

NAZIS PLACE MORE RESTRICTIONS ON JEWS

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Cisco, that smallish mid-west-central-Texas city famous for its dam and its lake and once famous for its Lobos, has contributed more to the football teams of other Texas high schools in the last 10 years than it has contributed to its own. That is a strange result for all our efforts to build back the prestige that once was, but a survey of Lobo emigration over the decade behind us reveals that approximately a full team of eleven good men have left the Lobo pennant to gallop to glory on other and greener gridirons.

This year, I am told, two of the semi-final eleven in the state interscholastic league race have former Cisco boys as members. They are Lubbock and Temple. What would Cisco have done this year with a Wild Walter? Haven't we heard somewhere that familiarity breeds contempt? And speaking of developing talent, what does the Masonic home team teach you?

Conservation, my lad, conservation. It's high time we started saving the resources within a 15-mile radius of Chesley park. If other teams like our sort, why not we ourselves?

A road project of more importance to Cisco than the construction of the 45-mile "cut-off" between here and Fort Worth was announced this week. It is the 4.8-mile lateral road to connect Carbon and the all-weather road system being built by Co. Comm'r Arch Bint between Highway 23 and the east line of the Cisco precinct. The new project gives this community a good road connection with the southeastern area of the county.

We have spent the last 10 years building roads out of Cisco. We now can well afford to devote some interest to building roads into Cisco. Eventually the Cisco-Carbon route will be paved.

What about the Cisco to Cross Plains highway? A public necessity and one that we can certainly get if we go after it.

Miss Laura Rupe is spending the afternoon in Abilene.

AA District to Be Organized Here Thursday

Organization of the Oil Belt AA football district under the new interscholastic league set-up is projected at a meeting of school officials of the district, known as No. 5, at the Laguna hotel in Cisco Thursday afternoon. The meeting was called by Supt. L. E. Dudley of Abilene, chairman of the Oil Belt executive committee. Under the new set-up schools with an enrollment of 500 or more for the preceding year will be classed as AA for football purposes, schools with less than 500, and 200 or more will be classed as "A" schools, and schools with less than 200 enrollment as "B" schools. Schools enrolling from 450 to 499 students may be admitted to AA competition on a favorable vote of other AA schools in the district. Stephenville has given notice it will seek admission to AA district No. 5 on this basis.

The new AA district, it was explained, will embrace Abilene, Breckenridge, Brownwood, Cisco, Mineral Wells, Ranger and possibly Stephenville. Big Spring, San Angelo and Sweetwater will play in another district. Eastland, with less than 450 enrollment, will play in the "A" division. Coaches will be expected to arrange their schedules for next year at the meeting here Thursday.

LEGION HEARS CONG. GARRETT MONDAY NIGHT

Preparedness Essential Former Service Men Told

Cong. Clyde L. Garrett of the 17th Texas district told members and guests of the John William Butts post of the American Legion last night that he is strictly in favor of American preparedness for the defense of this nation's freedom and liberties.

Garrett was the principal speaker at a barbecue dinner served by the Cisco post to 44 members and guests at 7:30 at the Legion hut. The congressman, whose address was otherwise informal, told the group that a navy second to none is the best guarantee against war that the country can have.

"I hope," he told the group, "that this country will never again send its young men forth in its defense with inadequate and makeshift equipment, but that the best in means and organization will be theirs."

Terrific Cost

Statistics revealing the startling cost in life and property of the World war were quoted. "It has been estimated," he said, "that the economic cost of the World war was 400 billions of dollars."

Cong. Garrett said he hoped that this country would never again send its young men across the sea to fight somebody else's war. "I hope," he said, "that we never forget the scars of the last."

Business and formality was dispensed with as the post enjoyed a program of good fellowship, with Rev. Joe I. Patterson, chaplain, serving as toastmaster. D. L. Langston, post commander, opened the meeting after the 44 members and guests had enjoyed a barbecue dinner of goat, beans, coffee and cake. He announced suspension of business and introduced the chaplain who introduced visitors from Eastland, Abilene and Cisco, and then presented Cong. Garrett.

Present were: Clyde L. Garrett, T. C. Pullman, V. O. Hatcher, H. J. Tanner, George Lane, P. L. Crossley, J. H. Mitchell and R. E. Brown, of Eastland; J. W. Booth of Moran; E. L. Hazlewood of Dothan; L. V. Franklin of Abilene, and D. L. Langston, J. L. Pippen, W. R. Pippen, Tom McAllister, J. R. McMurry, E. B. Owen, W. B. Seabourn, Fred Erwin, James Haynie, H. R. Garrett, B. ## Lobos Meet Moran Tonight at Local Gym

The Cisco Lobos will play their first home basket ball game of the current season tonight at 7 o'clock when they meet the Moran high school team at the Cisco gymnasium.

