DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GREAT POWER FROM GOD: — Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you.—Luke 10: 19.

A CANNERY.

An important item in connection with a program to provide suitable markets for the agricultural produce of the Cisco territory has been suggested in the provision of a local cannery to convert truck and garden crops into salable commodities. Such an idea has worked with success in a number of communities in this part of the state. Brownwood and Ranger are examples.

In the former instance local industries provided the means. The Tasty Food Products company of Brownwood last year inaugurated a program whereby peas grown in the city's trade territory were collected, canned by that concern and marketed through the Walker-Smith wholesale company. A number of Cisco grocery stores are selling these peas from their shelves today.

Under the plan adopted by the Tasty Food Products company a specific day was set for the collection of shelled and snapped peas from the farmers at a stated price per pound and farmers over the area where collection was to be made notified sufficiently in advance of the time to enable them to shell and snap large quantities of the vegetable. When the time arrived the peas were collected by the company, paid for and taken to their cannery where they were canned. The product was then distributed through the Walker-Smith company. By this means the farmers of the territory were not only provided with a market for this particular product but the wholesale grocery house was given a supply of an important product without applying to sources outside the state or at least remote from the territory over which they sold.

In the case of Ranger a small community cannery was established under the auspices of the chamber of commerce. A competent woman was placed in charge of the cannery and farmers who brought vegetables to be canned received a portion of the canned goods resulting, the remainder of the cans being marketed through retail channels by the cannery to provide funds for the operation of the cannery and the pay of the woman in charge.

This institution provided the farmers of the section about Ranger a means of canning their produce for home use while it opened an avenue for encouraging the development of an important local market. The experience points the fact that it is unnecessary to apply to distant sources of food products for the vegetables that can be grown right at home if a little enterprise is shown in the development of home resources. Not only does this mean that home people can secure needed products at a less cost but it means the more important fact that a market is provided for the farmer so that he can increase his income through the production of truck crops that can be turned into money. It is simply an opportunity to keep home money circulating a little longer in the home trade territory and when that condition exists the prosperity of the home areas is enhanced to an appreciable degree.

In the case of Cisco it is possible that the two plans could be combined. A community cannery could be established similar to that provided at Ranger while the products canned could be turned over to local wholesale houses for distribution among the retail trade of the territory. If some plan of that character could be successfully worked out the volume of produce handled by means of it, and the return in dollars and cents to the Cisco trade territory would be in time factors of appreciable influence upon the buying power of the section. Much of the buying power now sent out of the district to foreign markets and sources would be retained and distributed among the people who trade with the very institutions which buy and sell their produce. Thus circulation at home is quickened and when quickened, increased. With a dependable market supplied farmers and truck growers will raise more volume for wider distribution with commensurately larger returns to themselves.

It takes a great deal of "close harmony" of this sort to stimulate better conditions around home. Shirt sleeve effort is necessary to put over such programs. No contractor ever erected a building by sitting down and wishing for it to rise completed from its foundations.

A cannery of this sort is only one item of the major program that should be undertaken in this campaign to supply a home market as the basis for home trade. But it is an item upon which a great amount of time and effort can be profitably spent.

In a series of advertisements running in a number of daily newspapers at this time is the declaration: "1932 will reward shirt sleeve effort only."

Cisco business men, the Cisco chamber of commerce and the people of Cisco should ponder that statement carefully.

