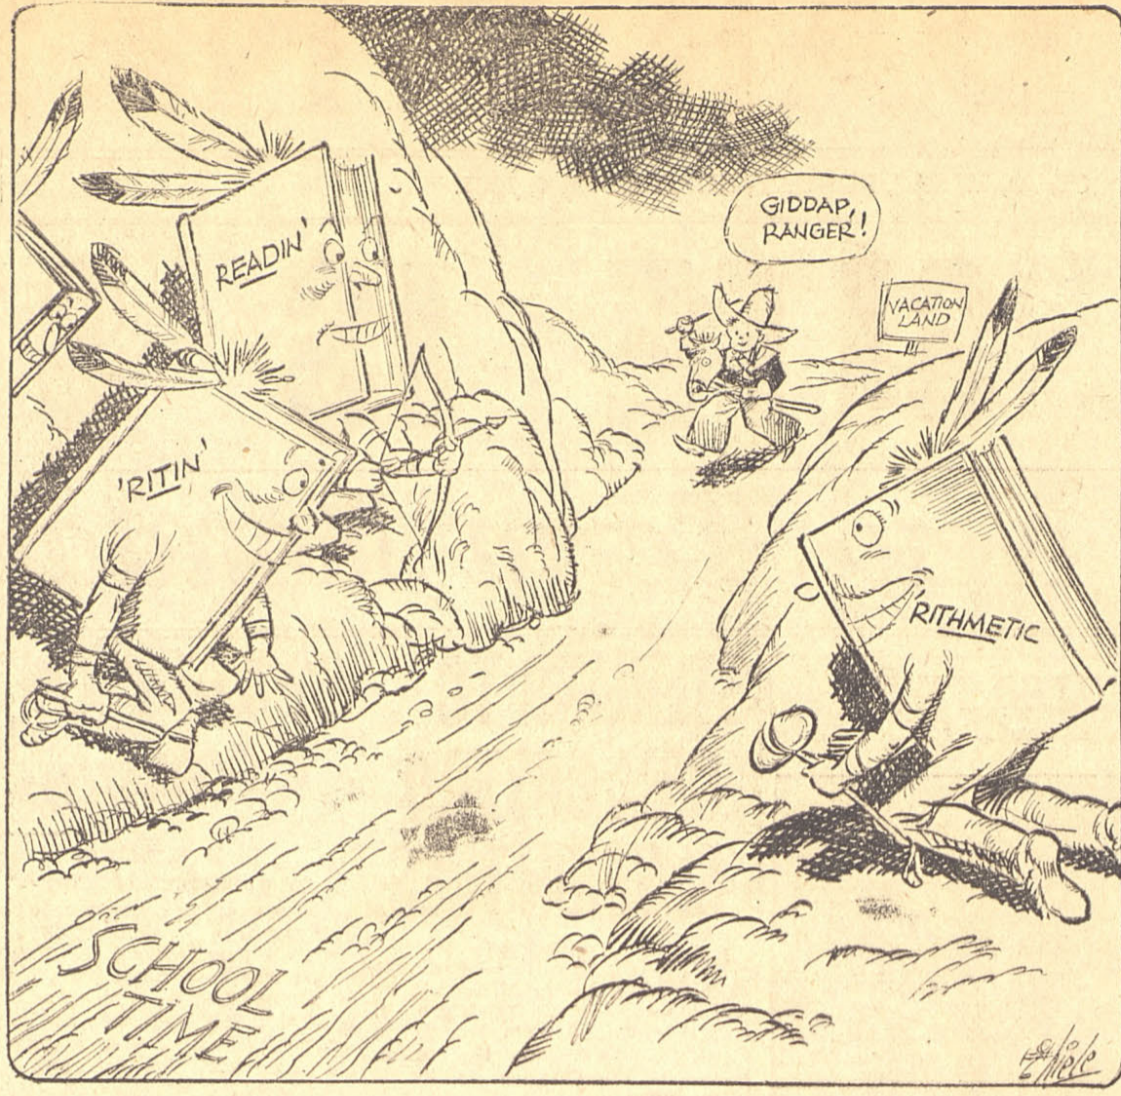

"London, the largest city in the world—larger by two million inhabitants than New York—is deeply humiliated by the fact that there were 21 murders in that city during 1930," comments the Marshall Morning News editorially. The cause for this is the fact that the number of murders dropped from 10 in 1929. We wonder how deep would be the humiliation if London approached the terrible slaughter that exists in this country. Chicago had 364 murders in 1930 and New York followed with 346. But, as the Denison Herald points out, Southern cities, many of them at least, have a higher murder record, according to population, than either of the two great American metropolises.

