FIRST FUTURE FARMERS ARRIVE HERE

About Our Friends
By STEPHEN A. LONG

Izzy Moldave has a way of settling the German debt... says put Hitler in a cage and charge a dollar for everyone who wishes to see him... Thinks that even in Germany they would pay a dollar each to see him behind bars... don't doubt the Jews would... can't blame them... but trust Moldave to finance a situation... if we could do things with dollars that Izzy can, we'd take off this hot weather.

We hear reports on our old friend J. Stuart Pearce, about him taking cigars at the Sunday school picnics or something of the kind... and right before the policemen's eyes too... It was done during our absence when he knew we could not look after him... We'll report the matter to the proper authorities if we find he's been cutting up.

Speaking of ministers... Rev. A. C. Miller dropped in to chat with us before he left for Dallas for a stop over before returning to his home in Belton... Glad to have seen him and smiling Mrs. Miller, and the two husky boys and twin girls... Have lost control of Rev. James and Turner here of late... they have been away holding meetings and out of touch with us... And that fellow, C. S. Moard... has he quit fishing altogether?

Henry Drumwright been mixing with the New Yorkers on Broadway, serves notice on us that he will have a lot of novelties to show us this fall... Now that means that we must throw away those perfectly good 1932 model suits and buy new ones... likely have some kind of trick hats for us to wear too and maybe shirts... wonder what kind of zippers they will have... they just won't let a fellow lay away a dollar for hard times... And there is W. L. Leach... mighty quiet... means that he and those Jap fellows have been dickering again and he will soon be unloading a lot of new things for the school kids... toys for the holidays will be drifting in.

Then Santa Claus. No, they have heard that this is going to be a prosperous autumn and Nick Miller is already getting the fall hats ready... the old ones won't do... must have new models... and calm, dependable, unexcitable, Mitt Williams is threatening

GARNER WINS OVER LOBOES ON TUESDAY

Garner's came back into the win column after an absence for three games last night to take their softball contest from the Loboos by a count of 13 to 3. Monday's game put the Community club farther to the front with five straight wins. Nance lost a good chance to chalk up a black mark against the gasmen but failed to do so and dropped back a little more, but still retained the second position in the league race. Tomorrow night the Loboos and Nance will meet at Humble park. So far the Loboos have been unable to break into the win side of the baseball sheet but hope to do so at the expense of the motorists. Friday night Truett LaRogue's Ranting Reporters, chesty from their win over the Miller Haberdashers, will take on Jack Anderson's Thundering Herd in the business men's weekly classic. Some choice grandstanding is in prospect. The Parks All-Stars will play the Cisco All-Stars here tonight, it has been announced. Cisco took two games from Comyn last night, Community winning by 15 to 10 and the A. G. girls defeating the Comyn girls, 17 to 8.

40 Women Strikers Are Jailed At Dallas

MAKE ATTACK ON NON-UNION GIRL WORKERS

DALLAS, Aug. 7. — Forty striking women's garment workers were jailed today after they attacked non-union women workers as they entered the plant of the Lorch Manufacturing company and stripped their clothes from them. The disturbance attracted hundreds of office workers hurrying to work. Women strikers congregated in front of the manufacturing plant and seized women workers as they approached the door. Eight or 10 screaming, kicking girls were disrobed and spanked soundly while other strikers, successfully fought off policemen. Additional policemen were called out and finally herded the strikers into patrol cars, crowding them into jail as the disheveled demonstrators cheered. Pickets continued to parade in front of several manufacturing plants demanding recognition of their union — the International Ladies' Garment Workers union — higher wages, and abolition of sweat shop conditions.

Lions Installed At Today's Luncheon

An installation ceremony for new Lion members and a report of the Mexico Lions convention by Lion Johnny Burke, president of the Eastland club, were features of the Lions luncheon today. President E. L. Smith had the new Lion members George W. Foster, Leonard Hudson and Clyde Van Sickle assemble at the head of the table and he gave them his hand in token of a welcome from the club. He then in a few well chosen words gave them something of what being a Lion meant to themselves and to the club. Lion Horace Conley completing the ceremony, read to them the Lion Code of Ethics, asking that they ponder deeply its teachings, finishing with a very impressive talk on Lionism and its history. Lion J. T. Eggen then gave each new member a copy of the Lion constitution. President Burke of Eastland then made his report of the convention, a report that had members roaring with laughter as he gave sidelights on details of the trip and the attending episodes. Other visitors were Wayne Jones, secretary of the Eastland club, and Lion John G. Harlow of Anaheim, Cal. Lion Harlow is passing through the city on his way from Kentucky, and visited to make up attendance.

COMMUNISM IS GIVEN SETBACK BY U. S. LABOR

HOUSTON, Aug. 7. — Communism received a setback among labor leaders today as a result of a disturbance when the subject was thrust in and then out of an "open forum" meeting. Workers were called to the meeting to hear addresses by union leaders. Mrs. Lillian Schwartz, who heckled the meeting, almost broke up the forum when she defended Harry Bridges, leader of the Pacific Coast seamen's strike, as a professional communist last year. She asked: "If communism is so terrible, why were conditions on the west coast the best in the country?" One of the officials of the International Seamen's union, on strike here, asked George Googe, southern chairman of the American Federation of Labor, what the AFL was doing to guard against communism. Googe said individual union members were advised to guard against communism, to make sure of the status of suspected communists, and reject them.

