Let's Take Care of Home First

Thoughtlessness harbors a greater menace than wilful mischief. It causes us to do things behind our own backs, and hence slips upon us with unexpected results just when we are congratulating ourselves.

It poisons the milk we feed our babies and fills graves with typhoid victims. It haunts every avenue of traffic, strews our fine highways with shattered wrecks and puts a premium on life and accident insurance.

which will prevent tax on ice, picture show admissions and all necessities except tax on foreign oils that have almost ruined independents. You remember last year I refused to go on Hearst's junket trip through Canada. He and other multi-millionaire organizations are seeking through this proposed sales tax to shift the burden of governmental expenses to the shoulders of the poor—who are unable to bear same—and we are not going to stand for it. ARGUMENTIVE GYMNASTICS.

A contrast in kidnappings drawn together over a couple of thousand years to point a moral in social righteousness has been curiously twisted into an argument against prohibition.

It is said that a certain Greek logician was so proficient in the use of his science that although he had been hurled ignominiously to the mat in a physical contest he could rise from defeat and convince the spectators that it was all a mistake.

Back to the present instance of labyrinthine reasoning. The author of the kidnapping contrast is W. H. Kittrell, who sent his contribution to a Fort Worth newspaper.

Wrote Mr. Kittrell:

I am dating this letter from the date of birth of a babe 'whom ye will find wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.'

There was no luxury, no great display, poor parents.

A wicked king had designs on the life of this babe. What happened?

The father 'was warned by an angel in a dream' of the impending danger.

This child had a work to do. He became a teacher and His extemporaneous talks were years after written down by men inspired so to do, and last year 30,000,000 copies of scripture were circulated in 700 languages and dialects.

In His first public discourse, called the Sermon on the Mount, He began with 'Blessed are ye poor; then 'Woe unto you rich, for ye have your consolation.'

Since another babe was born amid splendor and luxury. Then evil men framed designs on this babe, but no angelic being 'came to the father in a dream by night' to warn him of danger.

These rich parents had their consolation when these luxurious preparations were made for this advent, but where is that consolation today?

Might we not learn a valuable lesson from this case and the gruesome fatalities befalling the multimillionaires' strength throughout the world?

Together with all right-minded people we would rejoice in the restoration of the child. But in that event, the happiness of their future will be marred by fears.

Wrote J. E. Fitzgerald, of Stephenville, in response: 'Dear Sir—You know that was a mighty fine letter you had in the Fort Worth Press today. They can't step on nature long and get by with it. The mother better sleep with her young as all other animals do.'

'By the way, the rich voted the poor out of whiskey and now the rich seem like will soon be where they can't keep their children.'

'Old Shakespeare said you could mend nature, but you can't much. When you breed one trait in you breed another out.'

'The church people tried to breed prohibition into their members and bred good old time religion out.'

'Anyhow that is the way the world wags.'

Now there is an argument that the antis haven't thought about. If the lack of "good oldtime religion" can be blamed upon an error of the churches in helping to run Demon Rum out of the land of the free and the home of the brave, the churches have got themselves a pretty kettle of fish.

We commend this matter to the attention of the opposing factions.

OTHER OPINIONS

THE SALES TAX PLAN

A storm of opposition to the manufacturers sales tax now under consideration in congress is being voiced by innumerable groups and organizations as well as by individuals who are pleading with members of the Senate and House to find some other means of balancing the government's budgets and overcoming the tremendous treasury deficit.

An Easter Outline of History beginning of congressional consideration of the tax an active organization within the House of Representatives, under the leadership of Mr. LaGuardia of New York, has been exerting every possible effort to defeat it.

many political battles, said after it was all over: "We can be content with having started the ball rolling, in any event. Meanwhile we will join with other democrats of the state and the newly perfected Garner organization in working in behalf of this 'distinguished Texan.'

Even their proponents admit that the manufacturers sales tax is bad but they contend that the financial emergency is so serious that there is no alternative except to inflict it upon the country.

Thus it was that Houston won the state chairman, Gonzales the vice-chairman, Eastland county the secretary, New York and Fort Worth the national publicity director, and then came the distribution of olive branches and the restoration of harmony all around.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—Notes left over from the day of the wet-dry vote in the House. . . . Never saw so many members on the floor—except on opening day, so many cars parked on the Capitol grounds, so many folks trying to jam into the galleries, so many newspapermen working in the gallery.

Good Clean Fun EVERYONE laughs with and at everyone else. You know, that spirit of good clean fun.

In petroleum countries there is an ancient saying, "Where there is oil there is hell." In this land ruled by a democracy there is another ancient saying, "Wherever democrats foregather, there is a riot."

Linthicum of Maryland, the other co-author, is alongside Appropriations Chairman Joe Byrns of Tennessee, who slumps and whose jutting brows almost meet his up-curving chin just off his nose.

Minority Leader Snell of New York, with his perpetually pained expression slightly yielding today to one of semitolerance. . . . Sitaler of New York, the wet teed dramatic critics, with a real carnation on. . . . Mansfield of Texas, last to sign the petition of 145 which brought on the vote, sitting in his wheel chair in front of the front row. . . . LaGuardia of New York with his vest unbuttoned.

Now They're Voting! SUDDENLY they're voting, after demand for "yees" and "aays."

. . . Bald, round little Abernethy of North Carolina is the first. He's the one who recently blurted from the floor that he only voted dry because he had to. He votes, "No!" with a shout.

Other early voters shout, too, but soon it becomes monotonous, with only an occasional shout, which still makes everybody laugh. . . . Gallery doors are opened so as many people can stick their heads through as possible. . . . Beck almost forgets to vote when his turn comes and emits his "Aye" in obvious breathless haste. Another big laugh.

