THREE KINDS OF LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann, Cecily and Mary-Frances Fenwick live with their grandparents. The latter have been orphaned since childhood. The grandparents—known as "Rosalee" and "Grand"—have long since lost their wealth and the household is supported by Ann's and Cecily's earnings. For this reason, Ann, 28, and Philip Escroyd, young lawyer, are still postponing their marriage though they have been engaged 8 years.

Cecily, 22, is in love with Barry McKeel, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name the wedding date because she cannot leave Ann with the financial responsibility of the home.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armount, stock company actor. She meets him secretly on several occasions. Mary-Frances has led him to believe she is 18 years old. He tries to persuade her to become his partner in a vaudeville act.

Phil takes Ann to dinner and a girl she never sees before sends him a note which he burns. Phil's explanations are vague and Ann decides to go home. On the way trouble develops with the car and Phil stops to investigate.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVII

Ann did not listen; so she breathed a small, confused prayer to the gods of garage men that this particular knock in Phil's automobile might emanate from some source, anysource, other than clogged piston rods. Phil's responses to that special species of knock were invariable. He began by diagnosing the disease as fatal, since one mechanic named Jake Lucca had left town, and went frantically on from there.

His procedure was to drive the car for a few hundred yards and stop it, and open the hood, and peer despairingly into the insides of the thing, and with an air of suppressing a sigh, to say that this was the end. Usually, since there was nothing else to be done, he would get into the car again, and start it with difficulty, and go for a few hundred yards more before he leaped out and lifted the hood, and peered, and so on.

Once, Ann had learned, suffering from this malady are moody, hysterical things; they will knock like a woodpecker and then, once in a while, they will stop and refuse to go another step until, after a short rest, they will pick up with a spurt and stop knocking and pretend that nothing has ever been the matter with them.

If a garage is in sight they will recover completely—cars with diseased piston rods dread garages—until the place has been left miles behind. Then, worn out with the extra exertion of stimulating strength where there were only weakness and courage, they will break down for a time and refuse to budge. Ann knew her piston rods. But Phil was a proud man, and thrifty, and to drive a seemingly healthy car into a garage, and to subject himself, or his patient, to a charge of neuroticism and four or five dollars, was a performance in which he would take no part. So they always flashed by the garages and broke down in some lonely spot on the highway. And then Phil would leap out, talking about Jake Lucca, and open the hood and peer. . . . Stronger women than Ann have gone to pieces with less provocation than that afforded by piston rods.

Conversation during calamity is heartless and footless, crippled and offensive, so Ann had long since ceased attempting it. They rode in silence, except for the knock. Phil had his head cocked to one side so that never a vibration of sound should escape him, and Ann had ever so much time to think about the girl who wrote notes that needed to be burned at once, and Phil's night work of late, and the hard, bright antagonism in the girl's eyes.

They had passed a garage in a small town, five miles back, so a collapse was due, and it came, scheduled precisely on a deserted stretch of road. Phil leaped out; this made the ninth or tenth time within the hour. Ann, too, got out of the car—she usually did so; it seemed more helpful.

Phil lifted the hood and looked at the engine. Ann stood and watched the antics of an oncoming automobile growing larger and larger. She found no encouragement in the fact of its approach. Another of Phil's conventions concerning piston rods was a refusal to ask for aid from other motorists, Jake Lucca alone, in a world full of men, could repair piston rods, and Jake was leagues upon leagues away.

The lights grew larger still, and dangerous seeming, and Ann stepped out of the glare just as the car—the sportiest sort of sports model—slowed and stopped, and a girl's voice called, "Hey, hey, Phil! Some more trouble!"

Phil had started the engine and had his ear to its breast so that he could hear the knocks. Ann receded farther into the shadows.

Letty stepped from the car, and crossed to Phil, and said, her child's voice raised a little above the groans of the engine, "What is it, old dear? Piston rods again?"

Phil lifted his head, but he did not come back to a complete consciousness of the outside world—a heartless, knockless world where piston rods were of secondary importance. A voice that he knew had greeted him, and he returned the greeting abstractedly.

"Hello, Letty," he said to Miss King, whose first name he was unsure of, could not really remember.

bag, wisdom may attempt to capture. If dozens of spy black cats, loosed possibly on purpose and all at once, plunge forth to trip and skip and caracole into the night, confounding wisdom, courting and frolicking with folly, nothing much can be done about it.

Letty's next remark, addressed to Ann in the shadows and made with one hand on Phil's arm, was, "Doesn't the poor darling have the foulest times with his old piston rods?"

Ann came forth and was introduced as Miss Fenwick to Miss King, and Miss King said politely, "Phil's told me a lot about you."

Miss King's escort came along—his name was Mr. Smith—a nice easy name to remember, and he was glad to know everyone, or so he said. He disclaimed all knowledge of things mechanical, but offered to give Phil a tow, if Phil had a rope. Phil had no rope.

Letty said to Phil, "Say, listen, sweetheart-darling. . . . Ann had retreated again to the shadows, and she might have been out of earshot; but Kenneth Smith was right there until he walked back to the sporty sports model and climbed into it.

Phil said, "Never mind that, now, Letty," and she said, "Yes, but I want to tell you—"

Phil said, "Don't go. Ann. Stay here." Ann kept right on going, and Letty kept hold of Phil's arm.

Kenneth said to Ann, "Some crush over there," as if he were in pain, and Ann said brightly, "Yes, it does seem to be."

Kenneth sighed; Ann did not. Kenneth offered, "She makes me sick, if I do say it. She used to be a swell woman, but since she's gone pash on that sheik she's one wet smack right. Can't see a heavy date; can't see but a couple dances after dinner; can't see a damn thing but sheiky and trailing him around. I'd fed. I'm bloated. I'm through. I'm not doing blood-bounding for a living. Not yet."

Ann said sweetly and with sympathy that she did not blame him in the least.

Kenneth opened the car door. "Won't you get in and sit down and wait?"

"Thank you," Ann accepted. "I'll get in and sit down," she sank into the wide depth of the seat, "but why wait?"

Kenneth said, after a moment, "I get you. I'd go in a hurry if my damn car wasn't busted down." "It isn't," said Ann. "It's his damn" (from Ann!) "stubbornness. The car would run well enough to get home if he'd run it instead of listening to it and looking at it. He'll have to sooner or later. He has a knock in his engine—that's all. They will get home in good order, in time."