FIRST WORK ON HIGHWAY IS STARTED

First work on the relocation of Federal highway 80 along Eighth street through Cisco began yesterday when highway department engineers were making a survey of the situation and laying plans for actual construction work. The survey work was revealed last night at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce board of directors. The Chamber of Commerce has been instrumental in obtaining an approval of the relocation along the Eighth street route. The preliminary work by the department is necessary before actual construction can start. It followed a promise by Leo Ehlinger, highway engineer at Austin, to have men here at work as soon as possible on the new route. It was announced at the Chamber of Commerce meeting last night that the state park project is progressing favorably. An engineer will be sent here to make a survey of the grounds on August 19.

HURLEY PUTS NEW TURMOIL INTO INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7. — Tall, soldierly Patrick J. Hurley thrust new turmoil into the senate lobby investigation today in an argument with Chairman Hugh L. Black at resumption of the inquiry into lobbying against the Wheeler Rabyburn utility bill. After the clash, Hurley testified he received $50,000 for his services to represent the Associated Gas and Electric company in the senate stock exchange investigation in 1933 and that his total fees from the company in the last three years were about $100,000. "I'm in a goldfish bowl. You can see me from all sides," he remarked. The former secretary of war, whose big Virginia estate was visited yesterday by congressional sleuths seeking the missing utility man, H. C. Hopson, trembled with rage as he shouted: "I'm being singled out as a republican."

Molasses For Pie Is 75 Years Old

MOUNTVILLE, Pa., Aug. 7. — A "shoo fly" pie served by Mrs. Thaddeus Clair to some friends proved that molasses improves with age. Mrs. Clair said the molasses used in the pie was 75 years old. The manufacturer had preserved it 25 years and she had kept it for 50 years. "Shoo fly" pie is a Pennsylvania Dutch delicacy.

COTTON CROP INCOME TWICE THAT OF 1932

EASTLAND, Aug. 7. — Cotton income in Eastland county was more than double in 1934 what it was in 1932, and almost equal to that of 1933, a very favorable year, it has been announced by C. Metz Heald, county agent, on the basis of complete official three-year county cotton figures just received from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Eastland county farmers received for their cotton last year $254,731.64 compared to 197,606.60 in 1932 and $281,403.29 in 1933. The farm value of lint and seed last year was almost $125,000 more than it was in 1932, and added to this was $22,429.84 in benefit payments. Values are based upon yields and prices as furnished by the United States department of agriculture. The benefit payments include all those to April 30, 1935. The value of unsold Bankhead certificates held by farmers is not included in the amount of benefit payments. Texas farmers have about nine million dollars' worth of these certificates on hand, according to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Commenting on this huge increase in Eastland county farmers' cotton income from 1932 to the present, J. D. Guy, Carbon, pointed out that there was almost $150,000 more of cotton money in circulation in the county the last twelve months than two years ago. This increased farm income has been the means of helping farmers stay in business, maintain their farms and homes, and remain customers of merchant he states.

Taxation on Ability to Pay

Monday the house of representatives, by an overwhelming majority, passed the administration's "tax-the-rich" measure, turning down a republican motion to kill the bill by sending it back to committee. The bill now goes to the senate.

The Roosevelt-sponsored measure really is a complete program calling for a variety of taxes upon wealth. It provides for inheritance and new gift taxes, raises personal income taxes of persons making over $50,000 a year, imposes new gift taxes, excess profits taxes, and the idea of a graduated corporations income tax with a penalty on "bigness."

Some form of taxation always has been and always will be needed as long as the general theories of government now prevalent are in effect. Governments don't run themselves any more than private industries do. They require an income from one source or another. The question appears to be chiefly to choose the proper source.

The present condition of the national budget and the present expenditures call for an increase in revenue, an increase which, however will not rob the man on the street.

All taxation, in theory, is or should be based upon ability to pay.

The government has been collecting its revenues through processing taxes, which are passed on to the average citizen, the man in the street, and which have been attacked as unconstitutional. Is it right to require from the WPA worker earning $50 a month the same tax as the person receiving a $1,000,000 inheritance? Is it right to require of the school teacher, serving his community for the sum of $125.00 a month, nine months out of the year, the same tax as the person who, without serving his community or his government, has an annual income of more than $50,000? Is that a tax system based upon the ability to pay?

Wealth naturally requires more protection from the government and should help pay for its protection in direct ratio to what it receives. Everyone should pay some tax and have a part in the government, but the great burden of taxation should be shifted from the man on the street to the individual or the corporation whose protection by the government enables him to amass a great income, or who receives a huge sum as a gift through no particular efforts of his own.

The average man is ready and willing to help pay for his part in the government, but he is not willing to pay for more than his just apportionment.

