Curtis Kept Under Close Watch by New Jersey Police

MAY INVOKE FEDERAL LAW AGAINST HIM

HOPEWELL, N. J., May 18. — John H. Curtis, bankrupt Norfolk business man who wove a cruel fantasy of "contacts" with kidnapers in the hope of personal gain, was under close watch today to see he did not escape the police or try to cheat their investigation in the Lindbergh kidnaping by suicide.

Curtis, according to state police officials, had not attempted suicide since coming into their hands, nor had he had opportunity in view of their careful watch. Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, heading the police investigation, revealed in a statement that he had had confidential information Curtis tried suicide after his financial troubles last year.

No charges have been filed against Curtis. His hoax ranks as a misdemeanor, classed in New Jersey with traffic violations and petty larceny. However, he may be arraigned on a federal statute providing fines and imprisonment for anyone using time or material of the government. The sea search instigated by Curtis may fall under this classification.

ANOTHER HAS "IMAGINATION"

NEW YORK, May 12. — Frank Trench, Brooklyn narcotic addict, who insisted for 24 hours that he had a hand in the kidnaping of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's son, confessed today that his whole story was a product of his imagination.

"JASIE" BLAMES CURTIS HOAX.

NEW YORK, May 18. — Jasie blamed John H. Curtis today for his own failure to save the life of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and return the kidnaped baby to its grieving parents.

"He ruined my chances of maintaining contact with the kidnapers established about a week after the baby was stolen," he charged.

Capt. Wheatley will go immediately to his new headquarters in Uvalde. He has served 12 years with the ranger force under Capt. Frank Harner and Capt. Tom Hickman. Before entering the service Wheatley was sheriff of Potter and Moore counties, and later chief of police at Amarillo.

Beauty-Bids for Poster Honor

From the way we see this model situation, it's an 11-to-1 bet that McClelland Barclay, famous artist, will find the subject he wants for his painting of the "typical American girl" cheering her Olympic team on to victory. Vivacity as well as beauty is Barclay's standard at the University of Southern California where he's pictured with the eleven co-eds from whom he'll make his selection. Smart fellow, Barclay. See his pad and pencil!

A motion to have Lion Dyer bring the audit of the club's books down to June 1 was carried. The directors were empowered to look over accounts receivable and make recommendations as seem wise regarding past due accounts in order to give the new administration a clean slate.

A motion to drop from the roll members who have been absent and behind with their monthly dues as much as one month was also passed.

Louisiana's Skyscraper-Capitol For Its New Chief Executive

Mirrored in the quiet waters of University Lake, Louisiana's towering new capitol building at Baton Rouge is pictured here as it awaited formal dedication May 16 when Governor-elect O. K. Allen was inaugurated into office. The capitol, built at a cost of $5,000,000, is said to be the tallest building in the south.

It is 33 stories in height, its topmost part being 439 feet from the ground. The lake reflecting the rear of the building in this striking photo, once was a bayou upon which, tradition says, stood a red stick from which Baton Rouge derived its name. The stick divided the hunting grounds of two Indian tribes.

HIGH SCHOOL HONOR PUPILS ARE NAMED

High honor students of the graduating class of the Cisco high school were announced today by Principal H. Brandon as follows:

First honor boy — Mac Statham, with an average of 94.728.

First honor girl — Mary Ellen Noell, with an average of 94.165.

Mac Statham will be valedictorian for the class at its commencement exercises Friday evening and Mary Ellen Noell will be salutatorian. Dr. E. M. Waite, president of Texas Christian university, will deliver the address.

Practically all colleges and universities in the state offer scholarships for high honor boy and high honor girl. Texas university offers such a scholarship for the highest honor graduate alone.

A number of other members of the graduating class made averages of above 90 but were not eligible for the high honor list because they did not take four subjects all during the year, Principal Brandon said.

Fromme was shot to death in a hotel lobby here last Feb. 20 while hundreds of American Legion convention delegates looked on. The shooting followed an argument over a dice game upstairs.

Officers said Homer admitted firing the fatal shot but witnesses said Jeff held the pistol shortly before Fromme was slain.

SCHOOL BOARD SAYS FURTHER TALK USELESS

The Cisco school board, declaring it "inadvisable to waste further time" in negotiations, last night directed suit be brought in district court to set aside the ruling of the state committee suspending Cisco high school from interscholastic league football for 1932 and to recover damages that the school may suffer in consequence of such ruling.

The motion directed President F. E. Clark to name a committee of three to employ attorneys who will bring suit in the board's behalf against the district executive committee, the state executive committee, John Mouser, of Eastland, and the Prairie Oil and Gas company or its successors. The purpose of the suit will be to secure a mandamus setting aside the ruling of the state committee, to enjoin the playing of any football schedule in district No. 3 in which Cisco is not included and to recover loss of gate receipts that the Cisco school may suffer and any general damages that may be sustained.

The motion directed President F. E. Clark to name a committee of three to employ attorneys who will bring suit in the board's behalf against the district executive committee, the state executive committee, John Mouser, of Eastland, and the Prairie Oil and Gas company or its successors of which Mouser is an Eastland official, were named in the suit, because of Mouser's alleged activities and use of his company's facilities in coercing the district committee into its recommendation against the Cisco school, it was announced.

Negotiations Started.

The resolution last night put into effect a motion passed at a meeting of the board April 4, directing that suit be filed which was held in abeyance pending negotiations begun by a group of interested citizens at Eastland and Ranger on April 5.

President Clark named F. D. Wright, J. E. Spencer and W. J. Armstrong as the committee and they were directed to institute suit immediately.

The resolution last night was preceded by a lengthy review of negotiations that have occurred beginning with the April 4 meeting of the board and concluding with the meeting of the district executive committee held at Abilene last Saturday afternoon when the committee adjourned without definite action.

The statement of the board was in effect:

"On April 4 a meeting of the school board was held when a resolution was passed directing that suit be filed to set aside the action of the state executive committee of the league in suspending Cisco high school from football in 1932 and to recover such damages as the school should sustain in being denied participation in league football.