"Of the 21 men who committed murders in London," continues the Marshall News by way of contrasting English law enforcement results with our own, "20 of them were apprehended, six of them committed suicide before their trial, seven were given the death penalty, two were given long sentences and one was declared justifiable homicide."

The Marshall paper then quotes the Denison Herald in pointing out the vast difference in the number of murders in England and the United States, as follows:

"In England a convicted murderer, unless it is proven to have been justifiable homicide, gets the death penalty. In the United States the death penalty means just that. Instead of appeals, retrials, legal technicalities and delays, the sentence is

In "Young As You Feel," his latest Fox starring picture, Will Rogers discards the personal habits of a lifetime on stage or screen as a well-groomed, Bond Street tailored gentleman.

Rogers has not gone Hollywood. His striking wardrobe is a definite part of the very human characterization Rogers portrays as "Lemuel Morehouse," dyspeptic, grouchy old fogey who is compelled to turn ultra-modern as an example for his two sons.

"Young As You Feel," which is the screen version of George Ade's hilarious play, "Father And The Boys" and which opens today at the Palace theatre deals with the widowed father of two modern sons, a man who has devoted his life to their interest and who wishes them to settle down to business and become happy, contented husbands.

The boys, however, have other ideas. One goes in heavily for society while the other makes of sport a mania. Then Rogers resorts to desperate measures. A revolution takes place in his character, brought about by a chance meeting with a professional entertainer, portrayed by Fifi Dorsay, with whom Rogers made so much hilarity in "They Had To See Paris."

From a staid, opinionated dyspeptic, set-in-his ways old fogey Rogers changes overnight into a gay blade. His neglect of business is appalling to his general manager, played by Lucien Littlefield, and a decided shock to his sons; but Rogers and Fifi ignore all protests and continue their wild rounds of night clubs and race tracks.

Gossip begins to fly which is just the needed element to bring his sons to their senses and makes them settle down to business.

"Young As You Feel" is reported to be the best picture Will Rogers has made to date. It combines the homely wit of George Ade's characteristic slang and the infectious humor of Rogers.

In addition to Fifi Dorsay and Lucien Littlefield, Rogers' support-

HOW IS YOUR HEALTH?

It is always easier to prevent than to cure disease, and the advice, "See a doctor," is always timely because periodical physical examinations are infinitely better than periodical illnesses.

Just now, however, it seems to us that safeguarding the health is more important than ever before in the experience of most of us, because of the increased value of health from an economic standpoint and the increased menace to health of conditions under which most of us are laboring from day to day.

All of us are carrying greater burdens than ever before, and they have a direct bearing upon the condition of our health. We are doing more work, serving longer hours and under greater nerve strain than ever before. Days filled with labor and with anxiety are followed by nights of restlessness, and although many of us are unconscious of it, our overwrought nerves are beginning to protest. Unsuspected organic disorders probably are beginning to undermine the strength of body that is invaluable from an economic point of view because it is so vitally necessary to the continued functioning of the bread winner of the family.

The human body is a delicate piece of machinery. Just now it is carrying heavier loads over steeper grades and longer distances than at any other time in the memory of most of us. We are poor business men and women if we neglect to care for our bodies under such conditions. Health preservation, at the cost of the doctor's fee, is worth many times its cost. Under any conditions, health is a precious asset. Now it is a vitally necessary asset, and should be cared for according to its value. —Brownwood Bulletin.

"SERVICE THAT SATISFIES"

WEST TEXAS UTILITIES CO.

You Can Make Your Own Electric Rate

Your true electric rate is not the amount paid per kilowatt-hour for service used on the first or top step—but the net average cost per kilowatt-hour for all current consumed. Residential customers of the West Texas Utilities Company paid, during 1930, an average of only 6.5c per kilowatt-hour—and those customers using an electric range and electric refrigerator received service at an average rate of approximately 4c per kilowatt-hour!

The statement, then, that "you can make your own electric rate" is obviously true, for the more you take advantage of the many conveniences and comforts of electric service, the more inexpensive your service will become. The addition of new Electrical Servants will reduce your average cost per kilowatt-hour and bring you new comforts and conveniences worth far more than the slight cost of the additional service required.

The average residential customer now uses fifty kilowatt-hours per month. He could increase his service to three times that amount and only increase his total bill by approximately 10c a day.

Investigate the possibilities of complete household electrification. You will be surprised to find the equipment exceedingly moderate in first cost, and the operating expense ridiculously low.

