JIM SCOURGES OUT JOB-SEEKERS

30 Injured as Cyclone Whips Path in Northeast Texas

ONE VICTIM IS EXPECTED TO SUCCUMB

CLARKSVILLE, Texas, Jan. 21.—The number of persons injured in a cyclone that swept through two northeast Texas counties neared 30 today. None was killed, though one or more persons may be fatally injured. Property and livestock damage was heavy. Tales of narrow escapes from death were numerous. The terrific wind, striking near Howland in Lamar county cut a narrow swath east through farm country 40 miles to Manchester, Red River county, where more than a score were hurt and a dozen homes levelled. Storm cellars were credited with saving many lives. A negro woman near Glory was blown 40 feet into a field and set down unharmed. The family of V. R. Trulock, near Glory, had their house unroofed and all windows blown out, but not one person was scratched. Of all those injured only one was regarded as certain to die. This was Robert Ringwald, 50, Manchester farmer, who was pinned beneath the wreckage of his home sustaining injuries to his head, back and shoulder.

OFFICERS SEEK BANDIT SLAYER AT COMANCHE

COMANCHE, Jan. 21.—Peace officers of three counties searched today for the killer of Pink Milton, 32, shot down by a masked man last night in front of his home for failure to obey a gunman's orders. "Stick up your hands," commanded the slayer as he approached Milton at two companions as they talked. Milton was shot after raising one hand and drawing a gun with the other. The robber rifled Milton's pockets, took his money and gun and fled.

High School Girl's Death Is Mystery

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 21.—Who fired the shot that resulted in death for 13-year-old Constance King, Technical high school student, was a mystery here today. The girl died in a hospital after being brought here with a wound in the right temple. In her party were Leonard Poss, 18, James Hobbs, 18, and Miss Winnie Mann, all her fellow students. One youth said Miss King was shot while in a parked automobile. Another said she was shot while at a rooming house. Police verified that the four had been at a rooming house.

Halloran Lawyer Reports Threats

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 21.—Frank O. Smith, attorney defending J. J. Halloran who is accused of aiding Winnie Ruth Judd in the disposition of the body of Agnes Ann LeRoi, has received telephone threats that "something to happen to you," he said here today. Smith said he feared no one, but he asked that a deputy sheriff be placed near him in the court room at the resumption of Halloran's preliminary hearing. Smith said he had received the telephone threat every night this week.

Court of Honor For Inaugural Procession

From this court of honor Franklin D. Roosevelt will review the inaugural parade just prior to his inauguration as President of the United States. The above is the architect's design of the "Court of Honor" which will be a reproduction of Federal Hall where George Washington took the oath of office in New York.

C. RAY LEADS LOBO FIVE TO FIRST VICTORY

Clemo Ray went wild Friday night and the mighty Big Dam Lobos regained enough of their former might to humble the Albany Lions, 28 to 26, in the Cisco gym. Captain Ray ran up 16 of the Lobo points. The Lobos started off with a rush, gaining a five point lead in the first quarter. They increased the lead as the second period began, and at the half had the long end of 20 to 14 count. In the second half Albany, playing desperately and bringing their men deep into offensive territory, began to cut down the Cisco lead, so that the third quarter closed with Cisco ahead, 23 to 22. J. L. Cearley dropped in a shot from the side and the Cisco fans breathed easily again. Then Albany staged another rally and shot two goals from the floor to give the Lions a 1-point margin. Clemo Ray caged another one, though, and L. A. Harrison dropped a free throw to give the Lobos the big part of the 28 to 26 score. Tied for Honors Ray tied with Mitchell, center for the Lions, for high point honors of the evening, each scoring 16 points. Except for a pair of free throws, Ray's scoring was from long shots. Coming up from his guard position, the Cisco captain dropped in basket after basket and from between the center line and the double line of the girls' court. The hardest working man on the court, and perhaps the best at covering the court, though, was Harrison, diminutive forward of the Lobos. He was scrapping for the ball, working it down the court and covering his man throughout the game. J. L. Cearley, his running mate, did good work on both defense and offense. The new cog in the Lobo machine, Elvin Norvell, filed the big gap that has yawned in the defense all season, working hard and staying with his opponent throughout the game, and being a big factor in the Lobos scoring as well. Latch, who surprised the fans by starting the Breck game, has kept up his strong defensive game and is developing into a shifter man on offense. He was coming into scoring territory to feed the ball to his forwards and center and breaking back to a guard position before the Albany team could work the ball across the center of the court. Following are the starting lineups: Albany: Bizzell, center; Lieb and Allen, guards. Cisco: Harrison and Cearley, forwards; Norvell, center; Ray and Latch, guards.

Local Solons On Important House Groups

Both O. F. Chastain, representing the 106th district, Eastland county, in the 43rd Texas legislature, and Cecil A. Lotief, representing the 107th district, Eastland and Callahan counties, have been named to a number of important committees of the house of representatives. Mr. Chastain is chairman of the judicial districts committee of the house and a member of the following other committees: Congressional and legislative districts; appropriations; education, and oil, gas and mining. Mr. Lotief is a member of the committee on banks and banking, labor, highways and motor traffic, livestock and stock raising, and state affairs. It is noteworthy that the west central Texas area has two members of the important oil, gas and mining committee of the house. A. C. Kyle, of Palo Pinto county, is the member appointed from this area to serve with Mr. Chastain on this body. The personnel of the committee is as follows: Bob Long, Wichita county, chairman; Tom Renfro, Tarrant county, vice chairman; Anderson of Bexar, Chastain, Colson, Latham, McDougal, Moore, Nicholson, Patterson, Roberts, Rogers of Ochiltree, Stanfield, Steward, Turlington, and Walker.