Asked Action Withheld.

"On April 5 certain interested citizens at Eastland and Ranger asked that the board withhold its action pending negotiations that would be undertaken to get this matter straightened out. In a meeting at Eastland attended by representative citizens of Eastland and Ranger and three members of the district executive committee it was the unanimous opinion of those present that the case could be worked out and it was recommended that an endeavor be made to get the district committee together to see if some agreement and solution could be reached. It was suggested that if a statement agreeable to the district committee would be made by Cisco the district committee would favor the re-instatement of the Cisco high school in football competition. The group was unable to secure a meeting of the district committee until May 10 at Eastland. Present at this meeting were Supt. R. D. Green, of Abilene, sitting for Chairman Dudley, of Abilene, who was not present; Supt. N. S. Holland, of Breckenridge; Supt. R. S. Holloway, of Ranger; and Supt. B. L. Ponsler, chairman of the athletic committee of the board; F. D. Wright, board member, and R. N. Cluck, superintendent.

Statement Worked Out.

"Mr. Wright presented to the committee a statement from the Cisco board and after considerable discussion a draft worked out largely by the committee, was agreed upon unanimously. The statement was revised, sections marked out and interlined, and written in by members of the district committee, and after it had been agreed upon by the committee as satisfactory, Wright

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

THE RIGHT ATTITUDE.—O come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our maker. For He is our God; and we are the people of his pasture.—Psalm 95: 6, 7.

A SPLIT ATOM.

A few years ago the play "Wings Over Europe" thrilled and terrified audiences. It told the story of a young man who had discovered the secret of the atom's energy. He maintained that he was able to destroy the whole world in an instant, and he proposed to use his tremendous power to compel the statesmen of the world to end war and abolish poverty and injustice.

Now it is announced by Lord Rutherford, a world-famous British scientist, that two young Cambridge physicists have been splitting atoms, and the world is undisturbed. It is a feat important to scientists but not as yet important to the general public. Says Lord Rutherford:

"It is difficult to say to what this discovery may lead. Up to the present the experiments have not yielded anything which will be of immediate commercial value."

"I have seen it stated that this discovery means we shall be able to produce an immense accumulation of added electrical energy for commercial purposes. But we cannot claim that for our experiments up to the present, for the simple reason that for every particle of energy we get, it requires millions of particles to make it effective. The experiments, however, are of great scientific interest and are likely to be powerful agents in extending our knowledge of the atom."

Fear of any dire consequences from continued experimenting along this line may now be allayed. Some practical purpose may be served eventually by this new knowledge, or what is equally important, other new knowledge may be brought to light as a result of this work.

CO-OPERATIVE THEATER.

Co-operative enterprise bobs up in various professions as well as in relief methods. One example of it has temporarily saved the life of a burlesque show, which may not seem to some persons like a very important accomplishment, until one thinks of the individual performers, stage hands, musicians and others whose jobs are maintained only so long as the show goes on.

The manager worked out a co-operative agreement with the musicians' union and stage hands' union in order to dodge "pay cut" difficulties. Under the agreement every-one shares in profits. If crowds are small, all receive less than usual, but if by chance the crowds are large, they all stand to profit by the good fortune. This means that everybody from leading lady, down the line through chorus girls to stage hands, is still receiving a little something when Saturday night comes around. No one kicks because all are paid alike. It is a case of sharing willingly or suffering unwillingly.

The next problem on the manager's hands is to persuade the owner of the theater to come in on the co-operative scheme and to be as good a sport as the rest of them in accepting a share in the proceeds instead of a stipulated—and temporarily impossible—rental.

OKLAHOMA BANKERS ON THE WARPATH.

Behind closed doors in Tulsa the members of the Oklahoma Bankers association voted to take drastic steps "to rid the state of bank robbers and bank robbery." It is well. Oklahoma banks and bankers have been terrorized by native hijackers as well as visitors from Arkansas and Missouri who know how to make their getaway with their loot. Self preservation is the first law of nature. A campaign of extermination directed by courageous men will be a winning campaign.

OFFICERS TO HOLD THEIR PLACES.

After prolonged debate a democratic house of representatives voted to retain the provision in the army supply bill which would save annually about $4,000,000 by forcing retirement of 3000 officers. No record vote was taken but republican representatives led the fight against the reduction. Theodore Roosevelt in the long ago preached the gospel of preparedness. His military soul continued to go marching on.

GIVEN A CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH

Mayor George L. Baker and four minor officials in the city of Portland, Ore., faced a court trial on malfeasance charges. They were accused to having agreed to pay $200,000 too much for a municipal market site. A direct verdict of acquittal was ordered by the trial judge. Having been exonerated of all guilt, the mayor and the commissioners returned to their desks. Speaking of politics, the trial judge is a republican, the mayor is a republican and the commissioners are republicans. In the city of New York the Hon. Sam Seabury, head of the republican investigating committee, has made similar charges against public officials. These officials are Tammany chieftains. Several have been sent to trial. Verdicts of acquittal were returned. If in Portland, the proud city of the Pacific coast commonwealth, important officials and leaders are given verdicts of acquittal, why not in the metropolis of the Atlantic seaboard. Accusation is not evidence. A grand jury indictment is not a verdict of guilt. A person accused of crime is entitled to a trial facing an impartial judge or a jury of 12 of his peers. There is a bitter campaign coming in Texas. It would be well for spellbinders, demagogues or the reverse, to stick to the facts while the campaign is on.

The Watch on the Seine!

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Jimmie Allred is credited with being a good politician in his appointment of V. Earl Earp to the staff of his assistants in the attorney-general's department at Austin. Earp is commander of the state department of the American Legion, a likable fellow who was defeated by the veteran Tom Blanton for congress but has since built lots of solid political fences as he travels from post to post of the state veterans' organization in his little white car.

