STERLING CONTEST SUIT DISMISSED

Cisco Baptist Association Opens Convention Here

PRESIDENT OF SIMMONS ONE OF SPEAKERS

Three hundred twenty-five persons attended the opening of the Cisco Association of Baptist churches in its annual convention at the First Baptist church today, according to the committee on registration. Of this number 175 were from churches outside of Cisco, the rest from the two local churches.

In the afternoon session Dr. J. D. Sandefer, president of Simmons university addressed the gathering on the university's behalf. Following him was Rev. J. J. Kellam of Dallas, speaking for Buckner Phillips' home. He was accompanied by Robert Cooke Buckner, grandson and namesake of the founder of the institution. T. R. Havins of Brownwood was the representative of Howard Payne college, and W. R. Derr of the Baptist hospital at Abilene.

Opens at 9:30
The convention was called together at 9:30 a. m. by the moderator, J. L. Roden of Albany. After the devotional and the address of welcome, the convention proceeded to the reading of the letters and the seating of the messengers from the several churches.

J. L. Roden was re-elected moderator of the association, and Rev. Ross A. Smith of Breckenridge to that of clerk. Other officers were referred to the executive committee. Rev. H. N. Baldere of Abilene delivered the annual sermon.

After the morning sermon the association adjourned to the basement of the church, where luncheon was served. The gathering by the women of the First and East Side Baptist churches of Cisco. Following are the chairman of the committees who helped to serve the meals: Mrs. Jewel Poe, general chairman; Mrs. H. D. Blair, enrollment; Mrs. G. B. Langston, kitchen; Mrs. Franklin Blackstock, dining room; and Mrs. B. B. Philpott, decoration.

Evening Program
This evening's program will consist of a devotional led by Roy Shahan of Moran, reports on public morals and on religious literature, and the sermon by Rev. O. B. Darby of Eastland. Tomorrow will be given over to missions and the concluding business of the convention, with Rev. G. W. Thomas of Ranger delivering the mission sermon at 11:25 a. m.

Following the church represented at the meeting, Eastland, Ranger Central, Ranger First, Oil Carbon, Rising Star, Mangum, Admona, Pueblo, Dothan, Parks, Long Branch, Nimrod, Sabanna Moran, Pioneer, Albany, Union, Breckenridge, Pleasant Hill, Gorman, Putnam, Tate Springs, Cross Plains, and Caddo. Besides these there were representatives of a number of a number of churches not in this association.

FLOOD WOES INCREASED BY NORTH WIND

BROWNSVILLE, Oct. 5. — A north wind whipping down off middle-western states and carrying temperatures in the southwest below normal, added today to the suffering of hundreds in the flooded Rio Grande valley.

The wind added to the worries of levee guards who patrolled 20 miles of buttresses in the neighborhood of McAllen and Mercedes. Waves pounding for the last 24 hours against the levees weakened the protecting walls but a survey at noon showed no serious breaks. Water was encircling the little town of Lyford in Willacy county, northeast of here, from three sides. It was feared the town would be inundated this afternoon.

FIRST GIRL STUDENTS GREENVILLE, S. C., Oct. 5. — When Furman university reopened for its 107th year of educating youths, girls were members of the student body for the first time in its history.

Singles Champ Gets License for Life "Doubles"

Henry Ellsworth Vines, Jr., the world's singles champion at tennis, had to get his mother's written permission when he entered the doubles. His partner is Julia Verle Lowe, with whom he is honeymooning. Vines, not yet 21, had to have his mother sign the marriage license application in Pasadena. Here you see, left to right, Mrs. Vines, her tennis-champ son and his bride, as they returned with the important paper. They were married Friday.

BAPTIST WMU HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING HERE

With 185 visitors and more than 100 Ciscoans present, the Women's Missionary union, auxiliary of the Cisco Baptist association, held its annual meeting at the First Baptist church in Cisco yesterday, the First and East Side Baptist churches acting as co-hostesses. The association is composed of the Baptist churches of Eastland, Shackelford, and Stephens counties.

Due to the illness of the president, Mrs. R. Q. Lee, Mrs. J. R. Burnett of Cisco presided. After the roll call of presidents, reports were heard from the standing committees and the meeting adjourned for lunch in the basement of the church. In the afternoon Mrs. C. M. Caldwell of Abilene gave the principal address of the day.