"Sure of it?"

"Positive. Listen to his engine. It will run."

"I'm on!" said Kenneth, and reached with a gesture of violence for the clutch, and he and Ann were off.

For a short time Ann gave herself over completely to the soothing, heart-easing luxury afforded by the absence of piston rods; but presently, when Kenneth had reiterated and told the world for the third time that he was through with, or off of, Letty King for life, she felt sorry for him and said that she hoped she hadn't made trouble for him, and that he was not going to be unhappy.

"Any time!" He said it twice, and added that Letty King gave him a pain in the neck, and invited Ann to call him Ken, or Kenny, or anything she liked but Mr. Smith.

He went on to say that he was unaccustomed to taking girls out for an evening and having them go cow-eyed over other men, writing notes and sending them by waiters, and that he had no intentions of accustoming himself to such activities from his girl friends. They could stand him up once, just once; after that he'd show them whether or not he was dizzy.

Ann repeated that she did not blame him.

Unexpectedly Kenneth preferred the suggestion that they park, in a road they would reach in a minute, and take a turn or two at necking.

"One big evening!" Kenneth remarked.

Ann again was sorry.

"No, I didn't mean that," said Kenneth. "I don't go in much for necking myself. Oh, well—of course, go in for it; but I don't get any kick out of it. Never have. Most girls do, though. That's all most girls care about. I just kind of thought it was a shame for you to have your evening wrecked. What a girl like you, so pretty and—and all, can see in a wet smack like that boy friend of Letty's. I don't know, if I do say it."

"I don't either," said Ann.

"He's a cold fish if ever there was one."

"I rather think so, too," said Ann.

"Letty gave me a bum steer then, as usual," he said. "She told me that you were engaged to him, and that you were trying to get out of it and couldn't. I thought she was lying all along, and after I saw you tonight I was certain she was. I'll tell the world you aren't hard to take, after Letty King. Yes, I was certain she was."

"What a certainty. 'What a grand car you have,' she said.

"She goes," he said carelessly.

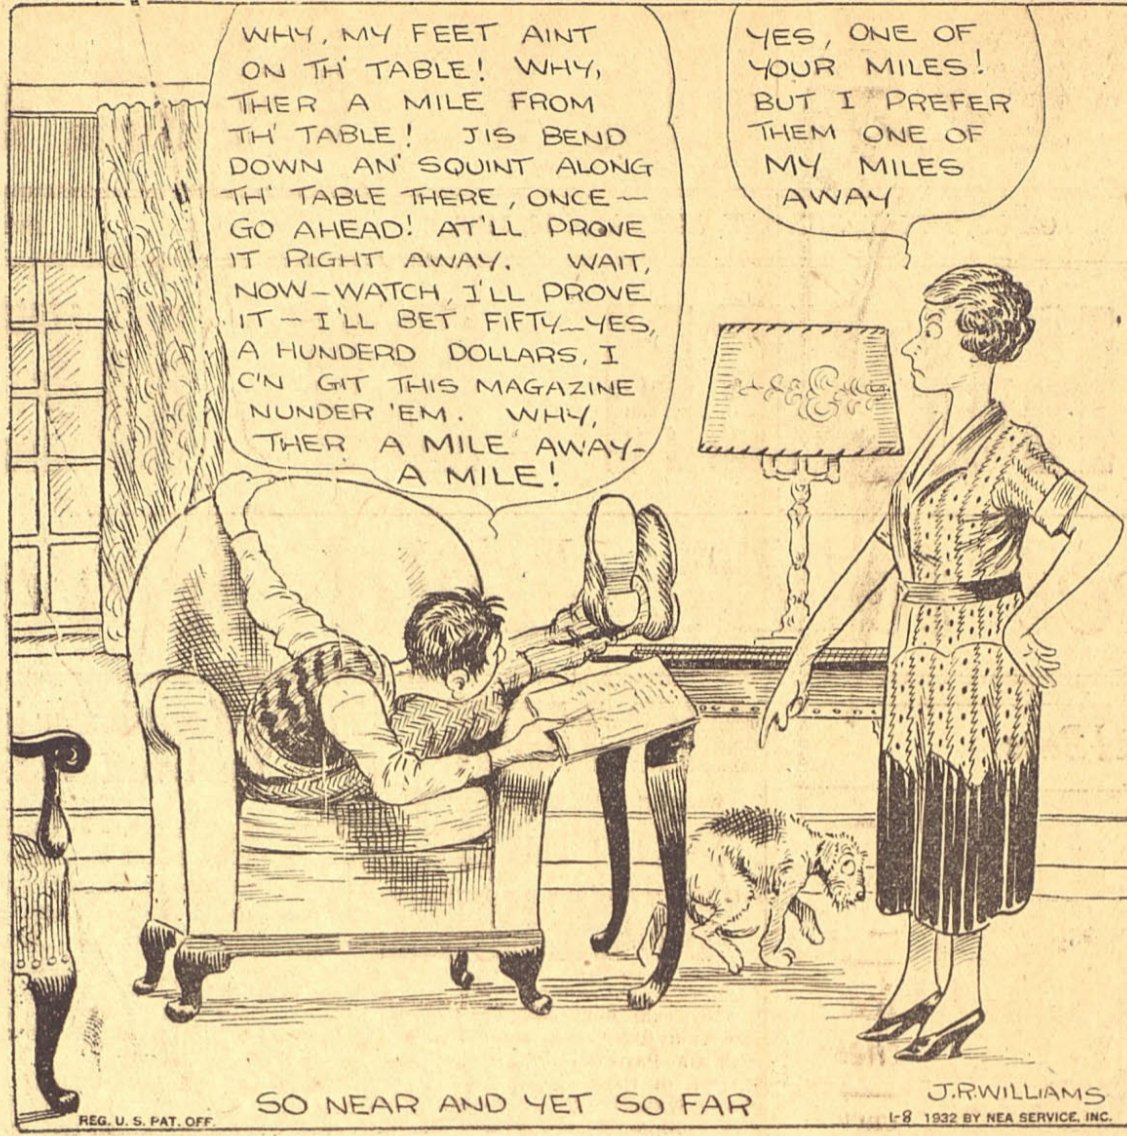

"If she won't, I have another that will. Same with my speed boats. Got a couple. One to run and one to keep in reserve in case of accidents or anything."