Earp was in Cisco Monday night and made out a pretty good case in favor of immediate payment of adjusted service certificates to ex-soldiers, ex-sailors and ex-representatives of that rambunctious military hybrid, the marine, who claims to be able unaided and alone to lick any two representatives of the branches of service between which he is sandwiched. In his speech Earp showed that he had developed a lip for figures which will stand him in good stead now that Jimmie Allred has taken the attorney-general's department into high finance with his anti-trust suits.

The powers that be at Washington and Wall Street have socked the bonus where the chicken got the axe. But in these days and times we look for anything. Nothing is dead except prosperity and no political issue or nostrum has been buried too deeply for a resurrection. The bonus may rise like a sheeted ghost from the political cemetery into a vital reality again before this critical period of American history has passed. From the rate that harassed and excited senators at Washington are snatching up one thing and laying down another with Hoover blaming congress and Garner tossing the package back, we need not be surprised at any fantastic remedy that finally spirals out of the maelstrom. The ghouls are already doing a lot of digging about to discover a hopeful clue in the corpses unmercifully interred during and before the bombastic era when profits were slick and easy and speculation was building a tower of Babel into a mythical Eldorado.

Blanton hops on the five-billion dollar federal bond plan for direct relief and jumps up and down with both feet. Blanton has as much energy as a jumping jack. He goes into action on the order of a buzzsaw and gets attention. His ideas may be spectacular, but that's because he knows how to dramatize his politics.

Blanton is keen enough to appreciate the essential value of the melodramatic. The public likes action, excitement, the sense of getting along fast emotionally or otherwise. Politicians and others in public life who are successful take cues from the theater. They may apply the principles in different ways, according to their peculiar talents to interest or entertain, but the elements that make them successful are essentially the same as underlie the popular play or story or motion picture.

But about the five billion-dollar bond issue. I believe he is right. In Cisco, particularly I should believe he is right. "O bond, where is thy interest coupon?" is a plaint that I have heard often enough.

Ray, Godfrey was late at his barber shop recently. Asked Joe Meador: "What's the matter? Couldn't you get the car started?" Replied Ray: "Not that. I was shaving myself and before I realized it had talked myself into a haircut and a shampoo."

A canvass to raise more of Cisco's quota for the support of the Comanche Trail Council of the Boy Scouts of America is under way here and has been creating enough interest among business men to be talked on the streets. I was inquiring of E. P. Crawford yesterday afternoon what progress was being made and J. J. Collins, president of the chamber of commerce, overheard snatches of the conversation. "Say," he demanded, "is it too late for me to get in on this?" "Getting in means giving out in this case," he was reminded. "I'm certainly sorry it's too late," he regretted.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

John Nance Garner is a native Texan. He was born in a log cabin on the banks of Red river more than 60 years ago. He removed himself to the banks of the Rio Grande in the county of Uvalde, in his early youth. He was not rocked in a golden cradle. He was of pioneer stock. In his veins courses the blood of men and women who have conquered a wilderness. He became a lawyer as well as a ranchman. He had an early flair for politics. He was not handsome in his youth but he had a persuasive tongue, a ready wit, was a splendid mixer, an excellent judge of human nature, had a keen brain, and knew how to handle men. He became a leader of democratic politics in the lower country. He became a lawmaker under the big dome in the city of Austin. He won the confidence as well as the esteem of his fellow lawmakers, and when the hour arrived to redistrict the state he carved out one of his own. More than 30 years ago he was elected to the house of representatives and all that happened since is ancient history. Today he is the best publicized man in America regardless of the fact that Herbert Hoover had been the prize ace among those who for years have been given fanciful touches by the most experts of all the publicity makers of politics and pabulum for daily newspapers and magazines.

Thirty years is a long time to serve as a national lawmaker. It shows the value to the people of never swapping horses — in a political sense. As a representative Garner made his way from the bottom to the top of the congressional ladder. He is a master of details as well as a glutton for work. He is tireless and ambitious and when he won the gavel of speaker he moved into the national picture gallery as the head of one of the most important divisions of the American government. He never dreamed that he would be pushed into the picture as a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. Franklin D. Roosevelt was away out in front; Alfred E. Smith had announced his purpose to remain as the titular leader of his party as a private citizen until the convention of 1932 named a standard bearer to make the race for a prize that Smith had lost in 1928.

What happened late in the campaign is romantic history as well as ancient history. There are magnificent political outlaws who cast their shadows over the republic as well as outlaws of huge dimensions in other fields of endeavor.

William Randolph Hearst, like a bolt out of the clear sky, declared that Speaker Garner was the man of the hour and that he was the choice of the Hearst coast-to-coast organization for president of the United States. Hearst dismissed in his signed message Roosevelt and Smith and Baker and Young and Ritchie and all the others, avowed or receptive candidates, with one sweep of his political wand. He classified them as internationalists, whatever that may be, and painted their faces out of the presidential picture gallery.

Then another distinguished political outlaw, a man of boundless ambition, many mighty achievements, defeated for the presidential nomination in two national conventions, threw his hat into the national order that the people may be led out of the wilderness and that a government of and for the many be placed in power.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

John L. Brady, co-publisher of the Blackfoot (Idaho) Daily Bulletin, says: "I was brought up on a farm. That was a good many years ago and things have changed. Possibly peddlers still come through the country with their wares and unfold them to the housewife. Their coming was anticipated with pleasure by the youngsters of my day. These peddlers would unroll their packs and display the most gorgeous colors. Oftentimes mother would be persuaded by the youngsters to buy things which we did not use in times when many things were sorely needed and not to be had by the large family. "Advertising is a good deal like that. If a merchant makes a flamboyant appeal he sometimes entices people to buy when they do not need or cannot afford, especially in such times as these. The after-effects are not good. A suspicion is created. Many times since I have been in the advertising business I have known merchants to make circus appeals which were highly enticing, but which left a bad taste with the customers. "It is my observation that the best advertisement is the one that intrigues in a quiet, effective way by creating a desire which women are apt to begin planning how they can satisfy. Resulting purchases save valuable floor space and make for friendly relations. "The advertisement which creates a desire to investigate has performed its second best purpose. If a woman wishes to see an article from an advertisement she has gone a long step toward buying. Customer confidence is created by merchants carrying out their promises. It is then that women feel safe in buying other articles they see in stores that are not advertised, but which they accept with the same implied guarantee. Importunities of salesmen have almost entirely stopped, but so must advertising be discontinued which does not make a legitimate appeal. These are troublesome times and advertising must be carefully spread before the public."