Following Mrs. Caldwell's address, a committee of which Mrs. G. B. Kink of Albany was chairman placed before the convention nominations for officers for the coming year. Mrs. G. W. Thomas of Ranger was elected president, Mrs. J. E. Ogg of Ranger corresponding secretary, and Mrs. J. W. Mancill of Cisco recording secretary.

Those Attending
Following is a list of those registering for the convention: Breckenridge: Mmes O. B. Albritton, H. C. Redwine, M. N. Pritchard, O. L. Alexander, Perry Pittman, A. C. Briden, Dee Hensen, W. B. Reid, Minnie Peeler, P. S. Harlow, A. M. Moon, D. P. Calver, W. M. Tucker, A. J. Morgan, D. W. Harrell, L. A. Thompson, H. F. Fortenberry, Paul West, M. C. Hughes, R. M. Payne, T. J. McClelland; Misses Mabel Moon, Lola Moon, Margaret Leroy, and Gladys Harrel; and Mr. and Mrs. Ross A. Smith.

Community Choral Club Organized

A community choral club was organized at the Laguna hotel last night in a meeting at 7:30 o'clock.

The club, whose aim is to "bring out the interest of music in Cisco forget hand games and sing your blues away," will meet each Friday evening at 7:15 at the hotel.

Besides the active members the club will seek 25 patrons, who are not singers but whose interest in music will help promote the organization and its purposes. Mrs. Charles Brown served as temporary chairman of the organizational meeting.

Elected president was Mrs. Philip Pettit; vice-president, Mrs. E. P. Crawford; secretary-treasurer, E. P. Crawford; reporter, Mrs. Yancy McCrea.

The two men had been battling for two days in behalf of a mutual friend, Col. Herman H. Lehman, the lieutenant governor they wished to make governor.

Gov. Roosevelt was seated on the platform just returned from a campaign tour in the west. Smith came to the platform to make the speech placing Lehman in nomination.

"The Happy Warrior" grinned, across the platform, extended his hand to the governor and shook it vigorously. "How are you, you old potato," a characteristic, affectionate greeting the 1928 candidate saves for old friends.

The crowd roared. The cheering, stamping and whistling continued for ten minutes. The two men stood still.

"All this is from the heart," Roosevelt offered. "Frank, that goes for me, too." The cameramen's flashlight boomed.

At a hearing yesterday afternoon in 91st district court at Eastland Judge Geo. L. Davenport set the amount of supersedeas bond for the state and district committees in appealing the Cisco football case at $5,000.

Committee counsel indicated it would make the bond within the required limit of 20 days from the time of the judgment in the suit, which was handed down September 19.

Judge Davenport fixed the bond after testimony was introduced at an hour and a half hearing to establish Cisco's probable gate receipt losses in the event the Lobos are not allowed to play during the appeal of the case.

District Clerk W. H. McDonald said today that the bond to be acceptable must be signed at least by two sureties who can furnish satisfactory evidence that they are worth $5,000 which is free of incumbrance. Or, he said, a surety company can make the bond.

FIRE'S IRONY
FORT WORTH, Oct. 5. — Lieut. E. M. Pruitt, who has fought fires in other people's homes for 22 years, was asleep in his fire station bunk when flames destroyed his own home. Three companies of firemen nearest the burning home, had checked the fire before Pruitt arrived.

HOOVER'S IOWA SPEECH DRAWS GARNER'S FIRE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Speaker John N. Garner, democratic vice-presidential candidate, today challenged President Hoover's Des Moines speech, asserting that the president had blocked measures which would have prevented farm mortgage foreclosures.

"In view of Mr. Hoover's former promises," Garner said, "Either his sincerity or his ability to make good his latest promises is seriously open to question."

Garner said the president had not informed him last spring of the treasury report that the nation was in danger of being driven off the gold standard within a fortnight.

"He is still using those long range glasses which reveal nothing except what occurs in foreign lands," Garner continued "It seems impossible for him to focus them upon his own country in an effort to ascertain the real cause and effect of the depression."

HOOVER ENCOURAGED BY RECEPTION.
EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON, D. C., WITH PRESIDENT HOOVER, Oct. 5. — President Hoover launched a fighting campaign for re-election today, encouraged by the tumultuous reception given in the corn belt capital of Des Moines to his fight against the crucial economic situation.

The president's address took up three broad subjects: The battle waged by the administration in defense of a gold standard; an attack on policies of the democratic party; and a plan for continued rehabilitation of the nation with special emphasis on agriculture.