"How wonderful!" said Ann.

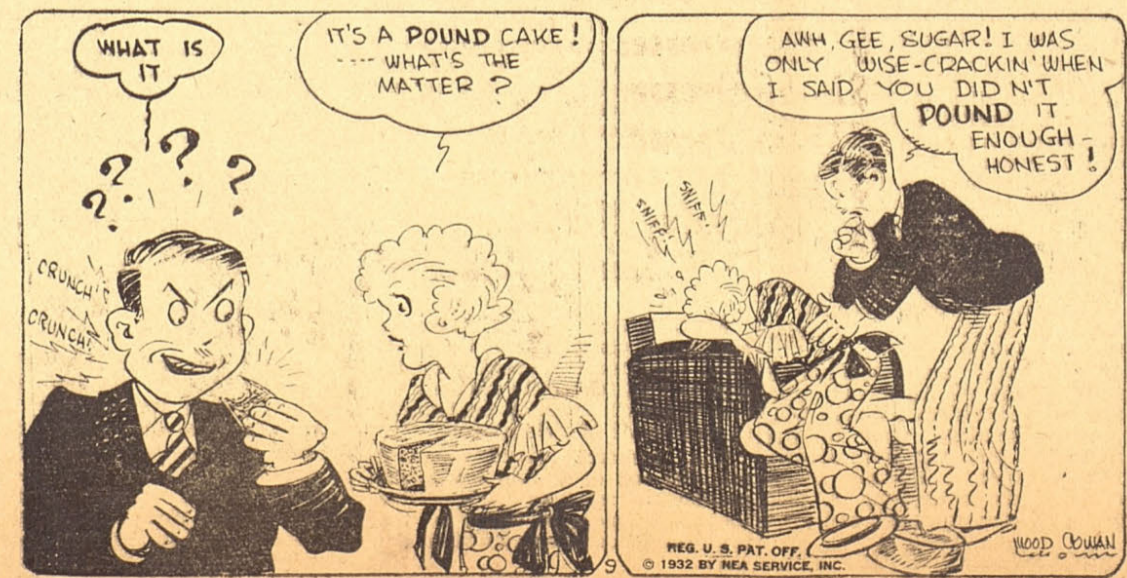

"Always to have something in reserve in case of accidents."

FENCING JOB FORMED BASIS OF BIG ESTATE

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 9.—The miles of barbed wire reeled off by J. M. Shannon in enclosing the 3,000,000 acre XIT ranch in West Texas formed the basis of a fortune which now has been distributed to bring happiness to his friends.

The distribution of his estate, valued at more than $3,000,000, was provided in the will of his widow, who died last month.

While many of their friends have been provided with bequest, the greater share of the fortune will be used to build in San Angelo a non-sectarian hospital which will provide free treatment for those persons who do not have the money to pay.

Among those who were given legacies were Frank White, manager of the Naylor hotel where the Shannons were the first guests when it opened in 1917; Miss Mary Edwards, a waitress; Mrs. Frederick Wear, librarian of the San Angelo Standard-Times, $127,000; and Mrs. Bob Greer, for 15 years secretary to Shannon.

The fortune started in the middle 'eighties when Shannon, who died in 1929, left his herd of sheep in Mitchell county to undertake the task of stretching mile after mile of fence across the unsettled plains of West Texas. Not more than a score of permanent settlers occupied the region in 1879 when 3,000,000 acres were set aside by the Texas legislature as payment for construction of the capitol building at Austin.

"Part of Desert" The land then was described as part of the Great American desert and was considered practically worthless. Its enclosure with barbed wire fence and having been patented to a Chicago syndicate as the Capitol Reservation Lands made it the largest ranch ever included in a single holding. It became famous as the XIT ranch.

Late in 1885 Shannon was given the contract for fencing the southern portion of the ranch lying between the Canadian river. The large irregularly shaped territory to be fenced sprawled along the western boundary of the state from the northern plains southward for more than 200 miles.

Great quantities of supplies and building materials were required to fence the ranch, and they had to be brought by slow freight wagons from Colorado City. Difficulty was added to the task of hauling materials when a great prairie fire swept the South Plains country late in 1885, burning the grass from a section of the country a hundred miles square.

OLD RAILROAD LAND GRANTS READJUSTED

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Sixty of the 72 land grants to railroad companies, through which the Federal government gave away an empire that transportation facilities might be developed, have finally been adjusted and closed, says a report from the general land office.

Six of the remaining 12 grants merely await listing and selection of units of land by the companies in certain isolated areas. There are a few "wild areas" yet to be surveyed, and when this is done the task of "immediately adjusting" these grants, given to the Secretary of the Interior 44 years ago, will be completed.

The 72 recipients of grants already have received 132,000,000 acres of land, equivalent to 200,000 square miles, an area equal to the Atlantic states from North Carolina to Nova Scotia. There remain to be assigned to holders of these land grants 3,000,000 acres, or slightly less than 5,000 square miles.

Of 89 original grants made during the era of development between 1850 and 1871, 17 were forfeited because of failure to construct the roads contemplated. The immense amount of unsurveyed and unappropriated lands and unsettled conditions along these lines prevented earlier adjustments.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON THE FIRST DISCIPLES

Text: John 1:35-49. The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 10. The First Disciples, John 1:35-49.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist

