TRADE EXTENSION TRIPS.

More and more trade is going where it is invited. Some businessmen try to do business on a cold blooded basis and entirely eliminate the personal element, but they are finding that this is not the best policy.

The chamber of commerce is sponsoring a trade trip to Pioneer and Cross Plains tomorrow. Every business man in Cisco who can possibly do so should go to Pioneer and Cross Plains tomorrow.

HEALTH WEEK IN TEXAS INDORSED AT WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6. — Health week in Texas, set aside by proclamation by Governor Pat M. Neff, starting today has been endorsed by H. S. Cumming, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service. Dr. Cumming wrote to the people of Texas:

ly indorses this plan of the governor and state health officer of Texas. Inaugurating health week on Sunday will give an opportunity for wide publicity to be given to the well worth while efforts that will follow during the week.

“On health appraisal day which follows health Sunday it would be well for special committees to prepare and present reports upon specific disease conditions such as tuberculosis, mental deficiency, venereal disease, cancer and infant mortality. If the community discovers its particular local problem effort can be directed towards its solution.

“Wednesday, March 8, is going to be a very important day because in this day special attention will be given to the destruction of insects, rodents and other disease carriers. When we remember that bubonic plague, malaria fever, dengue, yellow fever and typhus fever, and many cases of typhoid are spread by insect carriers the importance of this day can be appreciated.

“On Thursday, March 9, attention will be given to promoting the health of school children. The board of education will, no doubt, devote a large part of the regular school schedule during health week, to the teaching of health and personal hygiene. Educational literature can be distributed and possibly prizes may be offered to school children for the best essay, cartoon or poster on the prevention of disease.

“Pure food day speaks for itself, and finally on Saturday, March 11, a general education and child welfare day will be held.

“All public health service officers stationed in Texas have been notified by the public health service to cooperate in every way possible in making the Texas health week a successful event and one that will result in bettering conditions in this, our greatest state.”

PADDED CELLS ARE NOT USED IN TEXAS ASYLUMS

AUSTIN, March 6. — Insane asylums and hospitals bring to mind padded cells, but an investigation of the Texas state hospitals would fail to reveal any such place of confinement used for the violent patients, according to those entrusted with the care of the state's wards.

The padded cell is not used in Texas, according to officials of the state board of control who have charge of the eleemosynary institutions. The straight-jacket and the bedlock and chairlock only are used to quiet the patients who become violent, say the officials.

It is the opinion of those connected with the hospitals and asylums that the padded cell would only be damaged by a violent patient. The padding probably would be torn by the patient, some of the officials believe.

The padded cell is not necessary, the officials believe, nor do they think a separate ward for the violent patients necessary. Instead when a patient becomes violent he is placed in a separate room and locked to a chair or bed. The violent periods are of short duration, according to attendants, and the patient then is released from his bonds.

Some patients are only mildly violent, the attendants say, their violence being confined to the tearing of their clothing. These patients are placed in straight jackets, merely to keep them from tearing their clothing, until the period passes.

NORTHER ONLY WILL PREVENT TRADING TRIP

Cisco business men and others who are interested in the development of the Cross Plains, Pioneer and Rising Star territory, will make a trade extension trip to these three places Tuesday, for the purpose of getting acquainted with conditions in this section and impressing upon the merchants of these three towns the importance of Cisco as a trading center.

CROSS PLAINS IS WIDE AWAKE TO CIVIC NEEDS

Cross Plains now has an up-to-date and active chamber of commerce, one that is working to obtain the best results for the community and for this section of Eastland county. M. E. Wakefield is president of the Cross Plains organization, and F. M. Gwin is secretary.

That the Cross Plains organization is interested in a good road between Cisco and the oil field in the southwestern part of the county is evidenced by the following letter from Mr. Gwin to C. C. Richardson, secretary of the Cisco Chamber of Commerce:

“We have a proposition regarding road improvement, between the Cross Plains oil field and Cisco which I am anxious to take up with you at the earliest possible date. Things in the field are coming along nicely and it seems there should be business enough for the wholesale houses and other business interests of your city that they should come in with us on these improvements. This and other points of interest affecting us mutually prompts me to say that I trust conditions will be such as to permit your being with us at an early date.”

“Our chamber of commerce meets every Wednesday night and we would be more than pleased to have you with us at any of these meetings that you may be able to attend.”

Organization of a chamber of commerce in Pioneer is scheduled for Wednesday of this week. A number of the business men of that thriving town have been agitating the formation of such an organization within the past week, and a meeting is called at the postoffice Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

MINTER WOMACK OUT FOR CITY COMMISSIONER

Minter Womack today authorized the Daily News to announce his candidacy for city commissioner.

Mr. Womack is one of the leaders among the younger business men of the city. He heads the Womack Motor Company and is considered one of the liveliest young business men in the city.

Mr. Womack takes an active interest in the chamber of commerce and serves on the board of directors of the Cisco Rotary Club. He is vice commander of John William Butts post of the American Legion.

Mr. Womack came to Cisco three years ago shortly after he left military service. During the war he served twenty-three months overseas with the Rainbow division being a first lieutenant in the infantry. He took part in some very heavy fighting and in one battle was wounded.

Mr. Womack was educated in the public schools of Abilene and at Simmons College of Abilene. While overseas he took a four months post graduate course in government and economics in the University of London.

By always being willing to do his share of everything that is for the good of Cisco Mr. Womack has demonstrated that he has the good of Cisco at heart. He would make an excellent city official and if he is elected his constituents may be assured that he will be on the job serving their interests to the very best of his ability.

Organization of a chamber of commerce in Pioneer is scheduled for Wednesday of this week. A number of the business men of that thriving town have been agitating the formation of such an organization within the past week, and a meeting is called at the postoffice Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

THE MERRY JOURNEYS OF MARY JANE

Gussie, the Big Fat Goose, Gives Mary Jane Some Advice

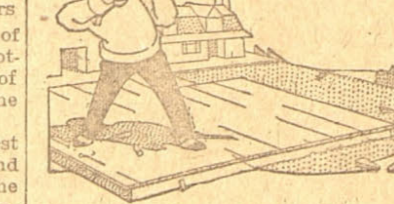

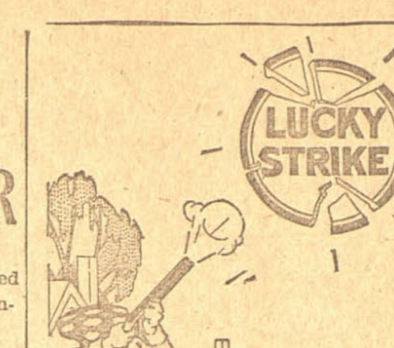

"I'm going to teach you how to make delicious fudge some day", Mary Jane says to Gussie.

ONE day Mary Jane was walking where Gussie Guppy—the old white goose—was showing eight or ten of her youngest children the best places to look for worms.

Gussie was very busy, but said "Good morning, Mary Jane. You ought to be mighty glad you don't have a big family like I have, to provide for."

"Only yesterday little Launcelot was chasing a frog, and he fell into a ditch. I had the awfulest time getting him out. And when I did, he was mud up to his ears. It took me all of half an hour to get him cleaned off again."

Mary Jane said she knew just how ag-gra-va-ting that must have been. For her mama had the same sort of a job with her brother Bobby. Bobby was crossing the brook, and he slipped off the stepping stones and fell in the mud. They had to turn the hose on him, before they could find the buttons to unbutton his clothes.