The democratic party, he said, must be judged by a record of "reckless disregard for the safety of the nation. All hope of recovery will end if the democratic program of the bonus and "rubber dollars" prevails," the president charged.

War Debt Plan.
Under his program of aid for agriculture President Hoover would apply war debt payments toward expansion of foreign markets for agriculture. He would widen the protective tariff for farm products, provide easier farm credit and repeal the price stabilization feature of the farm marketing act.

For the first time President Hoover revealed that at one time the nation was nearly forced off the gold standard. He told then of the reconstruction program set up to halt demoralizing influences.

"We won this battle to protect our people at home. The world today has a chance. Let that man who complains that things could not be worse thank God for this victory and make reverent acknowledgment of the courage and stamina of a great democracy," the president declared.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 5. — Pilots of the Denver-Cheyenne-Casper division of the Wyoming air service flew a total of 65,150 miles the first six months of 1932, according to statistics.

The division carried 387 passengers and 228 pounds of express during the period. Passenger miles flown totaled 89,360.

On the Casper-Billings, Mont., division, 59,500 miles were flown, 313 passengers and 85 pounds of express during the period. The passenger miles flown were 73,300.

Bible Study at Methodist Church

Bible study will be held at the First Methodist church this evening at 7:30. The subject for study will be the first chapter of the Epistle to the Ephesians. The discussion will be led by the pastor, the Rev. O. O. Odom. He appealed to members of the church to attend this service.

COMMITTEE WILL SEEK FUND TO ESTABLISH LOCAL MARKET

Tuesday evening's dinner of the Merchants' Smoker at the Mobley hotel carried the program of the business men for better local markets a step further by passage of two motions establishing committees, whose functions it will be to study a plan for raising funds to organize a strong central market for farmers' produce here, and to locate outside places for disposition of the produce that is bought.

The two motions grew out of discussions that followed reports of committees. W. J. Leach told the 120 business men and women who had gathered at the banquet, that the only way Cisco can provide the market it wants is by putting up the money and establishing it.

He suggested that 10 men pool $500 each for a nucleus and that the building house vacated by the Webster Wholesale Grocery company be used as the center. This building is on trackage, which makes it ideal for the purpose. Leach offered to be one of the ten.

"We've talked enough," he said. "It's time to act."

The suggestion struck a popular note although one or two speakers evidenced skepticism.

Cites Menace.
Asa Skiles, speaking for a committee of grocers named by General Chairman J. A. Bearman on the market proposition, told the group that peddlers who truck foreign grown produce into Cisco and sell it on the streets without payment of rent, utilities, taxes or other local costs, are a serious menace to the business welfare of the city.

He pointed out instances where these trucks have become permanent business institutions on the streets. "I want it clearly understood," he said, "that I am not speaking against the farmer who grows his own produce and brings it into Cisco to sell. He should be allowed to sell it. I am speaking of these peddlers who do not grow their produce but buy it at distant places and bring it here to retail upon our streets."

Skiles reiterated this position later on, with the statement that "I seem to have been misunderstood," when Crigler Paschall asserted that farmers who bring their produce to Cisco can rarely sell it at the business houses. "What do they do?" demanded Paschall. "They do the same thing that you or I would do. They peddle it out piecemeal on the streets." Paschall and P. L. Ullom both asserted that the "root of the trouble" was that the merchants have been patronizing "itinerant trucks."

Could Buy It All.
Skiles replied that the grocers of Cisco could take all the produce brought into the city by farmers "won't let us do it. They sell to street peddlers cheaper than they will sell to us," he explained, "and we can't compete with them. We must make a profit."

He cited instances to illustrate this problem. Responding to a statement by Mr.

JUDGE HOLDS COURT HAS NO JURISDICTION

AUSTIN, Oct. 5. — District Judge W. F. Robertson this afternoon overruled a motion for rehearing filed in his court by attorneys for Gov. R. S. Sterling in his contest of the nomination of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson.

AUSTIN, Oct. 5. — Judge W. F. Robertson, of 126th district court, today ruled his court did not have jurisdiction in the Sterling-Ferguson election contest over the democratic nomination for governor.

Judge Robertson dismissed the contest petition filed by Gov. R. S. Sterling. The court held that only the legislature had the right to pass on qualification of anyone for governor.

Judge Robertson further ruled that the primary election on which the contest was based is a part of the whole election system and that the contest was filed prematurely before the election was completed. The election is not complete, he ruled, until the general election is held.

M. M. Crane, attorney for Gov. Sterling, gave notice he will ask a rehearing. Judge Robertson instructed him to present his plea this afternoon.