SUES TO REGAIN OFFICE

CENTERVILLE, Ill., May 17. — Frank Reinhardt, who was Highway Commissioner of Centerville Township for 20 years and then lost it on a flip of a coin, has filed suit to regain the office. Reinhardt tied with H. C. Gentry for the office, each receiving 1,488 votes. In the recent election and they decided to flip a coin for the office. Gentry won. Now Reinhardt says he has found several votes that were not counted.

DIED WITH MASTER

CANON CITY, Colo., May 17. — When Ernest Simon, 80, died at a local hospital, he was happy. He knew that "Brownie" his Chesapeake Bay dog, constant companion in life for 12 years, had been chloroformed, and would be buried near him. The aged man's last request was for friends to see that Brownie was not left alone in the world, but would go with him.

BADGER STATE FLIER PLANS OCEAN FLIGHT

OSHKOSH, Wis., May 18. — The six-passenger Stinson monoplane in which Clyde Lee, 23, local pilot, hopes to make a one stop flight from Oshkosh to Oslo, Norway, will be ready for a test hop to Florida or Panama soon.

The plane is at the local airport. It will be stripped to the absolute minimum weight and will be equipped with tanks to carry 450 gallons of gasoline and 20 gallons of oil. Lee believes that he will be able to remain in the air 40 hours.

It is planned to make the flight this summer, hopping first to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, where the plane will be refueled for the ocean hop. The distance from Oshkosh to Harbor Grace is estimated at 2,000 miles and the distance from there to Oslo is 3,400 miles.

Julius Robertson, Negaunee, Mich., a student flier, will be Lee's companion. His duties will be to handle the gas pumps and act as relief pilot.

Safety equipment will consist of a collapsible rubber boat. Provisions will include a two-week supply of concentrated food and five gallons of water.

If Lee and his companion are successful they will have made the first non-stop ocean flight from North America to Norway. A $10,000 prize offered by a Norwegian newspaper five years ago will be their reward.

Although Lee is contributing the airplane and several hundred dollars of his own money, a fund of at least $500 will have to be raised by citizens of Oshkosh. Chief sponsor of the move is the Junior Association of Commerce which has agreed to contribute $100 if the remaining $400 is raised.

Lee was born Feb. 16, 1908 at Roseville, Wis. His mother died in 1912 and he went to live with his grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Cross of Winchester. Later he lived with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hough of Marshfield.

Father Was Flier

Lee's father is a pilot at the Milwaukee soldiers' home. He was injured at Croydon Field, England, while a member of the 32d Aero Squadron. The elder Lee served 22 months in France.

Before he was 17 years old Lee had learned to pilot an airplane.

The young flier teamed up with the late Charles "Speed" Homan, internationally famous pilot, for stunt work in the Hinks flying circus. Lee did most of the wing walking and parachute jumping, completing 31 successful drops without mishap.

Later he did news-reel work in Florida. He flew the first airplane to cross the Santa Clara valley in Mexico when he took a party of mining engineers and supplies over the Sierra Madre mountains.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT

United Press Staff Correspondent. PARIS, May 18 — Ladies who own them, and gentlemen who admire them, here's some brand new waistline information. It comes directly from M. Heim of the House of Heim and, in his own words, here it is:

"The waistline is placed just under the bust with fabrics falling in an unbroken line to the skirt hem. The waist is no longer fitted tightly, but with the dresses moulded snugly under the bust, there is a supple curve which closely follows the curve of the waist, defines the hips and covers the ankles. It would be impossible to have created a silhouette that is moulded at the bust, waist, hips and knees, this is an exaggeration of a fashion and an indication of the passing of the moulded and swathed figures. This new silhouette will undoubtedly bring about a change in the skirt length, and for daytime they will be appreciably longer."

That last remark breaks news to us also, in a gentle way, for we have been brought up to the present on the theory that skirts were crawling up to show undeniably the curve of the midriff.

Blind Alaskan Will Be Teacher

OLYMPIA Wash., May 18. — Alaska where blindness finds most of its victims, will be the home of a second Helen Keller.

Melba Call, an orphaned Eskimo, has completed her education in the Perkins Institute for Blind, in Watertown, Mass., and will go back to help her own people in Alaska.

The girl was found by Dr. Linus French, an American physician. She had been left to starve in an igloo. Scruvy had made her a cripple. He took her to the hospital in Nushigak where she was found by Mrs. Corinne Call, an American teacher. Mrs. Call adopted Melba when she was two. She changed the girl's name to Melba. She was given her own last name of Call.

A scholar-ship to Perkins Institute was won in the blind school at Vancouver, Wash. She was considered the most brilliant student in the institute since it counted the famed Helen Keller and Laura Bridgeman among its outstanding scholars.

She has been promised an Alaskan school, where she will spend her days teaching blind Eskimo children how to see with their fingers.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—After seeing a picture of Bishop Cannon leaning against a bar with his foot on the brass rail, nothing could have kept me away from the Prohibition Fair.

No such thought stimulated a rush by the rest of the capital's populace, however, and it may be that so many things have been heard about Bishop Cannon in the last few years that a mere brass rail act is not calculated to excite general interest.

Anyway, the famous Virginia dry leader was only performing at a preview for photographers, so those few of us who were thus lured simply got fooled.

Too Early to Tell

It is early to predict whether that Prohibition Fair marked a turning point against the wet tide which has been rising so menacingly of late or whether it was merely a last despairing gesture of propaganda before the dry movement collapses into utter impotence.