And then Mary Jane told Gussie Guppy they had a party up at her house last night, with the most wonderful Mary Jane Fudge you ever tasted—made with Mary Jane Syrup.

"It's the easiest thing you ever saw to make the most delicious fudge out of "Mary Jane Syrup" said Mary Jane, "I'll teach you how to do it sometime, and we'll give a party for Launcelot and the children." And Gussie said "don't forget." And then she went home and put her children to bed.

TEXAS HEALTH SHOWS NEED OF IMPROVEMENT

AUSTIN, Mar. 6.—Declaring that while there is no appreciable epidemics
in Texas and in some sections very little sickness, the state board of health stated that an appraisal of the state's health showed "much room for improvement."

In connection with the observing of health week, which started Sunday, March 5, a number of statements about health conditions in Texas were given out by the state board.

"Of 35,000 deaths reported, "the statement said, "14,000 were caused by preventable diseases. Of some 2,000 blind in our state institutions, a large percentage of this blindness could have been prevented by a few drops of silver nitrate dropped in the eyes of these unfortunates when the yere new born,
according to Doctor E. E. Bramlette
superintendent of the Blind Institute.

"According to Doctor W. O. Talbot, neglected teeth frequently is the predisposing factor leading to many incurable chronic conditions of later life.
Of the estimated sum of 50,000 sufferers from tuberculosis, many could have been saved by using sanitary drinking cups, securing better ventilation and correcting their habits.

"There are some 10,000 defectives,
blind and lunatics in Texas. It is,

however, within the control of the educated and intelligent to prevent such future conditions. The asylums are overflowing, insanity is increasing,
taxes increasing and human suffering increasing. Why not take stock of this deplorable condition and plug the leak
by marriage law enforcement, suppression of venereal diseases and other simple devices?

"Estimated figures for 1921 show that there were 1300 suffers from typhoid fever, 2,200 diphtheria and 200,000 cases of malaria and 1,781 cases of small pox were reported. All of these diseases are preventable.

"Typhus fever is gaining a foothold in our state, fourteen cases having been reported. This disease is caused by a louse which refuses to live anywhere except in filth.

"In the state, there are five full time
county health officers; there is room for 247 more. There are three full time city health officers with room for 322
more. There are three city sanitarians, room for 20 more. Forty towns are battling against malaria while there should be 140.

"Less than 10 per cent of the milk
cows are examined for tuberculosis.
Seventy-two counties have county nurses, 180 are without county nurses.
Two towns enforce rat proof ordinances; 40 others should still use the antiquated typhoid hook worm spreading system of night soil disposal.
"The water supply is safeguarded in 40 Texas towns while 20 are using contaminated water. In other towns, the water supply is subject to periodical contamination. Thirty-two have garbage incinerators while over 200 towns maintain dump grounds which are incubators for organisms and insects."

MARKET NEWS SERVICE TIMELY AND ACCURATE

AUSTIN, Mar. 6.—The daily market
news service inaugurated by the Texas department of markets and warehouse, department of agriculture and federal bureau of markets and crop estimates
will give to Texas producers and shippers a market news service of the "greatest accuracy and timeliness,"
according to a statement by the markets and warehouse department.

"Arrangements have been perfected whereby a daily telegraphic report will be received from the Kansas City office of the federal bureau of markets
and crop estimates, covering the markets of the nation, to which Texas
shippers have access," said the statement. "To this national market news received from the Kansas City office of the bureau will be added crop market information collected within the state itself by representatives of the cooperating departments and the compiled information in the form of news-stories will be released at some hour
in the afternoon most desirable to receivers and users of this service. At present the messages are going out over a wave length of 375 meters at 3 p. m. daily. A little later, however, the radiophone will be used, as this equipment will enable parties inexperienced in the receipt of telegraphic messages to "take" the messages easily.

"The information to be released by radiophone will be so arranged as to make it suitable for distribution to persons interested in agricultural and marketing information. "All farmers cooperative shipping associations will doubtless be desirous of receiving this news, as, of course, will be the commercial, shipping and receiving companies.

"There are many farm houses in Texas already equipped with inexpensive receiving sets which will be able to receive the University of Texas station. As, later, concerts, lectures and other matter will be sent over this equipment by the university, it is probable that the installation of this equipment in farm homes will increase rapidly."

BIRTHS EXCEED DEATHS IN TEXAS

AUSTIN, Mar. 6.—Births exceeded deaths in Texas in 1921 by 44,749, according to reports made to the state bureau of vital statistics. "The total number of births reported during the year was 80,448 and the total number of deaths reported was 35,699. Children under 1 year old who died in Texas in 1921 numbered 5,744, it was announced.

"The figures of the bureau of vital statistics, however, represent only part of the actual number of births
and deaths in the state, it was declared, reports being received on only about 70 per cent of each.

In announcing the statistics, the bureau announced its effort to obtain reports on at least 90 per cent of the births. This would enable Texas to enter the birth registration area, it was stated, which now comprises 20 states and the District of Columbia and includes over half of the population of the United States.

It is important that births should be recorded, the bureau stated, to prove age and citizenship, right to go to

DEPRESSION IN LONDON DUE TO RESTRICTIONS

LONDON, Mar. 6.—Governmental restrictions are blamed in part for the business depression in London in a letter which the Imperial Commercial Association has sent to the liquor licensing justices. Its signers predict that disastrous results will follow the closing houses at 10 o'clock as foreshadowed.

"The letter is signed by Baron Inch-cape, one of the leading shipping men
of Great Britain; Baron Swaythling, banker; Baron Ritchie, vice-chairman of the Port London authority; Lord Balfour of Burleigh, former Parliamentary secretary of the board of trade; Baron Ashfield, managing director of the underground railways; Baron Faringdon, chairman of the Great Central railway; Viscount Devonport, chairman of the Port of London Authority and former food controller, and Sir J. P. Hewitt.
"They asserted that "it is probable that never in the history of this country has the liberty of the individual
been more subject to rigorous limitations than at present.
"London has flourished and become famous largely because of the attractive features which it has presented to the travelling public, but the ever-tightening grip of control is changing all this."
The Association contends that much of the blame for the present unhappy condition of trade and commerce
"must be apportioned to the restrictions and limitations imposed upon business and individuals by authorities."

ARE YOU AWAKE OR SLEEPING...?

Candidates who have been nominated in the News and Round-Up's election are urged to wake up to the vote value of subscriptions during the first period. Thus far very few of those nominated have made any effort whatsoever in the way of securing subscriptions or renewals to the Daily News or the Weekly Round-Up—in fact, more subscribers have come to the News office voluntarily and paid up their subscriptions, giving votes to some contestant whom they happened to know, than most of the candidates have brought in.

Votes accumulate very fast during this part of the campaign when the vote schedule is the highest. Wake up candidates, don't expect your friends to do it all; make some effort yourself and you will be surprised at how easily you can pile up a big total—and go “over the top” for a car.

YOUR OPPORTUNITY

"Oh, I never could win one of those big prize motor cars" is the thought that will first come to the minds of those reading this announcement.

Well, why not? Haven't you just as much "pep" and energy as anyone? Haven't you friends; don't you aspire for the good things in life—or are you contented to drift along in the same old rut from day to day, from year to year, through life, just wishing for results and bemoaning the circumstances that put your neighbor or your friend in a more fortunate way than yourself. Think this over. Have you, and are you seizing every opportunity to better your condition—or are you sitting idly by and letting these opportunities slip by?

