Heavy Rainfall Puts Cisco Country in Fine Condition

15.2 INCHES GAUGED SINCE LAST OCTOBER

The weatherman seems determined to make amends for the severe drought of not so long ago by continually deluging the Cisco country with rain.

By three o'clock Saturday afternoon Lake Cisco gauge showed that the rain had raised the level of the lake eight-tenths of a foot, and City Engineer Reagan estimated that a foot of water would be caught by the time the run-off has ceased.

The level of Lake Bernie has been lifted until water was pouring over the spillway. Rainfall records kept by J. E. Stuart at the city hall show that since October 1 of last year 15.2 inches of rain has fallen in Cisco.

OLD LAND OFFICE BUILDING AT AUSTIN HAS NOTABLE HISTORY

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is one of a series of articles on the historical landmarks of Texas, written by Samuel E. Gideon, associate professor of architectural design and architectural history at The University of Texas. Mr. Gideon is national vice-president of the American Institute of Architects for the Preservation of Worthwhile Landmarks throughout the United States.

AUSTIN, Jan. 16. — The old Land Office building, situated in the southeast corner of the state capitol grounds, has the distinction of being the only land office structure in the United States, excepting the one in Washington, D. C. In recent years a new Land Office building was erected and the vacant building was turned over to the Daughters of the Republic and the Daughters of the Confederacy. These organizations have fitted it up into a museum, where every Tuesday afternoon, from 4 to 6, there are on display some interesting relics and documents.

The old building, designed by a German political refugee, and built in 1837, resembles some of the old castles on the Rhine and is an interesting example of early fireproofing. A narrow, circular stairway, ingeniously constructed, extending from attic to basement, by reason of being almost entirely concealed, gave it the name "The Secret Stairway." It is not unlike one in the tower of San Jose Mission in San Antonio though the latter is of wood and the Land Office stairway is of stone, with the face of each riser carved.

O. Henry (William Sidney Porter), who drew maps and decorated them in this building, made use of the secret stairway in one of his stories. His maps are now on file in the new Land Office, but not sufficiently protected. When I saw them about ten years ago in the old building, they were in much better condition than now, since pieces of the paper on which some of them were drawn are entirely gone.

Even before Texas became a Republic, Gail Borden, Jr., the millionaire condensed milk man, for whom a Texas county was named, was employed by Stephen F. Austin to supervise official surveys and to take charge of the land office of the Colony. The files of the present Land Office contain the documents of Gail Borden, and there are many records of his younger brother, John P., who took part in the Battle of San Jacinto and was, later, made first commissioner of the General Land Office of Texas.

Robert Barr, the idolized husband of the novelist, Amelia Barr, worked in the Comptroller's Office, and it is stated that he also worked in the old Land Office. Sirenum, the German who designed the old building, the subject of our sketch, drew the State's maps, which are excellent examples of good draftsmanship, and the titles are skillfully cartooned and decorated.

ALMOST EVERY RECENT MAJOR LAW TIED UP

By GORDON K. SHEARER, United Press Staff Correspondent.

AUSTIN, Jan. 16. — Practically every recent major law of the Texas legislature is now tied up in litigation. Never before have there been so many suits pending over constitutionality and validity of state laws. A test case is to be heard this month at Franklin on the validity of the cotton acreage reduction act passed by the "farmers' session" of the present legislature.

The entire state anti-trust law is contested in answers made by oil companies to Attorney General James V. Alfred's prosecutions under that act.

The three motor truck laws of the last legislature are all in court controversy. One of these governs dimensions and weights of trucks and their loads; another puts rates and operation under permit and regulation and a third deals specifically with the hauling of compressed and uncompress cotton.

I had occasion to take a famous architect to see the maps of O. Henry whose stories the architect had long admired, but he marveled more at the interesting construction of the building. He talked to the then Land Commissioner and reminded him that some of O. Henry's stories were laid in the old Land Office, and one in particular—"Bexar Script No. 2692"—mentions the files, the secret stairs the clerks the bats, and the murder, but the Land Commissioner, with much disgust, replied, "That O. Henry was a great fraud there wasn't anything of the kind ever happened here."

The structure, recently was threatened with destruction but the united efforts of the patriotic bodies which now occupy the building, secured an appropriation for its repair and thus saved it for posterity.

Rights of the Texas officials to regulate interstate motor operation is pending in the federal court at Dallas. Most of the state's recent oil legislation also is the subject of litigation.

Hearing Set.

A hearing has been set by the state supreme court for January 27 which will decide whether the state can control the oil under the bed of the Sabine river. Harry Dolan of Georgetown has brought about the test with a claim that the state land commissioner should have granted him a permit to develop land under the river, upon which he filed an application. Other portions of the river bed are claimed by others, and will depend upon the Dolan suit decision.