Ten Boy Scouts Get Awards At Court of Honor

By FRANK LANGSTON. Honors were awarded to ten Boy Scouts of troop 1 and 4 of Cisco at the court of honor held in the First Methodist church last night. Five of the boys received merit badges. In Troop 1, Joe Slicker and J. C. Paschall received the tenderfoot badge and Cranvill Jones received a merit badge for personal health. T. C. Williams is scoutmaster of the troop. In Troop 4, of which O. L. Stamey is scoutmaster, the tenderfoot badge was awarded to Howell Stubblefield, the second class to Ira Laird, and the first class to Jimmie Rominger and Reuben Wende. The following received merit badges: Livius Lankford, gardening, metal work, reading, and cycling; Cecil Edwards, personal health. The court of honor was composed of Eugene Lankford, Homer Slicker, and Crigler Paschall. "The Ten Year Plan starting this month is a plan suggested by President Hoover," said Scoutmaster T. C. Williams in discussing scout work this morning, "who says that if one boy out of each four can be enlisted in scout work, the citizenship of this country will be safeguarded." "Ten Year Plan" Aim. Scoutmaster Williams explained that the project goes into effect this month and that its aim is to achieve in ten years a membership which will include one fourth of all the boy scout age, all working in accordance with the scout oath and the scout laws. The plan is based on the theory that if the proper leaders are furnished, the rest of the nation's population will naturally follow along desirable lines. It assumes, also that boy scouts, following the high ideals of the oath and the laws, will become the right kind of citizens and leaders. Scoutmaster Williams was enthusiastic over the scout work here and said that the movement gives the boys the right kind of recreation and self expression. It gives them something useful and worthwhile and keeps them so well occupied that they do not have time for the undesirable things they might do, he said. He mentioned the fact that at the court of honor a scout said that another boy had told him that scouts are "sissies." The scout had then asked his disputant some questions pertaining to first aid and of other useful knowledge learned in scoutcraft, whereupon the other boy, according to the scout's story, changed his opinion of the organization. A new troop is needed in Cisco. Scoutmaster Williams said. He estimated the attendance at the court of honor last night at 35 boys. The Cisco troop form a part of the Comanche Trail council he said, which G. N. Quiri is scout executive. Quiri was unable to attend the court last night on account of an infected arm. Scoutmaster Williams pointed to the boy scout oath which every scout takes and to the scout law which he subscribes, as containing the essence of scouting. Scout Oath. "On my honor, I will do my best. 1. To do my duty to God and my country and to obey the scout law. 2. To help other people at all times. 3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight." Scout Law. 1. A Scout is trustworthy. 2. A Scout is loyal. 3. A Scout is helpful. 4. A Scout is friendly. 5. A Scout is courteous. 6. A Scout is kind. 7. A Scout is obedient. 8. A Scout is cheerful. 9. A Scout is thrifty. 10. A Scout is brave. 11. A Scout is clean. 12. A Scout is reverent.

COTTON MONEY IS PROPOSED BY EX-SOLON

AUSTIN, Jan. 21.—Cotton money printed on cotton paper is proposed to members of the Texas legislature by J. R. Donnell, of Hillsboro, a former member. The money would really be commodity script, based on cotton receipts issued by supervised bonded warehouses. Donnell has engaged a lawyer to draft the plan in bill form. The script would be designated "cotton trade certificates." To get it the farmer would place his cotton in the warehouse. The receipt for the total amount of cotton stored would then be taken to the state treasurer who would be authorized to issue script in amounts suitable for ordinary trading. A percentage below the total would be retained to cover carrying charges and possible shift in the market price of cotton. Certificates could be called in by the treasurer after December 31, 1933, with settlement on the basis of the Houston spot market. Limited acceptance of the certificates for taxes on a basis of 10-cent cotton would be authorized.

Cisco Girl Elected To Little Theatre

Miss Lela Mae White, of Cisco, has been elected to the Baylor university Little Theatre, according to word received by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. White. Miss White was selected on a basis of actual dramatic competition. Only 7 were taken into the organization at the time, out of 20 applicants. Miss White is a freshman at Baylor. It is unusual for a freshman to be selected as a member of the dramatic organization, it is understood.

Action on Farm Bill Is Delayed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Action on the farm allotment bill was further delayed today as the senate agriculture committee debated methods of simplifying and restricting the measure. Topics discussed, it was announced, included possible elimination of the acreage control provision of the bill and restriction of the measure to cotton and wheat alone.

Bond of $5,000 Set In Student Slaying

ARLINGTON, Jan. 21.—Bond for Oren Sisco, 18, today was set at $5,000 at his preliminary hearing here on charge of murder in connection with the fatal stabbing of William Turpin, North Texas Agricultural college student. A classmate, Weldon Fall, testified Turpin had gone to a boarding house looking for Sisco who had been expelled from the college a few days before. The quarrel which resulted in death for Turpin is said to have begun over a notebook.

The marines have landed—back home—as this picture shows. For Lieutenant William Lemly, seen being greeted by his wife and young son, is one of the 60 marine flying officers who flew back to Washington after extended service in Nicaragua.

Thirty-three States Ratify "Lame Duck" Amendment; Only 3 More Needed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The spectacle of a lame duck congress floundering in futile talk while it waits for the undertaker is being witnessed for the last time. Within a few days, apparently, there will be a 20th amendment added to the constitution to end such performances. The Norris lame duck constitutional amendment is on the brink of final ratification by state legislatures. Only three more states were needed today to make the necessary 36. A race is on in state legislatures now. Indications are that this will be one of the fastest ratifications in history. This 20th amendment will completely change the schedule of dates for the meeting of congress and the presidential inauguration. New senators and congressmen will take their seats January 3, following their election. The presidential inauguration will be moved up to January 20, instead of March 4. This would eliminate such a situation as now paralyzes President Hoover.