When the clerk reaches one of the few absentees he reads the name twice to make sure. And he repeats each member's "Aye" or "No." . . . Clague of Minnesota votes "No" inadvertently, but quickly corrects himself.

Garner's Name Missing NEARLY half the members, especially wets, follow the vote on roll call sheets, as we do in the press gallery. Some lose track at one stage or another and quit. . . . Suddenly you notice that Speaker Garner's name isn't on the roll call. It never is, however. It's a lot easier for him, consequently.

And Everybody's Happy NAMES of absentees are read after the clerk gets a "No" from Tom Von of Florida at the end of the list. Two or three have now come in and they vote. . . . The official announcement is made quickly: 227 Noes to 187 Ayes. The House breaks into general applause. Everyone seems delighted—drys because they won, wets because they got such an extraordinary vote, a defeat only by about five to four. . . . Montague of Virginia is recognized to talk about something else, but the post-mortem buzz is so loud that no one ever learns what it is. Garner finally gives up demanding order.

Order comes after awhile because nearly everyone at last piles out of the chamber for lunch. But all through the corridors you can hear only the noise of wets congratulating themselves.

Bank Receiver

As a home economics teacher in Wichita, Kan., Mrs. W. D. Ellison, above, taught school children how to raise the dough, but now she finds "raising the dough" for defunct banks much more interesting.

FRIEND STILL USES SADDLE OF KIT CARSON

SALINA, Kan., March 24.—When Ole Graham goes galloping over the range near his Cheyenne, Wyo. home, or over the Kansas prairies while spending the winter here, he rides in a saddle that many a museum curator would like to put in a glass case.

The saddle is one used by Kit Carson when the famous scout was chasing Indians some 75 years ago. He also rode it to his wedding, according to stories told by Graham and used it until the tragedy which took his wife from him.

When Carson's wife was murdered near Fort Garland, Col., Kit sent Tom Tobin, his right-hand man, to seek the killers. Tobin trailed the two Indians accused of the crime and shot them both, according to the story. In appreciation of the avenging of the murder, Carson gave the saddle to Tobin.

When Tobin died he gave the saddle to Graham. The saddle has the appearance of being home made, and Graham believes the scout probably made it himself. It consists of three pieces of leather, decorated with pieces of silver.

Graham has some other saddles of which he is equally proud. One of them was used by Lieut. Gen. Davis in the Civil war. Another is believed to have been brought to America by Spaniards of an early day. It is made of good, black lake ebony, laced with catgut and silk, and with finely carved stirrups.

TO OPEN GARDENS

RICHMOND, Va., March 24.—Approximately one hundred of the finest old colonial homes and gardens of Virginia will be opened to this statement after the smoke of conflict had been dissipated: "I feel that this organization perfected today in the nucleus of a movement that will place John Garner in the president's chair. As a result of the meeting there is harmony and unity in the ranks of Texas democrats. I am impressed with the enthusiasm being shown in behalf of Garner. I am going back to Washington inspired to redouble my efforts toward Garner's nomination. Our position is complicated by the fact that Garner has refused to become a candidate for the nomination. We cannot enter him in any primary for that reason, but his supporters are growing nevertheless throughout the nation. We plan a lot of publicity work in his behalf in the next few weeks."

All this is a reminder that the senatorial committeemen will appoint county chairmen immediately and these in turn will name precinct chairmen to organize for the May scramble and struggle for 46 delegates to the national committee was named. It follows: Mrs. Clara Driscoll Sevier, and Jed C. Adams, members of the democratic national committee, and W. O. Huggins, chairman of the state democratic executive committee. A finance committee will be named by Rep. Rayburn and Sen. Woodul.

Yes, Houston is getting to be the political hub of Texas. Houston has Col. Jesse Jones, State Chmn. Huggins, Gov. Sterling, ex-Gov. William P. Hobby, the May convention and the chairman of the Garner state organization committee. In addition to this Raymond Brooks is quoted as having written that at least four of the Houston leaders may be elected delegates-at-large at the Chicago convention. A political cynic, after surveying the sacred shrine of Texas liberty, remarked to a fellow scriber the merry skirinish was over: "Yes, Thermopylae had its messenger of defeat; the Alamo had none." Those who planted the seed were overlooked by the pickers when harvest time rolled around.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

That every business concern in your city owes an important duty to the public. Some of them forget it. Some of them should realize that newspaper advertising is a duty due the public. That the public is entitled to know about their wares. The directing heads of business concerns also should realize that they owe a duty to their business. Newspaper advertising will insure bigger profits for a business. It will increase turnover. It will move dead stocks. It will put a business before the public. It will create demand. It will make a prosperous business.

INDICATIONS OF EASING IN BANK TENSION

AUSTIN, March 24.—Indications thus far point to a relief of tension in the banking industry by the emergency banking measures that have been taken, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. A more optimistic attitude has resulted, it is evident from the meager data available even now, the Bureau's report said.

"Bank failures, as reported by Bradstreet's, declined sharply in February, only 109 being recorded for the four weeks ending February 25 as against 225 for the preceding 28 days," the report continued. "The average amount of money in daily circulation declined by $105,000,000 during the month from February 6 to March 5. Much of this impressive decline can be credited to the 'anti-hoarding drive,' but most of it probably represents a reduction in the bill money reserves of commercial banks. During the same period, member bank borrowings from the reserve banks fell off slightly. The steady outflow of gold apparently is being checked also, a net gain of some $11,000,000 in gold being registered for the week ending March 9, the first weekly gain since December 23. The reversal of the gold flow appears to be the result of a marked weakening in the French, Belgian, and Dutch exchange rates, accompanied by a phenomenal rise in sterling quotations, the latter rate reaching $3.72 on March 8.