Rights of the state railroad commission to limit production of oil wells in the East Texas field was attacked in the Brook-Lee injunction suit in federal court, and Governor Sterling's declaration of martial law over the field is now being considered by a three-judge federal court.

Division of motor vehicle filing fees between counties and the state highway commission is in litigation in Harris county.

What fees are properly payable to sheriffs is the subject of both civil and criminal litigation.

Sand Chastity Is Defended

PARIS, Jan. 16. — With the chastity of her grandmother George Sand, the authoress peacefully buried for the past 50 years, at stake, Mme. Aureole Sand is leaving no stone unturned to prove that the accusation of M. Jacques Boulenger in a literary treatise are false.

The Frenchman in an article entitled, "The Early Lovers of George Sand," casts not only a shadow of suspicion upon the virtue of the dead writer, but attempts to cite instances of the complete lack of this maidenly quality.

"I highly respect the writings of M. Boulenger," said Mme. Sand, "but in this instance he has grossly exaggerated the truth and I am going to right the wrong he has done by grandmother's name."

This is an old struggle on the part of the faithful granddaughter, for the first complaints on the subject were made by her in 1928. The case has dragged along from year to year, but Mme. Sand believes that 1932 will see the finish of it and that justice will be in her favor with the chastity of her grandmother definitely established.

MOVING DAY FOR DAUGHTER OF ROYALTY

LONDON, Jan. 16. — It will be "moving day" for Princess Mary only daughter of the King and Queen.

She and her husband, Lord Harewood, and their two sons, Viscount Lascelles and the Hon. Gerald Lascelles, will go into residence in Green Street, Grosvenor Square, in the heart of Mayfair.

The house is a present from the Queen to her daughter although when Queen Mary purchased it last March there were many rumors that it was intended either for the Duke of Gloucester or Prince George.

The Earl of Harewood, one of the richest men in Great Britain, inherited a large fortune from the late Marquess of Clanricarde, and after his marriage with Princess Mary went into residence at the historic Chesterfield House, the former residence of the Earls of Chesterfield. This mansion probably contains 100 rooms, including four or five picture galleries.

In recent years, Lord Harewood has been feeling the burden of increasing taxation, along with many other members of the peerage.

Some time ago he was obliged to close Goldsbrough Hall, one of his Yorkshire seats, and his country house before he succeeded to the earldom.

About a year ago he found it was becoming impossible for him to maintain Chesterfield House, with its enormous responsibilities in the way of staff and upkeep. The Queen, with her characteristic practical knowledge, suggested finding a smaller residence and finally purchased No. 32 Green Street, formerly the residence of T. O. Sopwith. It is an ordinary Mayfair house of about 20 rooms, which can be run by about eight servants at the most.

At the beginning of December, Lord Harewood announced his intention of selling Chesterfield

House, and disposing of some of its art treasure. Goldsbrough Hall was already in the market.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

REGIN HERE TODAY Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves...

Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Letty King who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments...

Now go on with the story CHAPTER XXXIII 'I can't help it,' said Mary-Frances...

'Well, whatever it was, we'd be in Denver in sight of a week, and...

'Elope?' stammered Mary-Frances. She had, of course, planned for six bridesmaids...

'We could be engaged,' she said. 'And you could go on to Denver, and I could go to the girls' camp...

'Cripes!' he interposed. 'What's the use of all the agony? I'm not much hand at writing letters...

'You mean?' interpreted Mary-Frances, 'that if I don't go with you it will ruin your professional career?'

'Hell!' said a sorely overtried crazy about one another. All right. Why can't we take the bus and skip—most any night now?

'Well,' hebucked Mary-Frances, 'I must say, Earl—'

'I don't see your point of view and all like that. But I'm a gentleman. If you know anything about me...

'I'll think it over again. But I don't much believe I'd better go.'

'Well, yeah, sure. Now, after I got that letter from Butt yesterday, I got to thinking—see? I got to take his bus back—see?'

'I didn't say 'keeping in touch through letters.'

'Well, whatever it was, we'd be in Denver in sight of a week, and...

'Elope?' stammered Mary-Frances. She had, of course, planned for six bridesmaids...

'We could be engaged,' she said. 'And you could go on to Denver, and I could go to the girls' camp...

'Hell!' said a sorely overtried

'Well, we thought. We had to, when we were her age.'

'Yes, but why were we? I think we are different yet. And what is the matter with us, anyway? Other girls grow up and have jobs, and boy friends, and good times, and are happy...

'I'll give you my answer on Tuesday night.'

'I have to think it over some more,' said Mary-Frances. 'I just have to.'

'How about tomorrow night, Monday, then?'