The Cisco cagers have shown great possibilities in games so far this season, sweeping the Cross Plains tournament which they won with an impressive victory over the Cross Plains quintet which took the district title last season. Faulty shooting cost the team a loss to the strong Carbon five after only two days' practice at Morton Valley a week ago.

Mrs. J. D. Meredith and daughter, Miss Lois Gant Meredith, of Moran spent Monday in Cisco.

"Movie Queen" Reserved Seats Ready Wednesday

Holders of tickets for the performances of "Movie Queen" Thursday and Friday evening may exchange these for reserved seats tickets at the Red Front Drug store, beginning tomorrow.

Tickets have been selling at 35 cents each and 20 cents each, the latter being a student ticket which is not exchangeable for reserved seats.

Miss Emiline Bogue expressed herself today as well pleased with the production, which those who have witnessed it in rehearsal say is the most entertaining that has ever been offered by an amateur cast here.

The show is sponsored by the Cisco Lions club. Film for the fourth and final act of the musical comedy—which will be in motion pictures picking up the story at the conclusion of the third act on stage and completing it—was being edited at the "Movie Queen" headquarters today.

Miss Cathryn Russell as Mary Brown, the movie star, and Sterling Drumwright as Larry Cain, her press agent, have the leading roles in the show. They are supported by a large cast chosen from among members of the Lions club and friends of the club. A chorus, which will dance and sing four routines and a fashion parade are among the features of the comedy.

WTCC Demands Equitable Rates

AMARILLO, Dec. 13. (AP)—Equitable distribution of freight rates was proposed here Monday by the West Texas chamber of commerce in an effort "to strike a sledge-hammer blow for both producer and consumers" at an alleged economic disadvantage.

The district meeting, with Carl Studer of Canadian presiding, suggested a federation of forces, including the 20 towns represented and others interested, to wage a campaign for legislation abolition of alleged unequal freight rate zones, which reach a zenith in the panhandle-plains area.

D. A. Bauden of Abilene described the rates of this area as 185 per cent in relation to the 100 per cent area known as the "eastern or official" territory, including Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and other eastern states.

Jim Wilson of Floydada introduced the resolution, unanimously adopted, calling for the uniting of the anti-discriminatory rate forces under the name of "National Freight Rate Equity federation."

SNOW AT BORGER
BORGER, Dec. 13 (AP)—A heavy snow fell here today and the ground was well covered.

CARBON-CISCO LATERAL ROAD NOW ASSURED

4.8 Miles to Connect With Project East of Highway 23

Work on a WPA lateral road project for the construction of an all-weather road from Carbon to join with that now being built by Comm'r Arch Bint between the east line of the Cisco precinct and Highway 23 will get under way Wednesday, County Engineer A. F. Taylor announced yesterday. This project, when completed at a cost of $16,665, will give Cisco a direct all-weather connection with Carbon.

A total of 114 men will be employed for three months. The road will be 4.8 miles in length and the project will include widening of the right-of-way, grubbing, raising fills, cutting down hills, widening embankments and building rock culverts. Surfacing will be with gravel.

Work is progressing satisfactorily on the project being built by Comm'r Bint east of Highway 23 and with which the new Carbon precinct road connects. Three separate connections with Highway 23 are provided.

The two roads form one of the most important lateral highway developments in the Cisco trade territory, providing a direct, all-weather connection between Cisco and the Carbon-Gorman area.

Telephone Co. Official Frowns on Profit-Sharing

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13 (AP)—C. P. Cooper, vice president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, told the senate committee today he believed profit-sharing would tend to exaggerate the peaks and valleys of industrial booms and depressions. He said he believed incentive taxation, to encourage profit-sharing, was unsound as a national policy.

Profit-sharing is hardly applicable to regulated business, such as the telephone industry, Cooper told the committee investigating profit-sharing plans.

Welfare Ass'n to Collect Magazines

As a means of raising money, the Cisco Charity and Welfare Ass'n is working out a plan to collect papers and magazines, which will be sold to a business firm at Fort Worth. The public will be notified through the Press when these papers will be collected, it was announced. On D avenue are barrels which the welfare organization asks that clothing, shoes, food—in fact anything of use, be placed. For Christmas, fruit and candy will be needed. A number of toys are being repaired and these will be used only for those who would get nothing otherwise. "Talk to your neighbors and friends about the Welfare organization, get it on your heart and mind, and give accordingly," pleaded Mrs. P. Pettit, secretary of the association.