Nevertheless, it left something to be desired from the standpoints of authenticity and effectiveness. The sights to be seen may have satisfied the dry ladies, but the lovely, ethereal Mrs. Pauline Sabin's wicked "wealthy wet women," who were here the week before and can tell one cocktail from another, know better.

The Prohibition Fair was sponsored by the National Woman's Committee for Law Enforcement, which insists on meeting in Washington every year, presumably in the vague hope of getting someone here interested in the matter of law enforcement.

These ladies are the nice, kindly, home-making type which all men like, whereas Mrs. Sabin's "W. W. W.'s" are the nice, snappy, dressy, often handsome, sophisticated type which all men like.

Those Cocktail Parties

The dry ladies' conception of the "W. W. W.'s" was evidenced in a succession of roughly painted murals lining what they called "The Lawless Lane of Liquor." After passing a picture of a huge still in operation and another of a Coast Guard boat bombarding a defenseless rum boat in the full glare of its searchlight 30 feet ahead, you followed the likker into a picture called "Women's Cocktail Parties."

There sat five women in evening dress smoking cigarettes and drinking highballs. A maid was bringing five cocktails on a tray.

One of the ladies had dropped a shoulder strap—shame on her!—and the artist had placed in the eyes of each a strange look of ecstasy hard to describe.

Mrs. Sabin doubtless would be furious at the charge that any of her "wicked, wealthy, wet women" ever served cocktails on top of highballs, but such evidences of degeneracy seemed natural enough to the dry ladies.

The artist also tried to make them believe that a "Men's Highball Party" finds the men playing cards with two or three bottles on the floor beside each chair.

Poor Strategy?

CONTINUING in the role of art critic, one suggests that the imitation saloon—where Bishop Cannon posed—might have looked like a horrible example to dry, but would certainly inspire any practicing wet to redouble his hollers for repeal.

The bar was stocked with fancy bottles—Seagram's, Old Barb, John Haig's Gold Label, Bobbie Burns and William Whitley's whisky, Booth's and Saconne & Speed's old dry gin, Old Nick rum, St. Marno and the like. Most wets had forgotten the existence of such rare old brands, and it seemed poor strategy to remind them.

Nor should the swinging door of the saloon have opened onto two short, concealed steps going down.

No saloonkeeper ever fooled his customers that way. And instead of a ship's picture over the bar, as the dry ladies had, he would have hung a nude

Other Criticisms

THE old slightly battered five-ver exhibited to prove the effects of drunken driving seemed somewhat underdone. Everyone has seen far worse wrecks. But the show had an educational value, even if the imitation speak-easy was smaller, drabber and less barricaded than the modern American speak-easy and even if the "chairs and lounge in the 'home that beer furnished' were more comfortable than those in the luxurious 'home that prohibition furnished'.

Besides various charts and statistics, there was a photo of the old "New Half-Mile Track" saloon where Booth took his last drink before shooting Lincoln. That saloon, incidentally, thrived for years on the reputation thus acquired.

Bailey Was Innocent of Most Charges In Famous Oil Case Writes Biographer

By TOM MAHONEY
United Press Staff Correspondent.

DALLAS, May 18. — Senator Joe Bailey was innocent of most of the accusations against him in connection with the famous Waters-Pierce oil case according to Sam Acheson's biography of the famous democrat published this week. Acheson, a member of the staff of the Dallas News, describes Bailey as a victim of circumstances.

After being ousted from Texas on charges of violating the anti-trust laws of the state the oil company sought to return. On recommendation of David R. Francis of Missouri, one of Bailey's personal friends, H. Clay Pierce, president of the company, sought to employ the Texas senator as an attorney in the matter.

Pierce assured Bailey that the Standard Oil company no longer owned any of the Waters-Pierce stock but Bailey refused, according to Acheson, and told Pierce that he would need no attorneys if his company would simply promise to obey Texas laws. The company did this and was allowed to return to Texas and operate until 1907 when it was again ousted after an investigation in Missouri showed that the Standard continued to control the company.

Costly Error.
In the meantime, however, Bailey made the costly error of borrowing $3,300 from Pierce as a personal loan until some horses could be sold. This note was executed on April 25, 1900.

Above Bailey's signature, it was stated to be a "demand loan."

"Throughout the long and unparallelled bitterness that later raged around Bailey, that stood or fell in the final analysis on these personal transactions with Pierce, the weakest point in the whole case against Bailey was the plain evidence of this signed document," writes Acheson.

"If Bailey had had the least feeling of wrongdoing would he have signed his name to such a paper and handed it over to a stranger? Even a simpleton would be more circumspect with a bribe, he said.

Passed Through Banks.

"While Pierce knew that Bailey had borrowed the money from him on the definite understanding, implicitly shown on the face of the loan itself that it was a person transaction between the two individuals, the oil man promptly went into the till of the Waters-Pierce company for an amount equal to the loan to Bailey. The loan, therefore, now passed through the books of the company in the form of vouchers reading 'account of Texas legal expenses.'"

Two years later one of Pierce's secretaries removed the vouchers from the files and some time later after filing a salary suit against Pierce turned the documents over to Bailey's opponents. A bitter legislative investigation exonerated

the MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Susan Carey, 20 and beautiful, has become engaged to marry Ernest Heath 45, her former employer. She has done so partly to provide for the future of her aunt who is ill and partly because she despairs of ever winning the man she really loves, Bob Dunbar. Denise Ackroyd, a debutante, dislikes Susan and causes trouble between her and Bob. Ben Lammpan, a former admirer of Susan's, shoots at Heath and then turns the gun on himself. He recovers and the affair is hushed up. Susan realizes she doesn't love Heath enough to marry him but can not tell him so. She sees Bob at the theater and this awakens old memories. Denise tells Bob that Susan is a "gold-digger" and he becomes very angry. Jack Waring, Heath's assistant, warns Susan not to marry without love.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XL
Denise sat before her taffeta-skirted dressing table, intent on the arduous business of making up. Her costume for the George Washington ball foamed over a chair and her powdered wig lay on the broad bed spread. Her mother's English maid, pressed into duty for the occasion, hovered behind. Presently Denise stood up, satisfied at last with the effect she had produced, and, slim and supple in her single, diaphanous garment, permitted herself to be arrayed in the pale blue frock with huge panniers and lace underskirt. This done, she adjusted the wig over her own shining tresses. The effect was marvelous. Instantly her gamin prettiness was transformed into something more dignified. She was as dignified as a lady in an ancient portrait.