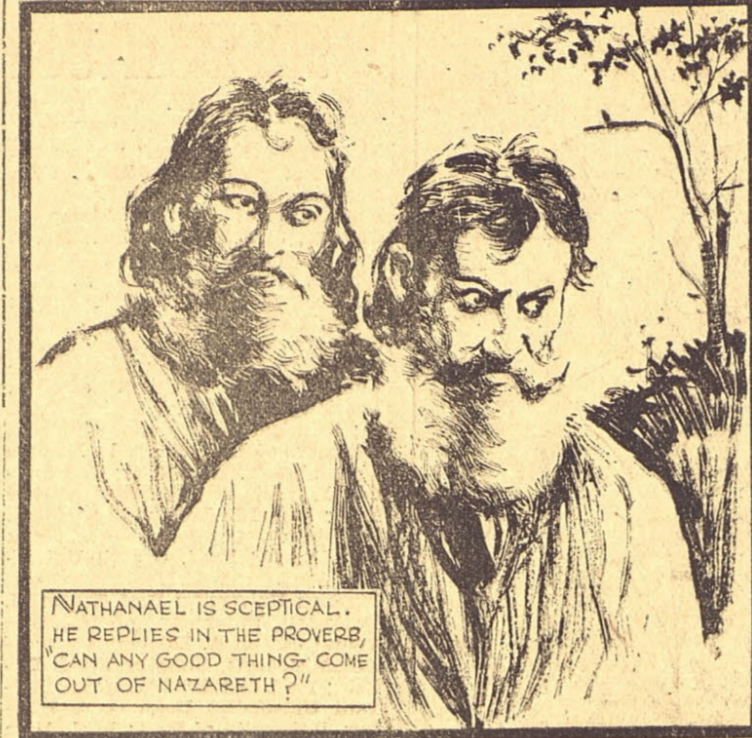

The growth of Christianity in the world, particularly in the first three centuries after the crucifixion of Jesus when it advanced to that position of world strength in which it became the official religion of the Roman empire, is difficult to account for on a material ground. As a matter of fact, the advancement of Christianity to world power may have been at the expense of the simple religion of Jesus of Nazareth, and to the disadvantage of Christianity as a spiritual force working in the hearts of men.

But the outward power could not have come without deep and wide foundations in inner thought and motive. The greatest stream can be traced to its sources in small springs and rivulets; so the mighty stream of Christianity had its beginning in occasional and limited contacts.

Here in this first chapter of the Gospel of John the process is very simply yet very graphically set before us. Men unacquainted with Jesus, who were afterwards to be in the inner circle of his disciples, discovered the richness and power of his life through personal contact.

Here we have two of these disciples standing with John, the forerunner, and as John sees Jesus in the distance he says to these two men, "Behold the Lamb of God." Immediately their interest was aroused. The two men followed Jesus, but were apparently hesitating to approach Him or to speak to Him. But Jesus, seeing them following, turned and asked them, "What seek ye?" They asked where he dwelt, and Jesus replied in the words that have become almost a watchword for a method of Christian evangelism, "Come and see."

They went with Jesus to his dwelling place and stayed with him that day. The two men who had heard John speak and who followed Jesus were fired immediately with the passion to bring other men into that wonderful experience.

NATHANAEL IS SCEPTICAL. HE REPLIES IN THE PROVERB, "CAN ANY GOOD THING COME OUT OF NAZARETH?"

that had befallen them. One of them was Andrew, and he thought immediately of his brother, Peter whom he brought to Jesus.

The following day when Jesus was on his way to Galilee he found Philip, and gave Philip also an invitation to join his company. Philip was from Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. He finds Nathaniel and reports to him that they have found the Messiah—namely, Jesus of Nazareth. Nathaniel is somewhat skeptical. He replies in the proverb, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" And Philip again responds with watchword of Christian evangelism, "Come and see." Nathaniel, seeing he is convinced, and he acknowledges Jesus as his lord and master. It is all very simple, yet it constitutes the story of the greatest miracle that has happened in history. It is the process by which the church has had its growth and Christianity has been made effective in innumerable lives. It is in the art of passing on to others the good things that we have found ourselves that the fellowship of goodness has its growth.

THE POULTRY BUSINESS.

The Breckenridge American points out pertinently that the lack of adjustment between supply and demand is responsible for the lack of a permanent year-round local market for Stephens county produce. The egg and poultry business is pointed to as an example of this condition. Farmers and poultry raisers in Stephens county, the newspaper says, are unable to market their produce with local dealers in an orderly manner simply because the poultry raisers have not equipped themselves to guarantee their market a supply consistent with their demands and dependable season to season. The groceryman, who would prefer to purchase their supplies from local growers, are by necessity required to seek a source of supply upon which they can depend and having obtained such connections are loath to desert them in times of local flush production for fear of being cut off from the dependable source later on. Thus Stephens county money is being spent with produce concerns outside of Stephens county and the local circulation is reduced in that proportion.

Eastland county is in a similar position. Some years ago a poultry and egg cooperative was organized in this county and flourished for a time with the prospect of not only preventing such a condition of which Breckenridge complains but increasing the production of eggs and poultry in the district affected to a point where a large surplus of eggs and poultry products could be shipped out of the county, thus reversing the condition which is found harmful. The cooperative, for some reasons—primarily the lack of the very factor that the name suggests—declined, lingered and died. In its wake it left a burden in the shape of large investments in an accelerated industry. The poultry business was found to be more involved and requiring more specialization than at first realized. The prosperity of certain sections of California where great enterprises had been built up was an alluring picture held before the prospective poultrymen of this section and they entered into the plan with enthusiasm and without due respect for the work and thought that would be required. Poultry was regarded largely in the nature of a get-rich-quick scheme, and all that was necessary was to enlist a large number of farmers and others whose previous experience with hens was confined to the flock of hybrids and low grade strains clucking about the farm yard, and to select some high-sounding title like "The Egg Basket of Texas." That accomplished, and a few rods of wire fence run about a shimmery patch, and the business would blossom into a veritable gold mine.

But the lessons of experience have called to our attention the great amount of promotional and development work that preceded California's prosperous industry. We have seen that the start we made should have been less ambitious and more thorough. The flare-up of interest left disgust in its wake and the once alluring plan subsided like a bloated balloon. Poultry, like any other industry, requires a tremendous amount of work and thinking.

This county is still ideally suited to the business. Pushed along more conservative and careful lines the business in time would develop into a great asset. Depression has struck it like it has struck other business but depression will not last forever. The success of the Cisco Livestock Marketing association is convincing proof that cooperative enterprises, if conducted sanely, can succeed. There is a similar opportunity for the poultry raiser now.

IS THERE A MONOPOLY IN THE NATURAL GAS FIELD?