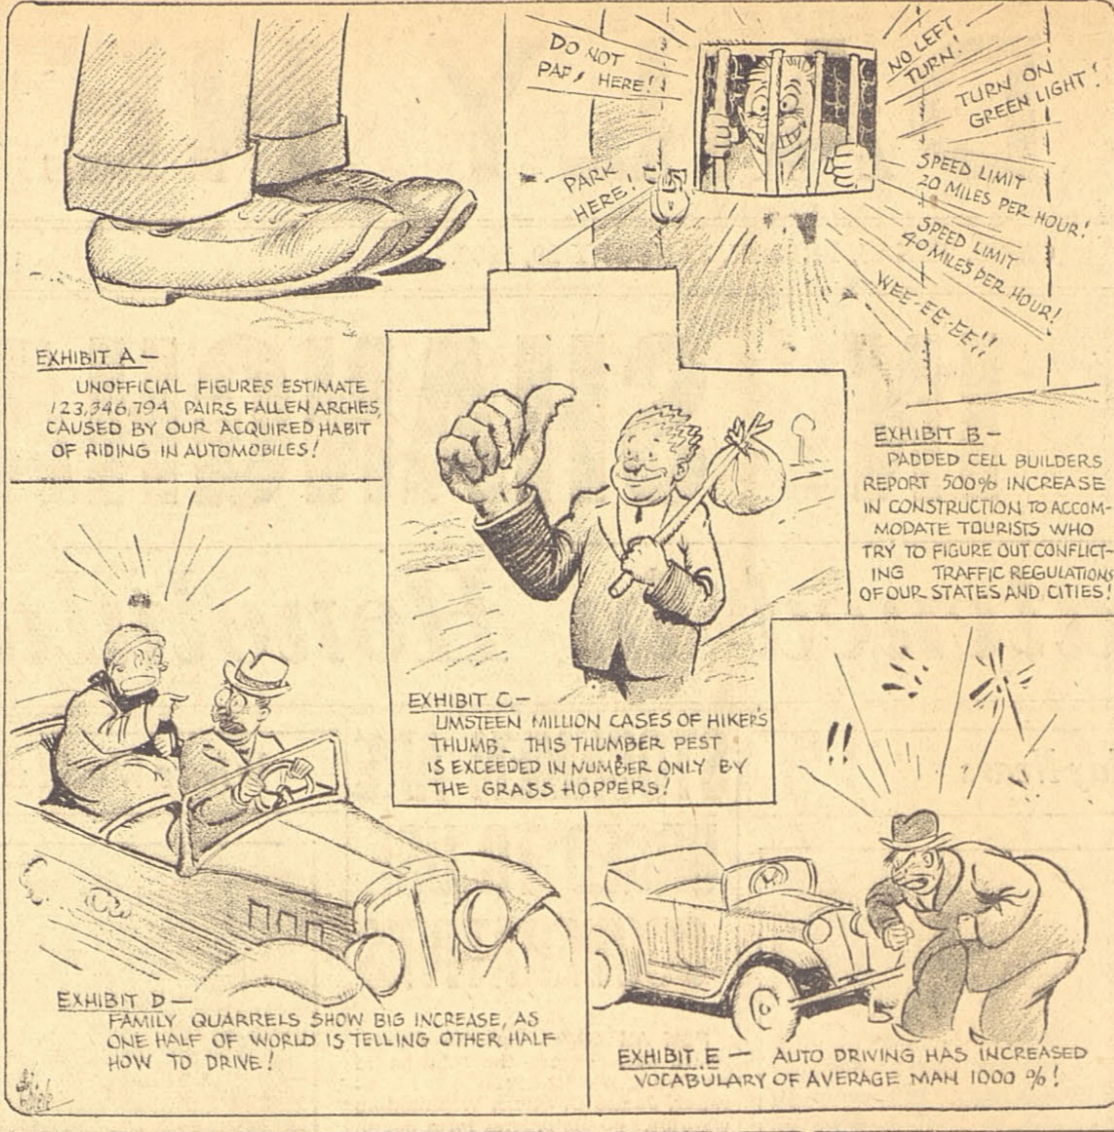

LOST OPPORTUNITY.

This issue is the last in which the Daily News will have opportunity to urge upon its readers the importance of paying their poll taxes in order to be eligible to vote in elections this year. After Saturday the chance to pay these taxes as a prerequisite for voting will have passed.

County Tax Collector T. L. Cooper has endeavored to accommodate the tax-payers of the Cisco section in paying their taxes and automobile license fees by establishing a temporary tax collecting office in the First National bank here. Mr. Cooper's act is a convenience that allows the citizen able to pay little excuse for not so doing.