Clemency Denied Doomed Negro Man

AUSTIN, Dec. 13 (AP)—The state board of pardons and paroles today declined to recommend clemency for Morris Norman, negro, sentenced to die December 16 for attacking a white woman in Donley county. The board declared that a careful review of the case left no question as to Norman's guilt.

Makes Annual Appeal For Scottish Rite Hospital

Nathan Adams, Dallas banker and philanthropist, annually asks his friends, through a campaign of personal letters, to contribute funds to aid afflicted youngsters in the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. The picture shows Mr. Adams reading a story to two little hospital patients. Just before Christmas each year, he makes this appeal to his friends. During 1938 the institution has treated 3,450 crippled children from 892 Texas towns and cities. During a 15-year record of mercy, the hospital has handled more than 40,000 unfortunate little ones. Since its establishment, not one patient or guardian has paid a single penny for treatment of a patient. Only those who cannot pay are admitted. Children of all races, creeds and religions are welcome.

Old Santa Will Be Here Saturday

Old Santa Claus will arrive in Cisco at 2 p. m. Saturday, coincident with beginning of the third Saturday afternoon trade promotion program of the junior chamber of commerce, it was announced today. The remainder of the December series of week-end programs were discussed at the regular dinner of the junior chamber of commerce last night at the Laguna hotel and plans for Santa Claus' appearance here this week-end and next were approved.

M. Sheinberg is chairman of the current week's program.

"All merchants are joining enthusiastically in the treasure hunt program," said Sheinberg. Each is contributing gifts for distribution among visitors Saturday. Everybody is invited, he said.

Serving with Mr. Sheinberg are A. D. Starling, Ernest Lennon and Connie Collins.

Old Santa Claus will make his appearance next Saturday on a fire truck, parading D avenue and distributing favors to the children.

Last Saturday's program brought the biggest crowd in years to Cisco and that of this week-end is expected to attract an even larger number, junior chamber of commerce officials said.

At the meeting last night, the Jaycees discussed continuance of trade promotion programs next year. Without decision on a general plan for such events, it was voted to stage a rodeo sometime in January, and James Harvey was named chairman of a committee to plan it. Time for this rodeo will be announced later.

Head of Drug Firm Ordered Under Arrest

NEW YORK, Dec. 13 (AP)—Donald Coster, president of McKesson and Robbins, drug concern whose financial affairs are under investigation, was ordered arrested today by federal authorities on a charge of violating the securities exchange act.

George Dietrich, assistant treasurer; George Vernard, Montreal agent, and W. W. Smith and Co., English agents for the drug concern, were also ordered arrested.

C. OF C. DIRECTORS MEET

The board of directors of the Cisco chamber of commerce will meet in a special session this evening at 7:30. The meeting will take place in the chamber's directors room.

PROPERTY TO BE REMOVED IS RESTRICTED

Only That Necessary for Personal Use May Be Taken

BERLIN, Dec. 13 (AP)—The ministry of economics today issued a decree putting new obstacles in the way of Jews removing property from Germany.

The decree, declared necessary to prevent the flight of capital, forbids German Jews leaving Germany after January 14 from taking objects except those necessary for personal use.

It also restricts the right of non-Jewish Germans and foreign residents to remove property.

The restriction was announced as Jews hurriedly sought cash to meet the first installment of the billion-mark fine they must pay Thursday as a punishment for the killing of a German diplomat in Paris by a Jew.

Eden Goes to White House for Visit With FDR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13. (AP)—Anthony Eden, Britain's former foreign minister, visited President Roosevelt today for an exchange of views.

Eden was accompanied to the White House by Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state.

The Britisher arrived early today for a two-day visit. He explained that he had no official mission to Washington but expected to see "numerous officials informally."

Longview Man Heads Oil Division

AUSTIN, Dec. 13. (AP)—John Taylor, district attorney at Longview during the period of martial law in the east Texas oil field, today was appointed head of the oil and gas division of the Texas Railroad commission, effective January 1.

He will succeed Laten Stanberry, resigned.

Appointment of Stanford Payne of Del Rio, former state representative, to succeed R. C. Granberry in charge of Rule 37 department of the oil division, was also announced.