This is pertinent to the issues which have been raised in Texas courts and other agencies of government: Asking permission to take gas from their wells for the purpose of extracting the gasoline and using the residue in the manufacture of carbon black, three owners of wells in the West Panhandle field told the Texas railroad commission that five companies operating in the area had obtained a monopoly on the available market. They alleged that 80 per cent of the gas reserves of the field are controlled by these companies which have constructed and are now operating gas pipe lines from the fields to many consumers in cities in the Middle West. An early hearing was promised by the commission and Attorney General James V. Allred has sent one of his assistants to the Panhandle to investigate the gas situation there. Things are happening every day in Texas or elsewhere. They are happening in and out of the courts of the commonwealth. Texas has natural resources which are staggering to the mind. They are being rapidly depleted. Allegations of monopolistic control are uppermost in the minds of the people.

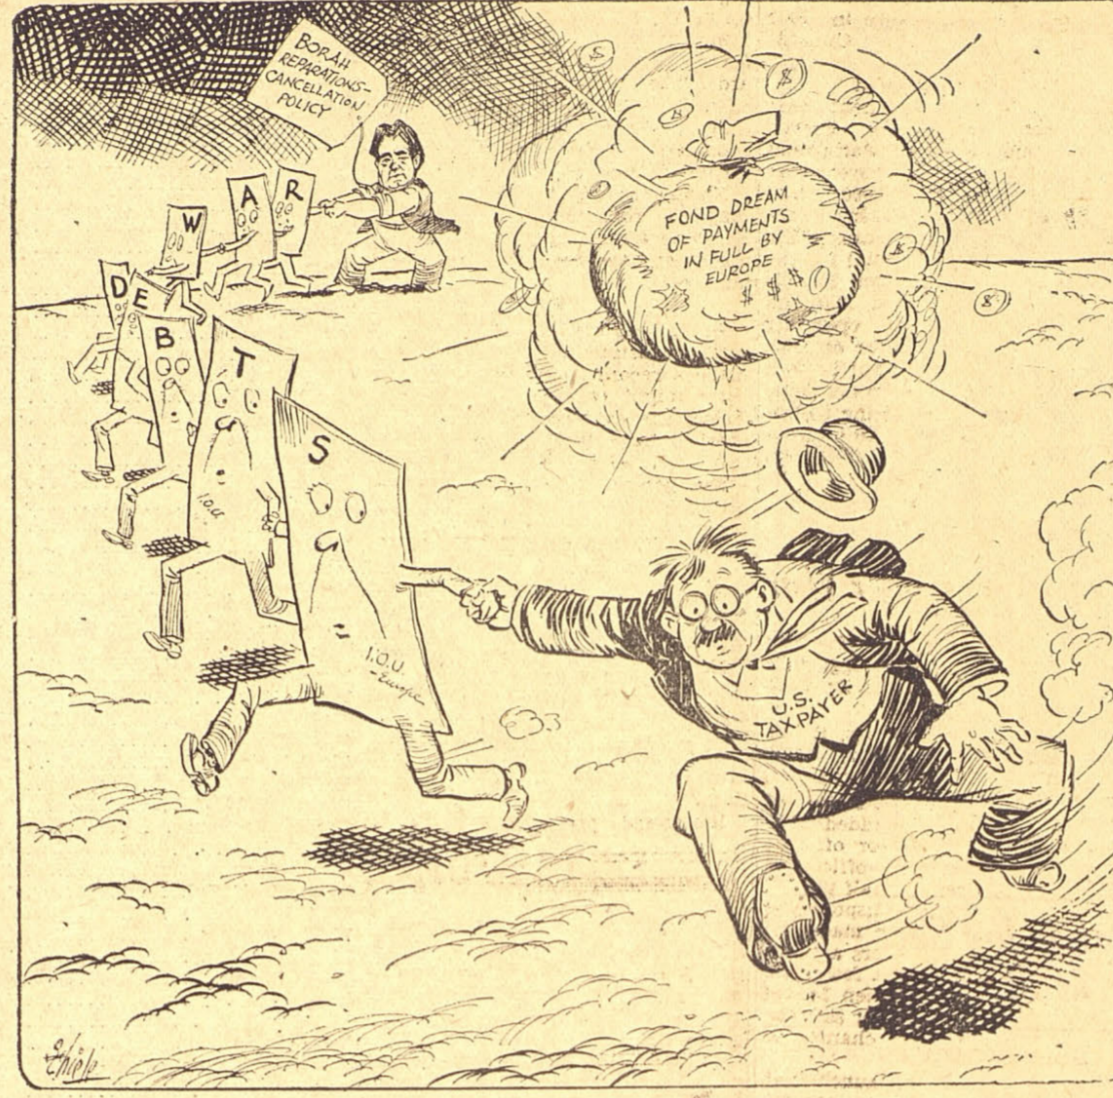

Now where do we go from here? Publicity, intelligent and non-discriminating publicity, should be the thing. If a campaign of real education is necessary then the signs of the times are that the campaign is on the way.

OTHER OPINIONS

A LEADER IS ONE WHO LEADS
What is a "business leader?" The term is widely used—sometimes loosely used. In oloquent times the "leaders of business" are extolled in times of stress they are sternly called upon to set things right or yield their scepters. But who are the "leaders of business?" Generally the expression is employed in such a way that the ordinary reader or hearer feels it has no application to him. Usually it denotes the one person at the apex of a far-reaching commercial, industrial or financial organization. Too often it conveys to the small tradesman, the wage worker or the farm dweller a feeling that business, after all, is something he can do little about.

But in a truer sense, whether a person is a business leader is not a question of how big he is, but of what he does. A man may be a millionaire with a voice in a dozen companies, but if he hoards his money in a safe deposit box and counsels laying off men rather than digging for orders to keep them busy, he is not a business leader. A man may be a $4-a-day workman with six hungry mouths at home to feed, but if he turns his hand to whatever he can find to do, and if he dissuades a couple of friends from joining a run on their savings bank, he is a business leader.

Not the size of a person's financial affairs but how he handles them makes him a leader. A small merchant who is quick to learn his customer's wants is leading the way to new business. So is the salaried man or his wife who keeps the family budget on a basis of "buying as usual."

What each person does has some influence among his acquaintances. One index of a leader is "Do others follow him?" But they are no leaders who through fear lead over a precipice. Leaders of business are those who do things others follow to the general benefit.—Christian Science Monitor.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma.

