HONEST CITIZEN TO BLAME?

State Fire Marshal Eugene Sanders, here yesterday to confer with municipal authorities on Cisco's bad fire record and to see if something can not be done about it, blames much of the difficulty in keeping down fires upon the honest citizen. The public is woefully thoughtless of the significance of fires. The average man or woman is disinclined to do anything that may require his or her appearance in court or before the officials. In the case of destructive fires their personal loss is not apparent in the insurance that is paid the property owners for their losses. They do not see insurance premiums as assessments against themselves and their neighbors for the loss that another has sustained. Consequently they fail to realize that the greater the loss the greater the cost in premiums to themselves.

Mr. Sanders does not insist that all fires are intentional. On the contrary he insists that they are not. But the cooperation of the citizens in general is just as essential in getting rid of fires that result from carelessness as it is essential to check the shady operations of the fire bug.

When a destructive fire takes place the loss in added premium costs is but one costly result, the state fire marshal pointed out. For one thing there is a loss in taxable values which must be made up by increased tax assessments against the rest of the property. For another there is often a loss of payrolls. When a business house burns, if it is not replaced, a number of people may be thrown out of employment. The community has a positive interest in the property of its citizens. This interest is sufficient to demand that every person in that community cooperate to the end that the preservation of that property is assured.

Cisco is paying this year between $8,000 and $9,000 in excess premiums. As the News pointed out several days ago it is possible for Cisco to save about $20,000 annually on its present insurance bill. This saving is possible through a reduction of fire losses to a minimum which would entitle the city to the maximum credit of 15 per cent in the rates that apply. At present we are paying a 12 per cent penalty, or 27 per cent more than the minimum.

Twenty thousand dollars circulating in Cisco instead of being paid out for insurance would mean a distinct stimulus to local business conditions.

A STRONG SCHOOL.

Randolph college last night closed what was said to be its most successful year. That verdict does not overlook the fact that the school has had years in which its student body was three times as large as this year and its graduating class far more numerous than the twenty students who stood on the platform last night to receive their diplomas from the hands of President Lee Clark. That class was the smallest in its history. Yet the diplomas they received represent in the authority behind them the strongest school values that Randolph has ever offered.

Numbers do not make schools no more than size makes a man. What Randolph has done during the past year recommends the college more than all the larger student bodies, the larger faculties and the greater expenditures of the past can recommend. Not only has it survived two of the hardest years in the history of the educational institu-

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON.—The morale of government employees probably is lower than it ever was before.

These hundreds of thousands of workers, widely regarded as a privileged class and often called "parasites" by the cheap demagogues of Congress, are no longer to be envied. They haven't yet shared proportionately the misery of the mass of wage earners employed by private business, but they have been going through a miserable period in which everything is uncertain except for the certainty that things are going to get worse.

At a time when President Roosevelt himself has urged wage increases on private industry, a large proportion of them face the likelihood of a 40 per cent reduction of income if they are lucky enough not to lose their jobs. And Washington isn't such a relatively happy place to live in as it used to be. Nervousness, which sometimes approaches hysteria, is in the air.

These are the chief causes of worry: 1. The Roosevelt economy program, if carried through, means that a lot of people are going to lose their jobs—nobody can guess who—or that, as made possible under a bill just passed the House, much larger numbers will be furloughed for 90 days without pay.

2. No one has any idea what will happen—or to whom—under the much press-agented government reorganization program, which is tied up with the economy drive. The administration has delayed announcement of its plans because it has found reorganization much more difficult than had been expected

3. The patronage bosses of the Democratic party would like to give out as many jobs to their clamoring hordes as they can.

There's a definite attempt to break down at least a part of the civil service system by which federal employees have considered themselves protected. About 130,000 small jobs are not under civil service in addition to the higher posts—most of which would go to Democrats in any event. Those jobs have always been considered "safe," but their occupants are worrying now. And there are several thousand more highly-paid employees brought under civil service during the Hoover administration. Many Democrats favor taking those jobs for their own folks, although such procedure if repeated from administration to administration definitely would stop the progress of civil service.

4. Any employee of more than 39 years' service may, under the independent offices bill passed by the House, be retired at the discretion of his department or bureau head on an annuity running from $900 to $1200 a year. Some of the government's most valuable employees are now worrying over the possibility that they may suddenly lose their jobs and be reduced to a bare level of subsistence.

Federal employees have already taken a 15 per cent pay cut—a reduction which may be lessened whenever the president finds that the cost of living has come within 15 per cent of its 1928 average. (He is required by Congress to investigate and act on that point every six months, which does give the federal employe a protection against inflation.) (Copyright, 1933, NEA Service Inc.)

tions of the southwest but it has made itself stronger at the end of those two years than at the beginning. It began them without financial resources and it has maintained its high standards of training with a financial record that bears comparison with any similar institution. Its resources were great in the character of the men and women who directed it. President Clark and his co-workers are entitled to the praise. They have made Randolph a school that is worthy of Cisco's sacrifice. They took it as a school on the verge of collapse. They have given it a future. Randolph has become something of which this section and Cisco in particular may well be proud.