She tried the effect of an infinitesimal patch near the corner of one eye and liked it. Then she seized an atomizer and sprayed herself casually with scent.
"I think it's stupid the club committee insists on everyone wearing masks," complained Mrs. Ackroyd, watching the performance with interest. Stevens, the maid, slipped Denise's black mask into the pocket of her white fur wrap.
"No, no, there. Give it to me now," the girl demanded impatiently. "I may as well put it on before I start." She tied and adjusted it with care. The effect of the mask added piquancy to the whole costume.

"You are a picture, miss," Stevens declared, with enthusiasm. Denise reached up her fan, allowed the wrap to be adjusted around her slim shoulders, and hurried downstairs. There a young grandee in biscuit-colored satin breeches and waistcoat of the same color with lace epaulettes and buckled shoes on his feet awaited her. He, too, was masked.

"Come along, we're late," the girl said impatiently. The well-angled lips of the young courier curved in what seemed to be ill humor.
"Whose fault is that?" he demanded. "I've been waiting for hours."
This Denise ignored. "It's going to be a poisonous party anyhow. I'm sure of that," she rattled on, fluttering down the steps and managing with difficulty to insert her beruffled self within the confines of the waiting motor car.

"Everything's poisonous," muttered her escort, slamming the door.
"What did you say?" She eyed him suspiciously.
He growled, "Nothing at all," and subsided into his corner.
"You haven't a cigaret hidden about in all that lingerie, I suppose?" Denise wanted to know.
"Yes," he answered, "I have."

"What do you mean?" she demanded. "I've been waiting for hours."
This Denise ignored. "It's going to be a poisonous party anyhow. I'm sure of that," she rattled on, fluttering down the steps and managing with difficulty to insert her beruffled self within the confines of the waiting motor car.

always said so. We like the same things and run with the same gang. The way I look at it, it all boils down to this. We have a better chance of making things go than most of the people we know. Daddy's awfully keen for it and so is your father."
"As if I didn't know that," growled the boy.
"Well, then, why not let's be sensible about it? Let's please everybody and surprise them, and stop this ridiculous rowing we've been doing all winter." She was enjoying her role of peacemaker now.
"I'm willing to bury the hatchet if you are," Denise went on. "If you like we needn't have a big wedding but just gallop away some place and have a justice marry us. That would be fun."
The man shrugged. "You've got it all worked out haven't you?"
"That's because I know what's best for both of us," said Denise with sweet reasonableness. "I'm willing to overlook all the times you've been nasty to me and start with a clean slate."
"I guess you're the doctor," Bob said, compressing his lips.

The music struck on Susan's ear like a blow. The scene was one of incredibly brilliant color and movement. The shifting patterns which the dancers wore reminded her of scenes peered at through the lens of a kaleidoscope. She was thankful for the mask which had been sent with the costume. Thus furnished with anonymity, she felt braver, stronger. Why had Ernest insisted on her coming? It was odd. She had not expected to brave the terrors of his neighborhood on the north shore until she was safely his wife. But Jack Waring, in Heath's absence, had informed her that the message had come over the telephone from New York. Heath had not been able to reach her before going into Maine on that land business. He had said he wished Waring to escort Susan to the George Washington ball. Her costume would be delivered to her.

Susan ran her fingers over the pale apricot of her spreading skirt. She knew the color became her utterly. Waring had come dressed as an Indian tribal chief.
"I don't understand it at all," Susan said to herself. "But how beautiful it all is. I'm glad I came."
She felt excited and happy. Some dancers swayed in a minuet at the end of the great ballroom. How lovely it was to watch the measured stately steps, the curving and protruding. She forgot herself completely as she watched.

Then a jazz piece broke this interlude into fragments and the guests were ordered to swing about in a "Paul Jones". Susan looked about, bewildered, for Jack Waring. He was nowhere to be seen. As the orchestra stopped abruptly she found herself facing a cavalier in biscuit-colored jacket and breeches. Tall he was and very erect. Without a word, she slipped into his arms.

The tempo of the music quickened and the girl's heart beats with it. This was magic dancing like this. Her partner was a complete stranger, someone she would never see again probably. She gave herself up to the enjoyment of the moment.
When the music ended she murmured involuntarily, "Oh, I'm sorry!" At the words, her partner bent a bright, searching gaze upon her.
"Say that again."
She stared at him through these small slits in the wisp of black cambric.

"What did you say?"
Her partner put a firm, gentle hand on her arm and led her out of the melee of flushed and laughing revellers. As one in a dream Susan went with him.
"Now, then!"
They were hidden from the throng by the plush curtains of a little alcove. The music came to them muted and wraithlike.

The cavalier in biscuit-colored satin untied Susan's mask with strong, purposeful fingers. She derided not indeed, she never even dreamed of opposing him.
"Ah!"
The mono-syllable roused her to realization of what was happening. Rich color flooded her pale cheeks. She clasped her hands in a sudden tragic gesture.
"You!" she cried.

LITTLETON, NOW FAMOUS, BACK AT OLD HOME

MINERAL WELLS, May 18.
Martin W. Littleton, who as a youth walked the Texas & Pacific tracks near here, will return Thursday night as one of the most famous attorneys of the country to address the 51st annual convention of the Texas Bar association.

Littleton, attorney for the defense in the Harry Thaw, Harry Sinclair, and other celebrated cases, will speak on the subject "What Price Progress." Many of his boyhood acquaintances from Weatherford are expected to hear him.