"All of these developments suggest a marked improvement in the general banking situation. The mere existence of the Reconstruction Corporation as a source of emergency loans appears to have had a powerful psychological effect on commercial bankers. It would be expected, therefore, that an increasing amount of new bank credit would be made available which should bring about a general decline in short term money rates and the long expected improvement in the high grade bond market.

The reduction in the New York Reserve Bank's discount rate from 3 1/2 per cent to 3 per cent (effective February 26), and by the apparent resumption since the first of March of reserve bank open market buying.

"The banking situation in the eleventh district, although showing but little change over January figures, apparently does not yet reflect this general improvement. Total debits to individual accounts are down markedly; time deposits have grown somewhat at the expense of demand deposits; borrowings from the reserve bank have increased slightly; and loans extended and government bonds held have shrunk to some extent. The probable explanation of these trends is that the Reconstruction Corporation was not able to organize its machinery in the Southwest in time to make itself felt in February. If this assumption is correct, a distinct improvement in eleventh district banking data can be anticipated for the present month."

Texas Anti-Trust Suits Attract Poor "House" Despite Cost of Production

AUSTIN, March 24.—Texas' $17,850,000 anti-trust lawsuit, loaded with political possibilities and fought by an aggregation of lawyers whose daily cost runs into many thousands of dollars, is attracting the poorest "house" of any attraction offered since Travis county's modernist courthouse was occupied last year.

Scarcely a dozen spectators occupy the polished wain benches of the court room. Ornate cuspidors have scarcely a mark of amber. The "run" of "State vs. Standard Oil et al." began on February 2, and it is still only in the early scenes. Court attendants hopefully point out that the S. R. O. sign may be hung up when and if the testimony acts are reached.

A few advanced law students from the University of Texas drop in from time to time. Occasionally the audience is swelled by the arrival of a professional jurymen, making his round in hopes of being picked up as a talesman. So far there has not been a woman attendant.

Local critics say the fault of the attraction so far lies in its dialogue. The plot is admittedly good. In new form it is the ever popular theme, "You ain't done right by our little Nell." Nell in this case being Texas.

"Abel Counsel" says that there was a legal ceremony. According to his account, the Federal Trade Commission officiated. "It was a false wedding," says Attorney General James V. Allred. "The Federal Trade Commission isn't a regular preacher nor justice of the peace."

Action Slowed Up.

That's the substance of the argument. Instead of coming right out and saying so, however, the author slows it up in something of this manner:

Allred—"Now, your honor, in Spitzbergen vs. Ottawa, 27 Federal 392—"

Abel Counsel—"What's that citation?"

Allred—"27 Federal 392."

Abel Counsel—"Thanks."

Allred—"Now, your honor, etc."

Although resembling closely, even exceeding, Strange Interlude in length, there is a noticeable difference. The players do not reveal their thoughts in asides. They come right out and say it to each other's face.

Eugene O'Neill would have put it this way.

Former Governor Moody to Attorney General Allred: "Has that always been your view?" (Aside: "You wrote an opinion once holding the opposite.")

Attorney General Allred to Former Governor Moody: "Thanks you for quoting me as authority," (Aside: "If I did, an attorney general is no more to be invited for signing a conference opinion without reading it than a governor is for signing a bill he now says invalidates the anti-trust law without reading it.")

In "State vs. Standard Oil et al." they stick the knife right in, politely, of course, with a smile.

Press agents announce that the cast already comprising the best courthouse actors in Texas, will be enlarged when the testimony acts are reached. A Broadway cast is promised for an act to be known as "Preliminary Testimony." George Shelly, of Austin, will direct this part of the production. It promises to be long, too. The director will get 15 cents a page for it.

Heading this Broadway cast will be R. C. Holmes, loaned by the Texas company for the occasion.

Despite poor interest of the public so far, the promoters are confident the production will run at least two months more.

FINANCES WILL BE MAIN TOPIC OF EDUCATORS

By W. W. COPELAND
United Press Staff Correspondent
FORT WORTH, March 23.—An attempt to devise a solution of the financial problems facing the Texas public school system will be the principal subject of the State Teachers' association executive committee here Saturday (March 26).

Inability of taxpayers to meet their obligations and the strong demand that tax reduction be facilitated through decreased public school expenditures has caused the school finance problem to become acute, said R. T. Ellis, Fort Worth secretary of the committee.

Members of the state board of education have been invited to convene with the committee to adjust any differences in the views of the two groups and to try to arrive at a harmonious plan, Ellis said.

The majority of Texas schools are meeting their present expenditures in an encouraging manner, he explained, but the proposed further reduction of school funds through the amendment to exempt all home-steads under $3,000 valuation from state school tax assessments adds another problem which must be met.

The state is faced with the necessity of having some plan for meeting this reduction, Ellis said, in event the amendment passes at the general election in November.

Hill to Present Plan

It may be met, he said, by creating some other fund or by reducing school expenditures through elimination of duplication in subjects, through reduction of teachers' salaries, or by other means. Dr. J. A. Hill, Canyon, president of the committee, is to present a plan at the meeting by which it is hoped the state board may solve the problem of school finance without salary reductions. Bitter opposition has arisen from association members on proposed salary cuts.

Dr. Hill's plan probably will call for elimination of subjects which are largely or wholly duplicated in other courses. Complete details will not be available until he arrives.