COTTON MILLS TURNING.

Unfilled orders at Texas cotton mills at the end of April were three times as great as the total at the end of April a year ago, says the University of Texas bureau of business research. The wheels of industry are beginning to stir. Before long they will be whirling a song of prosperity say those prophets of rosy skies who have been waiting three long years to take their harps from the willows of gloom and defeat. The newspapers are carrying article after article telling of increased employment and higher wages. The enlivening energy seems to be creeping slowly but surely throughout the drab fabric of the nation's and the world's commerce and industry.

Chemists say that the water of Lake Cisco is ideal for textile and dyeing operations. In fact, they say that it is rare water for Texas. There is no gypsum, no salt, no mineral impregnation that spells bane to the weaver and dyer as well as to the other makers of things in the world of industry. There is a great market in every direction from Cisco. There are ears in this old world that would be eager to hear that.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Specs seems to have made a real hit with that "itch" story the other day. Numbers of people have said they were cutting it out for future reference. One reader clipped it to send to a relative who had tried a lot of eczema remedies without relief. I think it's a good idea. I've got a lot of faith in that poke-root treatment or I shouldn't have said anything about it. Whenever this column recommends anything you can put it down that its first rate. That remedy wasn't patented and nobody paid me a sou to give my testimonial so you see that the idea was entirely altruistic.

I don't know how the remedy will work on the eczema. But I know darn well it will work with the garden variety of itch. That poke-root is poison in more ways than one. It's poison to the fish. If you get any of it in your mouth, your stomach will come upstairs in a hurry.

As long as I have been in west Texas I have never seen any poke plant. But it grows in east Texas like a weed. We kids used to take the berries—they are small and grow in bunches like grapes—squeeze them out and make purple ink out of them.

For the past week Vance Littleton on his annual vacation from the teller's window at the First National bank, has been trying to go fishing. He has another week to go. A rise in the Clear Fork has thwarted him so far. It is nothing unusual. Every year for the past seven years, Littleton declares, it has rained between May 15 and June 1. He has always made his trip, however, until this year.

Connie Davis was back on the streets for a short while this morning. I mark his reappearance with pleasure. It restores an atmosphere that has been missing since a slick spot on the highway near Mineral Wells a month ago put him temporarily hors de combat. Mrs. Davis and he were confined to beds at a Mineral Wells hospital and later to their home here for 25 days as a result of the injuries they sustained when their car overturned. They came home a week ago.

Rev. E. L. Miley has lost the end gate to his trailer. The "bumpty-dumpty" condition of the Breckridge cut-off is to blame. It bounced out of socket while he was driving into Cisco from Frederick, Okla., the other day and he knows where he lost it. A shattered red glass reflector that had been attached to the gate marked the spot about three miles north. The gate, however, had disappeared. A license plate was the most valuable item that went with it and Mr. Miley has the numbers.

The former pastor of the First Christian church here has been consoling a brother minister, the Rev. O. O. Odum, who has a "crick" in his back. Yesterday Odum was creeping about the parsonage with a fish-hook twist. Miley massaged the "crick" and restored the Methodist pastor to the perpendicular. He told Odum he had twisted his spine in a "fall from grace," that he should change his ministry to a denomination that doesn't fall from the blessed state.

Well, this morning Odum fell from grace again. He became too frisky with his small grandson and jerked the kink all over. Miley straightened him out once more with the warning that he (Miley) was now pastor of the First Christian church at Frederick, Okla., and couldn't afford to spend all of his time in Cisco unkninking Methodist preachers.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE Shawnee, Oklahoma.

U. S. Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, says: "The world chaos is the result of self-interest raised to arrogant selfishness—individual, corporate, national. This spirit has built great personal fortunes, has promoted nationalistic groups, has created extortionate corporate monopolies and imperialistic nations. It has built barriers between nations, destroyed confidence created distrust, and vitiated the altruism inculcated by the fine arts religion and education, and withal has rendered impotent international agreements to maintain the peace of the world. It has wrecked the credit system of the world, destroyed industries, and left unnumbered millions of people starving in a world of abundance. "Until industry, business and nations are motivated by a will to justice there is no permanent basis for peace and prosperity. This moral law is as inviolable as the law of gravity. There is some evidence that business and national leaders are beginning to recognize the inviolability of this moral law in business and among the nations. Herein lies our only hope."