For those not yet aware of the fact it is pointed out that it is not necessary to pay property taxes in order to pay poll taxes. Those unable to pay their property tax may pay their poll taxes separately and by all means, if at all possible, they should do so. The importance of the ballot is more important this year than it was last year or two years ago because it is presidential election year—a year when officers from the highest to the lowest degree are elected, and not only local but national policies are determined by the votes of the people.

By all means you should have a voice in the determination of the national political set-up for the next four years.

OTHER OPINIONS

AMATEUR ARTISTS

William Dean Howells, who has been painting pictures since May and is about to exhibit them in a New York gallery, explains that before she began, painting seemed mysterious to her, but, says she: "It isn't mysterious. All you need is some paint and something on which to put it."

She forgets the essential ingredient which was indicated by John Gipsie, a distinguished painter, of the eighteenth century, when in response to an inquiry about what he mixed his colors with, he replied: "I mix them with brains, sir." Guido Reni once said of Rembrandt that he mixed blood with his colors, meaning that he metaphorically sweats blood at his labors.

It takes brains and hard labor to produce a great work of art, but pictures can be produced by thousands of persons like Mrs. Howells with paint and something to put it on. There are many business men who find recreation in putting on canvas what they have seen. In

New York a Business Man's Art club has been organized, some of the members of which have developed an ability that rivals that of some of the professional artists. They have the paint and the canvas and that indispensable something else which perhaps Mrs. Howells has discovered that she is gifted with — Paris News.

SAVED HER LIFE!

Kirkland, Texas
"Twenty-nine years ago I was very near death's door, with nervous prostration," says Mrs. W. D. Smiley, Route 1, Box 17. "After the doctor treated me for three months, to no avail, we dismissed the doctor and my husband bought me a few bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' In three weeks I could sit up a little and in one month and a half was doing my work. Oh! I was in an awful condition. I feel that these medicines saved my life, and they are as efficient today as they were then." Ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Medicines

ACTIVITY IN TEXAS COTTON MILLS GAINS

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. — For the second successive month, activity in the 21 Texas cotton mills reporting to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research increased. The amount of cotton used during December totaled 4,294 bales, as compared with 4,232 bales in November, the total was 17 per cent more than the 3,671 bales used in December, 1930.

"Active spindles increased 4.6 per cent in number during the month going up from 137,030 in November to 143,394 in December, 1931," the Bureau's report said. "At this figure, the number of active spindles reported in the state is greater by more than one fourth than that reported in December, 1930, or 111,625. Spindle hours, too, showed a gain, the total for December amounting to 9 per cent more than did the total for November and 51 per cent more than the total in December, 1930.

Sales fell below production again amounting to 3,082,000 yards while production for the month was 4,060,000 yards. Production made a gain of 1.5 per cent during the month and was 17 per cent greater than that reported by the same mills, for December, 1930. Although sales dropped 13 per cent during December to only 3,082,000 yards as compared with 3,549,000 during November, they were 20 per cent more than the sales for the last month of the year in 1930.

"Unfilled orders declined 13 per cent to 3,909,000 yards at the close of December as compared with 4,470,000 yards at the end of the previous month. However, bookings of the reporting cotton mills were 450,000 yards more than they were at the close of 1930.

"Total bales used during 1931 by the 21 cotton mills reporting to the Bureau amounted to 52,426 bales, the smallest yearly total on record for these mills. Consumption during 1930 amounted to 62,365 bales.

"Production was held within demand during 1931, as indicated by the fact that total yards of goods produced amounted to 46,395,000 yards, not quite 100,000 yards more than sales. In 1930, production exceeded sales by over 6,000,000 yards amounting to 54,204,000 yards; total sales for 1930 were only 48,174,000 yards.