"Our purpose is to adjust the situation, but not to hurt the schools more than is necessary," said Ellis. "This may be accomplished by eliminating duplicate courses. Unfortunately when there is a clamor for tax reduction, it means two things—schools and roads. This practice is not confined to Texas. It seems to prevail throughout the United States. School teachers are eager to aid in every way. They do not want to cripple the schools. They are desir-

SOVIET PLANS COPPER UNIT FOR STEPPES

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, March 24.—The world's largest copper combine, with an annual output 75 per cent greater than the Anaconda unit in Montana, which now holds the world's record will rise within two years on the steppes of Central Asia.

Details of this new Soviet industry were disclosed for the first time by Vassili I. Ivanov, a member of the Presidium of the Commissariat of Heavy Industry, in an exclusive interview. The director of the undertaking, Alexander M. Tripalov, and the head of the department which hires foreign specialists, Anatole Elizarov, were present.

The construction, scheduled to be in actual production by 1934, will cost nearly half a billion rubles, of which about 15 per cent will be spent abroad for the necessary machinery. About $25,000,000 will thus be spent in the United States, Germany and other countries, depending on the credit facilities available.

The site of the enterprise is just north of Lake Balkash, in the Soviet Republic of Kazakhstan, and will be known as Balkash-stol. It is sparsely inhabited by nomadic Kirghiz and other Central Asian tribes. While a small quantity of the necessary labor will be recruited from natives, the majority will be mobilized in the rest of the country.

Fifty thousand men will be at work on Balkash-stol by the end of 1932, and next year the figure is likely to reach 65,000, M. Ivanov said. What amounts to brand-new city will be built to accommodate this new population.

175,000 Ton Yield
The undertaking is planned to yield 175,000 tons of copper annually, besides other metals in which the ore abounds. To obtain this total, the largest produced by any one copper combine anywhere in the world, will require the digging and re-working of 34,000,000 tons of ore, M. Ivanov estimated, the copper content being relatively poor.

Simultaneously with the building of the various units of the combine, the new town, the power stations, etc., the transportation system will be completed to take care of the copper shipments. In part, Lake Balkash will be utilized; for the rest, a new line of several hundred kilometers will be laid connecting the lake with the newly constructed Turkestan-Siberian railroad to the west.

Actual construction on the site will begin this spring.

Crown Prince Takes His Tumbles
BUCHAREST, March 24.—Crown Prince Michael is taking advantage of the cold weather to learn ice-skating. Although he is making good progress, he is taking his share of tumbles.

His first spill was after the third lesson, when he thought he was good enough to keep pace with another boy skater of his own size. Michael was allowed by his tutor, Colonel Grigorescu, to skate double. His partner was a little too fast. The two lost balance and went sliding feet in air, across the ice.

The little crown prince started his skating lessons through his interest in ice-hockey. He goes two or three times a week with Colonel Grigorescu, to Cismigiu Park, and joins the other children for an hour or so on the big pond. At first his appearance created a slight stir, but now he is accepted as just another skater.

The pond also boasts an icehockey field, which holds Michael's interest.

Oriental Gateway Forgets Massie Case Mid Strumming Ukies and Swishing Skirts

HONOLULU, March 24.—The gateway to the exotic Orient has thrown open her doors to gaiety again as the tourist season reaches its peak and Thalia Massie's "Nightmare in Paradise" slowly fades as all bad dreams.

Western jazz screams from the polyglot dance hall orchestras of "Hell's Half-Acre," to merge with the strident notes of the Samsler (three string guitar) from valley tea houses, where almond-eyed girls in obis and kimonos serve food strange to the western palate.

The pungent odor of roast pig and taro rise from the native feast. Moon lit nights are filled with the sound of the weeping ukulele, the sharp cadence of the gourd rattle and the soft swish of grass skirts telling the story of the Hula and the primitive South Seas.

Army and Navy gold braid flashes at Waikiki Beach, boy, tourist and world traveler mingle at beach hotels, resorts, cafes and private homes as Honolulu forgets the word "race".

Even a night club, a form of entertainment which never has been quite successful here, is meeting with success at the very Ala Wai Inn from which Thalia Massie stroled into the soft night and the headlines of the nation.

And it is a spontaneous gaiety that has none of the flavor of trying-to-forget for Honolulu generally sees most of her past troubles as confined to small tragic groups.

3 TO RECEIVE PH. D. DEGREES AT UNIVERSITY

AUSTIN, March 24.—A student from the Philippine Islands, one from Arizona and a third from Colorado will be among the candidates for the doctor of philosophy degree in botany and bacteriology at The University of Texas in June. There is an unusually large number of candidates for this degree this year, there being six in all.

Eulelio Baltazar of San Fernando, Philippine Islands, is a candidate for a degree of doctor of philosophy and received his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees from the University of the Philippines at Manila. He has been working at the University of Texas since last summer. His thesis will be on the growth and respiration of cotton roots. He is majoring in plant physiology and minoring in plant morphology and zoology.

Miss Leta Henderson of Bisbee, Arizona, tutor in botany and bacteriology, is another candidate for the doctor of philosophy degree. Miss Henderson got her bachelor of arts degree at the University of Arizona and her master of arts degree at the University of Texas. Her thesis will be on root absorption and respiration; her minor is plant physiology and her minors are general physiology and bacteriology.

Another Candidate

Another candidate for the doctorate in the department of botany and bacteriology is J. Linton Gardner of Colorado Springs, Colo. Mr. Gardner is a graduate student from the University of Colorado, where he received his master's degree. His thesis is on stooling in grasses; he is majoring in physiological ecology and minoring in general physiology and plant morphology.