There was no demonstration in the court room as the judge announced the decision which makes Mrs. Ferguson next the governor of Texas, barring possible republican victory in the general election.

The order restraining Mrs. Jane Y. McCallum, secretary of state from certifying the name of Mrs. Ferguson to local election officers as democratic nominee, necessarily fell with the court's ruling.

Miss Armstrong in "Invitation Class"

Miss Jourdain Armstrong, graduate of Cisco high school and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Armstrong, of this city, is one of 19 students at T. C. U. selected for an "invitation class" in freshman English at the university.

During the summer 50 high school graduates with the best records in English who had made application for admission to T. C. U. were invited to enter a competitive examination for admission to this special class. Of this group the 19 were selected on the basis of their showings in the examination.

Will Discuss Radio As Aid in Relief

FORT WORTH, Oct. 5. — The radio as an instrument of aid during storms and floods will be discussed here October 7 and 8 at a convention of the West Gulf Division of the American Radio League.

Amateur radio operators, who facilitated rescue work and the distribution of supplies during the recent South Texas floods, will explain the organization of their work. The convention will attract operators from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma, delegates varying in ages from 12 to 50.

ELECTION LAW REFORM.

It is not any tribute to the present primary election law in Texas that the contest for the highest honor in the gift of the democratic party in the state is now embroiled in a legal maelstrom. It is a demonstration that the Terrell election law, enacted to rid a one-party state of one evil has not only failed to accomplish its purpose but has fathered more downright demagoguery and more misrepresentation than the old convention system did at its worst. In this instance the voters of Texas are looking upon the contest in district court at Austin with sentiments of disgust. If there was any feature evident in the voting during the last primary it was the fact that the democrats wanted neither of the two candidates. But, thanks to the present system, they were confronted with only two alternatives.

Such a condition serves to shake faith in democratic principles and to discount the cherished theories upon which we base our method of evolving governmental direction. It is evident that some revision of this machinery to more effectively put those theories into practice must be done.

Therefore the attitude of Maury Hughes and the majority of the state executive committee at Austin in demanding a reform of the present law is laudable. If the committee can succeed in bringing about such a reform it will have accomplished a great service to the party and to the state. Experience with two systems of nomination should light the way to a more certain solution of the evils which the present law was enacted to banish.

If the faults of the old convention system are held too serious to justify a return to that system a possible solution may be found in the selection of nominating electors in precinct and county primaries upon whom will devolve the duty of nominating the party's candidates for the various state and local offices, or some variation of that program may be adopted.

At any rate the conduct of the party's affairs should be returned to party hands.

In that event Texas will be rid of the spectacle of a dominant party endeavoring to bind its membership to support of a candidate whose nomination was secured more by party system than by party will.

UNCLE SAM AS A KINGFISH OF BUSINESS.

There is an organization known as the National Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Its leaders have made another attack upon governmental competition with private business. They have made an announcement that the organization would continue its fight until an objective is accomplished.

This is a pointed thrust, "Public property used by the government in business is free from any burdens of federal taxation and is relieved from taxation by the state and county and town in which it is situated. Allowances for depreciation are usually disregarded. It is obvious therefore that in any field of business in which the government chooses to enter, private business will be proportionately eliminated—not by reason of the relative merits of the two forms but because of the unfair advantages received by the former."

This is really one of the arguments advanced by the railway presidents of the country and their advisers. A state builds its highways. A state builds its highways. Citizens of the state, with the assistance of federal aid advanced, pay for the highways. In its last analysis, all federal aid money comes out of the pockets of all the people. Well, the highways are used by the passenger buses and the freighters. They are said to be taking from the rails fat freight traffic and a fair share of the passenger traffic. This is true but the freighters are not taxed as the railroads are taxed on all their possessions.

Rails are compelled to maintain their own right of way, their own physical property. They pay taxes to the nation, the state, the county, the city and village. They dominated for years and years. Time came when they had to be controlled by the federal as well as the state government. They rank among the mightiest builders of history, and the public cannot get along without them and their transportation services. Franklin D. Roosevelt in a California speech told it all in speaking of American railways and how they should be managed in this new civilization.

JAPAN AS A BUYER OF RUSSIAN PETROLEUM.

Moscow has confirmed a report that a large slice of the refined oil trade in Japan has been taken over by Soviet Russia. A reminder that heretofore this trade has been shared by the American Standard and the British Shell interests.