IN THE AFRICAN JUNGLE

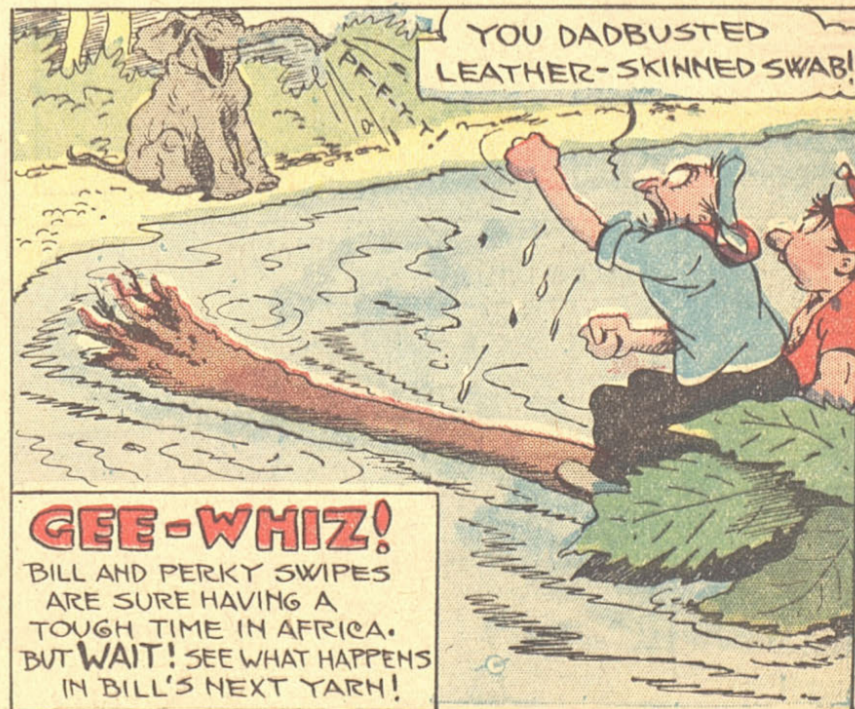

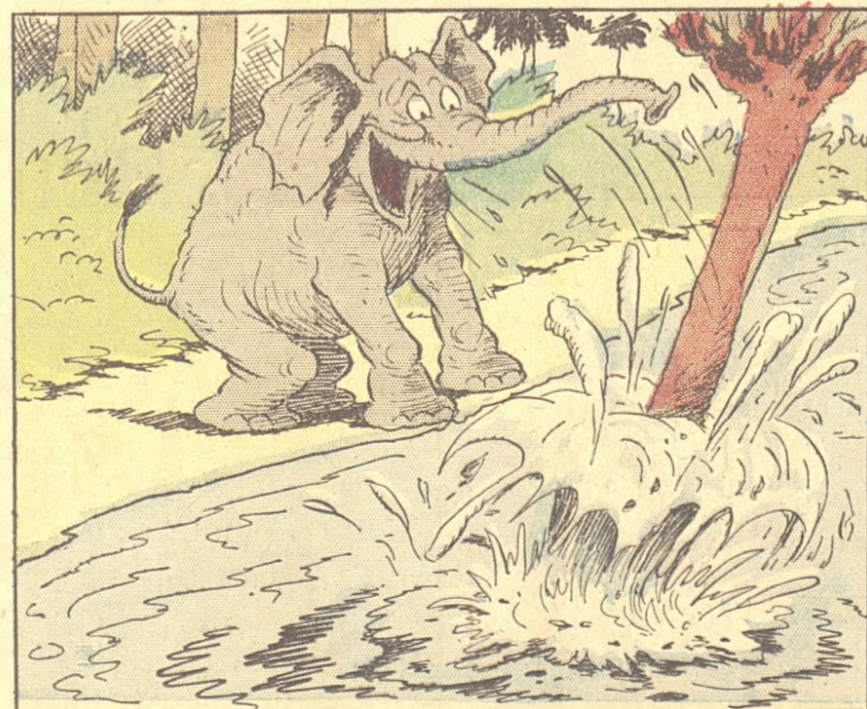

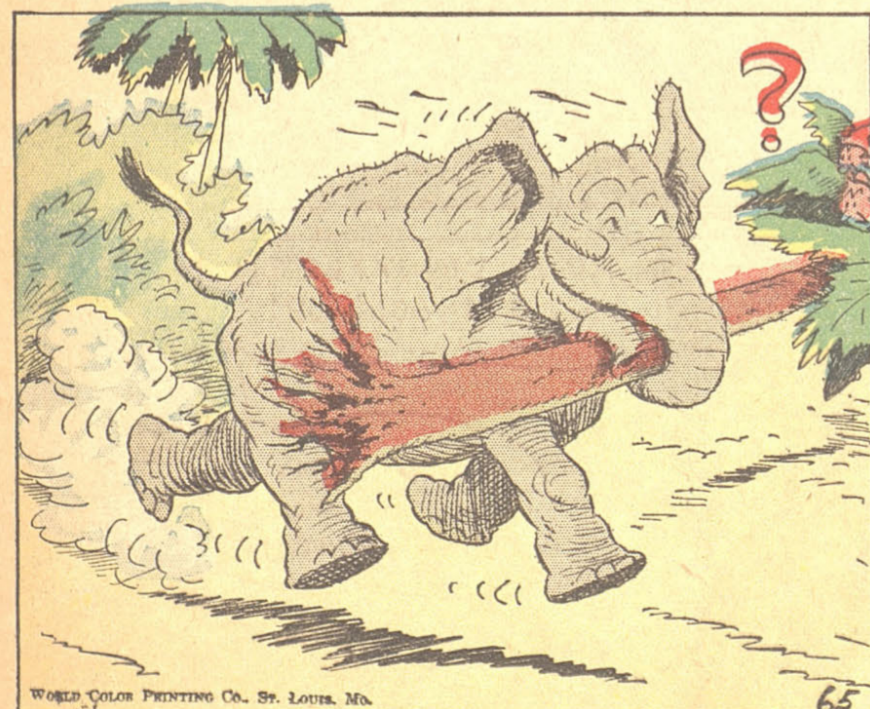

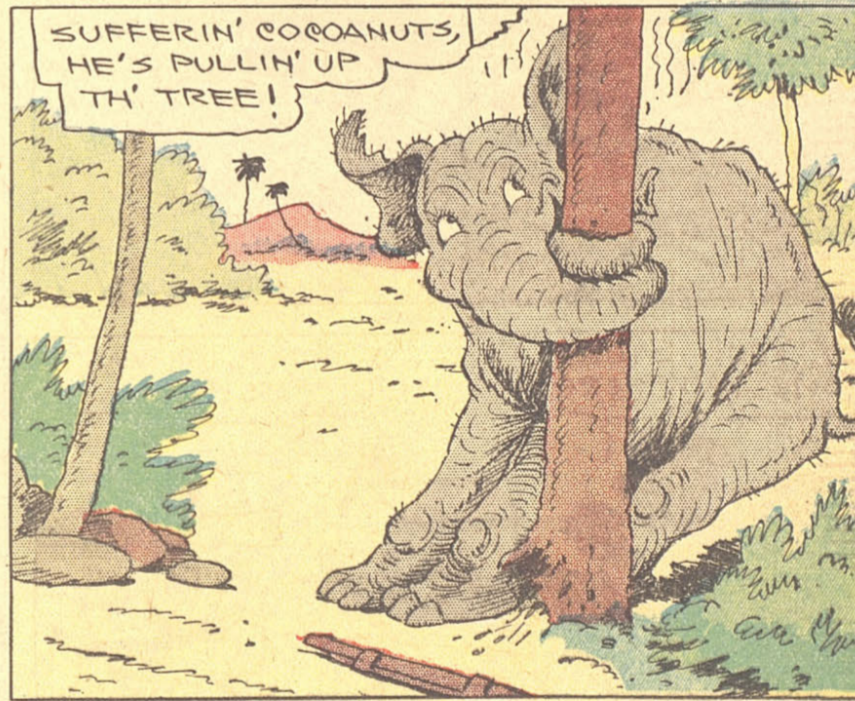

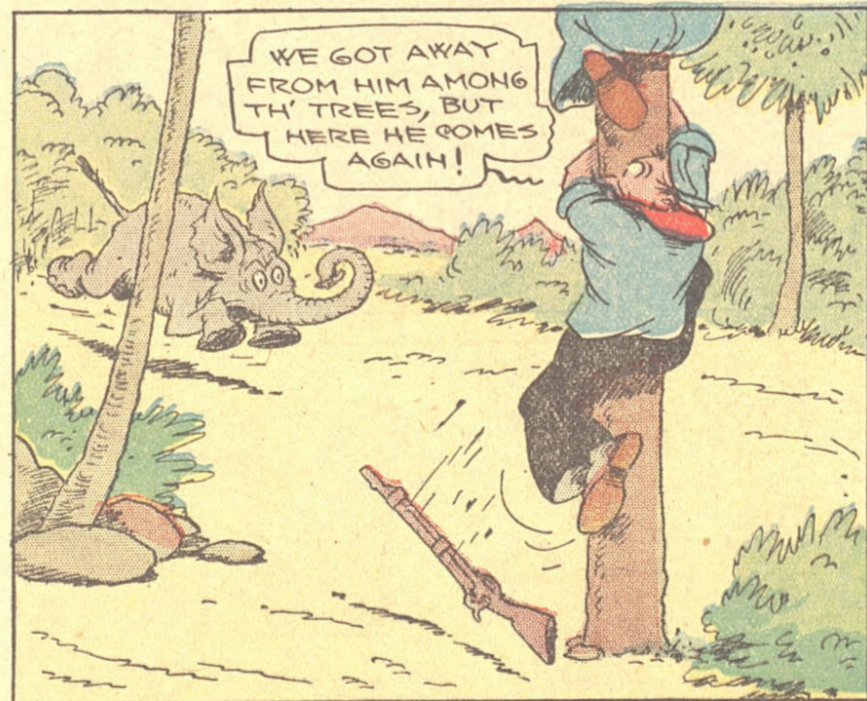

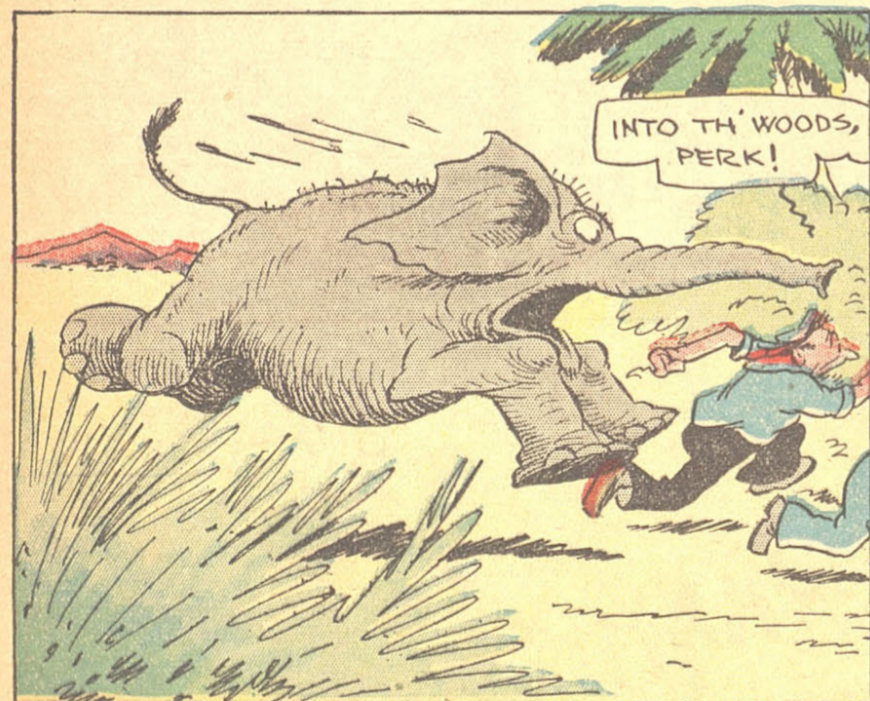

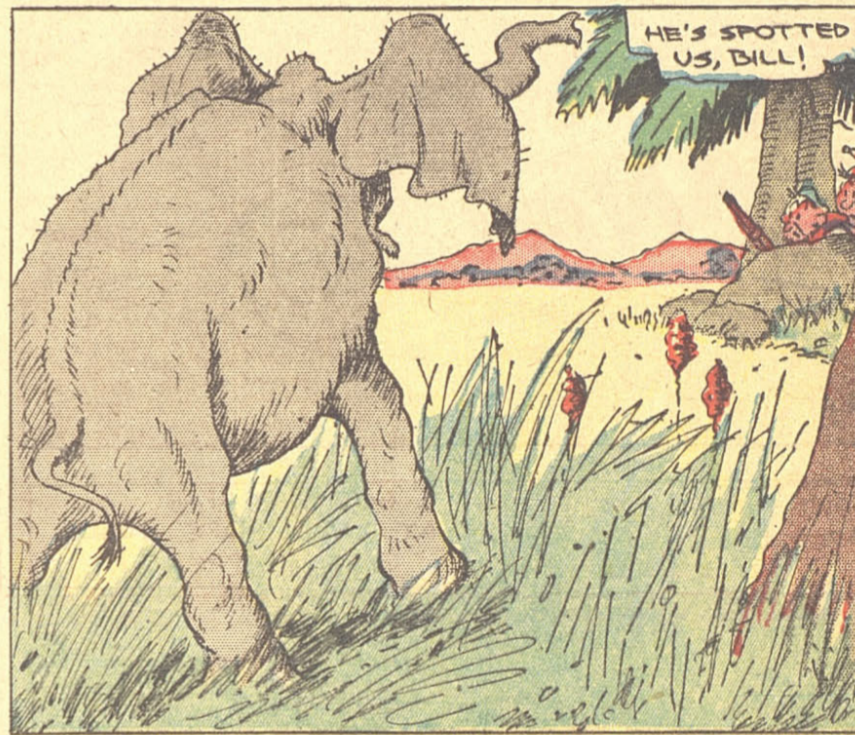

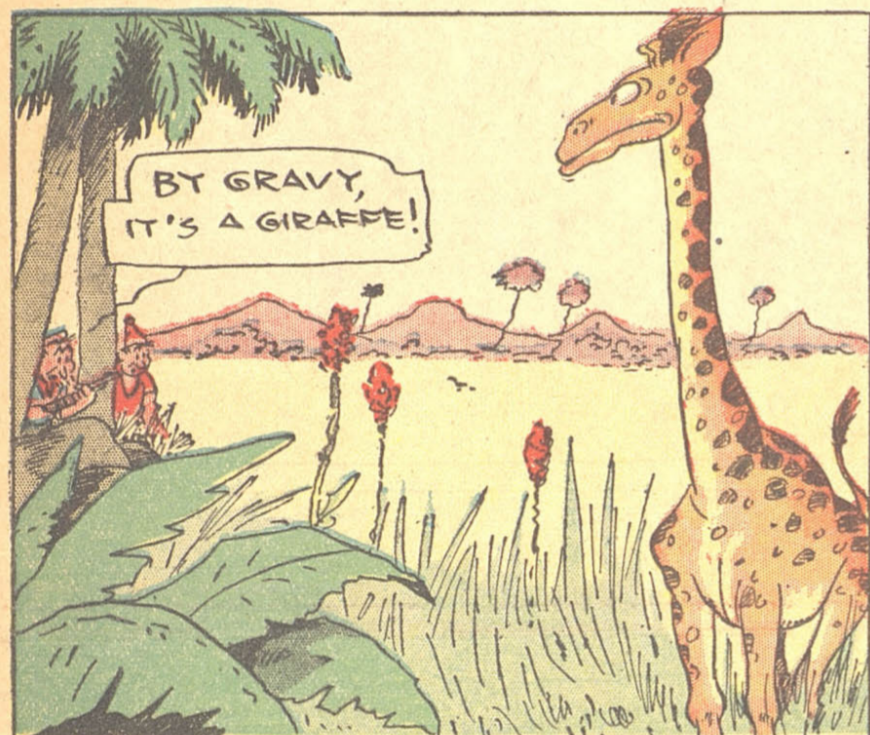

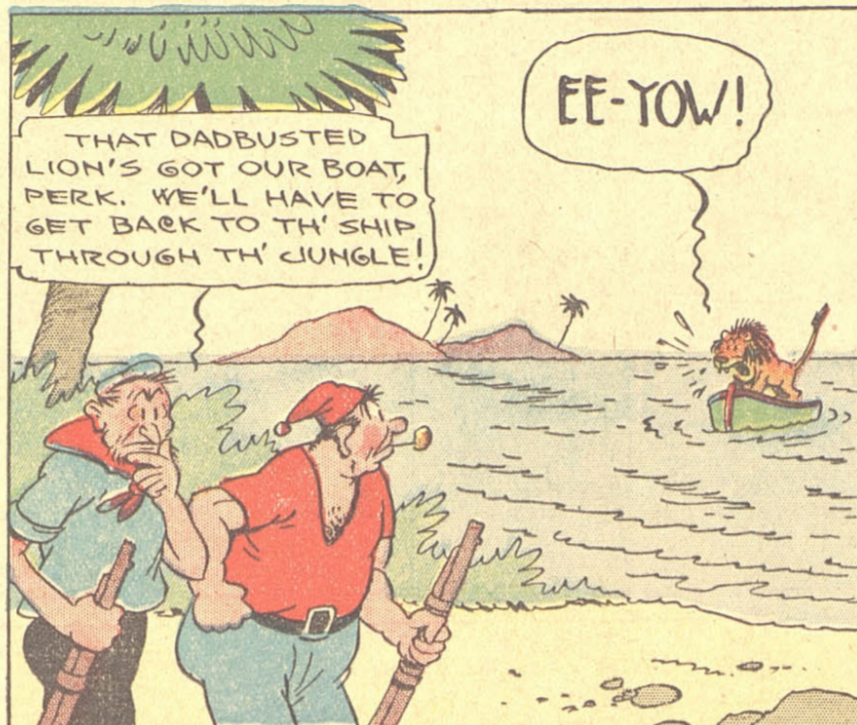

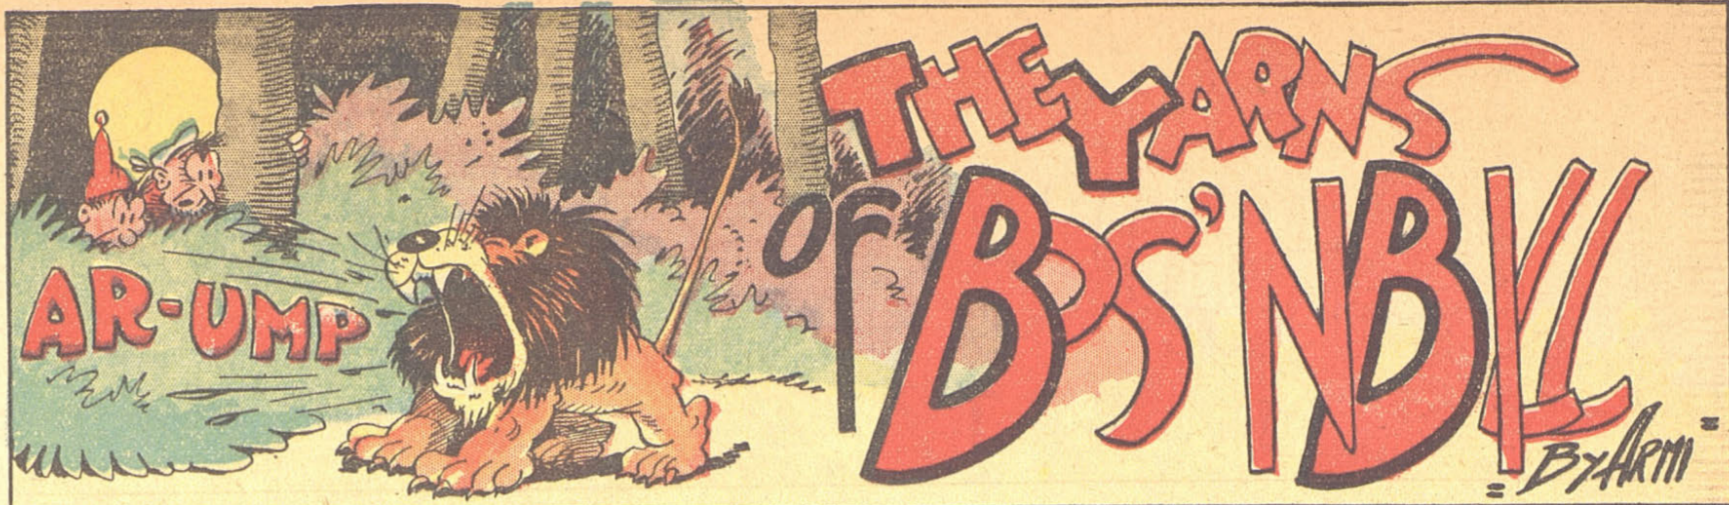