Allred Finds State Buildings Are "Fire Traps"

AUSTIN, Dec. 13 (AP)—Gov. Allred today asserted that several state eleemosynary institution buildings were "fire traps" and declared it was "nothing short of criminal" to confine unfortunate people in the structures.

The statement is made in the second part of an address to be delivered to the legislature. He previously urged $2,000,000 a year more for old age pensions. Besides asking that the eleemosynary buildings be fire-proofed, Allred requested aid for the needy blind and dependent children and an appropriation for the teachers' retirement fund.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Being therefore justified by faith, let us have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Blessed be Thou Lord God. In Thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength to all.—Rom. v. 1; I Chron. xxix. 10, 11.

O Holy Saviour, Friend unseen!
The faint, the weak, on Thee may lean;
Help me throughout life's varying scene,
By faith to cling to Thee.

Blest is my lot, whate'er befall;
What can disturb me, who appall,
While, as my Strength, my Rock, my AH,
Saviour! I cling to Thee? —C. ELLIOTT.

Progress is the law of life.—Robert Browning.

It Proves What?

SECY WALLACE waxes enthusiastic over the returns in the AAA cotton referendum last Saturday, asserting it proves the farmers want the government's crop control program continued and that the result of the voting—heavily in favor of cotton quotas—means permanence of the Triple-A controls. He naively explains the refusal of tobacco and rice growers to favor controls as meaning the farmers think no emergency exists sufficient to warrant controls on those crops. We should like to ask Mr. Wallace how he or anyone else conversant with the situation in cotton could have expected the majority of cotton growers to vote away between $15 and $20 a bale on their cotton and vote in the distinct probability of being penalized an additional $15 per bale? There was no question but what the result would go exactly as it did. There is no prospect of the grower receiving anything like an adequate return from the normal market for cotton, and very few of them can afford to pass up a subsidy on what they are allowed to grow at the risk of being penalized below the market price. Refusal of tobacco and rice growers to approve controls indicates a determination on the part of these growers to put their trust in natural laws rather than poplitical management even with the latter's promise of larger immediate income. It is clear that the cotton program of the AAA has been a dismal failure. And nothing, we think, with more certainty admits this failure than the

JOHN T. FLYNN

BY JOHN T. FLYNN

NEA Service Staff Correspondent Charles F. Kettering, General Motors' laboratory man and invention hunter, told the O'Mahoney monopoly committee in Washington that what the country needs is new industries. But what interested me most was his statement that you cannot just go out and look for new inventions and find them in a hurry.

He said he had young men working on definite problems for 15 years who had not found the answer yet. In that statement lies an important fact for those who are sitting around waiting for a new invention to drag us out of the hole. I once spent a day with another man like Charles Kettering—Dr. Willis R. Whitney, retired head of the General Electric laboratories.

He said that few of the great epoch-making inventions were discovered by looking specifically for them. Scientists stumbled over them, often looking for something else.

The Roentgen rays—X-rays which have played so amazing a role in medicine and engineering—were not discovered because someone realized we ought to have a means of looking through a man's body and observing its defects. Roentgen was looking for attitude of the AAA authority in accepting a specious political verdict over the plain economic realities of the program.

Blood-Language Rule Leads to Absurdity

If you remember the geometry you studied in high school, you may recall a stunt which went under the high-sounding title of "reductio ad absurdum."

The idea was that if you had a theory to test, and suspected that there was something wrong with it, you selected the dizziest example you could think of and carried it to its logical conclusion. Then, when you had a thoroughly cockeyed situation on your hands, you proved that the theory itself was phony. You did this by reducing it to absurdity—"reductio ad absurdum."

For a long time now the theory that remote ties of ancestry and language should determine a people's government has been widely held. It led to much map-making at the Versailles conference, and more recently it gave Herr Hitler a fine excuse for pushing his drive to the east.

NOW the Italians have picked it up, looking toward expansion in the direction of Tunisia and Corsica; and it begins to look as if the old high school process of reductio ad absurdum had set in.

It may be quite true that the bulk of the Tunisians and Corsicans are either of Italian ancestry or speak with a pronounced Italian accent. But if that means that those territories should immediately go under the Italian flag, then Uncle Sam himself is sitting on a lot of subject peoples who are under the wrong flag.