Auto Driver 66 Years Ago

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 29. — It was 66 years ago that courageous Joseph P. Manton, of Providence climbed into the driver's seat of his 1866-model automobile and drove to Long-meadow and back. The Manton steam buggy, as described by a journalist of the day, had an upright tubular boiler at the rear, while the driver sat beneath a phaeton top. It was fueled not with gasoline, but with coal or coke.

It was with considerable pride and satisfaction that Automoblist Manton alighted from his strange contraption on his return from Longmeadow. The vehicle had functioned satisfactorily, save for one occasion, when it struck a sandy stretch of road.

Despite the more or less successful round trip, Manton decided that his vehicle was commercially impracticable, and thus the age of motoring was delayed several decades.

THREE KINDS of LOVE

by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves, their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandparents, known as "Rosalie" and "Grand." Because of this financial responsibility, Ann who is 28, is unable to marry Phil Ercoyd, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves Barry McKell, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason.

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, believes herself in love with Earl De Armonth, vaudeville actor when she has met without the knowledge of her sisters. He urges her to leave home and become his stage partner.

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Lety King, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments. Ann tries to forget Phil by going about with Kenneth Smith, rich and attentive. But when Smith asks her to marry him she refuses.

Mary-Frances agrees to go away with Earl De Armonth. The same day Cecily quarrels with her grandfather. She comes home with news that she and Barry are to be married that evening. Ann discovers Mary-Frances is missing. She learns she has eloped with De Armonth. Immediately a search is begun.

NO GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV

"No, I think not," Joe Hill told her over the telephone. "The garage people said that he mentioned Bluemount for tonight, and his landlady said she heard him say there was going to Bluemount. There is a popular resort there, you know. They may have gone there for—well, first, and planned to go north later. I don't know what it's worth, but his landlady said he seemed a decent enough fellow—quiet at least, and not a drinker nor a drug addict. She claimed to like him. Said he paid his bills. I couldn't get anything around the theater—nobody seemed to know anything about him. He's getting along now. I think I'll start coming up the highways. Heard from Uncle Chaney?"

"He called. But only to find out about the make of the car."

"All right. Don't give up hope. I'll call later."

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Miss Fenwick. Ermintrude says that the man said he was only 22 years old. That is better, isn't it, than if he were older? And, dear from what Ermintrude says, I am sure that as yet everything has been—well, perfectly harmless."

"As yet," said Ann.

"Yes, but she's only a child, and we'll get her home again. We'll find ways to keep her happy and sweet. She'll forget. I want so much to help you, later. I've been thinking of ways I can help—when we get her home again—if you'll let me. I must. I—I Well, I'll call you later."

Ann thought, "Now isn't that odd? That pretty, fat little Mrs. Hill is crying, and I'm not crying at all."

She waited.

The telephone bell.

"Hello. Hello. Walnut 5845? Hold the line, please. Long distance is calling Miss Pennywick from Cutler."

Cutler? What a queer name. Where was there a place named Cutler? Perhaps Mary-Frances was sorry. Had changed her mind. Dear, dear God, if you will, please—Here's your party. Go ahead, please."

"Hello. Hello. Oh, that you Miss Fenwick? This is Hostetter speaking—Chaney Hostetter. I'm out here at a place named Fenwick—no Cutler, I mean. Well, the constable says that a couple passed through here this evening going lickety-cut in a car as described.

TROUBLED ALL LIFE WITH CONSTIPATION

But Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Real Relief

If you are subject to headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sleeplessness and other effects that so often result from constipation, read Mrs. Turner's voluntary letter.

"For the past six months I have been eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, and cannot praise it too highly."

"I am fifty years of age. All my life have been troubled with constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has not only helped me, but has cured me."

"I thought I couldn't like the taste of bran, but Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delicious."—Mrs. C. J. Turner, 507 Hanover Street, Fall River, Mass.

Tests show ALL-BRAN contains two things which overcome constipation: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to help tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also supplies iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears the intestines of wastes.

Certainly this is more natural than taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. ALL-BRAN is not habit-forming. Two tablespoons daily will correct most types of constipation. If you have intestinal trouble not relieved this way, see your doctor.