In my last yarn I told you about th' time Perky Swipes and I had gone ashore in Africa to hunt lions, how a lion had chased us, and how, just as he was about to grab us, we had tripped over a log near where our boat was moored; how th' lion had sailed over our heads, landed in th' boat and drifted out, while we were stranded in th' jungle with no way to get back to our ship.

Well s'r, th' only way to get back to th' ship was to hike through th' jungle, so off we went. But later on we traveled another way, and that's what this yarn's about. We saw lots of wild animals, but we were shy and didn't let 'em see us if we could help it. But a dad-ratted elephant spotted us and then th' fun began—for th' elephant.

He sort of rumbled over th' ground, and was gainin' on us so we shinned up a tree and were just goin' to give him th' raspberry when I'll be kicked if he didn't wrap his trunk around th' tree, pulled it up by th' roots, galloped away with it and dumped tree and all into a nearby river. And there we were hangin' on like a couple of scared coons, driftin' along. Wasn't that a pretty fix for a couple of lion hunters to be in?

In my next yarn you'll hear something that'll make you snicker

GUILTY LIPS

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary in a law office, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire real estate dealer, after the father has sworn to cut Mark off without a penny if the marriage takes place. Norma has known Mark only a few weeks, did not know during the courtship that he was a millionaire's son.

The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Christine Saunders, with whom Norma shared an apartment, and Bradley Hart, Chris' employer, are witnesses at the wedding. Before this Norma has repeatedly refused to marry Bob Farrell, young lawyer of whom she is fond as a friend.