'Well—' Mary-Frances acceded. 'Ermintrude, I have promised to give him my answer this very night!'

'Yes or no, then, tomorrow night. No kidding? No fooling?'

'I promise,' said Mary-Frances. Cecily said, 'You know, Ann, I do feel sort of better, and pushing away the bowl, emptied now of its hot, stimulating milk...

'It is on and boiling. I'll wash them; you dry them. Mary-Frances would have, if you'd told her. She just doesn't think.'

'Hell!' said a sorely overtried ilities all along. Sometimes I think Phil was right when he said that we didn't have any definite point that we could place and begin to hope—'

'Hope! Shoot, Ann—that's what we do best. That's what we've always done—wait around and hallowly hope. You told me yourself, half an hour ago, not to hope. It is the best bit of advice I've had. Look at Grand and Rosalie—hoping. Two summer homes, and—'

'Poor dears,' said Ann. (To Be Continued)

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD IS LOVE:—Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God.—1 John 4: 7.

JOBLESS RELIEF.

The department of labor has established an employment agency at Abilene to find jobs for the jobless. A telegram from Thomas L. Blanton, congressman for the seventeenth district of Texas declares that the agency will "exhaust all possible means to find jobs," and asks the cooperation of the newspapers in the work.

The bureau will find plenty of jobless. Getting jobs for them will be a more difficult matter. It should be given the full cooperation of every citizen and agency that interests itself in relief work.

The most interesting and promising item of unemployment relief work, however, comes from the congress of the United States where the house of representatives Friday approved the president's major project for enlivening business by a landslide vote. The house passed the two billion dollar reconstruction corporation bill by a vote of 335 to 55 and sent the measure to conference for adjustment of minor differences with the senate. These differences do not endanger the bill and it will be an operating fact within the next few days.

The bill is designed to send a stream of enlivening credit into the frozen assets of the national economic set-up. Resources locked up in the stagnation of timidity and fear would be melted back into a fluid condition and a normal circulation restored by which the wheels of industry would be started to turning again and confidence brought back.

When that is done there will be little need for government-established employment offices to find jobs for the jobless.

12 1/2 PER CENT CUT.

"Babe" Ruth has sent his 1932 contract, calling for a salary of $70,000, back to the New York Yankees unsigned. Last year the Babe drew $80,000, or $5,000 a year more than was paid the president of the United States who works all the year at a job far more vital than swinging a bat for six months out of the twelve. Mr. Hoover would probably jump at the chance to trade places with the Babe for a much greater cut than the diamond idol refused.

There are numerous employes over the nation, including some of the high salaried movie stars, who would be only too glad to accept a 12 and one-half percent salary cut instead of the reduction they have been forced to accept. The Babe has probably forgotten the lean years before the $80,000. He seems to have forgotten, too, that he can buy shoes for poor children from one-third to one-half cheaper than he has been paying for them.

IMPERATIVE—A MARKET.

Among the major projects that should be aggressively undertaken by the Cisco chamber of commerce this year is that of securing a dependable market for Cisco produce. Until that market is secured there is little hope for the agricultural development for which this county is fitted and upon which its hopes for prosperity have come in a large measure to be based. Recently what appeared to be an opportunity to secure a large plant of this character occurred and an effort looking to realization of the opportunity was started. This effort should be a continuous and insistent process. It should not be dropped until the goal sought after is obtained.

Whatever benefits Cisco is expected to realize must come through development of the resources at hand. This city and county have made remarkable progress in highway development and along many other lines and the achievements in this respect are monuments to the industry and enterprise of the citizens and leaders. Nor should the prosecution of these enterprises be dropped, but as aggressively continued as they have been pushed so far. But the prime fact exists that our population must be supported in the main upon the exploitation of local resources and it occurs to the News that the opportunities for this development have been neglected.

This country is admirably suited for diversified agricultural enterprises. Poultry and similar produce can be developed into a strong and profitable asset if the necessary effort is put forth. Obviously if Cisco is able to offer a dependable market for produce it will be able to extend its trade territory to the extent that it provides opportunity for profit to the people of the country around it.

As the condition now exists produce growers, if they undertake the business on any more than a nominal scale are forced to carry their products to competing cities and quite naturally their trade goes with them. It is purely a matter of common sense to give these people a market at home. It will no doubt be difficult, but that is no excuse for not putting forth every possible effort to obtain the market.

It required ten years of effort to secure the paving of highway 23 north of Cisco to the Shackelford county line but the project was achieved. If Cisco was able and willing to prosecute that important matter should it not also be able and willing to expend commensurate effort upon another project of worth as incalculable?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON JESUS AND NICODEMUS

Text John 3:1-16
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Jan. 17, Jesus and Nicodemus. John 3:1-16.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

If the stories in the New Testament had been highly elaborated and full of detail, they would not have been as widely read and have made as deep an impress upon the imagination and conscience as they have made. It is their simplicity and meagerness of detail that give them such outstanding value.