Fire Prevention---

insured. Therefore, we find over-insurance being one of the major incentives motivating a person to set fire to his property. It is of the utmost importance therefore, that no property not be insured in excess of its reasonable value, and this can be adhered to by the local insurance agent making an inspection of the property to be insured before the policy is written.

The law defines a contract as an agreement between at least two persons, based upon a valid consideration, sufficient and legal, by which they are bound to do or not to do certain things.

Two Parties. Like all other contracts, there are two parties to an insurance policy contract, to-wit: The assured and the company, and under the contract both have a responsibility each to the other, and each of them owe an obligation to the public in seeing that the contract is faithfully executed. Therefore, it is highly important that each assured should better understand his fire insurance policy contract.

The assured has more responsibility than the mere payment of the premium. He should refuse to let an insurance company, or its agent, insure his property in excess of the reasonable value of the property involved, and certainly no one is in as good a position to know the real value of a piece of property as the owner. Some good citizens who have never had a dishonest thought, probably see no harm in insuring their property in excess of its real value, but in doing so they are paving the way for the unscrupulous and dishonest person to obtain more insurance on his property than it is worth in order that he may burn it for a profit, thereby causing your insurance rates to be increased and at the same time endanger the lives of people. The local agent may be properly termed as a part of the policy contract between the assured and the insurance company and he has a duty to perform to three interested parties: First, the assured; second the insurance company, and third, the public. His negligent acts or his indifference can injure all three. The agent should exercise extreme diligence in writing insurance and refuse to insure a man's property in excess of its reasonable market value. As a matter of fact we have a state law prohibiting such a practice.

Too Many. Cisco, like most other Texas cities and towns has experienced too many incendiary fires in the past three years or more. Regardless, however, of the diligent and sincere efforts on the part of the good people and the good insurance agents in Cisco, there are going to be a few incendiary fires. It therefore becomes necessary that every fire of suspicious origin be carefully investigated and if determined to be of incendiary origin, the arsonist should be treated as any other criminal and properly prosecuted.

It has been our experience that it is exceedingly difficult to secure an indictment for arson. District attorneys find it extremely difficult to get a conviction on the trial of an arson case. These difficulties spring from the indifference on the part of the public, and they spring also from the fact that arson is probably the most difficult of all crimes to apprehend and punish. Completion of the crime and its successful commission in most cases destroys the evidence. This being true, cases against the arsonist must, to a certain degree, be based on circumstantial evidence and citizens and juries alike are entirely too sentimental in their attitude toward a criminal prosecution which can be only circumstantially proved. Each individual should determine within himself that in view of the serious aspects of this crime of arson that

How CARDUI Helped Weak, Nervous Woman

"I was nervous and weak and my back hurt," writes Mrs. Emma Nichols, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. "I could hardly rest. I had a nervous, weak trembling in the lower part of my body, and a bearing-down feeling. I had read of Cardui and decided to take it. After my first bottle, I felt better and kept taking it. It helped me. I took three bottles, and by then I was much improved and rid of the nervousness, so much so that I have recommended Cardui to my daughters and friends. I think it is a splendid medicine to buy up to the whole family. Cardui is sold at drug stores here."

"I'd like seeing you settle down here, Sandra," he observed when they were once more alone.

"Well, all she does is talk about little Gene! You'd think he was the only kid in the world!"

"He doesn't in the least want to go," Sandra hastened to assure him.

"Well, well, it's none of my affair, I suppose! Ring the bell, will you, there's a good girl? I want my coffee now."

That was all. Sandra wisely said no more.

Sandra supposed she had been just a trifle injudicious with James.

INTERNATIONAL EVENTS CHEER WALL STREET

In its weekly review of business and financial The Wall Street Journal says:

Clouds on the international horizon, which threatened to disrupt the Geneva disarmament conference and to make it well-nigh impossible to reach any accord at the London economic parley, were scattered in the past week by President Roosevelt's dramatic message and by Chancellor Hitler's moderate speech to the Reichstag, accepting the MacDonald disarmament program. The financial community, which had been nervous over the international outlook, was cheered by these developments, and the forward march of security prices was continued.

The domestic background for the markets was almost entirely favorable. Business expansion is continuing, although the rate of gain is slackening in some lines as compared with the very sharp upswing which already has taken place. Power production figures for the week ended May 13 showed a larger gain over the similar 1932 week than had the previous week's figures and the loadings reports were extremely favorable, with eastern carrier's traffic sharply higher. Reports from a number of companies showed that units in various lines of industry were back in the black, after a long period of red ink figures.

There was considerable disappointment in Wall Street over Budget Director Douglas's suggestion for raising funds to meet service on the bonds to be issued in connection with the public works program, particularly the proposals to raise normal income tax rates and to put corporation dividends in the taxable income class.