By that theory the Dutch ought to reclaim a good part of Pennsylvania, and Spain should take over large portions of Arizona and New Mexico. Sweden would get a large area in Minnesota and the Dakotas, and by right of discovery and settlement should be entitled to part of New Jersey. The French would have a respectable claim to New Orleans, and Italy could lay claim to a good bit of land along Long Island Sound. Poland could reclaim many city blocks in Chicago and Germany could assert title to much of St. Louis and Cincinnati. New York City would be split about 30 ways, considerable territory in the west would go back to the Indians, and Japan would get Hawaii.

All of this is pretty absurd, of course. Yet it follows quite logically, once you accept the premise that remote ties of blood and language are all-important. And if logical adherence to that theory leads to absurdity in their country, perhaps the same thing is true elsewhere.

THE plain fact is that this blood-and-language business has been overworked to an amazing degree. There are far more important considerations to be applied in determining natural boundaries, and it is high time the fact was realized.

There have been so many migrations and so much shifting and intermingling of peoples that the map can never be unscrambled and peace can never be attained on a blood-and-language basis. As long as that is the accepted shibboleth there will be wars and rumors of wars. The world's hope for peace depends on recognition of the fact that some saner and more practical means of determining who shall rule whom must be found.

something else. When he found the X-ray it was good for looking through the teeth at hidden defects.

We did not learn to fly by working through a long series of inventions directed at that precise end. Flying became possible and indeed inevitable, Dr. Whitney told me, when the gasoline motor was discovered. The man who made that motor was not thinking about inventing flying.

Radio was not discovered by men seeking directly for a means of distant communication or of broadcasting. It was an accident. When Edison discovered the incandescent lamp he was deeply troubled by a glow which appeared near the base of the filament in the lamp. He worked and others worked to get rid of that defect—they called it the Edison effect.

They did not know it was radio they were trying to get rid of. For it is that phenomenon which led to radio when it was understood. It had actually been discovered for years before anyone knew it.

At the time I talked to Dr. Whitney he had just made a strange discovery. He wasn't looking for it. He was experimenting with electricity as a means of stimulating the growth of plants. Out of mere curiosity he subjected an egg to the small device he had constructed. It killed the egg. So he thought perhaps he had found a means of killing insect pests. He put flies

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOTT—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.
DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty.
JACK HANLEY—flying sailor. He faced a test of a patient love.
MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday: Judy feels guilty talking with Dwight in her car. Then another automobile approaches: it is a Mr. Marvel's. Marvel leans out, says, "So this is what you're up to?"

CHAPTER XXIX

For a moment she could only stare at the girl behind the wheel of the other car. Marvel opened her door with slow deliberateness, and then came and stood beside Judy's car, looking at Dwight and Judy with a burning directness.

Even in the darkness, Judy could see that Marvel's face was tired, that her hair was not as beautifully waved as usual. She looked as if she'd been driving a long time, as if she'd been crying, too.

"I went to the ship," Marvel said. "You weren't there. I went home. I saw you hadn't even been there since you got back. I called your house, Judy Alcott. I knew he'd be with you. I've been driving for hours. I felt, somehow that I'd find you like this."

Judy's voice refused to function. But Dwight, after his first surprise, could only say, "I thought you were still on the yacht."

"The yacht!" Her lips twisted. "Do you think it was any fun, after that you'd said to me? And there's something else. Something I—I didn't know before."

Dwight said, "Marvel, don't jump at conclusions. We—I—Judy and I—"

"I suppose you were out here working out some problem in naval engineering!" Marvel said with fine scorn.

Now Judy's voice returned. She said, "You mustn't get the wrong idea." Her face burned. She tried to explain, but anything she could say would be cheap and untrue, and so she closed her mouth and let Marvel's eyes flicker her face. She didn't blame the other girl for being angry. But she wanted passionately for her to understand, and she knew she never would.

Then Marvel said, "I don't intend to stand out here and make a scene. Get in my car, Dwight. Drive to the house. Judy, follow us. I want to speak to you, too."

"Maybe I'd better go home—"

Marvel's eyes snapped. "No. You're not going to sneak out of this. You wouldn't want me to broadcast it over the station that I found you two together, would you? That wouldn't do you any good. Better follow us."

She got into her own car, and Dwight silently followed her. When he had started down the drive, Judy put her clutch in and shifted to first. What did Marvel want with her?

In a few minutes the strange procession stopped in the driveway of the white house. Marvel fumbled in her handbag for the key, handed it to Dwight.

Judy looked around the living room. The dust was thick on the glass tables, and curls of it rolled on the bare floors with their bold patterns. The blinds were drawn, there was a closed, choking airlessness about the house. As if no one had lived in it a long time. Since Marvel had left for Bremerston, it had been shut up.