Italy and Yugo-Slavia Glare At Each Other

By RICHARD D. McMILLAN United Press Staff Correspondent. BELGRADE, Jan. 21.—Across the 100-mile stretch of sea in the Adriatic, Italy and Yugo-Slavia glare at one another with hatred. Behind their borders, each nation is making munitions and training its soldiers—each thinking of a possible future war against the other. The friction between the two nations arises from the peace settlement. In 1915, when Italy came into the war, she received from France and Britain a promise made in a secret treaty to give a large section of the Dalmatian coast to the Italian Government. The war ended, President Wilson in Paris objected to the Italianization of Dalmatia, and, upholding his policy of the self-determination of nationality, gave the Dalmatians the right to choose. They chose to become part of Yugo-Slavia. Ready to Disarm The Yugo-Slav government maintains it has neither fear nor hatred for Italy, that it is ready to disarm as soon as the other nations disarm, but so long as Italy has its eyes on Yugo-Slav territory they must maintain armament. "Italy robbed us of Fiume," the Yugo-Slavs say. "Now, as they cannot get Dalmatia, they wish to colonize along the Danubian valley—in other words to send emigrants into our territory, who will eventually annex that territory and make it Italian soil." I saw a short time ago a review before King Alexander of the new Yugo-Slav army 116,000 strong. No finer fighting force exists in Europe today. They marched with the precision of the old Prussian guards. And they have the finest of war equipment. An army of 116,000 is very large for a country of only 12,000,000 people, but King Alexander, who rules his country as a virtual dictator, feels that this is no more than necessary to ensure protection in the present state of Europe. Italy has 250,000 men under arms and could put 2,500,000 men into action in a very short time. Having come from Italy to Belgrade, I had had ample opportunity to hear the Italian point of view exposed. Italy Bitter "Italy has been bitter since the division of the war spoils" I was told by friends of Mussolini, the Italian Premier. "We feel we were double-crossed. Not only did we not get Dalmatia, which had been promised us but we are unable to get an extra acre of land in North Africa in which to colonize. With a vastly growing population and the ever-increasing necessity of colonial expansion."

APPLICANTS TOLD TO QUIT 'MANHANDLING'

AUSTIN, Jan. 21.—Jim Ferguson, husband of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, today dramatically scourged job hunters out of the governor's office in the capitol. Arriving for the fourth day after the inauguration to again find the outer offices packed with applicants for state jobs, the former governor sharply told they were wasting their time, the governor's time and that of the legislators. "Yesterday we spent an hour and a half on the state's business and four hours and a half listening to job seekers," said Ferguson to the crowd which quickly began to dwindle. "If the state's service is to be done which we promised and the legislators promised, you must give us time to do it. "You individually may not think this means you because you have been our friends. I tell you the better friend you are to us the more willing you will be to quit manhandling us and manhandling the legislators for a job. If the farmer back home can struggle along, you can."

TRUCK PERMIT LAW IS SIMPLE SAYS GILBERT

Victor B. Gilbert, formerly representative from the 107th legislative district, embracing Eastland and Callahan counties, and now assistant director of the motor transportation division of the railroad commission, spent Saturday and Sunday night in Cisco. He was en route from Lubbock where he presided at a hearing, to his headquarters at Austin. Regulations governing the operation of trucks are not involved, said Gilbert, but, on the contrary, are simple enough to be understood by anyone who will give the matter a little thought. There are three classes of licenses issued—licenses for common carriers, for contract carriers and for commodity carriers. Common carriers, he said, are those who haul for the general public without restriction to routes, points of origin or destination. Application for a common carrier license must be accompanied by a fee of $25. After issuance of the license the operator then pays the tax and plate fee of $10 on each truck plus a $1 driver's license for each driver. Public liability and property damage insurance must be carried and the policies deposited with the commission. The theory upon which the property damage insurance is required is that the public whose goods the common carrier hauls must be protected in the event of loss of the merchandise. Application for a contract carrier license must be accompanied by a fee of $10 and after issuance of license tax and license fee must be paid on each truck operated by the carrier, plus the driver's license fee. Public liability insurance must be carried. No property damage insurance is required since it is presumed that the recovery of possible damage to the goods carried is a matter to be dealt with between the carrier and the firm or individual for whom he hauls. The single license may provide for several contracts, each of which, however, must be identified in the application together with the routes of haulage. The commodity carrier license provides for hauling 10 principal commodities named in the law, including cotton, grain, agricultural machinery, and so forth. No license is required for a truck which does not operate between two incorporated towns, but passage through one incorporated city to another, regardless of the point of origin of the cargo, is construed to bring the carrier under the requirements of the law. A carrier owning his own truck and carrying his own property is exempt from the carrier's license requirements. He must, however, conform to the provisions of the law with respect to size and weight of load, and secure a driver's license. Special permits are required for hauling cargoes larger than the restrictive dimensions or heavier than the maximum load permissible under the law. These permits allow transportation of oil field machinery which otherwise would be barred from the highways greatly to the inconvenience of the oil operators.

NORTH DAKOTA IN BIG PICTURE.

North Dakota is one of the newest of American commonwealths. Sen. W. E. Martin of that state introduced a resolution recommending 39 states of the sisterhood should walk out of the group of Eastern states to form a separate nation. And the Martin resolution said the 39 states would "carry with us the star spangled banner leaving with the Eastern states the stripes they so richly deserve." Something in the nature of a riot followed. When the resolution came before the North Dakota senate, a motion was made to strike from the resolution a reference to the star spangled banner. This motion was defeated by one vote. Lieut. Gov. Ole H. Olson cast the deciding vote. There was a turbulent debate. Charges were hurled that the proposal bordered on treason. A motion to publish the resolution carried, 28 to 20. One distinguished senator declared that while he was not discussing the merits of the resolution, he strongly favored its publication in the journal to stand "as a message to the East that North Dakota be recognized and have a place in the union." Martin, the author of this famous withdrawal resolution, sought to withdraw it so that he could introduce it as a bill but was ruled out of order by the distinguished member of the ancient and distinguished Scandinavian house of Olson. According to the reports, "applause from the galleries and some of the members rang out through the chamber an announcement that the motion to publish the resolution had carried." Away down here under Southwestern skies Texas will vote no. If put to the test, they will vote loudly and many times. In the long ago Texas voted itself out of the union of states. Today in the ranks of the people now on earth a majority of the men and women of the mighty commonwealth are the descendants of the men who fought for the bonny blue flag and the planters republic. They are in the union of states and it is a thousand to one shot that they are for that union "now and forever." North Dakota will be given wide publicity in the great newspapers of the country and thousands of newspapers and the leading periodicals of the nation; North Dakota will be recognized and have "a place in the union."