You CAN get the good things in life—you can get one of the Daily News cars if you but try.

$3,000 In Cash

A special fund of $3,000 in cash has been set aside to be distributed in the form of salaries among active non-prize winners on a 20 per cent basis. One-fifth of every subscription you collect goes into your pocket if you fail to win a prize. This arrangement assures compensation to all candidates, and means there will be no losers in this race! Could anything be fairer or more liberal than this?

TRAPPED BY A ROCK-SLIDE

WARREN BRENTWOOD stood studying the sky from the doorway of a photographer's shop in Hamilton, Bermuda. When he turned and spoke to his employer:

"Mr. Wallace, may I have this afternoon off instead of tomorrow afternoon?"

"It doesn't make any difference to me," grunted Mr. Wallace unambivalently.

"After more pictures, I suppose?" "Yes," replied Warren, flushing for his employer had little faith in his photographic ability. "I think there will be some good cloud effects."

"I don't see how you can afford to

Mr. Wallace's shop was largely supported by the thousands of American tourists that flock to Bermuda every winter. They buy eagerly for souvenirs artistic prints of characteristic Bermudan scenes. It was this trade that Warren had in mind for he knew that if he could get some new and beautiful pictures he could increase an income that, as Mr. Wallace had said, was too small. He had found a scene that he was sure would make a most popular picture if skillfully handled but had not yet succeeded in getting a satisfactory negative. He was almost ready to give up for he could not stand the expense for materials. Today as overlooking the sea. There he worked all the afternoon. At last he had several exposures that he was sure would yield good negatives.

It was late when Warren was ready to go home. He had uncrewed his tripod and laid it on the ground while he strapped his camera to his bicycle. Just as he finished doing this he was startled by a crane that flew near him. As he started, his foot struck the tripod and sent it over the cliff.

Warren was much vexed at this for he would have to go a full quarter of a mile to find a path to lead him down the cliff. Also the clouds were now banking solidly, the wind was getting stronger and it was evident that a storm was about to break. He decided to take his camera with him so he could shelter it from the rain if it should come soon.

It was well that he did so for the rain began to pour down just as he reached his tripod. Warren took shelter with his camera in one of the numerous small caverns that the sea had hollowed out in the soft rock of the cliff. There he waited for the rain to stop.

In many places along the cliff the strata of rock were tilted, sometimes almost perpendicularly. Just above the cavern that Warren entered was one of these tilted layers of blackened rock. It slanted steeply back from the upper edge of the cave's mouth, over which it projected for a few inches much like the eaves of a steep roof.

As Warren sat there watching the rain and the sea, suddenly there was a dull grinding jar, the sea was blotted from his sight and he was sitting in darkness! A section of the tilted rock had slipped down and trapped him!

At first he sat stunned. Then he sprang up, panic-stricken, and thrust with all his might at the rock. He could not stir it. He shouted then, louder than he had ever shouted before in his life. But when he stopped to listen he realized how useless it was to shout. There was little hope that anybody would come along the beach that afternoon. The storm would keep people away.

As Warren tried to calm himself and think what was best to do he remembered with a sudden increase of terror that the tide was coming in. With a southeaster blowing he knew the tide would be piled high and would fill the cavern. He would be drowned without a chance to fight for his life.

In desperation he sprang up and pushed at the fallen rock again. But he could not move it, and he realized that he could do nothing by main strength. If he were to escape it must be by the use of his wits. And even in his fright it occurred to him that if he did not get out his camera would be ruined and nobody would ever know whether or not his exposures were good.

As he sat trying to think Warren saw by the light that slipped in around the rock that the slab was an almost perfect fit for the entrance of the cave. It stood at a very steep slant with its bottom sunk in the sand on the floor. As he examined it he thought suddenly that he might dig out under it.

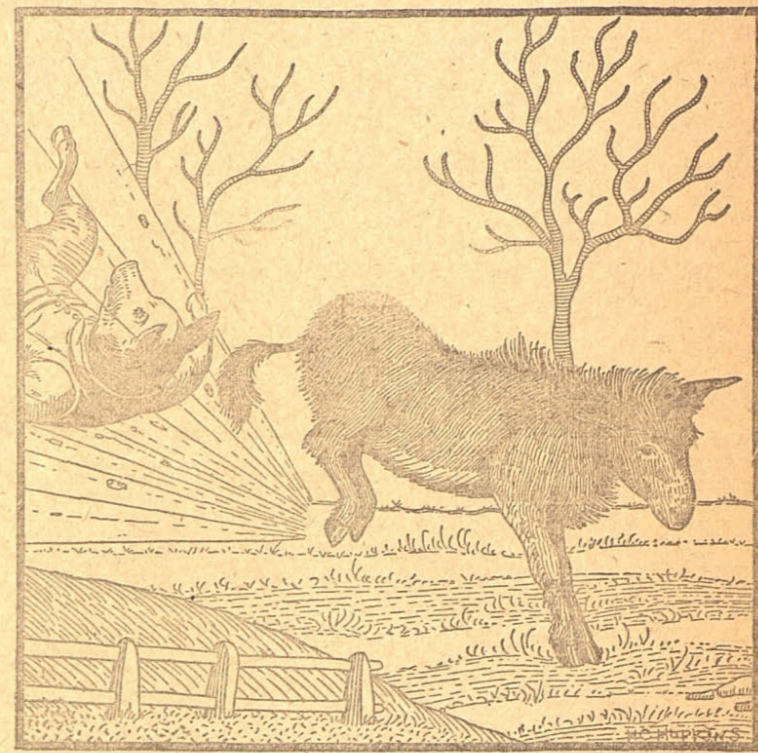

He set to work eagerly with his bare hands and his tripod. But he found the sand only about a foot deep and the lower edge of the fallen rock was but five or six inches from the stone floor of the cavern. He could not squeeze out that way.

As he sat down again with this hope gone the first wave of the incoming tide reached the cave, slipped around the edges of the fallen rock and wet the sand inside. Warren strove to control his fear and keep his wits at work.

Then he noticed for the first time that the imprisoning rock did not lean close against the upper edge of the entrance but bore its weight against the outward slanting side edges of the entrance about half way down. There was a crack at the top about an inch wide. If he could only make it wider! And all at once it struck him how to do it.

With new hope he set to work to scrape a trench in the sand clear to the rock bottom of the cavern all the way across about a foot from the slab. It was hard, slow work and his hands were painfully scoured by the coarse sand which was filled with sharp bits of broken shells. All the time the

THE PIG STAYED HOME

LAST week we saw the little pig go sailing thro' the air. And were so very much surprised that we could only stare. Of course, he landed very hard and felt so very weak. That when he tried, as try he did, he found he couldn't squeak. For quite a while upon the ground he sat and shook his head. And, when at last he found his tongue, he deeply sighed and said: "I thought that donkey was a friend and wouldn't play a trick; But that's a big mistake I see—Gee whizz, how he can kick!"

gale outside howled louder and louder and the waves splashed more and more into the cavern. But at last the trench was done, though it was filled with water. Then Warren began cautiously to widen the trench towards the fallen stone.

When he had almost reached the rock a huge roller came crashing up and struck it, there was a grating sound and the big stone began slowly to settle and slide into the trench. At the same time Warren jumped up and thrust as hard as he could at the top of the slab. His plan worked beautifully. When the rock had stopped settling Warren saw that the crack at the top had widened enough to allow him to crawl through it.