He came into the hall and put his arms around Ann. "You beautiful, I've come home. Dear, dearest, I got your message, and I came at once. I'd have crawled, Ann, but it took too long—"

Ann said, "Don't. I was talking over the telephone," and ran back to the dining room. Philip followed her and heard her say:

"No, it was only Phil. Yes, yes. Yes, of course. Yes, I'm sure he can. Yes, you know how careful he is."

She hung up the receiver. Philip put his arms around her again. "Dearest—you'll listen and forgive me? Give me one more chance? It was all my fault."

"Never mind," said Ann, though she stayed in his arms from long habit. "We are in deep, terrible trouble. It is Mary-Frances. Cecily and I have been so full of our own affairs that we have neglected her frightfully. And tonight—"

The telephone bell.

"Hello."

An avowed trifle and caught hold of the telephone box. "—this is Mary-Frances." (To Be Continued)

About six o'clock, lickety-cut—she could just see that it was a fellow and a girl. Of course, there are lots of yellow cars and all—still, I don't know. Heard from Joe?"

"Yes, he says that the man did have a desk that he said he had to return to Denver, and that he has taken it with him."

"Ugh-huh? Well, I kind of thought that from the first. Now what I was thinking was that I might as well come in and get hold of Joe and—well, kind of put this thing up to the police after all. If that was them passing through here in the yellow car they're headed for Denver—but it isn't going to do much good for me to trail along after them, three hours behind, in this broken down old boat of mine. We could get telegrams going on ahead—India, Mendel Springs, Topknot Point—I got a road map here—so on. What do you think?"

"Oh, yes. I think yes. Perhaps I'd best get in touch with the police right away and not wait for Mr. Hill."

"Haven't heard yet from the folks that went to Bluemount?"

"No, I don't understand it. I'm expecting a call every second now. There must have been time."

"Well, I'll tell you what. You wait till you hear from the folks at Bluemount—There's a dog's chance from that direction. 'P was you, I'd wait and let Joe or me go to the police. It's a man's job, not a lady's. If you hear from Joe, call him what I said. I'll come right on in now."

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Miss Fenwick, I was thinking Mr. Ercoyd is a lawyer, isn't he? If he knows the district attorney and we do have to go to the police, mightn't he be able to keep it out of the papers?"

"I thought of that, Mrs. Hill. He's a friend of the district attorney's. But he isn't at home. I can't reach him. But Mr. Hostetter just telephoned, and he said—"

"Oh, I don't know, dear." Mrs. Hill disputed, when Ann had finished telling her what Uncle Chaney had said. "No, I don't know. To me it seems so important to keep it absolutely quiet."

"Not as important as getting her home again. No. Not nearly."

"Well, dear—yes. More important, in home ways. It isn't as if she didn't have to go on with her life, and her school and so on right here in Portland."

"But she doesn't. She wouldn't, at all. I could take her away—anywhere. I've had an opportunity lately—I've decided, positively this evening, to accept it. I can take her some place where it has never been heard of. We can live there—always, Switzerland—anywhere. I can take good care of her. Give her things—"

"I know. But she is so young and scandals do follow—come up—"

"Only you see, Mrs. Hill. Ann's voice was low and formal, "scandals don't matter. You—she is my sister. My baby sister. You see—that is all that matters. She is my baby sister. And I have to get her back. I have to get her with me and take care of her. You take good care of Ermintrude. Mary-Frances is my baby sister and—"

"Dear, I know. I know." Mrs. Hill was crying again. "But it is her life, not yours. You haven't heard from Bluemount, of course?"

"No, but—"

"Wait, at least, until you do. Wait until Joe comes back, and we'll all talk it over again together. Please. I'm older than you are. Such things—I—Well I'll call you later."

Ann waited.

The telephone bell.

"Hello. Walnut 5845? Long distance calling Miss Fenwick from Proville."

"I am Miss Fenwick."

"Hello. Hello, Proville. Here's your party. Go ahead, please."