"TO THE VICTORS BELONG THE SPOILS."

Away over in Tennessee sleeps the dust of the Hero of the Hermitage known to fame as Andrew Jackson of Tennessee, warrior and statesman and duelist and man of honor and one of the canonized saints of the ancient democracy. He believed that to the winners of political battles should go the spoils of office. A reminder that the civil service commission of the federal government informed the senate that between 130,000 and 150,000 federal jobs were not under civil service. This report was an answer to a resolution by Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee. Sen. McKellar is a democrat, a native of the Old Volunteer state, and he worships at the shrine of the Hero of the Hermitage. All down the years since Andrew Jackson reigned, the spoils have been given to the victors. It may be a correct or an incorrect principle of government, but its staunchest champions have been republican presidents and cabinet officers and governors of American commonwealths—likewise democratic presidents and governors of democratic commonwealths. Now the victorious democrats and their allies who followed the Roosevelt flag are looking for the spoils of office to be given to their followers in nation and state. It is an ancient system of distribution of political patronage, but the system appears to be firmly entrenched and "may go on forever." Politics is a science as well as a fascinating game. Those who lose are on the outside. Those who win are on the inside until another political upheaval—and then the milk-and-honey eaters become husk-eaters and the husk-eaters grab the milk and honey.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—What, in these days, could be more old-fashioned than a modificationist—a light wines and beer man?

Not long ago there were millions of them, dissatisfied with prohibition but not caring or daring to urge the now popular naked repeal. The only one left seems to be George W. Norris, that technically republican but completely independent senator from Nebraska. Norris has the best of not many reputations here for the old-fashioned honesty and courage that you read about in romantic novels.

The senator's viewpoint on prohibition legislation is not only of interest to millions of American liberals but also to wets and dries. For he is chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee which reported out the modified repeal resolution and the beer bill. He helped frame them both, but he voted against the first and for the second.

"So the prohibitionists are with me and against me and the wets are against me and with me," says Norris, who probably is the only man in Congress who wouldn't worry about a thing like that.

HE was dry until last summer, but defied the Anti-Saloon League by deserting his party to support Candidate Al Smith in 1928 and again by campaigning for Roosevelt, the repealist, in 1932. "I concluded prohibition was a failure and getting worse all the time," Norris explains. "But I don't want to give up the amendment and go back to the saloon until we have another experiment."

"The wets claimed for years that beer and wine would reduce drunkenness. There's some hope, though I fear not much, that they were right. The only way to achieve such a resolution is to modify the Volstead Act."

THE wets can thank Norris for suggesting the formation of the Senate beer bill with a view to preventing the supreme court from killing it on grounds of unconstitutionality. The idea seemed one of the brightest ideas produced here in a long time. He is now sure the court can't harm beer within the alcoholic limit prescribed by Congress.

"The constitution prohibits the sale of liquor," he says, "but unless some law is passed by Congress the prohibition is unenforceable by the federal government. Congress need not take all the jurisdiction which the constitution confers upon it, but can prohibit beverages containing more than a certain amount of alcohol without saying anything about those which contain less. If we had a constitutional amendment prohibiting the theft of livestock and passed a law merely covering cows, the federal government couldn't prosecute pig-stealers."

"You can't arrest a man under a statute which doesn't exist for an offense for which no penalty is provided."

An Appreciation of Science

"Jobs for the jobless" has been the war cry. This appears to apply to the distribution of political jobs as it has in all the decades of American history. Business is business. Democrats later along in early springtime will not only control the federal government but the governments of 40 of the 48 American commonwealths. Then the responsibility will go to the democracy, and the Lord help the donkey four years hence if the docile beast is overloaded by his trainers!

KANSAS ASKS FOR NATIONAL MORATORIUM.

Kansas is in the big picture. Kansas cast their electoral votes for Roosevelt and Garner. Rep. Ayers of Kansas is a democrat. He is pushing a two-year moratorium "for farmers hard pressed on interest and taxes." He very bluntly asserted that his bill would accomplish the purpose. It would direct the Reconstruction corporation to make loans aggregating a billion dollars to regional agricultural corporations to farmers. Just now the representatives and senators of the growers of things are getting ready for a grand rush March 4. Then F. D. will have his own troubles.

ROOSEVELT FOR SANCTITY OF TREATIES.

Pres.-Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt has indicated to the world a continuation of the American policy in the Far East crisis. His theory is that American policy must uphold the sanctity of international treaties as the cornerstone on which all relations between nations must rest. An attempt was made by the correspondent to link his statement with the war debts treaties. A short horse is soon curried. Very emphatically F. D. declared "that was all there was to be said." Japan is in the big international picture. The Japanese statesmen and warriors would build a Japanese empire in the heart of Manchuria. Well, Great Britain has an empire in India and vast Chinese possessions. France has its Chinese empire and its Franco-African empire. Like Great Britain, France has far-flung possessions, including the islands of the southern seas. History will be made under Asiatic skies in the near future. Why entangling alliances with the other nations of the earth—by conceding at all times that the sanctity of international treaties should be observed.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Cisco's "Walling Wall" was depopulated Saturday. A stiff southerly wind had swept it clean of its customary groups of idle who gather there in the pleasant sunshine to mourn the lack of jobs, discourse upon current economic and political topics and chew tobacco. When the breeze is out of the north and there is a chill in the air the sun beating upon the warm red brick of the Masonic building makes this portion of the street a genial spot and very charitable to those who are not on speaking terms with the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker.