Littleton began his rise to fame by self-education and the reading of law in the county attorney's office at Weatherford. He went from there to Dallas in 1894 and became an assistant county attorney.

With only $100 and a letter of introduction Littleton left Dallas for New York with his wife, the former Miss Maud Wilson of Beaumont. Four years later he was elected president of Brooklyn borough and later a member of congress.

His securing of a verdict of insanity for Harry K. Thaw and a resulting acquittal after an array of more famous attorneys failed established Littleton's national fame as a criminal lawyer. Thaw had killed Stanford White, famous architect, in the presence of Thaw's wife, the beautiful Evelyn Nesbit.

Guy Thompson, St. Louis, president of the American Bar association, will be another notable on the program. He will speak at the Saturday morning session.
Other speakers will include: Chief Justice R. W. Hall, Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals; Sidney Samuels, Fort Worth; Harry P. Lawther, Dallas; W. P. McLean, Fort Worth; Judge Ocie Spear, Austin; and Judge J. E. Hickman, Eastland.

The Fort Worth and Tarrant County Bar associations will be joint hosts to the association. A program of golf, banquets and dances is scheduled.

PLANS TO CARE FOR PRESS ARE NEARLY READY

WASHINGTON, May 18. — Press arrangements to give the public a full report of the activities of the major political conventions in Chicago next month attest the world-wide interest in the political affairs of the United States.
More than 700 newspapermen from all parts of the nation and representing the press wherever newspapers are published will sit in on the hectic scenes that mark the selection of presidential nominees.
The representation is the largest in history and those accommodated are only a major portion of those who have applied for seats.
Many of those who will cover the agitated deliberations on the convention floor and the even more involved intrigues of the closed door political gatherings are men who seldom appear on the news scene in "reportorial capacities." They include officers of the great press associations and managing editors of industrial dailies, men who have long since ceased to become excited at a three alarm fire and to whom the clanging of a riot squad wagon is only a public disturbance.
The press associations all have been in the hands of experienced convention reporters and with the cooperation of the Republican and Democratic national conventions they have arranged for press service with an eye on the potential news qualities of the gatherings.
The reporters, gathered from as far away as Stockholm, Sweden, will work at the edge of the seething mass of convention delegates on a raised platform at one side of the hall. They will be elevated on a newly constructed platform just at the foot of the speakers' stand.
Free passage will be allowed them to their workrooms where typewriters, telephone and telegraph facilities are to be supplied.
The press associations will work in a huge room set aside for the purpose just a short distance from the press stand.
In the basement of the massive new steel and concrete pile facilities have been arranged for the correspondents of individual newspapers.
Additional facilities for telegraphic news transmission will be arranged there and separate rooms will be provided for the Chicago and out-of-town press which will be obliged to cover the conventions from angles other than political.
Many Reservations
A large number of reservations have been made for publications in the thickly populated nearby states of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin. But such famous publications as the London Times, the London Mail and the Manchester Guardian also have arranged for representation.
Probably the farthest traveled of the reporters will be Alfred Oste, managing editor of the Stockholm, Sweden, Svenska Dagbladet, leading newspaper on the Swedish peninsula. Such far distant points as Australia the Far East and South America will be taken care of by the wire services and special correspondence.
Details of the press arrangements have been worked out by John Sime and John Suter, veterans of the Senate Press Gallery, William J. Donaldson, Jr., superintendent of the House Press Gallery, representing the correspondents, and Ralph E. Williams, Republican National committee man of Oregon, Clarence Hamlin, Colorado publisher, and Dave Mulvane of Kansas, representing the Republican National Committee.

RASKOB LIKES BUSINESS MORE THAN POLITICS

WASHINGTON, May 18.—When the curtain rings down on the 1932 democratic convention in Chicago one of the figures gliding by it out will be John J. Raskob, who probably likes business better than politics anyhow.

The General Motors official who found himself in the midst of the political turmoil of 1928 when he came to the support of anti-prohibitionist Alfred E. Smith, probably has been the most discussed chairman of a party's national committee in many years.

Rather inclined to smallness, impeccably dressed as befits the officer of one of the world's largest corporations, Raskob has been in politics more for principle than for the fun of it. He is nervous when called upon to express his own views of party policies or when talking to the press. He is not overfond of public speaking. And both roles have been very much his in recent years.

Raskob became practically the political manager and certainly very much the sponsor of Alfred E. Smith when his 1928 presidential boom was still somewhat in the dormant state after the famous 1924 fight in the New York City convention. Like most of the things he has tackled, it was put over in any spectacular manner as any new model automobile advertising campaign.

Perhaps it was because he started life from scratch that Raskob has been able to get things done. He has none of the college degrees that politicians and statesmen sometimes pride themselves on. His schooling consists of common school and business college.

He was born in Lockport, N. Y., not far from industrial Buffalo, March 19, 1879. He was comparatively young when he became associated with the E. I. Dupont de Nemours Company in a minor capacity. Later he worked his way close to the top of that gigantic concern and after the DuPont interests acquired control of General Motors he was associated with that concern and helped to develop it to the forefront of its industry.

He severed most of these connections when he entered the political scene.

Raskob's appointment to chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee was by the choice of Smith, it being the prerogative of the presidential nominee to fill that post.

Regardless of the choice of the coming convention, unless Smith himself should be nominated again, Raskob's selection as chairman is considered highly unlikely.

conferred with Clark, Ponsler and Cluck in an adjoining room, read the revised statement to them and told them that the district committee wanted the statement by the board. The Cisco representatives agreed to subscribe to it and Wright passed into the next room where the district committee was meeting, advised the committee that the statement was agreeable to Cisco and borrowed a sheet of paper from Supt. Holland's notebook to make a copy of the revised draft, since the statement as finally prepared had been considerably interlined and marked out. He copied the revision verbatim in longhand and proof read the original with Supt. Holland, ascertaining that the copy was correct. Dr. Clark was then called into the committee room and signed the statement for Cisco.