Moscow newspapers hailed the deal as the first big sale of Soviet Russia refined oil on the Japanese market. It is said the contract covers the five year period beginning in 1933 but the price involved in the transaction was not given by the Russian press. Speaking of the deal and the contract, a noted Japanese declared his country imports three hundred thousand tons of refined oil annually. As has been stated, most of this has been sold by the Standard and Shell interests.

Those mostly concerned say that it will have an important economic effect on the development of Russo-Japanese relations. Furthermore, speaking of the oil trade, Soviet Russia recently concluded an agreement with France for the sale of 10,000,000 tons of oil products during the next five years in France. It is said by the European press that these recent oil deals were supplemented by one in Canada all within the single month of September. To be exact, the Aluminum company of Canada (an American concern) agreed to trade $1,000,000 worth of aluminum for an unstated amount of Soviet oil. Japs are known as the Yankees of the Orient. Russians, trained by American engineers and high class business teachers, are not overlooking the trade of the world. Really, the day is coming when the Japs and the Russians will completely dominate the Orient as well as the all-Russian territory of the Occident. Then what will happen to the so-called Open Door planned by the late John Hay, in his day a famous American statesman and diplomat.

"What This Country Needs--"

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Upon in New York state Roosevelt and Smith have kissed and made up, politically speaking. That seems to mean a lot for the national ticket. As long as Al sulked like Achilles in his tent some democratic nerves were fluttering. Now that's ended and the old bandwagon is rumbling along with a lot of harmony aboard.

Not so in the oil belt district. The district executive committee, feeling the weight of the interscholastic league future on its back, has reached a compromise with the court whereby it can put up a $5,000 supersedeas bond to keep the Lobos from playing while it saves the district. It seems that it is a very important part of the saving process to keep the Lobos from playing.

The bond is to be circulated first in Breckenridge, then in other towns of the district for signatures.

Meanwhile the district committee, meeting at Eastland to prosecute its fight to keep football clean, declared that Mr. Wyatt, the Abilene transfer from Sweetwater who helped the Eagles win the championship last year, is ineligible in spite of the fact that he played in 1928 on a team known as the "Roosters" of Sweetwater. Sheridan, star of the Sweetwater 1932 eleven which last week humbled the Eagles at Abilene, was declared ineligible by the Sweetwater district committee for having played on the same team.

One cannot help thinking of the Connel and Ray cases of 1930 in connection with this verdict. The clarity of the committee's code of ethics is an amusing feature. It covers a lot of situations.

Judge Davenport set the bond yesterday afternoon after an hour and a half hearing during which testimony was introduced to establish the possible extent of Cisco gate receipt losses in the event the Lobos are prohibited from playing. He fixed the amount on the basis of the testimony introduced. That he fixed it at $5,000 should be evidence enough to the district committee that the court has endeavored to play fair with the committee as well as Cisco all the way through.

No bond has been filed with District Clerk W. H. McDonald, in spite of reports to the contrary. To be acceptable, District Clerk McDonald said, the bond must bear the names of at least two persons each of whom can prove to him that they have $5,000 subject to execution—that is that they have $5,000 over and above exemptions which can be taken to indemnify Cisco for gate receipts losses. A school board cannot make the bond. Members of a school board, however, can make the bond individually if they meet the statutory requirements. An athletic association cannot make the bond except as individuals.

Another alternative is for a surety company to make the bond. One company is acceptable under the law.

The time for making the bond expires 20 days from the date the judgment of the court was issued. The judgment was handed down on September 19. Under that limit next Monday will be the final day for filing the bond.

Referring to the establishment of a firm local market for produce, W. J. Leach struck the keynote at the meeting of the Merchants Smoker last night.

If Cisco merchants want to establish a market they have to put up the money and make a market. Leach pointed out. He suggested that 10 or more Cisco business men create a fund of $5,000 as a nucleus. "We have to do less talking and more acting, if we make a market," he said, "and I for one am willing to join nine others to create such a fund. What if we do lose money. We will have established a market and the business it brings to Cisco will more than make up the loss."

That was getting down to the core spot. We have named enough committees to create a market as big as New York. But the faith in Cisco, the vision to inspire action, the willingness to make a sacrifice to realize our hopes, is lacking. We can talk until we are blue in the face but unless Cisco realizes that Cisco alone can supply an answer to its problems, and that Cisco people alone can establish the hoped for markets, we are using just so much warm atmosphere.

It will be a great deal better for Cisco business men to lose $5,000 than it will be for them to lose faith in themselves.