Judy sat down in one of the low, angled chairs. Marvel lit a cigarette. "Sit down, Dwight," she said.

Then she leaned forward, "We're going to get to the bottom of this thing. I'm not going to do any hysterical accusing, and Dwight, you can swallow anything you want to say about Cary Tennant. I could have married him long before I ever saw you, and I didn't."

Judy thought, looking at her, that Marvel had never looked so weary. It was as if she were even too tired to put on her usual play of temper. She was simply hard, flint hard. She had a job to do, and she was doing it. For the first time Judy saw the determination of Marvel's jaw and realized that the businessman who had millions had left his daughter more than money. He had left her an iron will.

Judy thought of Jack, in the white hospital room. What if he could know what was going on here. Jack, who was so happy, so steeped in contentment now that she had promised to marry him.

Marvel was saying, "Since I first came to California, Dwight,

Lovers Aweigh— (CONTINUED FROM PAGE 2)

I knew that you had been carrying on with her. She knew that I knew it, because I told her. I tried to fight it. Maybe I lost. That's what I want to know. Are you going to marry her when I divorce you?"

Judy squirmed at the cold, matter-of-fact question. She cried quickly, "Please, Mrs. Campbell! You don't understand! I'm engaged to Jack Hanley. I—I don't love Dwight. Oh, you're wrong! You're wrong." She pleaded for understanding, her eyes on Marvel's still face. "I'll admit when you first came I was hurt. I—I was foolish. I thought—I thought I cared for Dwight. But now I know better. Oh, I can't begin to tell you, it's so plain now! There was never anything real between us. It was hard to let go the dream I'd had, don't you see? But that's all it was. A dream."

Suddenly, as she watched Marvel's face, from some deep well of intuition inside her, Judy knew that Marvel wasn't as cold as she tried to appear. She was suffering. Her eyes filled with pain, and her hand, holding the cigarette, trembled.

Judy was talking rapidly, trying desperately to explain the nebulous and only half-thought-out emotions which had swamped her. "Dwight didn't ever love me. Even now, he only wanted to see me because he was lonely and hurt. I felt sorry for him. Oh, I could see—I tell you, I could feel—how lost he was. He—he loved you, Mrs. Campbell. It wouldn't have hit him so hard if he didn't. That's the only reason he turned to me. He didn't talk about me—he poured out his woes, and spoke always of you!"

And now Judy was weeping softly, into a handkerchief she had hastily extracted from her bag. "This is too big to pretend about. I know the truth now. Jack Hanley is—he's wonderful, he's been so good to me. I've been a sneaking, sniffing little fool, keeping him waiting, not knowing my own mind." She raised her eyes, looked straight at Marvel. "I don't belong in this. Only you must believe me. I don't love your husband and he doesn't love me."
Marvel stood up. "Dwight!" she said. There was a sound, as if she sobbed once, and then Dwight's arms were around her. Judy averted her eyes. There was such gladness on Marvel's face, such a stunned, incredulous light in Dwight's eyes.

As Judy walked out of the room she heard Marvel saying, "Dwight, I—I wasn't going to tell you, but I came back, I had to come back, because we're going to have a baby."

CHAPTER XXX
Judy was trembling as she slipped behind the wheel of her car. Tears stung her eyes. Marvel and Dwight were going to have a baby. This would make right all the tortured little conflicts between them. Marvel would soften, she'd not be so selfish and demanding.

The baby would absorb her time and emotion, and when Dwight was away at sea, her life would not be empty.

"Oh, I'm glad for them!" Judy thought, "Glad!" Like a thick fog lifting to let sunshine drench down on the dampened land, happiness was warming through her. All the doubts and fears she harbored in her heart so long were gone.

Jack, who had waited had trusted, was in the hospital. She must go to him. Right now! She glanced at her wrist watch. It was very late—nearly 11 o'clock. But she had to see him. Even if he were asleep. But he wouldn't be. He'd be sitting up, reading one of the books she had brought him.

The nurse in the hospital was doubtful. "We don't allow visitors so late."

"I must see him! I'm sure if Commander Sloane is about—"
"I'd have to telephone him, he's not here."

Judy waited impatiently while the nurse phoned. At last she was told, "You may go up. But I'm afraid he'll be asleep."
"I won't wake him if he is," said Judy. "Only, I'm so sure he won't be!"

*****
This thing that had happened to her was so miraculous, she could not believe that Jack, who loved her, had not felt it, too. And when she stood in the door of his room and saw the pool of light from the lamp on the bedside stand, her heart seemed to give a shout of gladness. He was up!