During recent years the definition of wealth has greatly changed in the United States. Where it was once based upon land, it now is based largely upon annual profits from some

WASHINGTON.—An epidemic of New Deal resignations, threatened or already submitted, has stirred up the latest backstage hubbub here.

All the king's horses and all the king's men have been used to keep the National Labor Relations Board from walking out in protest against its own futility and White House "interference."

The common background is the dispute between the automobile industry and organized labor, which dates back to the birth of NLRB and Section 7-a, NIRA's collective bargaining clause. Here is the inside history:

The powerful automobile and steel men consistently have refused to have any truck with the A. F. of L. They have threatened to abandon their NRA code unless the administration continues to grant them large concessions in their relations with labor.

THE NLRB decided privately last fall that enforcement of Section 7-a was non-existent in the automobile and steel fields, despite the theoretical functioning of Dr. Leo Wolman's automobile board, specially appointed by Roosevelt in the auto strike settlement last spring and the steel board.

Unanimously, NLRB, under Chairman Francis Biddle, decided to step into the automobile field and order its own elections to determine whether auto workers wanted a labor union or company union to represent them in collective bargaining. It was ready to act last December.

AUTO union leaders were ready to repudiate the Wolman board and have no more to do with it. Such repudiation was a preliminary requisite to the NLRB intervention. But President Bill Green of the A. F. of L. declined that action during a series of futile negotiations with Secretary Perkins and others.

Meanwhile, Wolman, who had said in April that his board had no power to call elections, suddenly announced elections. A. F. of L. leaders, caught off base, repudiated them and told union men not to vote.

The result, according to impartial insiders here, was the recent huge majorities of "no affiliation" ballots, as workers feared to identify themselves as union men by refusal to vote.