That business concerns that are selling something of everything but not enough of anything should turn their attention to better advertising. The right kind of advertising stimulates business.

Truthful, persistent advertising gets the attention of the readers and sets their thoughts moving in the direction of the merchandise or service advertised in a way that brings results.

Advertising holds customers makes new ones, and turns fussy customers into satisfied customers. The modern business concern knows that good advertising is worthy of the thoughts of all thoughtful people and they read them item by item, because they show the way to greater savings.

People realize that the business concerns whose names they find in the advertising columns have left nothing undone to carry in stock the finest merchandise that is possible to be produced for the price asked.

The scheme of life is so arranged that some have merchandise and need cash while others have cash and need merchandise. Advertising provides the opportunity for them to meet.

The motive power of any business is truthful advertising. It is the great service that brings together the buyer and seller for their mutual benefit.

Advertising cultivates the habit of steady saving and has started millions of people on the road to financial freedom.

PRISON SYSTEM BENDS TO NEW ACREAGE LAW

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Jan. 9.—The Texas prison system has bent its knee to the cotton acreage law, and surrendered one-third of its most productive money crop.

The system last year planted 20,315 acres in cotton. It has made plans to obey the acreage reduction law by this year planting but an aggregate of 8,000 acres in its various tracts, and planting it in something else.

Last year the system grew 11,423 bales for which it received an average of 7 cents a pound, or slightly over $400,000, plus the value of its cottonseed.

On about 12,000 acres this year of the best cotton land it will strive to grow as much cotton as possible; and on the thousands of acres laid year in and year out, and the part diverted from cotton, it will grow large quantities of cane, peas, peanuts, potatoes, cabbage and all sorts of feed and food crops.

NEVADA HUNTERS BUSY

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The constant increase in school enrollment has been considerably accelerated by the depression and children of school age have been receiving an unprecedented amount of attention because of the recognized harmful effects of such depression on child welfare.

Some of the other recent news about children is:

The number of pre-school children is decreasing, having been off 128,840 for kids five years old or less in 1930 as compared with 1920, according to the office of education. What makes this figure slightly startling is that there was a gain in number of such children of nearly 1,500,000 between 1900 and 1910 and a 1910-20 gain of nearly 1,000,000.

The Children's Bureau is now issuing a folder describing "irreducible amounts" of protective foods which children and adults must have to avoid danger of serious injury. Minimum costs of adequate diet for a family of five is placed by the bureau's experts at $7.50 to $10 a week.

MORE than 2,000,000 children from 7 to 17 years of age are normally out of school and working, according to an estimate by W. G. Carr of the National Education Association—a fact often cited now in discussions about child labor and its relation to the general unemployment problem.

To what extent this number has been reduced by layoffs and increased enrollment no one knows. The 1930 census found 811,000 children under 14 not enrolled in any school, many of whom were at work. Many have been forced to leave school, but many have stayed only because jobs were scarce.

"All available evidence," says the National Education Association, "points clearly to a significant increase in enrollment. This increase is undoubtedly heaviest in the high schools and in vocational classes. . . . The increase is part of a long continued trend which has been greatly accelerated in the past two years by unem-

Two small projects are listed in Eastland county. On highway 129 one mile is to be resurfaced from Rising Star south to the Brown county line at a cost of $2,496; and on highway 1, south of the Palo Pinto county line, a new stretch of road will be asphalted to eliminate a right angle turn, at a cost of $826.

Additional to these projects, French is in the midst of a $200,000 program in Callahan, Stephens and Eastland counties—all maintenance work, and most of it on highways 1 and 67.

In line with his policy promulgated nearly two years ago, the highway department will give preference to home labor in the new program, paying a minimum wage of 30 cents per hour. The scale was fixed by the legislature.

Moursand, division engineer (No. 7) from San Angelo, and George Edwards, chief of the construction department in the state department, were here Friday, calling on French, Moursand conferred with W. ### RARE MALADY KILLS TWO ON PACIFIC COAST

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 9.—Botulism—that rare malady which especially afflicts the Pacific Coast—recently claimed two more victims, thus increasing Oregon's death toll to 13 within the last seven years. In the most recent case death came as a result of eating salted smoked salmon—the first instance recorded in this state where canned foods were not at fault.

Dr. William Levin, state board of health toxicologist, who definitely attributed the deaths to botulism, found the germ in the stomach of the cat. It also died after eating the salmon. According to authorities, the disease has two deadly foes—heat and cleanliness. Every careful housewife can combat the malady by thoroughly washing every bit of food. Another way is never to taste spoiled food. It has a definite and peculiar odor. The sure preventative, however, according to Dr. Levin, is heat. Botulism bacilli will live in boiling water—212 degrees Fahrenheit—but will die at 240 degrees Fahrenheit.

Oregon has felt the effects of the toxin secreted by the botulism bacilli more than once. This year a Trail, Ore., family was reported ill from the poisoning. In 1924, two entire families were killed at Albany. And it was a Klamath Falls woman who provided the link which aided scientists in tracing the cause of a nation-wide panic over olive poisoning to botulism. The olive scare almost ruined a $30,000,000 industry in California in 1919-1920, when 163 poisoning cases were reported. Four died at Memphis, Tenn.; five at Kaysville, Mont.; five in New York.

Chicago Plans Big Radio Show

CHICAGO, Jan. 9. — The tenth annual Chicago radio-electrical show, to be held in the historic Coliseum, Jan. 18-24, will present a wonderland of radio, television and electrical devices to visitors. In addition to the largest television screen ever used, there will be crowned "Miss Radio" and "Miss Television." Radio artists, who have not appeared on networks more than five times in 1931, will be eligible to compete in auditions for the title of "Miss Radio." They may be auditioned over any station that may be satisfactorily heard by judges in Chicago. The best combination of talent and "radio personality" is being sought. "Miss Television" will be sought locally solely on the best television beauty.

Ulysses A. Sambria, television engineer and a leader in the theatrical television field, will direct the screening of giant pictures, using 12,000 pounds of apparatus. The screen will be larger than the ten-foot field used at the New York Radio-Electrical World Fair last September. An "electrical housemaid" reputed to be adaptable for every chore from polishing floors to getting the baby a drink at 2 a. m., is expected to be the feature of the household electrical appliance exhibits.