Miss Marie Morrow of Mercedes who is now an instructor in botany and bacteriology, is preparing a thesis on soil and vegetation relations. She is majoring in physiological ecology and minoring in bacteriology and chemistry. Miss Morrow received both her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Texas.

Mrs. Esther Cuyler of Austin, is writing a thesis on the growth of certain algae with different culture media. Mrs. Cuyler is majoring in bacteriology and zoology. She received her bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Texas and expects to receive her doctor of philosophy degree this June. Mrs. Cuyler, also, is a tutor in botany and bacteriology.

J. B. McBryde of Denton, graduate student, is writing a thesis on the analysis of vegetation and habitat in Carrizo Sands. His major subject is plant ecology and his minor subjects are bacteriology and zoology. He received his other degrees from the University of Texas.

Marne Defeat Was Warning to Prince

BERLIN, March 24.—The Democratic Vossische Zeitung publishes an interview by a correspondent of the Oslo newspaper, "Tidens Tegn" with the ex-Crown Prince of Germany, which, if true, throws an interesting light on behind-the-scenes operations of the German General Staff during the tense days of 1915 following the defeat at the Marne.

"I proposed immediate peace after the Marne," the interview quotes the ex-Crown Prince as saying. "I saw in advance that we must lose on all sides. But, unfortunately, I could not convince anyone.

"Of course, we could not fight against the entire world. But the General Staff did not have a practical contact with the front. For example, on paper, we had 20 and so many divisions of 20,000 men. The 6,000 men, then, were expected to hold a front line for which 20,000 was necessary. That was impossible. Besides that, there was a shortage of munitions.

"Everything was lacking. For example, we needed a railroad to the front. It was built; then shot to pieces by the French. It was rebuilt. But when it was ready, it transpired that we had no locomotives. So we had to fall back on trucks. Roads were built. But when they were finished, we had no benzine for the trucks. So the munitions had to be forwarded by horse.

"Finally, the interview continues, there came the grief-stricken mood from home. The soldiers were softened and wearied by the complaints of their wives and families. Added to that was the Communist boring from without and within. No. After the poorly conducted battle of the Marne, where army and staff were not properly assumed, we should have sounded a retreat."

RADIO WEATHER
NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—The United States Department of commerce has opened a radio broadcasting station on Lake Pontchartrain which will serve air pilots within a radius of 125 miles of here. Weather bulletins are broadcast every two hours during the day as an aid to aviators flying in this area.

TYPEWRITERS MAY BE USED IN ORCHESTRA

LONDON, March 24.—Orchestras of the future in which typewriters, lathes and saws may replace string and brass instruments is the vision of the famous French composer, Maurice Ravel, jazz's staunchest European admirer.

During a recent visit here, when he conducted the first English performance of his new pianoforte concerto, Ravel talked of the music of the future. He had nice things to say about jazz and revealed that he has gained much of his inspiration from machinery. He said:

"Jazz is not just a passing phase, but has come to stay. It is certain to influence modern music. As for me, I spend many hours listening to it in night clubs and over the radio. It is thrilling and inspiring."

The mechanics and machinery of the age also will leave their imprint on music of the present day, Ravel declared. Harmony can be resolved out of the most ordinary discord, like that of a factory, in his opinion and added:

"It is not improbable that in the future we shall see on a concert platform rows of typewriters, lathes and saws in place of the usual instruments. It has already been tried in one of the Russian ballets, when a typewriter being tapped was a legitimate instrument of the orchestra."

However, in his opinion, it is art to make violins, horns, trombones and all the other instruments sound like machinery.

"I love going over factories and seeing vast machinery of work," he confessed. "It is awe-inspiring and great. It was a factory which inspired my 'Bolero'. I would like it always to be played with a vast factory in the background."

PONTIAC, Mich., March 24.—The Pontiac Memorial Baptist church, admittedly so poor it can't pay the salary of its minister, is feeding school children of unemployed parents. Last month the church provided 2,800 meals. The Rev. B. E. Lockwood, the unpaid minister, is supervising the relief work.

ALTAR PLANNED
BELFAST, March 24.—On a high hill within a mile of the spot where St. Patrick landed from Rome 1,500 years ago, Ireland is to erect a great open-air altar. The altar will cost £50,000. The money is being raised among villages. The first sod was turned on St. Patrick's Day during the celebrations of the 15th centenary.

The dime-a-dance girl

BU JOAN CLAYTON

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ellen Rossier, beautiful, 20-year-old, loves Larry Harrowgate, young artist. When he becomes engaged to another girl, Ellen agrees to marry Steven Barclay, 37 years old and wealthy. Her impoverished family is indebted to Barclay.

Barclay has been married before. A scandal accompanied his Mexican divorce from Leda Grayson, dancer. To avoid notoriety Ellen and Barclay are secretly married. They drive to his Long Island home, deserted except for Ferguson, a butler. There Barclay suffers a heart attack. Louis Symes, Barclay's lawyer, arrives with doctors and nurses. Barclay dies at dawn.

Symes tells Ellen her marriage is not legal because papers proving Barclay's divorce from Leda Grayson have been stolen. Ellen yields claim to Barclay's fortune to avoid scandal. She believes she must keep her marriage secret to protect Barclay's honor and her own.

She learns Larry Harrowgate is Barclay's nephew. Heartbroken, she returns home. Ellen distrusts Ferguson. She goes to Symes' office and tells him she is going back to work at Dreamland, a dance hall. She also tells him that she is in love with Larry Harrowgate and that Larry's engagement has been broken. Symes advises her not to tell Larry of the marriage to Barclay.