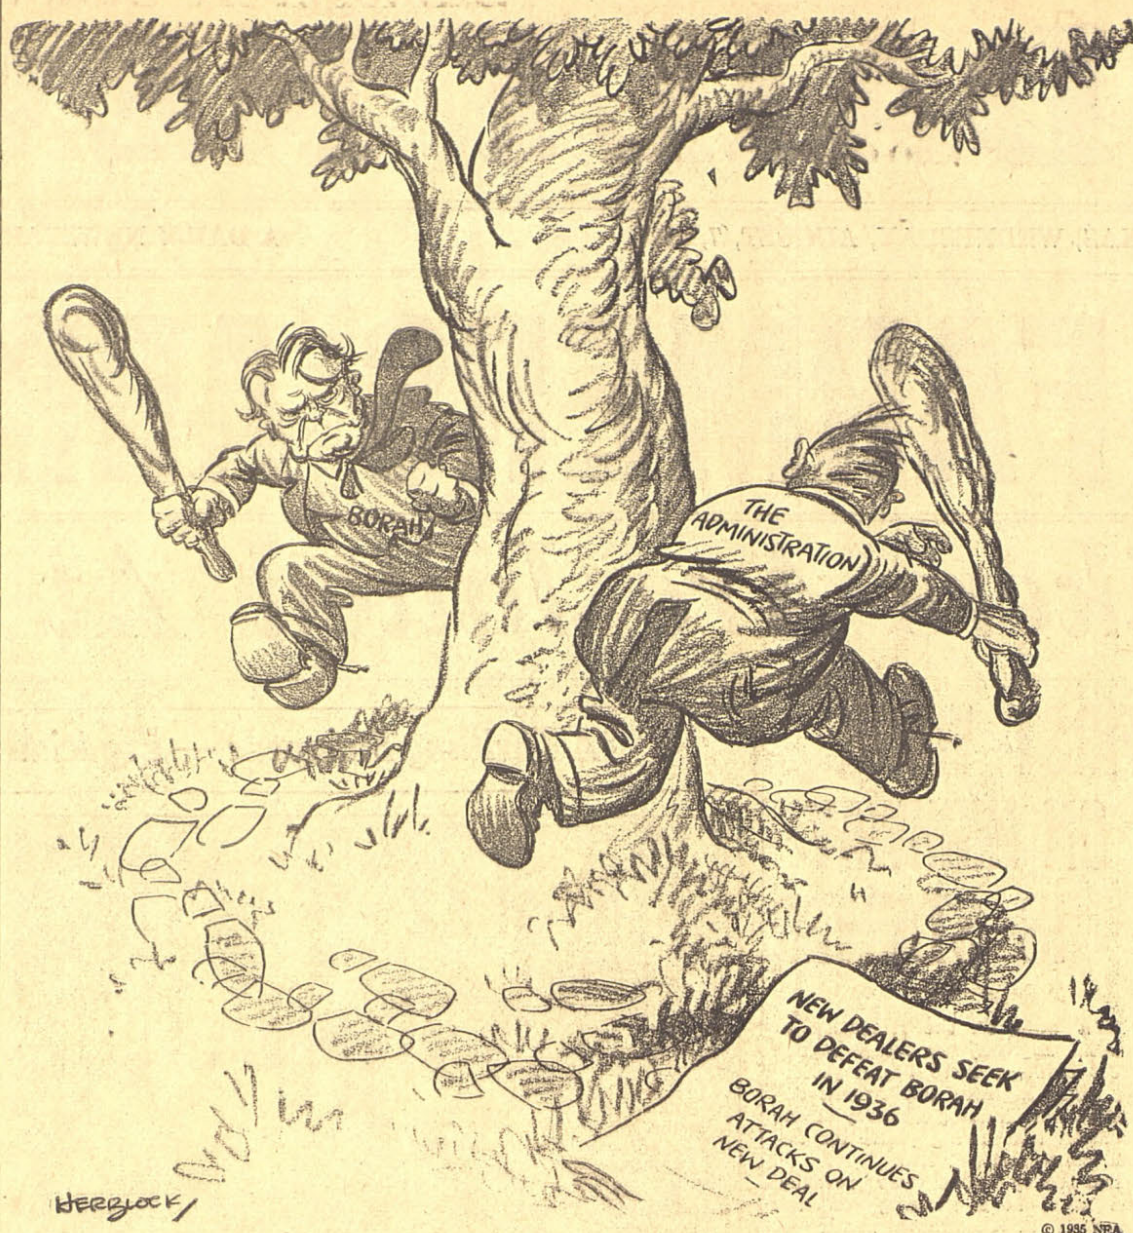

MEANWHILE NLRB carefully set a precedent for intervention in automobiles and steel by taking jurisdiction in the Jennings case, over protest of newspaper publishers who insisted the Newspaper Industrial Board had the only jurisdiction.

Every insider knew NLRB was really running for the automobile magnates and seeking to assert itself as a "supreme court" on 7-a. Roosevelt, fully aware of that, publicly told the board to lay off all cases from industries for which special labor boards had been created, as in automobiles and steel. But only after Donald Richberg had vainly sought to get NLRB voluntarily to make a similar declaration of its own.

FOR weeks the board had sought an interview with Roosevelt. The president's letter promptly inspired the two resignations, never announced, and prospect of a third. Assurances then began to pour into the NLRB from the White House, Miss Perkins, Richberg, and even administration leaders in Congress that board members should stay to help Congress formulate strong labor disputes legislation.

The irony of the success of these assurances lies in the fact that Roosevelt doesn't want any new labor disputes legislation and probably will act to prevent it. (Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

other source. As the wealth shifts, so should the burden of taxation.

America has always been a nation of middle-class people. The average man of Cisco, for example, falls far short of the $50,000 minimum annual income upon which the new income tax would be placed. The corporation with a small income would have only a small income tax, while the rate of the tax would mount gradually as the income grew.

The president's "tax-the-rich" program is not an unjust attempt to rob a man of his savings. It is only that the wealthy, for the first time having to pay their just part of the government expense, have raised a howl that is echoing across this nation.

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, Aug. 7.—An attempt to free relief officials from local influences is clearly apparent in the new state set-up with divisional directors substituted for county administrators. Relief officials formerly in the extreme eastern part of the state have been sent to West Texas; those from South Texas have been shifted to East Texas, and so on. There also has been apparent a sizing up of the efficiency of the old administrators. Men who were merely assistants to county administrators are found heading districts of several counties. A marked tightening of administration is indicated.

SHEARER

Gov. James V. Allred a war-time sailor, spent two enjoyable days in golf fishing after the Port Isabel dedication, but the days were far from pleasant for his seasick secretary, Ed Clark. Clark admits he couldn't keep his head off the boat rail for more than a few minutes at a time. "It was terrible," he moaned.

The governor had a harrowing experience of another sort on the trip and nursed a badly scalded leg as a moment. While he was fishing from a small boat, a mild gale blew so such intensity that he was advised to return to a larger boat. A big wave caught him as he sprang from the smaller to the larger craft. The line by which he tried to swing aboard wrapped around his leg, was jerked taut. At first he feared a broken bone but escaped with a severe rope burn.

"For a moment, I was as sick as Ed," the governor said.

While the governor was beyond the three mile limit in the Gulf of Mexico, Senator John Redditt, Lufkin, was acting governor, though he did not know it. Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul was in Washington frantically trying to get federal funds to replace the Centennial allotment to Port Worth, so Redditt, as next in succession, was acting governor. However, Governor Allred returned before there was anything for Redditt to do. If Redditt, too, had been absent, the state would have been without a governor. The state constitution provides for no further succession.

The state capitol is chucking at the close escape of the chief state law enforcer from having to go to jail. George W. Cottingham, Houston editor and member of the Public Safety Commission, had been cited for contempt fined and had refused to pay the fine. He asserted the freedom of the press to print proceedings of a public court trial. A writ from the State Court of Criminal Appeals released Cottingham and fellow newsmen on bond.

The rival rights of the trial judge and the press will be decided by a higher court after a hearing Oct. 9.

Lyndon B. Johnson, 27, opened Austin headquarters this week as Texas director of the National Youth Administration. Son of Former State Representative Sam Johnson of Blanco and former secretary of Congressman Richard Kleberg, Johnson, in getting forward, experienced many of the difficulties he will try to iron out for others as Youth Administrator. He shoveled gravel on a road job to get started in college. He chopped weeds at 15 a month and lived over a garage to stay in Southwest Texas Teachers' college. But at 19, he was head of a six-teacher school with 300 pupils.