Turkey Wars On Vendettas

ISTANBUL, Jan. 9. — The vendetta still flourishes in Turkey, according to Sukru Kaya Bey, Minister of the Interior. Sukru's special investigations have disclosed that in the Province of Qurfa, on the Syrian frontier about half of the population of a quarter of a million are obliged by village and tribal custom to keep up vendettas.

Every family has a "debt of blood" and is armed to defend itself. Even if the authorities punish a person for a criminal act against a neighbor the neighbor's family still will feel themselves bound to inflict a personal revenge. Sukru discovered that the vendetta habit was equally strong in other frontier provinces. One of the government's first steps to eradicate these customs has been to transfer into European Thrace a whole nomad tribe from the eastern provinces. The tribe, four thousand strong, traveled across the Black Sea, with their flocks and chattels, to their new home.

SEEK ACCORD IN WASTEFUL SEA RIVALRY

By RALPH HEINZEN United Press Staff Correspondent PARIS, Jan. 9. — Germany's efforts to bring an end to direct governmental subsidies to ocean steamship operators appears doomed, partly because of France's prompt reply pointing the finger at Germany's own subsidies totaling 622,500,000 gold marks in three installments, 1921, 1924 and 1926, on top of postal subsidies and banking credits totaling another half milliard gold marks.

As a result of the visit of Pierre Laval and Aristide Briand to Berlin, a Franco-German economic commission was organized and one of its sub-committees was particularly charged with seeking an understanding accord between French and German shipping companies to end wasteful competition on all the seas.

French Policy. One of the first demands formulated by the German delegation was that France abandon her subsidy policy. France replied by arguing that every nation in Europe subsidizes, either directly her own steamship operators and that until all should abandon subsidies, France must continue her aid to her nationals.

Bernard Rivain, writing an evidently inspired article in "Europe Nouvelle," argues that Germany's request comes with ill grace since she built her post-war commerce fleet from 700,000 to 4,254,000 tons only through government loans and grants.

He insists that much of the "frozen credits" of America and Britain in Germany went to pay for the building of this fleet to pre-war strength and to pay dividends to stockholders of the two principal German companies.

French Determination. Further indication of the French government's determination to encourage shipping operators is seen in official denial that work will be stopped on the T-6, the "supper Ile-de-France," now in progress of construction in the Penhoet yards at Saint Nazaire. Britain had expected that when work stopped on the giant Cunarder, France would hold up her ocean monster.

French Plan Loan

The French government has further acted to help the French Line by submitting to Parliament a project whereby the government will guarantee a 300,000,000 franc loan for the company, taking in return a mortgage on its ships. The project also grants a special for the New York service, of which 30 million meets the deficit of 1931 and 7,500,000 francs covers operating costs of the first trimester of 1932.

Since the government put its own men in to operate the French Line it has succeeded in effecting 50,000,000 francs of economies. One measure was to lay up 32 freighters until conditions improve.

British Plan Smuggler War

LONDON, Jan. 9. — The coast guard defense against smugglers is to be strengthened around Britain's 5,000 miles of sea coast.

Following recent inquiries, it has been decided to bring the coast guard units up to full strength. The present coast guard staff of 1,000 men is likely to be added to by the appointment of senior officers, many of whom will be ex-officers of the navy, or officers on half pay.

Modern methods of transportation and communication have made the work of the coast watchers a much easier task than it was a few years ago. In the old days, when inland Revenue cutters were under sail, the coast guards had little chance of catching smugglers.

Today, speedy motor-launches at sea are able to maintain contact with the shore stations by wireless. They also are able to overhaul any suspicious vessel and demand an explanation of her movements. On land, the coast guard now rides motor-cycles and can, if necessary, travel at over 70 miles an hour.

engineer of the highway commission, is in charge of the state's nail-picking business.

Under his direction three magnetic nail-collectors are being operated constantly over state highways. They are run principally on gravel roads that hold bits of iron and steel, nails, horseshoes, pieces of wire and similar tire-hazards. When the machines are moved over surfaced highways, they usually are run along the gravel shoulders to collect the stray fragments of iron and steel there.

Started as an experiment, the magnetic road-cleaners have proved so necessary that three of the machines have been built for regular use.

In his year with the attorney general's department, Grady Sturgeon made a record in which any prosecutor might take pride. He helped collect the evidence on which six sheriffs have been indicted, and two convicted on which at least two other persons have been charged in court, and one official tried and acquitted on impeachment. He helped try the sheriff's cases, and was one of those conducting the prosecution before the house and senate of Judge Price on impeachment charges.

Now he will carry through as counsel employed by the attorney general, to complete the prosecution of a Dallas business man awaiting trial in the fee cases. He will maintain law offices at Austin and Paris.

His friends predict he someday will make the race for attorney general. * * * Rains fall on democrats and republicans alike Snow in Finland was blamed for the anti-prohibition victory; and it may be the fine rains of the past few days will have a political effect in Texas. ## Your Electric Rate Is

Always Going Down

Your electric rate has been going down—never up! Commodity prices go down, then up... and only recently have reached a point approximately on a level with 1913 prices. On the other hand, the unit cost of electric service has declined steadily, and on the West Texas Utilities company properties has been LOWERED SIXTY PERCENT during the last nine years, with the average rate to residential service alone showing a REDUCTION OF FIFTY-FOUR PERCENT! Commodity prices must decrease fifty-four percent even below present low prices—a long, long way to go—before they approach the path blazed by electric rate reductions.