NOK GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Of course I'd want to tell him about Steven," Ellen went on, "though if I thought telling him would destroy his faith in me or destroy any happiness we might otherwise build up together I wouldn't tell."

"My child, you've grown up," Symes told her a little sadly. The next day, Sunday, ushered in the first of the autumn rains. All day long the rain came down. Late in the afternoon Myra and Bert, bundled into slickers and galoshes called at the old apartment. They carried damp, heavy armloads of Sunday newspapers.

Barclay in the news columns; but in one of the society sections Ellen found a picture of Larry, an old picture badly reproduced. Seeing it, she was seized with sharp longing for him, to hear his gay voice and careless laugh.

When no one was observing her Ellen tore out the picture. "Ha!" Myra exclaimed significantly. Ellen whirled. Her color deepened and she had an impulse to hide the picture but she did not. She only stood flushing furiously, the picture pressed against her heart.

"I was wondering if you'd do that," Myra observed, a wise smile on her lips. "I saw the picture, too." "Why shouldn't I?" Ellen demanded in a trembling, half defiant way.

"No reason at all, my dear. Here's wishing you all the luck in the world!" "It doesn't really seem right for me to be thinking of Larry, does it?" Ellen asked timidly.

"Goodness!" Myra ejaculated. "Haven't you learned yet that love has nothing to do with right and wrong? The person who said all that fair in love and war understood that."

Ellen crossed the room and sank to the footstool at Myra's feet. She tipped her head back so that it touched her sister's knee and stared into the blue and orange glow of the gas log. Delightfully she let her thoughts center on Larry.

"Maybe I've learned now," she said dreamily, after a long silence. She added, "I suppose it's right that it should be that way and right that the world should go on. Everything was so horrible at first. I couldn't seem to remember Steven at all. The whole thing was mixed up with misery and shame and the horrible, horrible way I felt when I found out what had happened. Now I know I'll never forget Steven or how kind he was, how generous, how good."

"That hasn't anything to do with the way you feel about Larry," Myra interrupted. Both girls were silent and then Myra said abruptly, "Did Mr. Symes tell you how the suits between Mrs. Harrowgate and Leda Grayson have been settled? Which one's to get Steven's money?"

"He told me they'll probably settle out of court," Ellen responded in a vague, uninterested way. "Steven's last will, the last one he signed, left most of his money to his sister but I guess Leda Grayson, as his widow—she seems to be accepted as his widow—probably has a claim on some of it."

"You aren't sorry about that?" Myra asked curiously. Ellen considered. "It would have been nice to be rich," she admitted honestly. "Nice for mother and for Mike. Still I'm glad I didn't take any money. It makes the whole thing seem better somehow—makes it easier to forget and that's what I want to do."

"You've done that already," Myra hazarded. The following night Ellen returned to Dreamland and danced again. Salomon rejoiced at the chance to hear her services. None of the other hostesses was inquisitive about what she had been doing—none that is, except Tony. Tony was difbreathlessly. "What do you think I'm made of? Do you think I could talk to you, dance with you, pass the time of day with you, remembering you'd thrown me over for another man?"

A wave of color, flooded her face. She might have known it was her jealousy and hurt that made him want to wound her so cruelly.

"But now I've got you back!" Larry was saying exultantly. "Tony told me you hadn't—" He interrupted himself and looked straight into her eyes.

"Tell me yourself, Ellen," he commanded her. "Tell me you didn't get married."

fluent with her teasing, persistent questions but Ellen only told her that she had changed her mind about being married. After a while Tony reluctantly let the matter drop there.

Ellen found the evening long. A light and feverish restlessness seized her when she heard the familiar voices, saw the familiar setting and familiar faces. As she danced again and again and filed her pocketbook with green tickets, as she sat smiling across the table seeming to listen to her partner's conversation, she was thinking that at any moment Larry might come swinging through the door. But he did not come. She had been foolish to think he would come, foolish to believe he would have a way of knowing she was there.

Tuesday and Wednesday and Thursday increased her feverish longing. She questioned Tony about the last time he had been there. Surely he would come again. She considered and then discarded the notion of calling Symes to ask his help. Ellen knew in some deep and secret way that Larry would come again to Dreamland. She knew that she was waiting for him.

Friday morning she read in the society columns that Larry Harrowgate was to sail for Europe with his mother in four days. Four days! The world went black. He would be gone so soon and she had no way to hold him. A dozen times that day she started toward the telephone to call him; a dozen times she restrained herself.

As the hours dragged by Ellen thought that she would die of sheer heart-sickness. Mollie noticed she was drooping and tried to dose her with a favored tonic but Ellen refused to be dosed.

Sick with misery she went again to Dreamland Friday night. No hope of Larry tonight. If he were calling it meant no hope at all. She was restless, impatient and annoyed with her partners, unable to keep her eyes from straying over their shoulders to the door. Oh why didn't Larry come!

At half past 10 she saw him. Ellen was not dancing and did not see him coming up the stairs. She caught sight of him when he stopped at the ticket booth. His back was toward her. The girl did not move but sat very still as one in the presence of a miracle. In her heart was a sense of exquisite peace.

He turned. She started from her chair, a greeting on her lips. She saw him pause, sweep the room with eager eyes. Their glances met. For a moment the trembling, confused almost deliriously excited girl did not understand. It seemed to her that Larry flushed, and then the warmth left her and she went icy cold.

For Larry's gaze moved past her. Without a sign of recognition he strolled to Tony's table. She heard him laugh as he asked Tony to dance with him.