The State Banking Department has discovered that it was neatly gipped at the last session of the state legislature. The department was given the $114,650 appropriation for which it asked but in a conference committee someone slipped in a proviso that makes the appropriation good only to the extent that the department earnings furnish the appropriated amount. With national banks now predominating, the department can't earn its own way on fees. A reduced staff under the new department administration likely will be necessary. The new administration starts concurrently with the new state fiscal year, Sept. 1.

Gov. James V. Allred this week found another department head "under 40" directing a state agency. He is Orville S. Carpenter, 35, Dallas, successor to George Simpson, as state auditor and efficiency expert. He is a boyhood friend of the governor. Auditor Carpenter announced a policy of assisting state departments. "I hope to make my work constructive," he said, creating a friendly attitude to replace the way departments usually meet the arrival of auditors.

Auditor Carpenter is unrelated to Power Executive John Carpenter, also of Dallas.

Governor Benjamin B. Moer of Arizona, says:

Did you ever stop to think that this is your state and your nation, and that it is incumbent upon you as an individual, as well as upon public officials to do your duty?

Did you ever stop to think that you are your brother's keeper, and that it is easier to criticize than to perform?

Did you ever stop to think that governmental costs rise in proportion to the demands of the citizens for increased governmental activities?

Did you ever stop to think that when a man or woman has a job, either public or private, he owes to his country to give the utmost in service?

Did you ever stop to think that the 120,000,000 citizens of these United States because of their thoughtlessness and extravagance are responsible for the depression from which we are emerging?

Did you ever stop to think that it might be well for each of us to analyze our personal activities to the end that we may make this a better nation in which to live?

Lowering his voice, he said, "I've been lost without you, Jo. It was hard to leave without seeing you. The nurse delivered my notes?"

"Yes."

"What have you decided?"

"I—I haven't decided anything," Jo told him.

Fragonet looked relieved. "That's fine! I was afraid you might say you'd made up your mind not to return to Hollywood with me. But if you've made no decision, then I've still hope."

"But you see, I—"

"Now!" he held up a restraining hand. "Don't try to decide over the breakfast table. We'll be filming scenes here for two or three weeks, and perhaps by then I'll have persuaded you." His tone grew serious. "You don't have to think about Edna now. That's over... definitely."

Jo was about to speak when she heard Douglas Marsh's voice booming jovially across the dining room. "Well, Pete! . . ."

The two men shook hands. "I'm glad you're back again," Douglas said. "And how are you this morning, Jo?"

"Very well, thank you." She wondered if his mother had told him her version of the episode in the hallway upstairs the night before.

"Sit down and break eggs with us," Fragonet invited. "Have Drann and his crew been driving your guests away?"

"On the contrary, they've attracted them. And of course there are the usual curious females who are mighty disappointed to learn you didn't come up with the rest of the company."

Fragonet laughed easily. "That's one of the reasons why I didn't come with the rest of the company."

"You know," said Marsh, winking slyly at Jo, "it must be awful to have to fight off women like Pete does."

Involuntarily, Jo reddened. Marsh saw her embarrassment and was instantly contrite. He stammered for a moment and then blurted out, "I didn't mean anything by that crack, Pete. He faltered again, and then rushed on, "We're all friends. Suppose I stop being a polite fool and we discuss this thing. Is Edna going to divorce you?"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Marsh," interrupted Jo quickly. "Suppose we don't discuss it. You see, I'd really rather not. And there's nothing to discuss anyway."

It was Marsh's turn to grow red. "I'm sorry, Jo. It was only that I'd made a rather foolish remark and was trying to pull out of it."

"That's something a fellow should never try to do," laughed Fragonet cheerfully. Abruptly he steered the conversation into safer channels. "Drann tells me he's going to shoot a few scenes this afternoon. You two had better come down and watch. He may get temperamental before he's through and exclude all on-lookers—even the owner of the place!"

"About the shooting?"

"What time, I believe Drann said."

"Good!" exclaimed Marsh. "That's a date for 2 o'clock, Jo."

MARSH was waiting for her on the veranda when Jo appeared at two that afternoon. Tossing his cigaret away, he slid down from the railing and walked to meet her.

"I was afraid you might let me down," he told her. "I was such a fool this morning. But I'm a frank sort of cuss, and it seemed so silly for us to sit there and pretend."

Jo walked down the steps and out on the lawn in silence. Marsh added, "I'll admit it's something for you and Pete to decide. Jo, but, confound it, I feel rather responsible for you."

"Thank you."

"I mean it, I—I want you both to be sure of yourselves before you tie together, if that's what you're really thinking of."

"I haven't thought about it at all," Jo told him, shading her eyes to gain a better view of the lake shore where Drann and his company were already assembled.

Marsh sensed that her mood of the morning had not changed, that she still preferred not to talk about Peter Fragonet. The realization troubled him vaguely, made him feel shut out from Jo Darien and her life. He wondered just when his real interest in that life had begun—whether it was on that first night at the Olympic Bowl, or later. Perhaps, he told himself, it began on the road to the Lone Tree Tavern, the magic night he had taken Jo in his arms.