"The district committee again went into executive session and after a few minutes told the Cisco representatives that it had concluded to call Mr. Dudley, of Abilene, and Supt. Woodwood, of Brownwood, the absent members of the committee, over telephone and advise them as to what it was doing. Cisco expressed regret at this for the reason that four out of the five schools, exclusive of Cisco, were represented, several hours had been spent in conference on the matter, and it would be difficult to explain the details over long distance telephone. The committee offered to let the Cisco representatives listen to the conversations but was told this was unnecessary. Again the door was shut and a short while later opened again and the Cisco group informed that the committee had determined to postpone action until a meeting at Abilene Saturday afternoon at 2:30. Cisco again expressed regret, stating that there had been great delay and that they had gone into the meeting believing that action would be taken and that it would be troublesome to make another trip in connection with the matter. One member of the committee told the Cisco representatives that it would not be necessary for Cisco to be represented and another agreed with the statement "You know how we feel about it."

Copy of Minutes.

"One or two days later the board received from Supt. Holland what purported to be a copy of the minutes of the Eastland meeting. Mr. Wright, on receiving the copy wrote Holland a letter pointing out that there was some variance between the actual facts and the minutes. He pointed out that Cisco did not present two statements as indicated but that the statement last quoted in the minutes and which the minutes said "more nearly" satisfied the committee, was the exact statement worked out by the Cisco representatives and the committee from the original statement and copied from the original because of the erasures and interlineations made in the former. This revised statement, he reminded, was agreed upon by the committee, and signed by Dr. Clark as president of the school board.

Wrote Holland. "Mr. Wright wrote Mr. Holland on Friday and then, for fear he would not receive the letter in time, called him on the phone and called attention to these discrepancies. Mr. Holland agreed with Mr. Wright. Discussing the matter further with him, Mr. Wright, to show that there was no disagreement in the Eastland meeting, called attention to the fact that two members of the committee had said it would not be necessary for Cisco to be represented at the Abilene meeting.

"Mr. Holland then suggested that Mr. Wright be at Abilene because the committee could talk to you better than the others." When the members of the Cisco board were advised of this it was suggested that Mr. Wright and Mr. Russell attend the meeting solely for the reason that Mr. Holland had suggested.

"When the meeting was held at Abilene, Saturday, May 14, Mr. Wright and Mr. Russell were asked if they had anything to say and replied in the negative. They told the committee they were there to render any aid they could and because of Mr. Holland's suggestion.

Not Satisfactory.

"The committee went into executive session for 1 hour and 20 minutes after which the Cisco representatives were invited into the meeting and advised that the statement that had been agreed upon at the Eastland meeting was not satisfactory and the committee had outlined another statement. Wright and Russell told the body that they were without authority to make any changes in the Cisco statement without conferring with other members of the school board. They were further advised that the Cisco representatives considered the statement agreed upon at Eastland and were reminded by the Cisco representatives of what had actually happened at Eastland. Messrs. Holland, Holloway and Bittle concurred in this account and Supt. Woodwood, of Brownwood, suggested that in view of what had happened at Eastland, he felt he should be allowed to withdraw and the committee should act upon the matter.

Prepared Resolution.

"After discussion the committee agreed that the Eastland statement would not be acted upon and then a statement that the district committee had prepared at Abilene was submitted to the Cisco representatives. In reality this was a resolution to be sent to the state committee reciting that certain things had happened and certain statements made by the Cisco school board. It was suggested that Cisco approve this statement and the committee was told that in the opinion of the Cisco representatives present Cisco officials would not make a statement which would justify the resolution. A motion was made that a resolution be sent to the state committee provided Cisco school officials would sign a statement justifying the resolution and this motion was approved by Chairman Dudley and Sec'y Holland of the committee. The two said they would go immediately to a typewriter and prepare the statement and Cisco officials expected to receive a copy by mail Sunday morning. The board has heard nothing and the Abilene paper said Tuesday morning, in effect, that the statement would be prepared within a week or two.

"Holland had been called by telephone Sunday and promised to prepare a statement Sunday afternoon and mail it by special delivery to Dudley with a copy to be sent to Mr. Wright so the board here could have it before it Monday night. This statement was not received but, instead, Cisco officials received a copy of a letter which Mr. Holland wrote to Mr. Dudley. In the letter it was suggested that Mr. Dudley revise and correct the minutes of the Eastland meeting of the committee. No further statement has been received by the Cisco board.

The firm of Conner and McRae has been employed to represent the Cisco board in its action, it was announced this afternoon. The board is also negotiating with another firm of Eastland lawyers to assist in the case.

DE LISLE, a young French artillery officer, wrote the Marseillaise, in April, 1792. He was a faithful Royalist, and did not dream that his song would be the inspirational hymn of the Revolutionist army. He was twice thrown in prison, and it was not until just before his death that he was decorated with a ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

THE WATER SPIDER builds a bell-shaped home beneath the water. When the nest is complete, the spider goes to the surface, lifts its body partly out, and then quickly jerks back. A bubble of air clings to its legs and is taken below to the dwelling. This procedure is kept up until enough air is placed inside for the brood of young that is to be raised.

"A ONE CENT INVESTMENT"

Do you remember when the penny had purchasing power? There was a time when our grandfathers used this small coin to encourage good behavior. Peanuts, popcorn and candy money—there was power in a penny in those days! Today, even the price of "good behavior" has gone up and the American boy thinks in terms of nickels and dimes.

NATURAL GAS But there is still power in is your cheapest and best servant natural gas service. The low cost of this convenience STILL brings you the biggest penny's worth you have ever known.

In fact, a penny invested in natural gas will do any of these tasks in the modern home: Cook a good dinner for 3 people... Operate a bath room heater 2 hours... Heat enough water for 2 baths... Make 33 cups of coffee... Operate a living room heater 45 minutes... Heat enough water for 14 shaves... Operate Laundry Dryer 45 minutes... Operate an Incinerator 10 minutes... Run a Gas Refrigerator from 8 to 10 hours

... and save your time, health and energy as well as your money.