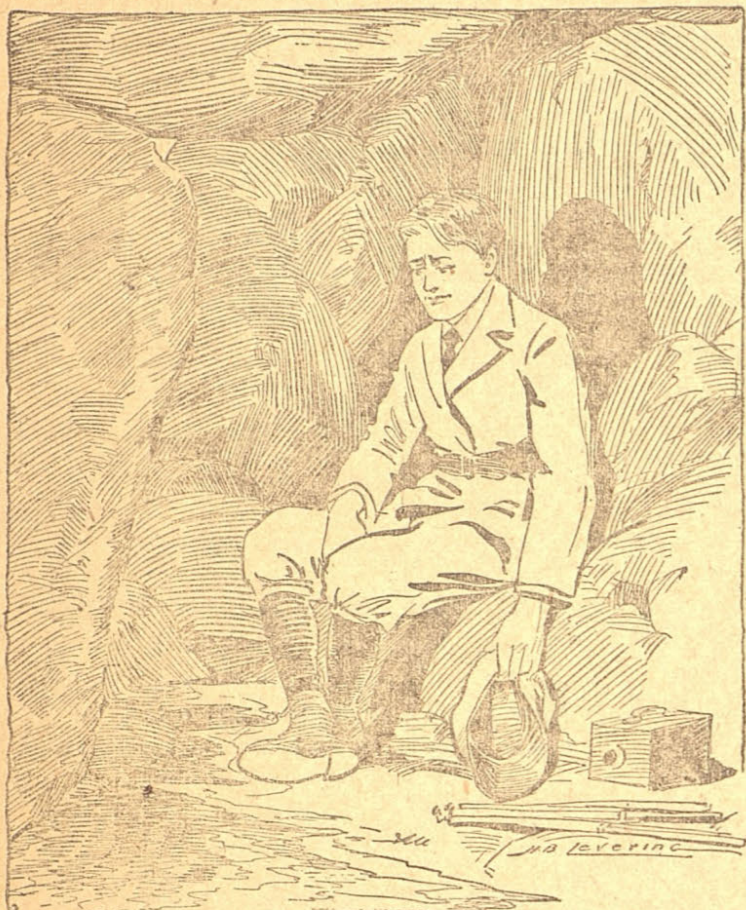

Three days later when Mr. Wallace came into the shop in the morning he stopped short and gazed at a print lying on the counter. At the bottom was signed Warren's name. Mr. Wallace stood looking at it for some time. Then he carried it to the window and studied it long and intently. Finally he turned and spoke.

"Warren," he said, "I'll give you two hundred dollars for that negative."

But Warren had been doing some figuring. "No," he replied, "but I'll take a royalty of fifty per cent. on each print that you make and sell from the negative."

This was agreed upon and Warren's business judgment proved to be good for several hundred of the prints were sold at a dollar apiece the first winter.

Warren is in business for himself now but his most profitable negative still remains the one that brought him the most thrilling experience of his life.

The First Wave Of The Incoming Tide Slipped Around The Fallen Rock

waste so much money on pictures," went on Mr. Wallace. "Not on your salary and you wish a mother to support. Rank foolishness, I call it."

Warren did not reply for it was a sore subject. Mr. Wallace after a few more sarcastic remarks at his clerk's expense fell silent also.

He sped home on his bicycle he decided that if he were not successful that afternoon he would have to stop work with his camera for some time.

Warren strapped his camera to his bicycle and set out for the south shore. There he wished to take a few pictures from the top of a high cliff

When Longfellow Was a Boy.

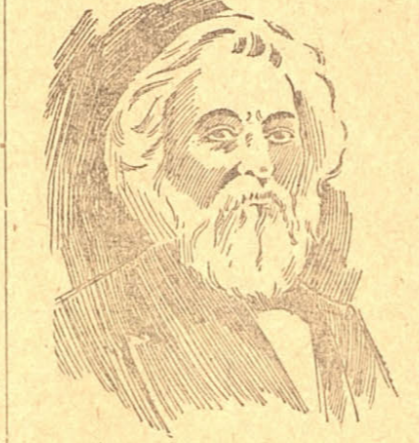

LONGFELLOW, the children's best, was born in Portland, Maine, on February 27, 1807. The streets of this quaint little town sloped down to the water's edge where were the wharves and the ships and the sailors going to sea. There the boy Longfellow used to love to go and watch the ships and the activities along the water front. When he was a grown man he wrote a poem entitled: "My Lost Youth," in which he tells of his loved companions and the beautiful old town. He says of it:

Often I think of the beautiful town That is seated by the sea; Often in thought I go up and down The pleasant streets of that dear old town.

And my youth comes back to me. When Longfellow was three years of age he was sent to a private school. At the age of six he brought this note home to his mother from his teacher: "Master Henry Longfellow is one of the best boys we have in school. He spells and reads very well. He also adds and multiplies numbers. His conduct last quarter was very correct and amiable. June 30, 1813.

N. H. CARTER." At the age of thirteen Longfellow had his first poem printed in the Portland Gazette. It was about our country and its earlier heroes. As a young boy Longfellow loved to listen to the old tales and legends and traditions that were told to him. He would write stories about the trees, brooks, birds, stars and clouds. He often called them his playmates and when he grew to manhood he embodied in some of his beautiful poems the spirit and love which grew in his heart for the works of nature.

DICKIE DACHSHUND

Many think I look sad, and I not only look so, but I am sad, and you would probably be too, if you were doomed to go through life looking for all the world, like a dog, for a friend. Well, that is what I imagine I must look like, as my body is long out of all proportion, barely held off the ground by a pair of short, dumpy legs at each end. I am certainly a curious mixture, as my body with its smooth coat, might belong to a pointer, my tail and nose those of a terrier, while my long, flapping ears are like those of a foxhound. When you take all these, though they may be all right separately, and combine them in the make-up of a single animal, the result would make a "dog laugh." My front legs are comically bowed, besides being less than half as long as they should be, and don't begin to match the hind ones. In fact, there is nothing about me that seems to match. Hundreds, and maybe thousands of years ago, they say I was a hunting dog, and bred to follow rabbits and badgers in their holes, and bring them out alive and kicking. You see I was specially built for crawling around in holes, but nowadays, I'm just a pet, and not expected to do anything except look like a four-legged hologna.

Wish I did have some regular employment, and then I would not have so much time to worry about my looks. Some ignorant folks think I am a new breed, or a funny mixture of a number of breeds, but right here I want to remark that few dogs can trace their ancestry as far back as I can mine. A first rate picture of me has been found chiseled on an old Egyptian monument, that cannot be less than 2,000 years old, and probably older.

So my folks must have been living then, and if there were any poodies, fox-terriers or setters living in the world, there are no stone pictures to prove it.