"Jack!" She ran to him, and her lips brushed his. There was moisture on her cheek. He felt it, and said wonderingly, Judy, what's happened? What brought you here?"
"Oh, darling, darling, I'm so happy. I'm alive! Alive, for the first time in months. Oh, Jack!" She took his hand. She sat on the side of the bed. He smiled at her.

"Jack, tell me, did you ever feel safe and sure, all the time—did you feel that it was all over?"
He looked at her and said gravely, "I've been worried, Judy. But I'm not now. Something's happened. You're different."

"I'm alive, I tell you! Oh, darling, I didn't want you to know, but I—I was unsure. And I—I did see Dwight!"
"I know that," he said quietly. "Jack!" Suddenly she felt the pain that he must have known, and she said, "Oh, my dear, I wouldn't have done it if I had realized."
"You had to get over it," he said. "Like being stage struck. You outgrew it. I was willing to wait."

*****
She put her cheek against his. "That's all you've been doing, endlessly, waiting . . . waiting . . . waiting for me to get my sense back!" Her fingers touched his hair.

"But the waiting's now over," he said. "Isn't it?"
"Yes. Tonight Marvel came back. And I—I knew all the time that Dwight was hurt and lonely and that he still loved her. But I didn't want to believe it." Then she said, "I was fair to you, Jack. You must understand that. I told him right from the beginning—the first time I saw him, after we became engaged—that I was going to marry you."

"I never doubted that, Judy." His brown eyes were so clear.
She clung to him. "I haven't been worth your trust, Jack. You're so fine!"
"But you have been worth it," he smiled. "If you weren't the sweet, honest girl you are, you wouldn't be here now, would you?" And then his arms tightened around her. His mouth was warm and hungry on hers. "It's been such a long time, darling. Sometimes I thought I'd never have the patience to stick it out. You're so wonderful. I was afraid he'd get you."

She lay very still. She said, "It was a dream. A mirage. I can't understand why I didn't know it before. But I just clung to it, I just kept it with me and nursed it—"

His understanding was sweet. She said, "And you're handsome, too. Aren't you?" She tried to laugh. "I shouldn't be here. No doubt the nurse is scandalized." She touched his cheek. "Marvel and Dwight are going to have a baby. Isn't that swell?"
He was really surprised at that. "How do you know?"

She confessed, "I eavesdropped." Then she said, "We'll never speak of them again. When we see them, we'll pretend that nothing—"
Her voice broke. That wouldn't be easy. You couldn't dismiss the past just by making up your mind to forget. Possibly Jack would never forget the anguish she had caused him. And Marvel would never forget. And Judy . . . No, Judy would never really forget either.

He said tenderly, "That's part of living, Judy. Learning."

"I've learned. Truly I have."
There was a silence. They clung to each other's fingers. At last he said, "Suppose we don't wait a week after I get out? I can walk. I walked this afternoon. Maybe the doctor will let me go home tomorrow."

"Silly!" She smiled at him. "If you threaten to leave the hospital before the doctor says you're strong enough, you know what I'll do? I'll make the chaplain come right up here and marry us here! And then you'll have to do what I say!"

His eyes lighted, his big arms reached for her. "Judy!" After a while he said, "That's not a bad idea, Miss Alcott. Not a bad idea at all. I may hold you to that." And he was kissing her again, until her heart was hammering madly and the room was spinning around her.

"I love you, Judy," he said huskily.

"I love you, too. Oh, darling, I love you so much!"
When the nurse peered in, a moment later, she said grumpily, "Hmhm! If you don't marry her now, Lieutenant Hanley, it just won't be respectable!"

Postmasters of 17th District Are Organized

EASTLAND, Dec. 13. (Sp.)—Organization of the Seventeenth Congressional District Postmasters association was completed Sunday at a meeting attended by 60 at the Connellee hotel in Eastland. Mineral Wells was chosen as the site for the next meeting.

D. C. Harris of Mineral Wells was chosen as the president, Claude Thompson of Breckenridge, as the vice president and Luther McCrea of Cisco as the secretary-treasurer.

Postmaster and Mrs. Frank A. Jones were recognized at the session and complimented for their part in the arrangements for the convention.

Congressman Clyde L. Garrett of Eastland commended the group for their organization and expressed his wishes for a successful association. J. W. Cockrill, secretary to Congressman Garrett, spoke also.