Like flies about honey they gather in its solace and forget for a time the discomforts of trying to get along with technocracy. One sees in these groups many interesting specimens of humanity, from the youth rather dazed with the rigors of independence and wishing he had made a better acquaintanceship with his textbooks, to the older man whose eyes are dull with resentment and hopelessness.

But the great majority are simply looking for something, rather patient of men, if disappointed. They use the time to social enjoyment, but they are ready to vote the democratic party to Sir Urian and gone if it doesn't do something about this depression.

It is quite evident that in that state of mind they have brothers enough in situations of more comfortable character.

The prize hunting story that has survived from last season was carried by a large news service the other day.

According to the story one wild turkey gobbler is roaming his native haunts of southwest Texas with a gold watch and chain as the prize of his encounter with a hunter. The hunter, so he relates, came so close to the gobbler that he tried to reach out and capture him with his bare hands. The bird, however, struck at him with his foot, snatching the watch and chain from the hunter's vest pocket. It so amazed the hunter that he neglected to shoot the fowl when it ran off with the loot. All who believe that story send Specs a dollar.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

John L. Brady, co-publisher of the Blackfoot (Idaho) Daily Bulletin, says:

"The year 1932 was a hard one for business. There was travail of soul and many firms died in the process. Business men are today trying to diagnose their affairs. They will grasp plans that look rosy, but often these prove delusions. It is the stressfulness of the situation that has filled our towns and cities with fake advertising schemes of many kinds.

"The hard times of the year 1932 will cause merchants to hunt for remedies that will help in 1933. In this time advertising should come into its own. This force offers a way out—not the only way, but a promising way out for any business that has careful and intelligent management, provided the product to be sold is one needed and wanted. "No business can be made entirely by advertising, but no business can be made without this help in one form or another. Advertising is an auxiliary or adjunct for careful business men to carry on. "Advertising is the subconscious mind of business always ready to help, always ready to step in when help is needed, no matter how many rebuffs have been sustained or how many times merchants have gone off after false goods of alluring but disappointing schemes which are masqueraded as advertising."

Flatiron Becomes Aid to Scientists

PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 21. — A housewife's flatiron, photographed in a pitch-dark room has given science further proof of Kirchhoff's law, which holds that a surface which absorbs much radiant energy makes a good conductor. And through this proof, astronomers have been able to photograph far distant stars which previously had been undetected, even through the most powerful telescope.

The flatiron was photographed on a supersensitive infra-red plate by H. D. Babcock, astrophysicist at Mt. Wilson observatory. The iron, warmed, was reproduced in detail on the plate.

Previously, an aviator flying over South America had given visual proof that the earth is round, by photographing the distant Andes Mountains, which were not visible to the naked eye.

Through this minor discovery, scientists now can calculate the curvature of the earth.

When Dr. Babcock made his flatiron experiment, he placed three inkspots on its smooth surface. The ink was such a good conductor of the heat within that the spots showed up white in the photograph.

"Talkies" to Be Used In Houston College

HOUSTON, Jan. 21. — There will be no performances by Greta Garbo or Mickey Mouse, but during the Houston Junior college's spring term, beginning Jan. 30, the talkies will have an important place in the curriculum as a medium of instruction.

The students will hear and see eminent scientists and teachers in intricate demonstrations of the workings of biology, chemistry and physics, Dr. E. E. Oberholzer, superintendent of schools and dean of the college, announced.

Students in foreign languages, economics, sociology and other phases of learning also will benefit from use of the equipment.

"The effect is about the same as if we had the nation's leading educators and scientists as faculty members of the college," Oberholzer commented. "We are gradually building up a motion picture library and the equipment will be in constant use next term."

"Cheap Money" Days In Europe Over

BEAUMONT, Jan. 21. — Days of cheap currency in Europe are at an end and it requires a tidy sum to see the sights abroad, according to Second Mate L. Sund of the seamer West Celeron.

Sund while his ship loaded here recently, recalled the case of two Tulane university students who made a trip to Europe aboard the West Celeron, each taking $100 along for spending money.

The students left the ship at Glasgow, planning to join it again at Avonmouth for the trip home. When the vessel arrived at Avonmouth the students were waiting on the dock.

"Have you had supper yet?" was their first question. "We're broke."

"The pound has fallen in Great Britain and American money spends to some advantage in that country," Sund observed, "but the currencies in most of the large continental countries, including Germany, are stabilized on a pre-war basis, with high prices prevailing everywhere. A dollar goes not very far."

New Ordinance to Govern Dairies

DENTON, Jan. 21. — Dairymen here are familiarizing themselves with a new standard city milk ordinance which becomes effective June 1. It was passed recently by the city commissioners.

Classifications under which milk will be accepted as fit for sale are Grades A, B and C. Only Grade A pasteurized milk is permitted by the ordinance. Commissioners expect popular demand for better products to minimize sale of Grade C raw milk.

DIVORCE ASKED

SANTA ANA, Cal., Jan. 21.—Married 62 years George L. Berger and Florinda J. Berger came to the parting of the marital ways when Mrs. Berger filed suit for separate maintenance. Mrs. Berger, 79, charged husband, independently wealthy, refused to let her have her own door key, and threatened to live in the woodshed if she bought a radio set.

Translator Recounts Military Incidents In History of Texas as Spanish Province

AUSTIN, Jan. 21.—Juan Hagard-Villasana of Eagle Pass, a graduate student in The University of Texas, has translated over 300 pages of Spanish documents for the University dealing with the life of the people of Texas in the early days when Texas was yet a province of Spain. These documents cover the military and political affairs during the early days in Texas and consist of original letters from commanders to subordinates, letters from subordinates to commanders, petitions of soldiers for transfers, paper granting furloughs, discharge papers, and the records of military trials.