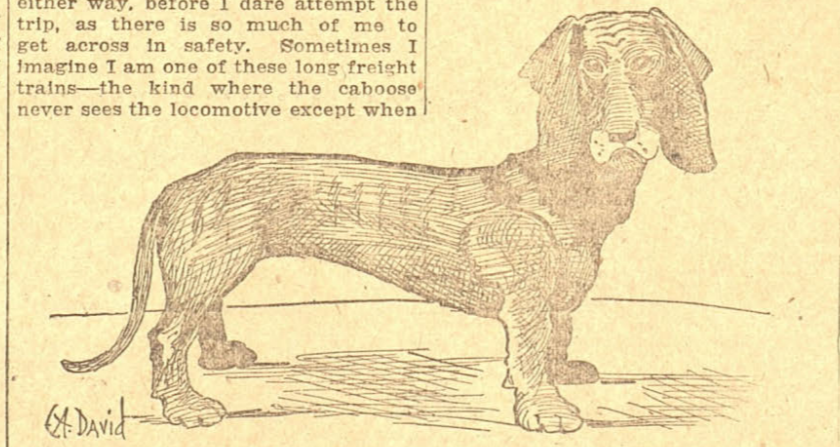

But it is awful to be as ugly as I am, and have people making all kinds of slighting remarks every time I happen to show myself on the street. No matter how briskly I try to walk, my hind legs lose step with the front ones, and act as if they belonged to another dog, as they follow along in the distance. No matter how friendly I may be, my tail, it is too far away to be noticed by the one whose hand I am licking. I always have an absent sort of a feeling, as if part of me was getting lost or misplaced. When people look at me they always smile, even if they don't make some funny remark. Some of them say I ought to have an extra pair of legs to hold up the middle part of my body—and to tell the truth, I do so awfully, right after a hearty meal. Some of them try stepping on my tail to see how long it takes the sensation of pain to get to my brain. When I get up and start across the street, I have to wait until there is not a motor-truck in sight either way, before I dare attempt the trip, as there is so much of me to get across in safety. Sometimes I imagine I am one of those long freight trains—the kind where the cabooses never sees the locomotive except when going round a curve.

A funny thing happened the other day, when I was walking slowly around a tree, after a while I caught up with a tail, and I could tell from the smell it was a dog's tail, and naturally supposed it was the property of some strange dog. So to teach him some manners I gave it a quick bite, and it was not until I gave a yelp of pain, that I realized it was my own.

It is all right to look funny when one wants to look funny, like a clown for instance, but to look funny all the time whether one wants to or not, gets on one's nerves, and there is nothing really funny about it. I can roll my eyes in the most sentimental way, and look as dignified as you please, and all I get is a smile, and no one takes me seriously, not even other dogs. A big Dane will pass me with a lofty sniff, without deigning to glance in my direction, and a collie pays no more attention to me than he would to a section of sewer-pipe. And that's the way with all of them, they just ignore my existence. But some people like me, and some of them go so far as to say that I am beautiful, but somehow I can't keep from wondering if their sight is all right?

I am sure I'm as good looking as a bull-dog, but that's not saying much, as I suppose they are about the ugliest things in the world.

I Am Sure I'm As Good Looking As A Bull-Dog

Solution to Cut-Out Puzzle

The HANDY BOY AT HOME BY CHARLES A. KING, STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N.H.

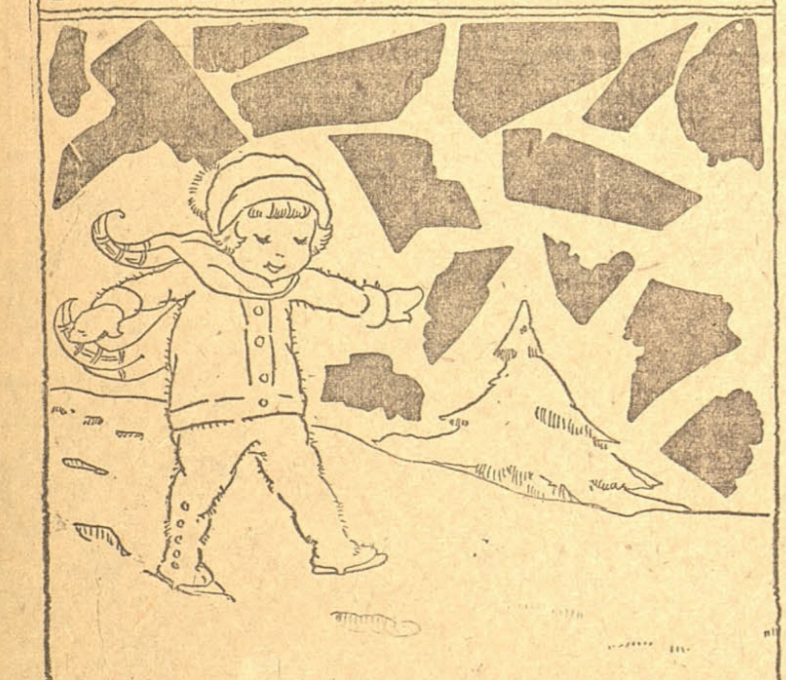

WHAT will please mother or sister more than a clean, new chest or box in which she can keep her various choice articles of feminine adornment free from dust and insect pests. Such a box is shown in the sketch; it may be made of Beaver Board or similar material by a boy of the upper grades of school or even by the lady herself if she has the usual amount of gumption which modern girls are supposed to possess. The board must first be cut and care used that each piece is perfectly square or there will be trouble in making things come out right. The top, the largest piece is $16 \frac{1}{2} \times 30 \frac{1}{2}$ in. the bottom, $16 \frac{1}{2} \times 30 \frac{1}{2}$ in. the back and front each $16 \frac{1}{2} \times 30 \frac{1}{2}$ in. high and $15 \frac{1}{2}$ in. wide. These dimensions are based upon the assumption that the board of which the box is made is $\frac{1}{2}$ in. thick. If it is of a different thickness, the $15 \frac{1}{2}$ in. dimension of the ends must be changed accordingly, though the variation will be of slight importance as the panelling strips will be cut to fit in any event. If the box is made $48 \frac{1}{2}$ in. long it may be used for a skirt box.

Cut the pieces a, b, c, d, e as shown, which equals the height of the ends and nail the ends to them securely; be sure that the ends of the boards are flush with the edges of pieces a . Use a $1 \frac{1}{2}$ in. large headed nail, a 3 penny common nail will do, and glue all joints wherever it is possible as they will be much stronger. Glue and nail the front and back boards to their places after which cut pieces c between the pieces a flush with the top of the board all round the top and bottom of the inside of the box; glue, and fasten these pieces with $\frac{3}{8}$ in. trunk nails which may be clinched on the inside by holding a hammer against their ends as they are driven through piece c . It may be necessary to bore holes with an awl if the wood is likely to split. Nail through the bottom into the pieces c around the back, front and two ends with 3 penny iron nails though if 3 penny common nails will not split c they should be used. Nail piece c around the bottom of the box, with $1 \frac{1}{2}$ in. No. 16 brads driven into c of the bottom edge of the sides of the box, and trunk nails clinched for additional strength around the inside of the bottom. This completes the body of the box and the next step is to fasten piece a around the bottom of the outside, nailing into c with $1 \frac{1}{2}$ in. No. 16 brads, and into c with $1 \frac{1}{2}$ in. No. 16 brads; drive them a little slanting as they will hold better. C s should next be attached around the top edge; note that it is placed about $7-16$ in. below the top edge of the board. These pieces may be cut square, though if mitered at the corners they will make a better job, but this should not be attempted by one who is not sure he can work accurately with a miter box. Pieces b and d should be fastened in place as indicated so the panelling will show the same upon both sides of the corner. Pieces d in the center must have corresponding pieces on the inside in order to give a good nailing. The bottom should be panelled the same way inside and out to prevent sagging when the chest is filled. Nail piece d on the under side of the top, flush with the edge; then piece b around the top, nailing through into d . B 1 must project $\frac{3}{8}$ in. all around to receive piece d which forms the lip at f and makes the box dust and insect proof; this should be next fastened on, nailing both ways into d , and through the top of b into d . Note that a sets back $\frac{1}{2}$ in. from the edge of b . Cut in pieces d for the panelling of the top, both inside and outside, nailing from the top through the inside for strength. The top may be hinged by building out the back piece c of the box at the place where the hinges are to be located to make it flush with d of the back edge of the top, and a flap hinge or butt fastened on with screws. The nails should be sunk below the surface with a nailset; smooth and sandpaper the chest to make it ready for finishing. The chest may be stained and the nail holes puttied and given a coat of shellac and afterward rubbed down with fine sandpaper and waxed, or it may be painted white with two or three coats of flat color, the holes puttied after the first coat, and each coat rubbed down with 00 or finer sandpaper. It may then be varnished with white Dammar or other colorless varnish, or with white enamel. While the box will be light, it will be strong if good judgment and reasonable skill have been used in driving and clinching the nails so the wood will not be split. It will be ample efficient for the storing of light woollens and furs by packing them away with moth balls, or it will even be suitable for so sacred a purpose as a hope chest for the maiden who is preparing for the advent of Prince Charming.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF CISCO HIGH SCHOOL