Red a long time Ellen remained seated. The room buzzed with voices. Even the clatter of traffic and the faint, faraway noises of the street seemed only to accentuate the gaiety of the dance floor. They were happy, the little dancing girls in their flimsy frocks, eager and expectant, excited as they laughed up into the eyes of their partners. Ellen knew that mood. She remembered when she too had been as jubilant.

"It's all finished," she thought impersonally, almost as if she were thinking of another girl. "It's all finished between Larry and me. It's as completely ended as if it had never happened."

He was here in this very room and he had not spoken to her. He had turned away indifferently to dance with another girl. Ellen meant nothing to him, had never meant anything to him. The fact that they had not met for weeks—that meant nothing either.

"He's forgotten me," she told herself in endless and bewildered pain. "I'm no more to him than a girl he might have met on a ferry boat ride. I'm nothing to him and I've thought of nothing except him for months."

She clenched her hands then and bit her lips, determined not to cry here in this noisy ballroom before all these people. She tried to think that some of the other girls about her had suffered as she was suffering. She tried to tell herself that the pain in her heart could not last. No pain lasted forever. If she raised her head it might be better. But she knew that with her slightest movement the tears would come in torrents. She continued to sit head bent, like a girl made of marble.

Someone dropped into the chair opposite. For the moment Ellen was blind and deaf. She heard Larry's voice and slowly raised her head. He was sitting across the table from her in the place he had so often occupied. As always her hurt pride could not resist him.

"Larry," she whispered. He leaned toward her and caught her clenched hands. He was laughing excitedly as if he himself did not know why he laughed. His eyes were bright as the girl's.

"It's wonderful to see you again," he exclaimed over and over on long, uneven breaths. His eyes clung to hers.

Ellen struggled to free her hands. Pride returned and with it came anger at this man who had hurt her so cruelly. Larry only pressed her hands more tightly. He would not let her go.

"Aren't you glad to see me?" "I saw you when you came in," she reminded him in a colorless tone.

"Good God, Ellen," he cried

Electric Cop Has Long Beat

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—In San Francisco's ferry building stands a state policeman who has the longest beat in the world. He patrols his beat night and day, and receives no salary. And he patrols it without leaving a tiny room, located high above streams of commuters that flow ceaselessly through the building.

He is an "electric cop" and his job is to check, hour by hour, the safety devices along the waterfront that guide ferry steamers and ships to their piers.

The "electric cop" is a monitor board in the office of the chief electrician of the State Harbor Commission.

His work is to see that every fog whistle, siren and warning bell on the waterfront is on the job. Near each waterfront pier signal, bell and whistle is a microphone, which goes to the monitor board. There microphones are plugged into a switchboard. As each "mike" is plugged in and a button pressed, the bell, whistle or siren sounds in the receiver of the telephone operator's instrument.

Arrangements Made For Scout Camps

The warm days announce the coming of Spring and with Spring comes the itching of feet and unrestful feeling, desire to move, commonly called Spring fever. To the boys it means hiking, fishing and swimming. The boy scout movement knowing boys have in a simple way made it possible for the dreams of boys to come true through its well planned program of camping and outdoor activities.

Even now the scouts are looking forward to this summer camp. Some have already managed to save back enough money to attend and others have savings under way. The camping committee of the new Comanche Trail council is making arrangements to visit the camping site in order to make plans for this summer's program and to select a suitable date.

E. P. Crawford is local representative on the camping committee of the Comanche Trail council and will have a part in planning the camping activities.

BRITISH HIT SNAG WITH IMPORT BILL

By HARRY FLOREY
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, March 24.—Britain's important duties bill has struck its first snag.

The bill, which went into effect March 1, levies a 10 per cent general duty on goods, with certain exceptions, imported from all foreign countries. It also authorizes the government to decree that the duties from any specified foreign country.

This provision was inserted to enable the negotiation of preference agreements with countries which offer an unfettered market for British goods. In framing that provision the drafters of the bill had in mind chiefly Argentina and Denmark.

New government officials are seeking a means of putting this provision into effect without jeopardizing Britain's trade relations with other nations. Most favored nation agreement, which Britain has concluded with 40 of the chief countries of the world, with the exceptions of France and Belgium, are the chief difficulty.

The agreements all provide that Britain cannot grant customs preferences to any one nation without making the preference automatically applicable to the nation with which she has concluded an agreement including the most favored nation clause.

The most favored nation principle has been Britain's traditional commercial policy since 1660, when the first such agreement was signed with Denmark.

Twenty eight of Britain's most favored nation agreements can be terminated within from 15 days to one year by simply giving notice of intention to abrogate the agreement.

OLD DIARY VIVIDLY DESCRIBES HUNT FOR GOLD IN WYOMING

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 24.—An old diary describing a gold hunter's experiences in 1877, has come into the possession of the Wyoming state historical department.
The diary was written in German, but a translation has been made and Mrs. Cyrus Beard, state historian, plans to publish it in the department's historical annals.
Herman Bischoff, a German, headed an expedition of goldseekers from Deadwood, S. D., to the Big Horn mountains in Wyoming where a rich gold strike was reported.
Early in the summer of 1877, the diary relates, a prospector came to Deadwood. He had a small sack of gold which he said he had found in the Shell Creek country of the Big Horns. The prospector told of rich gold fields and Bischoff, a merchant, became interested.
He organized an expedition. With the old prospector as a guide it started for the "promised land." The expedition was enlarged along the way and at Spearfish, S. D., the party consisted of "six Irish, three Englishmen, four Germans, five Americans, three Danes and two Swedes."
Later on the diary shows a larger count which disclosed "60 wagons, 140 men, five women and two girls."
One of the most vivid accounts in the diary is the description of the Custer battlefield. Although the Custer Massacre had taken place a year before Bischoff took his party to Wyoming they found army saddles, canteens and other equipment strewn about.
The diary describes the scene graphically and tells of finding two skulls on which army hats still rested.
After arriving in the Big Horns the expedition did not discover any gold, but found out that the "rich strike" was all a product of the imagination of the old prospector. Bischoff led his party back to Deadwood and reported they had visited the area and found no basis for the old prospector's story.