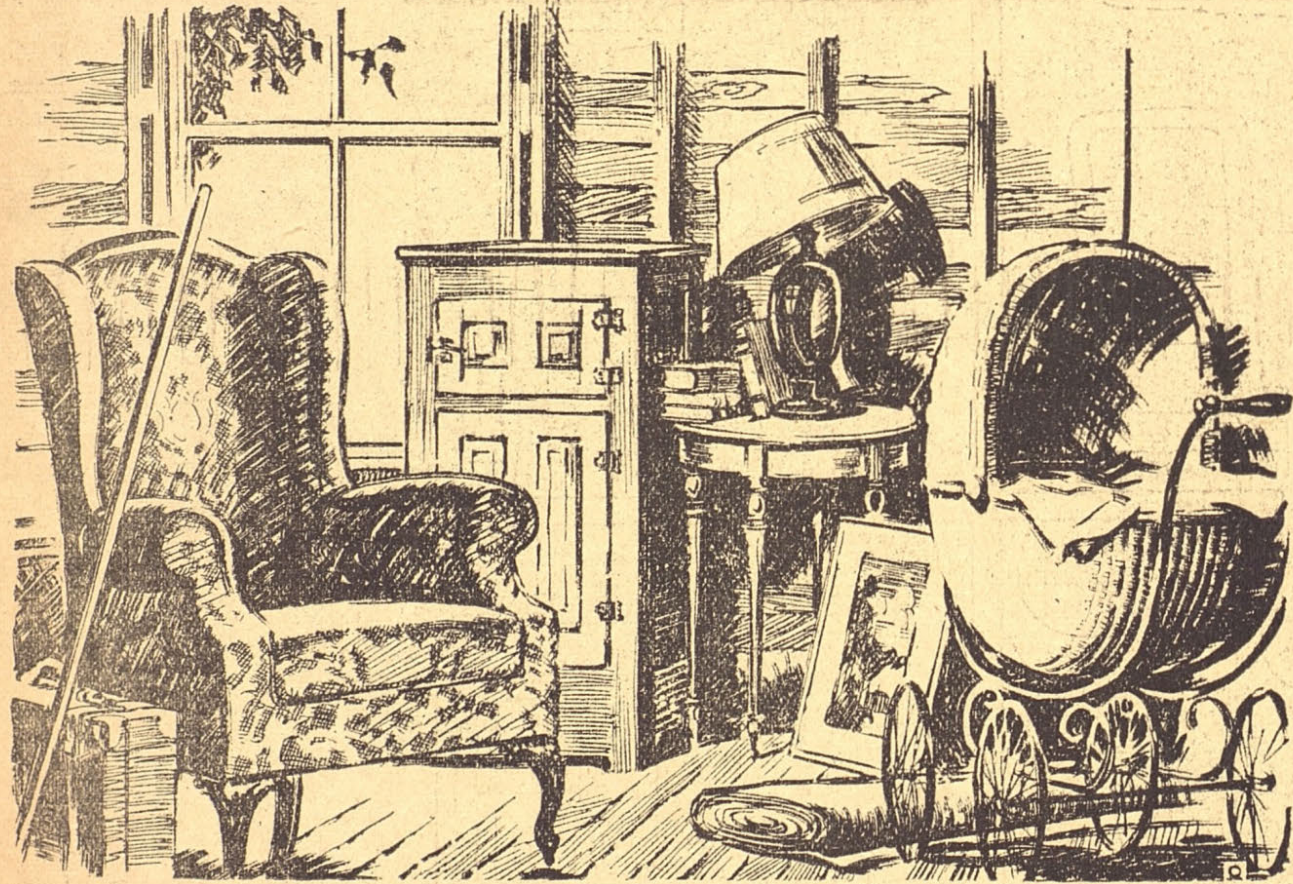

The cost of electric service today is determined more by the customers who use it than by the company which produces it. As more power is used, over more hours of the day, its unit cost becomes less. Thus, the modern rate schedule is designed to share with you immediately the benefit of the economies resulting from a greater use of electricity.

The rate per kilowatt-hour declines as more kilowatt-hours of electricity are used. Additional uses of service reduce the average price per unit, to where now it is possible to cook with it economically. That is, the average customer, using fifty kilowatt-hours per month, now can increase his use of service to THREE TIMES that amount for only 10 cents a day additional cost on his electric service bill—or for the cost of only one medium-priced cigar a day!

Today's customer in the larger towns, living in the average-sized home and using fifty kilowatt-hours a month, pays a rate of only 7.8 cents per kilowatt-hour. Smaller towns cost more to serve, yet the highest rate for this same amount of service, in any town served by the West Texas Utilities Company, amounts to only 1.3 cents more. Customers having major appliances (ranges and refrigerators) earn a rate of approximately one-half that amount for all service used in the home—which includes lighting. The average rate for all residential service sold at this time is only 6.3 cents per kilowatt-hour, as compared with 13.7 cents in 1922!

Thus, automatically and instantly, electricity becomes cheaper every time you increase its use. Think of the many advantageous services by which you can benefit—without a material increase in your electric bill—through a more active use of your lighting and your appliances, or through the addition of major appliances!

ACCOUNT OF WEDDING GIVEN.

The following account of the marriage of Mrs. Marene Barnes of Marshall to Arthur H. Johnson, postmaster at Eastland, was taken from the January 8 issue of the Eastland Telegram:

"Mrs. Marene Barnes of Marshall, Texas, was married to Mr. Arthur H. Johnson of Eastland Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock in the Sun-an Steele room of the First Methodist church, the pastor, Dr. George W. Shearer, reading the impressive ring ceremony.

The vows were taken before an improvised altar banked with ferns and tall floor baskets of mammoth chrysanthemums. A large mirror in the background reflected the beautiful setting, and the morning sunshine streaming through the delicate tints of the triple church windows, before which stood an altar table holding a vase of sweetheart roses and lighted pink tapers.

"The bride, who entered with the groom, was charming in a spring crepe ensemble in the new shade of blue with accessories in black. She wore a corsage of sweet peas, lilies of the valley and fern. The groom wore a genteel business suit.

"Before the ceremony Miss Wilda Drago's violin choir gave Caprice Venise by Kreisley, Lohengrin's wedding march as the processional and Love's Old Sweet Song during the ceremony. Mercedes Johnson's wedding march was played as the recessional.

"Those in attendance were Miss Alice Johnson and Mrs. J. B. Hunter of Cisco, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. McCarty and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Webb of Albany, and the members of the Methodist church choir, with whom the bride has been intimately associated during numerous visits with her sister, Mrs. H. O. Satterwhite. Mrs. Johnson possesses a most charming lyric soprano voice, and has been heard on many occasions to the pleasure and delight of Eastland audiences. Not only for her musical ability is she appreciated, but for her most winsome and pleasing personality. Before Mr. Johnson's appointment as postmaster of Eastland he was a successful business man of Cisco and Eastland, where he numbers his friends by the score.

"Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will be at home at 610 South Seaman street, after a short motor trip to New Mexico and points in West Texas."