VOL. III.

CISCO, TEXAS, MONDAY, MARCH 6, 1922.

NUMBER 24.

MINISTER'S PROFESSION NOT AN EASY ONE SAYS STUCKEY TO STUDENTS

Mr. Godbey had as his guest at assembly last Tuesday, Rev. Lewis N. Stuckey, who spoke on the subject, 'The Ministry as a Profession.' Mr. Godbey has made it a point this year to have various men speak to the students upon their professions, and it was with great pleasure that they heard Rev. Stuckey. Rev. Stuckey said in substance, 'It would not be fair for me not to tell you of some of the disadvantages of being a minister. There are disadvantages, and if I paint a true picture, I must tell them. First, a preacher does not have a home in the true sense of the word. He lives in a paragonage. Few people consider this a home, they look on it more as an annex to the church. Everyone loves a home, yet a preacher must forego that pleasure. Another disadvantage is that a preacher does not receive pay in proportion to his ability that men in other lines do. I know a missionary who is a graduate of three universities in this country and who is now paid the grand salary of $900 per year. You must expect financial difficulties if you are to be preacher. Another disadvantage is that people think that all a preacher has to do is to prepare and deliver two sermons a week. No one knows the endless number of duties a minister has. Some days I get my work done in ten hours; on others it takes fifteen hours or longer. You must expect to be ridiculed and talked about if you enter the ministry. But, there is one thing a minister does that no other man can do, and that is: he works for two worlds. The doctor, the lawyer, the merchant, all minister to our earthly needs, but the preacher prepares men for the world beyond. A doctor, no matter how skilled he may be, cannot direct a dying man's soul to heaven, but if a preacher by the Word of God has converted that man long ago, he can stand over that casket and know that that soul has but entered upon eternal life. So, my young friends, if you feel the call to be a minister or a missionary, do not resist it, but go, for the Bible says, 'Woe is upon me if I preach not the gospel.'"

STUDENTS OF CISCO HIGH ACTIVE IN CHURCH WORK

The students of the Cisco High School are developing themselves in a spiritual way, as well as in the various courses provided in school. Not less than one-half of the high school students belong to, and attend, some church organization. In looking over the membership rolls of the various church organizations you would be surprised to see that over fifty per cent of the members are high school students. In the Epworth League we find that three-fourths of the active members are high school students. We find, also, that over half of the active membership of the Christian Endeavor and the B. Y. P. U. is composed of high school students. The students who belong to these various organizations are not only active members, but hold three-fourths of the offices of these organizations. Such interest in church work among the students cannot be wondered at, when we take note of the splendid representation made by the teachers in the various churches. Mr. Godbey is not only superintendent of the schools, but also one of the high school faculty fill their respective places on Sunday as teachers in various Sunday schools.

Inquiring Reporter Finds Strange Ideas About Ideal Man

The question asked this week by the inquisitive reporter (?) was directed at the girls, and was: "What is your idea of an ideal man?" The replies were various and different, but all agreed that "they ain't" no such animal. After some little argument two of the lady members of the family consented to give their ideal. One gave it in this manner, "In my youth my ideal man was one who had soulful eyes, a handsome physique (?), lots of money, and a winning smile. Now in the 'sere and yellow leaf' of middle life my ideal man is one who can make me a living without needing my advice; one who will be willing to sit at home with me at least one evening each week; one who will not mind my wearing house shoes when I sit by the fireside in winter time; one who will not often, at least—say 'I want' and 'I have took.' If I meet such a man—no matter if his eyes have lost some of their brightness, his fingers have added to its rotundity, his winning smile turned into a look of resignation—all the gods cannot prevail against my power, for he is mine!" "You'll never guess who said this, but you will have a chance. Another member of the faculty expresses herself in the following manner: "A man is to be the subject of this discourse, not the ideal, as there is no such creature. Nevertheless, he is a subject of vital interest to every woman, even me. "As I said before, my ideal is a man. He must be a man of the world, young in ideas, but aged in experience. I prefer that he possesses: poise, self-confidence, and perfect control of his feet. He must know how to meet the world and to conquer it. Such a man would never accept the word 'no.' He would refuse me nothing. "My present ideal (not entirely unchangeable) is a man who has a good physique, is of medium height, has regular features, blue eyes, black hair (slightly wavy), close cropped mustache, and square chin. A cob pipe is acceptable but not absolutely essential. "Must he be indifferent? Well, yes, to every woman except me." "Anyone with half an eye can see that there are wonderful possibilities in store for looker-on when this is well circulated. "We hope no one is injured in the rush. Another young lady has a more realistic ideal, but at the same time more impossible, it seems, than the two above mentioned. Her ideal is as follows: "My ideal of an ideal man is one who neither smokes, drinks, chews, nor swears. One who stays at home at night, but not because of paralysis. One who does not seem to think that my 'curly' are not natural (get that?) One who is large but not fat, and one who does not mind work, such as washing dishes, sweeping, or dusting." "This young lady may have no trouble in finding a man with the first part of the qualifications, but we fear that the last part is not found in any man of normal intellect. Of the three opinions, two quoted are from no less important personages than Misses McCarty and St. John. The Lunch Room has had a short run of prosperity, due to the recent bad weather. All last week the lunch room workers were rushed, and the buyer especially was worked very hard and deserves much praise for it. Any noon last week if you happened to be anywhere near the lunch room you could hear hurry up calls for pie, sandwiches, pop, and other delicacies, and see the tired waiters and waitresses working slicing bread or stirring soup, while the line of customers hungrily waited.