HIS disturbing thoughts were diverted as he and Jo drew closer to the shore of the lake where Drann's carpenters had built a replica of a forester's cabin. The interior was unfinished, and used as a storehouse for the sound and camera equipment, as the scenes in the interior of the cabin would be filmed at the Atlas lot in Hollywood.

Ranged in a semi-circle about the front of the cabin were Drann and his assistants, some lolling in canvas chairs, others running nervously here and there but always somehow gravitating near the chair marked in huge white letters, "SILAS DRANN." Two cameras were set up behind him, and projecting out on a long crane-like arm was the black cylinder which Jo guessed to be the "mike" to catch the dialogue.

Something had gone wrong, something was missing, and quite evidently, Drann had sent somebody for it. Every quarter minute he would squint around in his chair and yell, "Where is that fellow? Where is he, anyhow?"

Nobody paid much attention. Lolita Montez sat rigid on her canvas chair with a sheaf of typewritten pages on her lap. Her lips were moving silently, and occasionally she referred to the typing. Then, as Jo watched, Miss Montez nodded her head, shoved the script into a bag at the side of the chair and lit a cigaret. Today, in riding breeches and a snug suede jacket, the actress looked more slender than ever.

Jo and Marsh had joined the ever-growing circle of onlookers, as curious and wide-eyed as kids before a side show tent. But if Drann and his outfit were conscious of the stares they certainly gave no sign of it. As the minutes passed and nothing happened, Miss Montez rose languidly from her chair and strolled around behind the cameras.

BATTLE UPON LEAF WORM IS BEING URGED

Special to Daily News. EASTLAND, Aug. 7.—Destruction of the cotton crop by leaf worm infestation is threatened in this county, but it can be easily controlled, C. Metz Heald, county agent announced today after an investigation.

Heald states the best method is to use calcium arsenate, otherwise known as arsenate of lime. This is the same material as is ordinarily applied for the control of boll weevil. Under ordinary conditions and where dusting machinery is available, it is applied in dry form. Heald states it should be applied in an even dust cloud, 5 pounds per acre will ordinarily be sufficient, although in cotton of large growth it may be necessary to apply 19 pounds per acre, Heald states. It should be applied preferably in the early morning while there is dew on the plant, although it is claimed effective when applied in midday provided there is no wind.

Those who are equipped with spraying machinery, Heald said, that it is more conveniently applied with water as a spray. If this method is preferred, the poison should be mixed with water in the proportion of three pounds to 50 gallons of water. The poison will settle out of the mixture and while application is being made, the mixture should be agitated so as to keep the poison suspended in the water. It should be applied in sufficient quantity merely to get an even covering of the mixture on the foliage, Heald points out.

If calcium arsenate is not obtainable, Heald said, Paris green may be used. For dusting, it should be mixed with some 3 to 5 parts of hydrated lime or cheap flour to one part of the poison and applied in the same quantity as the calcium arsenate or heavier. It is to be sprayed use three parts of lime to one part of Paris green and mix so that there will be 1 and 1-2 pounds of Paris green in 50 gallons of water. Mixtures of white arsenic and sal soda or lye are likely to injure they not be used.

Assails Nazis in Quiz Demand

With the view to determining if the U. S. would be justified in severing diplomatic relations with Germany, militant Senator William H. King of Utah, above, made a fiery demand for investigation of alleged Nazi religious persecutions. "The Hitler government has oppressed Jews and Catholics and has not discharged its proper obligations to the U. S.," he declared.

HOWARD PAYNE PROSPECTS FOR FALL BRIGHT

BROWNWOOD, Aug. 7.—Howard Payne college closed the regular summer term with commencement exercises on Friday evening, August 2. Rev. H. R. Long, pastor of the First Baptist church of Sulphur Springs, delivered the address. The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon the Rev. Mr. Long.

Fifty-nine graduates received the Bachelor of Arts degree. The summer graduating class was the largest in the history of the college. The summer class, coupled with the spring class of fifty-five members, gives the college a graduating class of one-hundred fourteen for the year.

President Taylor announced that prospects for a large enrollment for the fall semester, which opens September 9, were very encouraging. Improvements in the college buildings are going forward during August in preparation for the fall opening.

At a recent meeting of the board of trustees the services of Clarence (Nig) McCarver of Ballinger, were secured as assistant coach and instructor in physical education. McCarver is a graduate of Howard Payne college and holds a Master of Arts degree from George Washington University in Washington, D. C. After taking his degree from the Brownwood institution, he attended the Washington school, where he was one of the greatest football stars in the east. McCarver will report for duty September first.

Use Texas Stone Urges Plan Board

AUSTIN, Aug. 7.—"One way by which employment in Texas can be increased is for Texans to use native building stone," said Wilbur C. Hawk, chairman of the Texas planning board's mineral resources committee. "We have been accustomed to using imported stone," said Hawk, "and have overlooked one of our greatest natural resources."

Unknown to the majority of Texans, this state contains great quantities of building stone of almost every conceivable color and texture. The bureau of economic geology of the University of Texas maintains a wonderful exhibit of these stones. The exhibit is always open and is of special interest to architects, engineers, and builders.