"Ann, they aren't at Bluemount." "Are you sure? Cissy, are you sure?"

"There's only one hotel there and one store, and a few little houses. Everyone knows everyone else. We—we have to be sure."

"Cissy—Cissy—Cissy—Cissy."

"Don't, dear. Don't." "Where are you now? Why didn't you call me from Bluemount?" "The long distance place was closed. This is the first town where we could put through a call. We're coming right in, end—"

"But what will we do? What will we do? I don't care what anyone says, I'm going to the police. I'm—"

"Wait, Ann. Barry says his uncle knows a man who could keep it out of the papers."

"I can't stand it any longer. We need real help."

"But you have to. As Barry says, it isn't as if the police could reach right out and get her immediately. They can't. But just one little paragraph about Jonathan Fenwick's granddaughter, and Mary-Frances will be beyond his pale, Barry says—"

"I don't care what Barry says. She may be somewhere this minute, frightened, crying, trapped—"

"You're thinking about moving pictures?"

"How can you!"

"Ann, I don't want to be mean. But she is my sister, too, and—"

"Wait. Someone is at the front door. It might be—"

She ran to the door and wrenched it open. * * *

Sugar Loaf Job Not So Sweet

LONGMONT, Col., Jan. 28.—The job of being mayor of Sugar Loaf is not so sweet as it sounds.

Take it from Sam Craig, operator of the Good Friday Mine, one of the region's "champion fiddlers," and chief executive of a small community may not be so multitudinous as they are in larger ones, but they are as larger ones, but they are as important and as delicate.

Sugar Loaf, for your information, is a community of 80 persons, in central Boulder County.

Most of the citizens are miners. The Good Friday shuts down for an occasional "rest" period, Craig told Sheriff Robert Blum, of Boulder county, in a confidential talk, and during that time he catches up on his fiddling.

"I'm a sort of a community shoulder for folks to weep on," Craig remarked. "When they get too much for me, I send them to the sheriff for advice."

Craig is full to the brim with good stories of the peculiarities of his fellow-citizens. One of the best is about a hermit, who owns one of the best tungsten mines in the region. Rich with ore, the hermit will not allow the mine to be operated, or won't work it himself. "And it's the gospel truth," Craig said, "the fellow buys a pair of shoes, and wears one new shoe and one old one."

Garlic Is Defended By French Deputy

PARIS, Jan. 28. —"Senate, save our garlic!" is the cry raised by French garlic lovers as economic conditions threaten the bulbous herb.

The necessity of protecting France's garlic trade has been stressed in the Chamber of Deputies by Deputy Marcanges, of the Fuy-de-Dome, and received approval by millions of devotees.

In a recent article published in the French newspaper, Echo de Paris, Jules Veran said:

"Many noted men have indulged in this strongly scented plant, among whom are Fernand Bouisson, President of the Chamber of Deputies.

"Humanly has always been divided into two camps," he continued, "those who eat garlic and those who do not. Horace detested it so he recommended it should be fed as the most terrible punishment that he could inflict."

According to historians, Roman soldiers received a portion of garlic every day so that when a father told his son to go and eat garlic, it meant go and enlist in the army. Herodotus, the historian, maintains that the Kings of Egypt distributed the herb to the Pyramid builders. Aristophanes praised it as a builder of strength. Other ancients have regarded garlic as an excellent preservative against contagious diseases, while modern science recognizes its value as a combative for colds, chills and fever, heart trouble and bad digestion.

Survey Finds Perceptible Improvement In Business Sentiment Since January 1

A perceptible improvement in business sentiment has appeared since the beginning of the year, states the Guaranty Trust company of New York in the current issue of The Guaranty Survey, its monthly review of business and finance, which has just been published.

Weeks of 1931 was no greater than in usually witnessed at that season; and weekly data covering operations since the turn of the year are also encouraging, though inconclusive. The index of business activity of the Guaranty Trust company for December stands at a preliminary figure of 58.8, showing the first upturn since April, 1931.