ART EXHIBIT TO BUY PICTURES FOR SCHOOLS

Everyone who possibly can, ought to be at the art exhibit which is to be held from the 5th to 8th of April. Admission is 15 cents for both adults and children. The exhibit will be composed of pictures sent by the Elson Art Company, and a program will be given every afternoon. Miss Saunders and Mrs. Griswold are the committee which is to furnish the afternoon entertainment. The persons on the different committees are well-known in Cisco and are sure to make the art exhibit one big success (with the help of the children who sell tickets). Mrs. Keen has charge of the arranging of the pictures, while Miss Soderstrom is the director of the exhibit. Mr. Wells, Mr. T. C. Williams, Mr. Isaacs, and Mrs. Baten, the principals of the four schools, are to carry on the campaign for selling tickets. There is nothing to prohibit teaching the Bible in our public schools. It is a common belief that the constitution forbids it, but it does not because the Bible need not be taught from a sectarian standpoint. The Bible can be taught from a literary standpoint, from a historical viewpoint, and from a philosophical viewpoint, without involving creeds and doctrines in the least. In teaching Civics Government and Economics the teacher rarely sets forth his own political views, so why should doctrines and creeds be taught in teaching the Bible? You may say that a teacher could not help but mix his opinions up with Bible study, and thus make it sectarian, but I do not believe the right kind of a teacher would do this. Civics and Economics are easily taught without involving creeds, and politics, so why could not the Bible be taught thus? The question of teaching the Bible in the public schools is attracting a great deal of attention. Newspapers and magazines are taking it up and the majority of them are in favor of inaugurating Bible study in our public schools. The Presbyterian Synod of the state of Washington is taking the matter up with the supreme court. Harvard, one of the greatest institutions of learning, has made Bible study compulsory in order for students to get an A. B. degree. Thus you see that a large part of our present day thinkers are on the affirmative side of the question. To summarize: Bible study is necessary from an educational standpoint; there is nothing to prohibit its being taught in public schools because the Constitution does not stand in the way, since it could be taught from a non-sectarian viewpoint; and the majority of the public opinion is on the affirmative. To conclude, I think that anyone who has the least spark of patriotism and Christianity, or the least desire to help his fellowmen, would heartily endorse a move to introduce Bible study in the public schools of America. Visit the School Week. Beginning March 13, will be 'Visit the School Week.' Every patron of Cisco is asked to visit the schools during this week. There will be pupils each period to usher the visitors about the building. There will be labels on each door, indicating the name of the teacher and the name of the room which is being held at that period. In each room there will be vacant chairs placed in a convenient place, so that the visitors may come in at any time and be seated without disturbing the recitation. Class periods will be carried on in his usual manner. Miss Robbins started to sign a pass, and forgot what her initials were. Forrest Herndon said, "Oh, you just want to change 'em!" Upon inspection, the lady found she had signed the pass "S. O. S." That was Tuesday morning, and, of course, that "S. O. S." may have been a distress call for more heat—huh?

SENIORS ARE HONORED AT DELIGHTFUL BANQUET

The Ex-Students of the State University were hosts at a very delightful banquet Saturday evening, March 4, at the Alexander Hotel. The Seniors of the Cisco High School were the honored guests. Forty-eight were present, fourteen of whom were seniors. This is the first real event, destined to hold a place forever in the minds of the Seniors, which has taken place this year. Mr. Owen Barker, toastmaster, also delivered the president's message. In his talk he helped the confused minds of the Seniors. Mrs. Ann H. Keen gave a beautiful toast to the faculty. Although the Seniors did not know the wonderful characters described by her they tried to apply the descriptions to the teachers they had had during their high school days. Mr. Godbey gave a very interesting talk on the "Control and Support of the University." Miss Ruth St. John stated the "Purposes and Plans of the State Ex-Students Association." Marlon Olson, by way of obtaining information, gave a very interesting talk on "What I Expect to Get at University." He was assured by the ex-students that he would get all he expected and then some more. Every ex-student then responded with some personal reminiscences, which set the seniors to thinking. One person told of a bloody battle between the "fish" and the upper classmen. The Seniors learned the story of "Perigrinus", poor fellow, whose body was destroyed but whose spirit still lives. Then they heard the story of his always ready rival, "Alexander Frederic Claiborne", whose body has been cut into bits and distributed among the students. Various ex-students warned them against trying to overcome the fates, and Mr. Barker testified that as a result of trying to do this very thing he wears a life-long emblem this wedding ring. After all the exes had aroused the Seniors' curiosity to the highest pitch Mrs. Keen was kind enough to explain that the "Perigrinus" is nothing more than a walk, one quarter of a mile long, bordered on each side by a double row of trees, which is a very delightful place for walks on moonlight nights. Several yells were then given by the guests. The delightful occasion came to a close with the song "The Eyes of Texas are Upon You."

SHALL THE BIBLE BE TAUGHT IN SCHOOL?

During the last few years a great deal of discussion has arisen over the proposal to place a course of Bible study in the public schools of the United States. There is a great deal of offer for both sides. Any sound minded person will not deny, however, that there is a great need for Bible instruction in some concrete form. The American people are more ignorant of the Bible than of any of the topics of the day. Bible study is necessary for every human being. Even an infidel should study the Bible. The Bible, as all the great critics say, is the crowning piece of literature of all time. Shakespeare is perhaps one of the greatest authors of Europe, but Shakespeare's works can never reach the high literary standard that is reached by the Bible. Everyone has at some time studied Shakespeare. No one is well educated unless he knows something of Shakespeare. The study of Shakespeare is compulsory in the public schools of America. Why not make the Bible a credited course in our schools? It has more literary merit than any writings past or present. Almost any style of literature can be found in the Bible. To show the attitude of our great thinkers toward Bible study I call your attention to Harvard University, where, in order to get an A. B. degree, one must be able to pass an examination on the Bible. Do you know what is responsible for the large number of inmates in our correctional institutions? The fact that these inmates are ignorant of the truths set forth by the Bible is responsible. A large number of people get no more than a common school education. They do not, or cannot, attend church and thus are left almost totally ignorant of all the humane laws of man. If Bible study were introduced into the public schools, everyone would have at least a smattering of the ideals of man. People are not able to comprehend the great significance of the Declaration of Independence unless they are acquainted with the Bible. A great

BREVITIES.

Everyone would be glad to hear that the Dramatic and Debating Clubs have come back to life. These clubs have not met since Christmas. They must have had "too much holidays," or something worse. If the Dramatic Club and the Debating Club continue like they have been doing lately, they will be listed among the "Forgotten Clubs." However, they will probably redeem themselves in a short time. Virgil Howard explained to a freshman, "Don't say, 'I'm going rabbit hunting.' Say, 'I'm going out to decrease the population of the rabbits.'" Joe Kilborn came up to school the other day with his hair neatly combed and parted. When asked concerning the neat appearance of it, Joe replied, "I put water on it when I combed it, and the water froze." Mr. Turner, in Algebra class: "You have to get an equation with only one unknown." Garland Sheppard: "They're all unknown to me." UNADVERTISED CLUBS Probably the most notorious of the clubs in the Cisco High School is the "Heart Smashing Club." The highest ambition of the members of the club is to see how many hearts each one can break. The system of this club is very simple. A member will take a girl to a picture show a couple of times and then propose to her. She usually accepts him, and when she does, he laughs in her face and tells her he was only joking. The poor girl then goes away heartbroken and attempts to kill herself by jumping in the river or by seeing how much natural gas she can inhale. This club is so notorious that it cannot be disbanded or even punished, so the opposite sex will have to go on suffering through out the ages to come. This club is composed of probably half the boys in the high school. Some of the most important members of the club are: Red Lee, President, First Vice President, Second Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, Social Committee, and Sergeant at Arms. Some of the other members are: Lowry Beard, Garland Shepherd, Anol Caegeel (girls, look out for him), Rufus Pety, Miltie Carroll, and Porter Myrick. In addressing the members of this club affix the prefix "Heartbreaker." The HLY has changed the time for luncheon meetings. The usual meetings were held at noon on Monday. They will now be held Saturday nights. "Pups will be coming back pretty soon." Dick: "I hope he doesn't stay long." There has been an increase in Bible Study meetings. Good dog "for give away." Got two ears, a tail, "neevahing." Darn good dog for the shape he's in. Apply Marlon Olson. Don't play forty two with Mr. Wells. It doesn't pay. Isn't this enough of a name: John Cheley Dick Kilborn. Students are taking more interest in tennis this year than they did last year. Proper interest has not been taken in school courts, but many private courts have been fixed. The freshmen are taking an interest in tennis. If this is kept up, within three years C. H. S. should have champion tennis players. There are great prospects for a winning tennis team this year, as about ten are going to enter the race to try to make the team.