Villasana has earned his own living since the revolution in 1911, when his father's mine in Mexico was blown up and his property confiscated. Villasana barely escaped with his life, and many of his relatives were killed. His father died in 1914, leaving him an orphan his mother having died when he was younger. Since then he educated himself and has become a translator of recognized ability. One of his assignments was the translating for the State Medical association of documents from the military hospital in San Antonio, documents dealing with cures and remedies for various diseases. For the last three years he has been engaged in translating documents in the University library.

The military documents he has been translating give a picture of life during revolutionary days that dwarfs the privations Texas citizens feel themselves to suffer during the current "depression," according to Villasana. Poverty was the general rule then, he pointed out.

Hard to Get Pay

"At least those of us who are employed can obtain our pay, and there are charity organizations to help provide for those who are unemployed, but in those days it was another matter," he said. "The settlers of Texas were generally soldiers sent from Spain and their pay came from the Spanish government. Cwing to the war against Napoleon the government was hard pressed for money and consequently was behind at least five or six months with the soldiers' pay. Even the officers suffered in this respect. However, their pay would not have done them much good for sources where food and supplies could be bought were so far distant that it would have been almost impossible to make the trip. The only way for the men to get their food was for them to raise it or go out hunting and kill it."

"They tried farming for a while but the plan did not work very well. Corn was the chief food crop and the Indians often waited until the corn was ripe and then harvested it for themselves. And what could the settlers, with only a handful of men, do about it?"

"Even hunting as a means of livelihood was not without its dangers. While the soldiers hunted wild game the Indians hunted soldiers. The only way that the Spaniards might hunt or farm with any degree of safety was to take along an armed escort for protection. In addition to their trouble in obtaining food the soldiers had insufficient clothing."

Did Not Complain

"These men, however, did not complain. They were here to live or die for god, king and country. I have found in my reading that the bravery of these men has no parallel in history. Even the common soldier showed up well in comparison with the great soldiers of history."

"Not only were conditions bad in the Spanish provinces but they were worse in what was known as the 'neutral ground.' This was a piece of land about thirty miles long and about twenty miles wide lying between the Sabine river and the Arroyo Hondo. This strip of land was claimed by both Spain and the United States, and both had agreed not to send armed forces into the territory until the dispute was settled. This section was settled by American renegades, Spanish outlaws and some of Lafayette's French pirates who had tired of the sea and had taken to the land to carry on their trade. The highway from the United States to New Spain led through this neutral territory and all travelers who went this way paid tribute to the bandits. There are several interesting documents dealing with this neutral territory. There are reports of Spanish commanders who claimed that they saw some of the bandits but could not arrest them, and there are others which speak of the bandits using Indian spies and paying them well. Whether or not they used Indian spies, the fact remains that at one time when a combined force of Spanish and American troops raided the territory, not one person was to be found. All the inhabitants of the 'neutral ground' had completely vanished.

Study Interesting

"The study of affairs at that time is very interesting, but personally I am most interested in the customs that existed. They were all very ceremonious. The men who came to the government building to transact business were very carefully seated according to seniority. One curious custom is that when the governor arose to read a royal order he always raised it first and held it over his head and then lowered it and read it. Another quaint custom deals with the harvest. When the last oad of corn had been harvested the men came to town in an ox-cart decorated with flags. They sang and made merry on the journey. They all went to a tavern and drank all that they wanted. The 'boss' paid."

"When the soldiers captured Indians who were friendly to the colonics, and may it be said that many decided to be friendly when they were captured, they were made to kneel before a sword stuck in the ground, the handle resembling a cross, and they were then made to bow and pass under crossed Spanish flags as a sign of submission."

"These customs are passed. There is no longer any need for them. Indians no longer roam the plains, carry off the crops, and attack hunting parties. Bandits no longer have their haunts in the 'neutral grounds' and prey on travelers to New Spain. Barefooted soldiers with rusty lances and old guns no longer arm Spanish garrisons. Those days are gone and with them their hardships."

Edwards Cafe Is Open for Business

Edwards Cafe is now open and ready for business. Mr. Edwards was formerly in the cafe business here but sold out and took for greener pastures. But he decided that Cisco was a good place in which to live so he rented a building, installed new fixtures and has again cast his lot with Cisco business concerns here, for better or for worse.

His announcement appears in today's issue of the Daily News.

BIG DAM CHATTER

By FRANK LANGSTON

The Cisco coaches found the winning combination for the Lobo basketballers Friday night, with Elvin Norwell in the game at center.

Norwell filled the defensive hole that has been outstanding throughout the season, and did a little scoring and court work besides. He covered his man better than Rutledge has been able to do all season, and will likely will be back in the game a great deal for the rest of the year.

Several days ago this column was given over to a discussion of boxing for Cisco, with the possibility of having weekly contests for local boys. Today it is again asking why there is not more interest in independent athletics here.

Many of the cities of Texas have Sunday school basketball leagues that play an important part in the sport life. Others have their basketball organized as to employment of the team members, residence sections of town, or the like. With employment what it is, though, perhaps some other basis of organization would allow more people to take part.

Why can't Cisco have a city basketball league? There are many men and boys, and perhaps almost as many girls, here who would like to take part in some form of athletics. Basketball offers a good opportunity for them during the winter months.

A league, with a regular schedule, could be organized, governing itself and with an accepted roster for each team. Such a plan would prevent a group of players from playing one night under one name and the next under another, and would protect the life of the organization.

Cisco should have some form of amateur athletics, carried on in a clean manner, and giving wholesome recreation and sport to both players and spectators. Both golf and tennis are popular in Cisco, but neither reaches many who would like to participate in such a city program of athletics.

Such organizations as Sunday School classes, clubs, and business concerns could put out teams and organize a league that might be worth a great deal to the athletic life of the city.