Postmaster W. D. deGrassi of Amarillo, president of the Texas Postmasters association, also was a speaker, as well as Milburn McCarty, past president of the Eastland and West Texas chambers of commerce, who welcomed the postmasters.

P. M. Juvenal of Abilene, from the post office inspector's department, urged postmasters to use salesmanship in their jobs. He illustrated by stating a postmaster should always assume a parcel is to be insured and ask the patron "How much do you want it insured for?" rather than stating "Do you want it insured?"

The group voted that meetings would be held in early April and early October each year.

Rev. P. W. Walker, pastor of the First Methodist church of Eastland, delivered the invocation. Saxophone and piano music was furnished by Betty Wiegand and Mava Lou Crossley of Eastland. Yancey McCrea, Jr., of Cisco, played the accordion.

The organization was formed temporarily last spring at Abilene and until Sunday the seventeenth congressional district was the only fully organized sector in the state.

At Longest Last: Buster Dogs Dollars; Would Feature Fabulous Feet at Fairs

BY WATT EXTREMITIES

NEA Service Phenomena Editor SNOWBALL, Ark., Dec. 13.—Here are the biggest feet in the world—in the opinion of the fellow who pushes them up and down the Elps of Searcy county, Arkansas.

A traveling salesman with an eye for big problems has estimated that Buster would wear a size 42 shoe. Truth is Buster gets his shoes from a man here in Snowball, Ark., which is just five miles from the flinty acreage of the Scoot family.

There are four stores, a blacksmith shop and a hitching rail in Snowball, and Buster doesn't say whether he gets his shoes at the store or at a blacksmith shop. The Scoot scion has no scientific explanation for the size of his feet. "They just grewed that way," says he.

But he has high hopes and aspirations for them the next two years. At the end of that time he wants to return to Searcy county for the squirrel shooting.

In the meantime he would like to exhibit his pair of pedals at both the New York and San Francisco expositions, thereby giving people at both ends of the nation an opportunity to educate themselves on what can be done with a pair of feet in Arkansas.

Buster also hopes to add a little something to the Scoot pocketbook for the possible purchase of new shoes and other incidentals.

Five generations of the Scoots live in Searcy county and Buster isn't sure how many earlier generations lived there.

Buster is 6-foot-3 and weighs 170. He can run faster than most men, jump as high as any normal person and claims he "can jig-dance with the best of 'em."

Buster Scoot puts on his shoe (size 42).

Lower Tax Seen as Rail Spending Spur

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 13. (P)—The senate profit-sharing committee heard testimony Monday incentive taxation might help loosen a tremendous backlog of railroad equipment purchases that would put 500,000 men to work in the heavy industries.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, said the carriers should spend $1,000,000,000 a year for the next 10 years for modernization, replacement and repair.

But before the railroads can do this, he added, they must squeeze about $4,000,000,000 out of their top-heavy capital structure.

The witness agreed with Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.), committee member, much progress could be made toward reducing the class one railroads' $11,250,000,000 bonded debt if the government waived income tax requirements on the "paper profits" that would accrue to the roads if they bought these outstanding bonds at their present market value of about $7,250,000,000.

Fletcher suggested also the railroads be excused from paying undistributed profits taxes on the money they put into new equipment.

The railroad counsel expressed hope the adoption of some such principle of incentive taxation by

STORIES IN STAMPS

Nominated for President Third Successive Time

FORMER district attorney, mayor of Buffalo, governor of New York state, Stephen Grover Cleveland loomed large in the eyes of the Democratic National convention of 1884. For 23 years the Democratic party had been out of power in national affairs and Cleveland appeared to be just the man to put it back. He was.

Weakened by defection of a large group of independents, the "Mugwumps," the Republicans gave ground in the election and Cleveland was victorious, but only after one of the bitterest campaigns in American history. He defeated James G. Blaine of Maine.

Cleveland's first term was uneventful but marked by extensive use of the veto power and civil service reform. In 1888 the Democrats renominated Cleveland but he was defeated by Benjamin Harrison of Indiana. The campaign turned on the tariff issue.

By 1892 again, however, the tide had turned once more and Cleveland was nominated for the presidency for the third successive time. This time he defeated Harrison. And promptly he set about to repeal the silver legislation which had put $600,000,000 of "fiat" money into circulation. He was successful but in the struggle he alienated a great section of his party.

At the same time he was faced with the great Pullman strike in Chicago where he finally called out the federal troops to restore order.

Cleveland retired into private life in 1897 after a strife-torn second term. He is shown on a stamp of the new U. S. regular series, enlarged. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)