Hawk also said, "The Mineral Resources Committee of the Texas planning board does not recommend the use of Texas granite, limestone, or marble in place of Texas-made brick or Texas-grown lumber. We do wish, however, to use Texas stone instead of imported stone so as to build up a stone industry for Texas that will afford opportunities for a portion of our unemployed citizens."

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tasteless quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

IMPETUS FOR SCHOOL GIVEN THROUGH PWA

PORT WORTH, Aug. 7. — The Public Works Administration under the guidance of Administrator Iokes is affording a great impetus to the construction of school buildings in Texas, according to Julian Montgomery, acting state director. The time is approaching when the youth of Texas will turn their eyes toward school work. They will find waiting for them new school buildings financed by PWA at a total cost of $1,797,162.00.

The largest PWA building project in Texas is the main building at the University of Texas, which will be completed in about a year at a total cost of some $2,000,000.00. On July 1, PWA had, through non-federal loans and grants, financed 1071 school projects throughout the United States, costing $184,875,000 and including both secondary school projects and universities.

According to Montgomery, applications for new projects to be financed from the 1935 relief appropriation of $4,880,000,000 consist mainly of school projects. "Of the 177 new applications," said Mr. Montgomery, "125 are for school projects consisting of classrooms, buildings, dormitories or stadiums. The largest of the new school projects was submitted by Houston, Texas, requesting a grant of $1,719,480. The total cost of the Houston school project will be approximately $4,000,000. Compared to this, several applications for school projects costing as low as $2,000 have been received. No discrimination is being made. We are glad to receive applications regardless of cost."

Director Montgomery said that applications for projects should be submitted to the PWA without delay. "It is likely that the next 6 to 8 weeks will tell the story," he said. If applications have not been submitted during that interim, then there is danger that they may be too late. While no definite date has been set to quit receiving applications, public officials should not take the risk of delaying the filing of applications for projects which they desire to finance through PWA.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

Greatest Evil of Rural School System Is Lack of Cooperation Says Eldridge

EASTLAND, Aug. 7. — Greatest evil of the rural school system — lack of cooperation between adjoining districts — that is the opinion of County Superintendent C. S. Eldridge.

The expression came Monday when the superintendent addressed members of the Eastland Rotary club at their weekly luncheon.

Cooperation is needed between towns and the rural districts, Eldridge stated. Let the city schools get the rural districts high school pupils, but the rural districts should retain their grammar grades, the superintendent stated.

Grammar school is the foundation of learning and more important than high school work, Eldridge stated.

The county superintendent has a panacea for the rural schools ills, he told the club. Dubbed the "trade territory system," Eldridge recommended schools in certain districts merge. "It's coming to that anyway," he confided.

Removal of rural school students to the city by way of bus and other activities is sounding the death knell for social intercourse of communities, Eldridge stated.

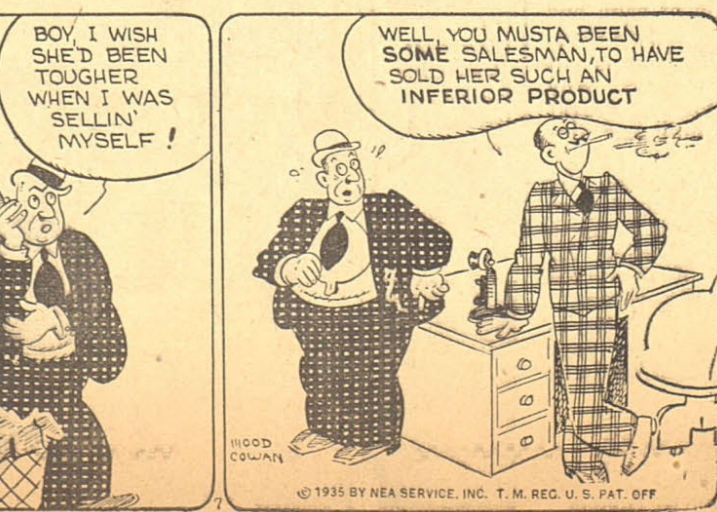

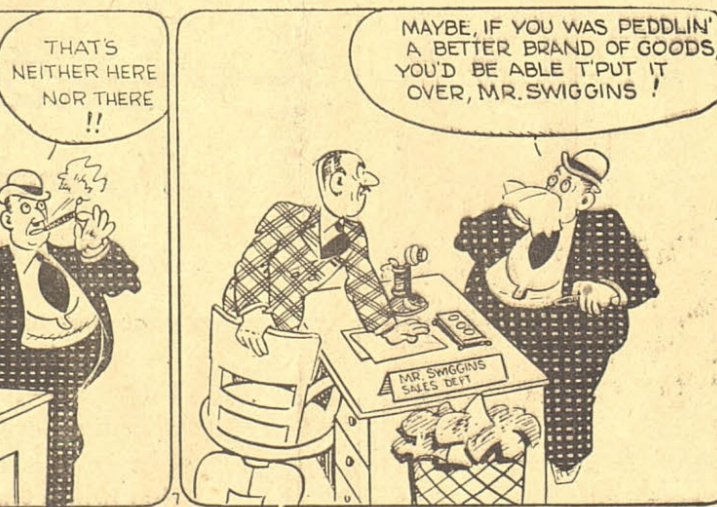

Stress was placed upon cooperation of cities and rural districts. "What may seem little to cities is important to the rural section."