The first steps taken in this direction have been the interclass games at Randolph college and the girls' all star game played Friday night.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SHELLA SHAYNE, whose parents were well known vaudeville entertainers, is in New York looking for a job. She is a dancer. After much discouragement she is hired to substitute for DAISY GLEASON, another dancer, who has sprained an ankle, while rehearsing at JOE PARIS' song shop. Shella meets TREVOR LANE and DICK STANLEY, rich and socially prominent. Dick urges Lane to include Shella in the program of entertainment at a party he is giving. Shella declines but Dick comes to the theater later and persuades her to come.

At the party she meets several celebrities, including GORDON MANDRAKE, well known producer. She sees Dick frequently during the next few days and he tells her Mandrake is going to offer her a part in a play. Presently Daisy Gleason is able to dance and Shella is again out of work. She makes the rounds of the agents' offices without results. Then Mandrake calls and offers her a part in his new play.

Rehearsals begin and Shella becomes friendly with JIM BLAINE, one of the principals in the cast. The show opens in Atlantic City for a tryout week. On the morning after the opening night Jim calls Shella to tell her about the newspaper reviews. She meets him at breakfast.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV

"I WANTED you to know first," Jim Blaine told Shella seriously. Sooner or later the rest of the company will know it. Still, his voice was filled with sudden eagerness, "maybe they'll be so busy reading their notices that they won't see the front page."

"Front page?" Shella repeated, mystified. "Are you on the front page? What have you been doing?"

There was instant concern in her voice. The front page to her spelled trouble.

"If I have, will you stand by me?" he asked.

She gave him a surprised look. "Of course. You know that. But my standing by you can't help much."

His voice rang out. "Thanks a lot. No, don't be afraid. I haven't done anything very terrible. That is, you and I won't think so. The company won't either, I dare say. Good publicity for the show, maybe." He leaned across the table, touching her hand confidentially. "You see, I'm sailing more or less under false colors. I've always wanted to act and the only way I could do it was to run away. My father thinks I am in Europe—or he did think so until breakfast this morning." Jim pushed the newspaper toward Shella. "Look here."

There was Jim's picture on the front page. It was Jim certainly, but the caption below read: "Norman B. Etherington, Jr., who was discovered last night appearing in a musical show in Atlantic City. Private agents who have been on the trail of young Etherington for weeks found him singing in 'When Lights Are Low,' soon to open on Broadway. Young Etherington was forbidden an operatic career by his parents who believed him to be studying in Munich until his aunt, visiting that city—" "Aunt Emily would!" Jim groaned ruefully. "You see, my Mother was an opera singer. She died when I was a kid. Then Dad married the girl the family picked out for him and all was well. Mother—she isn't my own Mother, of course, but she is a peach—sympathized with my wish to sing but Dad was horrified. It had to be the furniture business or nothing! Well, my Mother left me a little money and I decided to go to Europe to study. I stayed a year and then my money gave out. Dad wouldn't give me any more and I couldn't tell him that I had been—er—extravagant."

Jim flushed suddenly. His money had given out because he had financed a friend but he couldn't tell Shella this.

"So you are one of the Etheringtons?" she murmured. She had heard of the family. Everybody had. They were an old conservative family. And rich.

"You don't mind my deceiving you, Shella?" Jim asked humbly. "The name, Jim Blaine, is—well, sort of mine. My middle name is Jim and Dad's name is Blaine. Etherington, of course, was out of the question. Everyone would have known that name. And I didn't want to get this job through pull."

"How did you get it?" Shella asked.

"Why I just asked for it," Jim grinned. Then he explained quickly. "Oh, it wasn't that easy! I came to New York and moved in to an apartment near some friends of mine. But I began eating in the places where show people eat. A chap I met there—" He paused. "Wisely Shella nodded. "I know," she said. "Someone you loaned money to."

"Anyhow," Jim went on, "this chap told me they were trying voices at Schumann's. I dropped around. They weren't many men, you know. I didn't know it until later," he grinned, "but they tried me out for the chorus first. The what's-his-name in the derby and shirt sleeves said, 'Anyone unwilling to sing in the ensemble, will kindly leave!' I didn't connect that high sounding phrase with the chorus. I just thought it meant sing in groups, you know. In fact it didn't occur to me that they would take me at all!"

"They did. They sent me over to a show that was rehearsing and I hadn't stepped into the door before this chap from Mandrake's handed me a contract! Just like that! Didn't even try me out."

There was pardonable pride in his voice. "If I were a girl," he went on seriously, "I'd lose courage in this business. If my living—my next meal maybe—depended on landing a job I think I'd go crazy. Why, Shella, I saw the most beautiful girls—" "I know," she said, nodding. "They had good voices, style, carriage, grace, everything! And most of them were weeded out in a few minutes. Dozens of them! Better looking girls than I knew there were anywhere."

"You should go to a call from Greenfield for his 'Frivolties,'" Shella told him wisely. "The girls who answer those calls—of course all kinds do answer them—but some of them are marvelous!" "Ermine coats and all that sort of thing?" asked Jim, relieved that his little confession had gone over so easily, yet also slightly piqued. It should have made more of an impression.

"Not at all! They wear tailored suits—marvelous things. And slick little hats. You never see such clothes exhibited for sale—I mean I don't. I suppose they come from 57th street shops. Frilly blouses. Beautiful shoes. And the complexions those girls achieve! And the accents!"

"The ones who land the jobs certainly earn all they get. They work hours every day to keep their complexions and their figures perfect. One girl I know who weighed hardly 105 pounds used to weigh herself every day (of course they all do that) and if she had gained a single ounce she would watch her diet like a hawk. Her father and mother were inclined to stoutness she told me. "These girls even try not to think because thinking can make wrinkles. They never go to other shows or even read newspapers—except possibly the financial pages."

"Do they speculate?"

"SOMETIMES. Mostly, though, some admirer speculates for them and reading the market news is simply a sort of ceremony because they seldom know how their money is placed. They never know whether they are winning or losing so they don't worry."

"And," Jim added gravely, "they never lose."