None the less, there are times when we wish that we knew more about some of the characters who are so dramatically set before us. This is particularly true concerning Nicodemus, the prominent Pharisee who came to Jesus by night. Much has been made by preachers and commentators of the fact that Nicodemus chose the night time for his visit. The worthy man has been subject to the imputation of cowardice, and yet the meager glimpses of the man that we have reveal him as anything but a coward. At a later time he defended Jesus under circumstances where even a word in behalf of the accused involved the greatest danger to himself.

The fact that Nicodemus came in evidence of his fairness of mind and his eagerness to know the truth. The fact that he chose the night time for his visit simply indicates the reasonable caution of the truth seeker and the man who feels the responsibility of his position. At this stage of his approach to Jesus he was an investigator.

Jesus evidently recognized his deep sincerity, for he treated his visitor with the utmost courtesy and patience. It is true that he spoke with great plainness, but he did Nicodemus the justice of treating him with candor and honesty.

Nicodemus, it should be noted was a Pharisee. If for Pharisee everywhere in the New Testament we should substitute the words "church member," the true effect of the reference would be much better apprehended. The Pharisees were in reality the earnest and devout party in Israel.

When Jesus contrasted the Pharisee and the publican at prayer, he did not intend for a moment to suggest that publicans were better than Pharisees. What he was pointing out was that even the Pharisee in his religious pride might have less reality of religion than a publican who felt his humility, and in whose soul there was a real quest of righteousness.

Nicodemus evidently represented what was best in Pharisaism. He was zealous to know the right and to do the right. Jesus, therefore, struck at the very center of the problem of religion and life. He expounded to Nicodemus the doctrine of the New Birth—the fact that religion must bring to men a regeneration of inner thought and not merely a conformity to outward standards. It was a doctrine that Nicodemus found hard to understand, chiefly because he approached the whole question with more formal conceptions of religion.

Says News Was In Error Thursday

Editor Cisco News: Your paper Thursday was in error in the article headed "Cisco Man Hurt in Auto Crash at Noon." The article read: "Joseph Courtney, son of Jake Courtney, received a cut in his right side and a painfully bruised right shoulder in a collision of cars at the intersection of J Avenue and fourteenth street about 12:30 this afternoon. He was given emergency treatment at a local physician's office."

He was given no treatment at any physician's office, as we have lived 23 years without the aid of man at any time. And I want the world to know if they are good servants you don't need man's help. Jeremiah says cursed is the man that trusts in man.

Speaking of the Weather—

by Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the U.S. Weather Bureau.

Heavy Snowstorms in June and August—No Foolin', It Happened in New England States in "Summerless" 1816.

The year 1816 has gone down into history as "the year without a summer," although, as far as has been ascertained by recent scientific investigation, it did not altogether deserve that title. Regular weather records were kept at that period in not more than 10 places in the United States, but many details concerning the famous cold year were recorded by persons who experienced its rigors. Typical of these descriptions is the following, written by Chauncey Jerome, at Plymouth, Conn.

"The next summer was the cold one of 1816, which none of the old people will ever forget and which many of the young have heard a great deal about. There was ice and snow in every month of the year. I well remember the seventh of June, while on my way to work, about a mile from home, dressed throughout with thick woolen clothes and an overcoat on, my hands got so cold that I was obliged to lay down my tools and put on a pair of mittens which I had in my pocket. It snowed about an hour that day. On the tenth of June my wife brought in some clothes that had been spread on the ground the night before, which were frozen stiff as in winter. On the fourth of July I saw several men pitching quoits in the middle of the city with thick overcoats on, and the sun was shining bright at the time. . . . Not half enough corn ripened that year to furnish seed for the next."

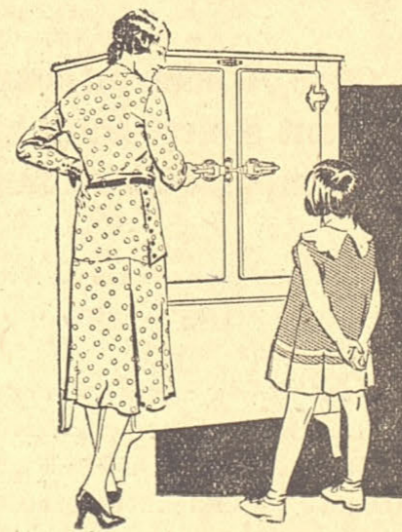

Charles Pierce's "Weather in Philadelphia" tells us that at that place "there was ice during every month of the year, not excepting June, July and August. There was scarcely