Mark sells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon trip. He and Norma depart for Blue Springs, fashionable resort. As the train speeds south Mark tells her there is something he has forgotten to mention.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Mark dug one hand down into his waistcoat pocket before he spoke again. He drew out a box. A very tiny box of dazzling whiteness. He snapped the lid back and a gleaming circlet of diamonds appeared. They were set in a band of platinum.

"Almost forgot about this," he said. "Let's see if it fits."

He slipped the jeweled band over the third finger of Norma's left hand. The ring twinkled up at her like star-dust. The tiny diamonds became a disc of fire. They flashed white heat into the dusky train compartment. Or were they tear drops frozen and strung like beads?

"How—how beautiful!"

Words were such useless things. They failed Norma completely. Something hot and choking gathered in her throat. She could not speak. Almost she could not breathe. Never had she dreamed anyone could be so frighteningly, ecstatically happy.

And so because she could not find the words to answer the girl raised her two hands, one to either of Mark's cheeks, held his face closely for a long instant, and then pressed her lips to his.

Oh, these two were so young, so very much in love!

"But the ring does fit! See—it's just right!" she was insisting a little later.

Mark disagreed. He held up the encircled finger to prove the band slipped about too loosely. There was the possibility of losing the ring. He had not realized what slender, delicate fingers his bride had.

"We can have it made smaller at Blue Springs," he suggested.

Fear that she might lose the wedding ring made Norma agree at once. Words came easily now. Over and over she told Mark how beautiful the diamonds were. She meant this, yet it was not the beauty of the stones and their setting which aved her. It was the significance of the ring. This band on her finger was the symbol of marriage. It told the world she was Mark Travers' wife.

"Good Lord—it is late! You'll be starved!" Mark made a lunge at the electric button which summoned the porter. Within 15 minutes they were being served dinner.

"Happy, kid?"

"Oh—of course!"

At Blue Springs there began a world of only Norma and Mark with dimly visionary strangers occasionally drifting in and out of the background—waiters who served their meals, chauffeurs who drove the motor cars in which they rode, golf caddies, an orchestra, other dancers who might have been miles away for all their presence on the dance floor meant to these two.

Blue Springs was completely perfect and it was completely theirs.

It was nearly noon when they arrived. True to Mark's prediction the sun was shining. Great fleecy clouds, moving so slowly that they seemed stationary, darkened the azure sky by their whiteness. It had been crisp October in Marlboro. Blue Springs was cool enough for light wraps, warm enough that seasoned bathers were still taking their daily dips.

The arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Travers had not been heralded. Clicking cameras were the first indication of the welcoming committee. Newspaper photographers, having secured informal photographs, asked the newly married couple to pose. White Norma hesitated. Mark gave cheerful assent. There was a girl reporter on hand to ask details of the romance. Mark's replies to her questions were sketchy, satisfactory because about them the young woman was able to weave a glowing, modern cinderella story about the beautiful stenographer who married a millionaire's son.

"And do your parents approve the marriage?" the reporter asked.

"Oh, yes! Certainly!"

The other side of this story reached telegraphic press services shortly after. F. M. Travers, in Marlboro, saw reproductions of the Blue Springs' photographs in his morning newspaper. Pungent and brief were F. M. Travers' remarks.

Neither Mark nor Norma read these comments. They posed for the photographers again the second day because the young man had proved friendly and it seemed a simple favor to grant. And since Norma's blond beauty happened to be the sort which photographs ideally, and young love is a subject universally appealing, the pictures appeared in newspapers from coast to coast.

There was no suite in the fashionable Blue Springs Inn more elegant than the one Mark had engaged. Norma, living in a world of luxurious comforts for the first time, soon came to take such matters for granted. Mark, who was of Blue Springs neither had ever seen before. Small homes far from the fashionable resort section. Rain had brightened even the dull, cleaned it and made it almost respectable.

"Time to turn back, Norma?"

"I suppose so."

They retraced their steps but before they reached the Inn lightning flashes and a sharp crack of thunder sent them running again. It was raining, not heavily, when Mark and Norma made their final dash up the steps of the hotel.

"Oh, that was fun, Mark. Fun!" Norma leaned weakly against a heavy porch chair.

It was at that moment a tall man in brown approached the pair.

"Travers!" he exclaimed. "I didn't know that you were here. When'd you arrive?"

Mark was returning the energetic hand-shake. "Glad to see you, Stone," he said. "Oh, we've been here almost a week. Norma—here's someone I want you to know. Holston Stone—old friend, Stone, this is Mrs. Travers, my wife."

Norma offered her hand. How she managed it she never knew. She raised two blue eyes beneath fluttering lids. Her face had gone paper-white.

"How do you do," she said in a voice that was certainly not her own. She tried to meet the newcomer's eyes again.

In that glance she knew he had recognized her.