"I suppose not," Shella smiled. They walked to the theater slowly. A rehearsal was to be called at noon and would continue until the matinee performance.

At the theater there was a surprise in store for them. It was not the news about Jim Blaine in the morning newspaper that seemed to be attracting attention back stage. As Jim and Shella passed through the stage door it seemed to the girl that the doorman looked at her curiously.

There was the sound of loud voices, arguing, explosive. One of the voices was feminine, shrill and angry. The others were low-pitched, meant to be conciliatory.

Marion Randolph, the star, was having her say and evidently didn't care who knew it. Mike and the stage manager were doing what they could to placate her.

Jappy Foster, a member of the chorus, appeared around one of the flies, her eyes round with interest. She looked at Shella curiously, disappeared and came back again with an equally interested companion. The two girls whispered busily.

"What's all the commotion?" Jim asked jokingly. "Is it time to feed the animals?"

But Shella did not reply. As if turned to stone she waited for what she knew would be inevitable. It came abruptly. Marion Randolph's voice rose hysterically: "I don't give a damn about her talent! I tell you Shayne goes out of this show or I do. You can take your choice right now!"

BELGIAN ABBE GIVES THEORY OF CREATION

By LEICESTER WAGNER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 PASADENA, Cal., Jan. 21.—Once upon a time, some 10,000,000,000 years ago, a primordial atom, perhaps the size of an orange, exploded. The resulting firework developed through the ages into suns and stars and nebulous groups of heavenly bodies which we call the Universe.

That is the picture of creation painted by Abbe George Lemaitre, 38, of the University of Louvain, Belgium, a profound mathematician, physicist and astronomer. "In the beginning," he declared, "all matter in the Universe existed in a small atom. That atom burst, similar to the manner in which radium explodes, and its fragments evolved into heavenly bodies. Still Expanding. "The Universe still is expanding, and the day may come when we will all freeze to death. That, of course, may be billions of years from now."

The expanding Universe, Abbe Lemaitre said, might be likened to a spotted balloon. As the balloon grows in shape, the spots on its surface spread farther apart. Thus the many galaxies of stars scattered throughout space are moving apart, just as their component parts are spreading. Although the rate of movement is infinitesimal in our own small universe, the earth, too, is moving away from its central heating plant, the sun, Lemaitre believes.

Another Argument.
 Then there is another argument, advanced by Dr. Richard Chace Tolman, noted mathematical-physicist of California Institute of Technology.

Dr. Tolman holds that the universe alternately expands and contracts, in cycles. Astronomers at the Mt. Wilson observatory here have observed the expansion. Dr. Edwin Hubble has seen star clusters or nebulae similar to our own system, some 300,000,000 light years away, racing off into space in all directions. It was first thought that these racing stars were optical illusions, yet a study of the wave-lengths of their light has shown a pronounced shift of the red rays toward the lower end of the spectrum, which would bear out the expansion theory.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 PARIS, Jan. 21.—Miss Cleora Wood, the American singer, chooses her clothes as carefully as she does her songs. Harmony is the keynote in her life and her latest Worth frock is a high note on the scale of smartness. It is of pale gray broadcloth with the new "bib" draping in the bodice and with tight sleeves, tucked into the arm-holes and trimmed with half a dozen smoke gray buttons each. The cape that is worn with it is trimmed with astrakan as a band around the bottom.

Miss Natica Nast, that attractive American girl who looks so well in Schiaparelli things, has chosen from that house a chalk white persela dress with a deep Burgundy red short coat made of row after row of shirred velvet ribbon. The original color scheme for this costume was pale yellow and coral, but Miss Nast had hers made in the chalk white and Burgundy.

The Princess Amedee de Broglie, young, slender and a brunette, has selected a Chanel afternoon dress in emerald green velvet. It looks very simple at first, but a second glance tells you that there is a vast amount of workmanship put into an intricate nature. There are trellis work incrustations on the corsage, which buttons in points in front. The long sleeves have an elongated puff at the elbow which are also incrustated with trellis work.

pansion, we find ourselves hemmed in."
Italy therefore has switched her sympathies from the former Allies to Germany, believing that by cooperation she can drive the best bargain in future political developments. Yugo-Slavia views with alarm the possibility of an Italo-German Danubian confederation scheme, which would be a dagger at the throat of Yugo-Slavian national life.

Italy, too, has made overtures to King Zogu, the Albanian ruler, aiming at a pact which would give Italy control of the entry to the Adriatic sea.

These are the varied conflicting national aspirations which the disarmament conference must consider before any accord on reduction of armaments is possible.

Ask for Patience
The apologists for the League ask for patience, maintaining that slow and effective progress is better than speedy, unenduring decisions. The critics maintain that the Geneva institution is wasting its time and that Europe never will find a formula which will satisfy every nation that her security is assured.

The decision rests with the chain of armed nations stretching from Baltic to the Adriatic and the Black Sea. As long as they have their armament they are safe from aggression—or, at least, they believe so. The task is to convince them the path they have chosen is the path to war, not peace.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENT
Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Heath are the parents of a son, born Saturday at 11:20 a. m. They reside at 1211 West Tenth street.

Better Lighting Will Ease Your Budget Worries

There are budgets that really will work . . . budgets that will show how to bring expenses within income! But they weren't created at a dark and gloomy desk . . . they were the result of calm and intelligent analysis under the cheering atmosphere of good light.

It's surprising what a difference adequate lighting makes! . . . Troubles take on a less terrifying aspect when subjected to the clear, eye-soothing brilliance of the modern electric light. It's not only much easier to work, but the absence of eye-strain keeps your mind clear and alert.

Next time you sit down to plot out the month's expenses, or to write a letter, be sure your light is adequate. You'll find the difference amazing!

A trained employe will be happy to inspect your home-lighting arrangements. There's no obligation, of course . . . and chances are that a simple rearrangement of your present fixtures, or adjustments giving you adequate sized lamps where they're needed, will be all that's necessary.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?