NEXT LYCEUM NUMBER OF UNUSUAL MERIT HERE TOMORROW NIGHT

Comedy, "The Mollusc," With Marlon Evenson As Leading Lady, is in the Class of High Grade Productions Seldom Seen in Cisco. The next lyceum number will be here Tuesday night, March 7, and is a number that everyone will enjoy. It is a play entitled "The Mollusc." This play comes with good recommendations. The leading lady, Miss Marlon Evenson, has played in the following plays in the last two years: Was with Lionel Barrymore in Arthur Hopkins's production of "Macbeth" at the Apollo theater in New York. Played leading roles in, Shakespeare, such as: Ophelia, Portia, Juliet, and Elizabeth, with Robert B. Mantoll. Played Rosaline in "As You Like It" on Barrington's Southern Seven Day Chautauqua Circuit, last summer with "The Ben Great Players." So that you will know about what to expect, the following is a short synopsis of the interesting play, "The Mollusc." Mr. Davis went to the animal kingdom to get a name for his comedy, and a definition of the besetting weakness of the principle character in it—Mrs. Baxter. In the Mollusc he found an animal of a kind rarely mentioned in the "Mollusc" which sets forth in comical situations that the indolence of the idle rich becomes a disease of such a character that they use force to resist the effects of friendly efforts to cure them. Mrs. Baxter is a human mollusc, but she is a mollusc of such attractive beauty that it would be a mighty poor man who would refuse to minister to her every want. How she loves the luxury of attendance! Young beautiful to behold, selfish, pampered, indolent—but without a bit domesticated, she is the idol of her family and a perpetual worry to her husband. The scene of the comedy is the country home of the Baxters, several miles outside of London. They have two children, for whom they have provided a pretty governess, Miss Roberts. Mrs. Baxter is thoroughly domesticated in her tastes and indifferent to the occupations of her husband. hat she might not be compelled to leave her home she enjoins the governess to accompany Mr. Baxter whenever his fancy leads him. The husband and the governess take long walks, play chess, read together and attend the dances. Mr. Baxter becomes infatuated with her. The behavior of Miss Roberts is beyond reproach. She is Baxter's companion as well as the governess of his children. She has no affection for him. But Baxter gradually finds her indispensable to him and the affair is reaching a serious stage when along comes Tom Kemp, brother of Mrs. Baxter. He sees the danger and quickly puts himself to the task of averting it. He shows his sister the weak points in her own character, suggests that she be more attentive to her husband and at another time, takes occasion to remind Mr. Baxter of his duty. The wife eventually sees the gravity of the situation, and by ways peculiar to her sex, she restores love and order in a house about to fall. During the progress of his efforts to cure his sister of "mollusciness," Kemp falls in love with the governess, and when he reveals his affection, both Baxters oppose him; the husband because he has a secret attachment, the wife because she does not wish to lose such a valuable servant. In the end Kemp is victorious, and he sees the governess effectually cured of its besetting weakness.

HIGH SIXTH WEST WARD

(Editor's note: The only ward notes of any description which have been received by the Gusher this term are the following from the High sixth at West Ward. News from the ward schools must reach a Gusher representative on or before Wednesday each week in order to be published.) Last Friday the high sixth Historical club had a very interesting meeting and program, including an interesting talk by Mr. Williams. Miss Hall: "We have now been studying the history of Texas for three credited years." Well, it did seem that long to some of us, we will admit. Miss Hall (making assignment): "Next Friday we will have Chile." It made us hungry to think of it. The high sixth grade would be glad to have visitors come at any time to see the work we are doing. Last Monday Rev. Hall made a very interesting and helpful talk in chapel, which was enjoyed by everyone. Milton Preston, who is so fond of his cousin that he had to write her a note in geography class, was caught by Miss Hall, who got the note intended for the cousin.

Ex-Students Banquet.
On March 2 the ex-students of the Texas University all over the state celebrate Texas Independence Day with a banquet. Because of the extreme cold weather of Thursday the banquet given here was postponed until Saturday evening. In the dining room of the Alexander hotel, where the affair was held, the tables were arranged in the form of a U with a small table in the center. The University colors, yellow and white, were carried out by the use of yellow runners down the tables and yellow pot plants. The honor guests were the students of the graduating class. Another prominent guest and member was Mrs. J. J. Butts who was one of the first year students, when classes were held in the old capitol building. Distributed with the program was an illustrated booklet on the University of Texas. A delicious two course menu was served, after which the program was given. Owen Barker, vice president, read a telegram of greetings from the deans of all departments. He then read the president's message, which was followed by the program: "The Faculty", Mrs. Annie H. Kean; violin solo, Harry Hampton; "University Support and Control", Prof. J. J. Godday; "The University of Earlier Days", by B. W. Patterson; vocal solo, by Miss Thelma Fairless; "Purposes and Plans of the State Ex-Students Associations", by Miss Ruth St. John; "Periginus", by J. Lee Cearly piano solo, Miss Saunders; "What I Expect to Get at the University", Marion Olson, and personal reminiscences by every ex-student. The association went into a business session and elected the following officers: president, Owen Barker; vice-president, Mrs. For rest Wright; secretary-treasurer, Leon Maner; and reporter for the Alcalde, J. Turner Garner. The evening was completed with yells and songs, a very hearty yell being given by the seniors. Last of all was "The Eyes of Texas Are Upon You," a song dear to every ex-student. Covers were laid for fifty people.

WIRELESS IS MAKING THE WORLD SMALLER
DALLAS, March 6. — The radio-telephone is indeed fast making the world a smaller place in which to live. Speculations as to who will be next to "get on the air" will probably become more rife with the announcement that the local Baptist city-wide training schools are conducting 14 classes with an address by wireless a regular feature of the program. More than 1,050 persons have enrolled in these classes in Dallas alone, while other classes in different parts of the state "listen in" on the program. Classes were held nightly last week. One of the classes is composed of Texas University students at Austin.

TEXAS LEAGUE PLANS TO INCREASE THE DRY VOTE
DALLAS, March 6.—Plans to increase the "dry" voting strength in congress were discussed here in a conference between E. H. Cherrington, secretary of the National Anti-Saloon league; the Rev. E. A. Maness, chairman of the executive committee of the league, and the Rev. Atticus Webb, president of the Texas Anti-Saloon league. The conference was in line with the league's effort to increase interest in the enforcement of prohibition laws throughout the country. Mr. Webb announced two forthcoming law enforcement conferences, one to convene at Longview, March 9 and 10 for northeast Texas league delegates, and the other at Kingsville, March 15, for south Texas delegates.