There are several items ahead which should play an important part in the market's action over the coming weeks. The Senate Committee's investigation into stock market practices is scheduled to resume with representatives of leading New York private banking houses to be interrogated in "bloom era" transactions. J. P. Morgan, and partners in the Morgan firm, are due first. A few important dividend meetings are on the week's calendar, including the Chesapeake & Ohio, Chesapeake Corp., Commercial Solvents, Gillette and Niagara Hudson directors' sessions.

From the longer range viewpoint war debt payments are due on June 15 and the London Economic Conference is scheduled to start on the twelfth of next month. Moves and counter moves preliminary to both might have an unsettling effect on the securities markets. In addition the time for the seasonal slackening in general business is approaching. Instead of showing indications of a let-down, which might be expected at this time of year, steel demand in the mid-west showed renewed vigor. For the week ended May 15 operations averaged 34 1-2 per cent of capacity, against 32 1-2 per cent the week before. Additional furnaces were lighted as the week progressed and several producers expressed the opinion that the up-trend would continue, although some expected a somewhat slower advance in the next few weeks.

Of principal interest during the week was the marked strength in prices. Railroads are buying little and structural work remains curtailed, but miscellaneous buying has developed on a greater scale and has grown more important than the automotive buying.

The week's range of the Dow-Jones averages follows:

|----------------|---------|---------|---------|
| | High | Low | Last |
| 30 Industrials | $82.64 | $79.70 | $81.75 |
| 20 Railroads | 38.62 | 36.39 | 38.46 |
| 20 Utilities | 28.07 | 27.70 | 27.88 |
| 40 Bonds | 82.00 | 80.99 | 82.00 |

STATE STUDIES 1-HOUSE PLAN OF LAWMAKING

By SAM D. HALES
United Press Staff Correspondent
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 23

—Oklahoma may become a laboratory for the revolutionary proposal of a one-house legislature with Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska as sponsor.

Senator Norris told Fletcher Riley Oklahoma supreme court chief justice that he was interested in coming here to urge adoption of such a legislative plan in place of the body now existing.

Riley said Senator Norris described Oklahoma as the "ideal laboratory" for experimentation with a one-house legislature. Representative Leslie Connor, Oklahoma City, introduced a resolution at the recent session to provide an election for creation of a 41-member one-house lawmaking body. The resolution died.

Riley discussed the proposal recently in Washington with Senator Norris, former state senator W. C. Austin of Altus, Okla., and Representative Leon C. Phillips of Okemah, Okla.

The legislative change would have to be approved in a general election. The 14th legislature concluded its regular session early in May but could consider the change in special session.

MARRIAGES INCREASED

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 23 —The business of getting married is better in Utah this year than it was during 1932, according to records for the first four months of 1933, which show that 541 licenses were issued as compared with 440 for a similar period of last year.

WALLA WALLA, Wash., May 23 —Fifteen years ago Vincent Hurley took dispatches with great coolness through a machine-gun fire-ridden section of the Meuse-Argonne. The other night at a D. A. V. meeting he was presented with a silver star medal from the government in appreciation of his bravery.

NEW HIGHWAY MAP OF TEXAS IS PUBLISHED

A new map of Texas highways is just off the press. It gives up-to-date information on Texas roads, showing the different types of road surface so the motorist can select his route with a better knowledge of road conditions.

Three thousand miles of concrete highways are shown—the Travelax route. The new map is being distributed free, on request, to Texas motorists by the Portland Cement Association. Coming out as it does just ahead of the big summer motoring season, there is already an active demand for this new kind of road map.

The association is carrying on an extensive travel program built around the novel idea of "Travelaxation." This is a new word which has just been coined to describe "that freedom from driving strain, that feeling of comfort, security, safety and relaxation which comes to motorists when they drive on concrete highways" to quote a recent announcement.

Motorists who may be planning trips for the immediate or near future—and who isn't?—may secure this new highway map free by writing to Portland Cement Association at their office, 1306 Athletic club, Dallas. Along with the map will be furnished timely information on the economies of building, maintaining and driving over concrete highways—information of interest to every motorist.

Expedition to Seek Sunken Treasure

STOCKHOLM, May 23. — A legendary medieval treasure on the bottom of the Baltic Sea, consisting of a large quantity of gems, trinkets, jewels and coins will be sought, for by a Swedish-American engineer and professional treasure-seeker, Gunnar Hall, of New York.

About 600 years ago the city of Visby on the Swedish island of Gotland, was sacked by the powerful Danish king Kaldemar Atterdag, who placed huge vats in the market place and commanded the inhabitants of the city to fill them to the brims with their valuables.

Waldemar collected a large treasure, which he loaded on his galleons and set out for Denmark. His fleet was, however, caught in a heavy gale and sank off the southern coast of Gotland.

The merchants who advertise continuously in home newspapers are the ones who can fill every need of the most particular people.