BARRETT SAYS TEXANS HAVE HALTED SLUMP

FORT WORTH, March 24.—Already in Texas people have stopped the depression with faith in business and financial institutions. It seems significant that March 15 closed the fourth consecutive week without a bank suspension in Texas, and this is emphasized when we recall that in the year prior to Feb. 19, when the anti-hoarding campaign got under way, there was an average of about two suspensions each week.
A. P. Barrett, of Fort Worth, Texas Chairman of the Citizens Reconstruction organization, with local committees functioning in practically all Texas cities have waged a war-cry of optimism, faith in business and courage for Texas. Their implements have been newspapers, radio talks, airplane tours and other mediums of catching the ear and eye of the public.
Texans were encouraged when one week passed without a bank suspension; then when two weeks and the third week passed, it gave more hope. Now with the fourth continuous week of returning stabilization of business, the tremendous importance of the Citizens Reconstruction campaign is realized as productive of genuine results.
"Marvelous Response"
"It is gratifying," Barrett said, "to see the marvelous response which has been given to this campaign by the local committees, newspapers, Chambers of Commerce and other clubs together with radio stations, ministers and teachers; have served efficiently to carry to all citizens the message of the folly of idle money."
He pointed out that today in Texas over $180,000,000 are being spent for construction of all types of structures, including factories, colleges, homes, hotels, power plants, highways, canals and railroads.
Coming in to the Texas Anti-Hoarding headquarters daily are stories about people who have withdrawn money from circulation and hidden it in cans placed in the feed trough from where it was stolen; in the cellar where rats ate it; sewed money in underwear of a school child; and other such items.
Pondering these incidents Barrett said, "It is only sane to be safe; hidden money isn't safe and people should put their cash in a good bank, invest in sound securities or buy what they need; for the day of fear is over, better times are here. All business is better and soon the hoarder will not be able to get 50c on the dollar for his money as compared with what he can buy with his dollars today; and then the joke will be on those who have hoarded cash."
Served Purpose
"This campaign of the citizens helping themselves has served its purpose well, and I believe it is up to each individual to realize the lessons taught and each man get down to business and benefit his own condition in his own way through the rival of trade that is now here," Barrett said.

He has repeatedly urged Texans to grasp the opportunities that exist "right here in Texas where resources are unrivaled in any land."
National recognition for Texas and its results in this campaign came as a tribute to the many leaders and committees who have been active, when during the past week Colonel Frank Knox, National Chairman of the Citizens Reconstruction Organization wired A. P. Barrett and requested him to furnish the details of the outstanding Texas campaign to the newly appointed state chairman of the state of California and Oregon.
As many are summing up the effort which has been state-wide, the remark of Chairman Barrett rings a thought, when he says, "We've got this thing on the run for better and bigger business in Texas; let's keep it up."

Brady Boggs Loses Barn by Fire

A barn at the home of Brady Boggs, just north of the city airport, burned early last evening with considerable loss in feed, tools and other farm equipment and an automobile none of which was covered by insurance. Mr. Boggs estimated that there was $700 in feed in the barn. Cows in the barn were taken to safety and a few bales of hay were saved.
Mr. Boggs was of the opinion that the fire started from his car which he drove into the barn about an hour before the fire was discovered at 8:30 p. m.

Divorce Cases Drag in Turkey

ISTANBUL, March 24. — When there were no divorce laws in Turkey, and every man had at least a couple of wives, it was easy enough to get rid of them.
Just a wave of the hand, a few mumbled words, and it was done. But modern Turkey, with its western laws and emancipation of women, takes months and even years, to separate a man and his wife, legally.
According to the first divorce statistics ever published in Turkey, there have been 2,127 divorces in one year. Of these, 131 took over three years to decide, 56 took from two years to 19 months, 136 from 18 to 13 months, 311 from one year to nine months, while 742 divorces were disposed of in from eight to five months, and 717 in from four months to one month.
The motives for divorce have been varied. Incompatibility leads, with 1,329 divorces, while other reasons have been polygamy, infidelity, desertion, neglect and "causes unknown."
It is noteworthy that out of 290 divorces for infidelity, the woman was the transgressor in 260 cases. Divorce has proved to be higher in the towns than the country. Istanbul heads the list with 246 divorces.

Correct Lighting Will Save Your Eyes and Add to Your Enjoyment

THERE'S nothing quite so cozy — these long winter evenings — as a good book, a restful chair, comfortable slippers and the old briar pipe. The finishing touch, to make the evening at home a rare treat and to add to the enjoyment of your reading, is good light.

Good lighting, more than anything else, will make your reading a genuine pleasure. The print will stand out plainly and your eyes will follow the text untiringly. This absence of strain will double your enjoyment.

Lighting fixtures combining beauty and efficiency are so inexpensive — and the cost of adequate light so insignificant — that truly it's wise economy to use plenty of light. A courteous representative will be happy to inspect your home-lighting arrangements, and suggest beneficial changes if they're necessary. There's no obligation, of course.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule ... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?