He used a slogan of a southern newspaper, "Civilization begins and ends with a plow," to illustrate importance of the rural sections.

MARK TWAIN IS DIMMED BY HIS NAMESAKE

B JESS BOGNE
United Press Staff Correspondent
ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7 — In Hannibal, Mo., townsfolk this year are celebrating the centennial of the birth of Mark Twain, writer and riverman — Samuel L. Clemens To St. Louis, cityfolk daily pass and do not notice the grace in Bellefontaine cemetery of the original Mark Twain, river pilot and writer, Isaiah Sellers.

Sellers, dead 71 years, wrote for the old New Orleans Daily Picayune under the name of Mark Twain, long before Samuel Clemens ever adopted that name and began to write. He had piloted river boats for years before the Mark the world knows first stepped onto the deck of a Mississippi stern-wheeler.

River-folk of his day knew Sellers better as a pilot than a columnist, for he was said to have known the Mississippi and its surroundings better than any other man of his time. In that respect, his fame was in direct contrast to that of Clemens', who was first a writer, second a riverman.

Designed Own Gravestone
Today the stone over Sellers grave is almost his sole claim to worldly notice. He designed it himself. Carved in a recess in the stone is the figure of a bearded river pilot at a great spoked wheel. Beneath the figure is a single line. "I. Sellers."

The Mark of the books knew the Mark of the river. He mentioned in his "Life on the Mississippi" that Sellers was on the river in 1811, the first year steamboats plodded along its muddy current. He was then only a boy. First notice of Seller's operations on the lower river was in 1825. Like his better-known namesake, Sellers was a man of ingenuity. He originated the system of bell-tapping as the pilot's signal to take soundings. It replaced an older method of shouting from the wheelhouse, the "Mark Twain."

Record for No Accidents
There were no accidents on the pilot's record of the first Mark Twain. Yet he was the first to bring a boat with staterooms to St. Louis, when he brought the "Prairie" from Pittsburgh to St. Louis in 1836.

When he brought the J. M. White II from New Orleans in May, 1844, in three days, 23 hours, 9 minutes, he set a record which stood for 25 years until captains found new ways of refueling and the river provided pilots with shortcuts.

Sellers, as Mark Twain, continued to write about the river for the Picayune for many years. Then a new Mark Twain who made people laugh; appeared on the literary horizon, and Sellers quit.

He died March 6, 1864, at Memphis from pneumonia. Friends brought the body here and buried it beneath the stone of Sellers own choosing.

Today his body lies just 80 miles from the grave of the other Mark Twain.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

RAW greens and other raw vegetables — carrots, turnips, cauliflower, even peas—are the favorite hors d'oeuvres of the moment.

At every tea or cocktail party you go to these days, there is sure to be a colorful tray of crunchy, vitaminish vegetables and a good thing, too. Even children are being taught to eat a carrot with as much relish as they would a stick of candy.

We housewives really ought to be conscientious about putting greens, both raw and cooked, on our spring menus. Think of all the iron, sulphur, phosphorus and what have you considered so essential to bodily growth contained in a fine mess of mustard greens, or a crisp chef's salad (so-called because the most famous chefs make that kind for themselves) of chicory escarole, endive, lettuce and romaine.

Use Little Water

And whatever else you do when you cook them, don't drown greens in a lot of water.

Just wash spinach, young chard and beet greens and cook them with the drops of water clinging to the leaves—no extra. Coarser greens like dandelion, kale, chicory and escarole need a little boiling water.

Chicory and escarole should be cooked young if at all and when they are pale green in color. The leaves become yellowish on maturity and are more palatable eaten raw with a good tart salad dressing.

Beet greens are specially good

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Prune and lemon juice, cereal, cream, bread crumb omelet, graham and raisin muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Creamed tuna in rice border, baked escarole, DINNER: Planked ham and eggs, beet greens with lemon, strawberry shortcake, milk, coffee.

To serve with ham. Boil the end of a ham with the greens, any kind from dandelion to spinach. What could be better for spring dinner than ham and eggs and beet greens? And maybe old-fashioned strawberry shortcake to eat with them.

Baked escarole is a good quick luncheon dish. Accompany it by creamed tuna fish in rice border, nut rolls, milk and tea.

Baked Escarole

One bunch or two pounds escarole, 4 tablespoons fat or butter, 1 bouillon cube, 1-2 cup boiling water, salt and pepper.

Blanch escarole by plunging into boiling water for five minutes. This removes excess bitterness. Drain and put into a buttered baking dish. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water, add fat or butter and salt and pepper and pour over escarole. The amount of salt depends on the kind of fat you use. With bacon, fat less salt will be necessary than if an unsalted fat is used. Cover baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 40 minutes, until tender. Serve from baking dish.