I hope Leach's suggestion will start a revival.

Did You Ever Stop to Think?

By EDSON R. WAITE
Shawnee, Oklahoma.

It is said that man comes into this world without his wishes and leaves it against his will.

Government policies cannot be changed like a coat. It takes time and study.

There is no doubt but that the sentiment expressed by a number of front pages will make enormous appeal to those few people who prefer dabbling in theory about disabled war veterans instead of the cold fact that this country has always and will always honor and protect its disabled war veterans and that the people will not take from them benefits already granted them.

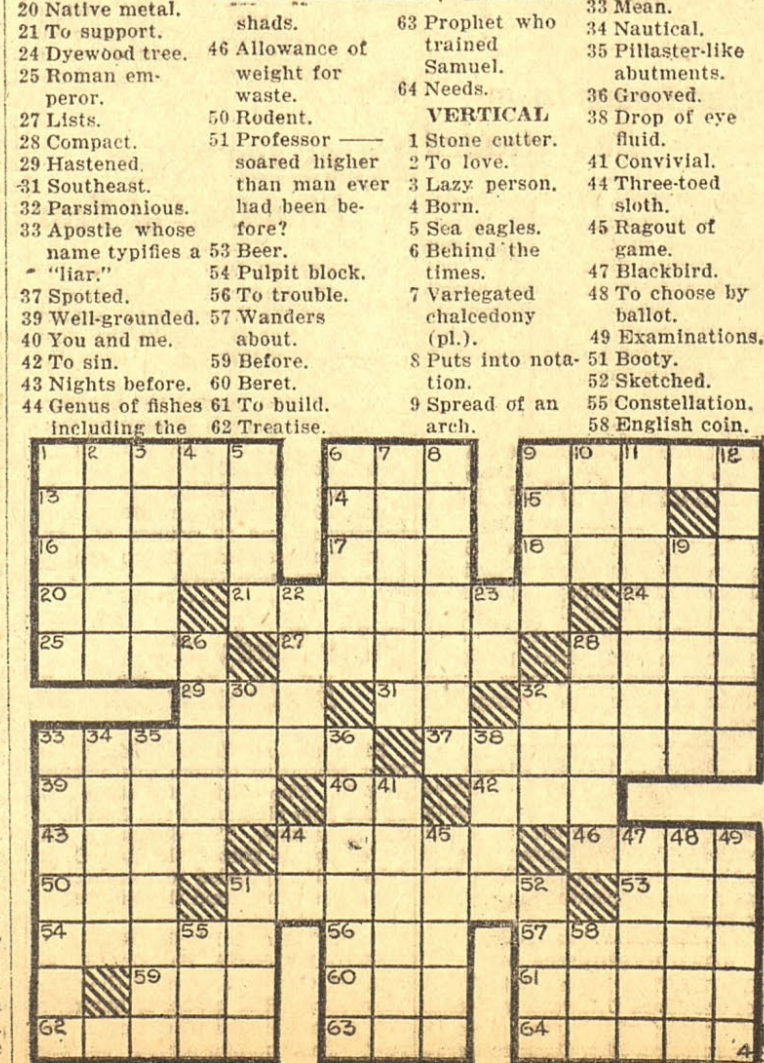

Political freedom from those things that let loose political wolves on the sheep is most objectionable to the sheep—and most of us are the sheep.

If a small portion of the time that has been spent by many of our leaders in trying to economize our country into prosperity had been used in developing markets for our products and getting money into general cir-ulation, better times would have returned long ago.

Nowadays the business men of the cities are going to the business men of the farm—not to teach them how to farm, but to take council with them concerning their common problems.

A policy of minding one's own business is not to be disregarded in times like the present and, if given a trial, is likely to be for more effective than that of incitement to enmity. An ounce of realism is worth a pound of theory, yet the former seems singularly conspicuous by its absence in all the speeches we have heard lately.

Courtesy among motorists should be observed. Lack of courtesy often leads to recklessness, which in turn leads to accidents.

GENTRY BROS. SHOW COMING TO EASTLAND

Gentry Brothers Famous Shows, the pioneer trained animal exhibition founded by Henry B. Gentry in 1888, will exhibit at Eastland, Tuesday, October 11. Mr. Gentry in person is owner and manager of the show. He returns to the road after an absence of a decade and a half.

The younger parents of today will remember the Gentry Brothers dog and pony shows. Fifteen years ago their founder retired to regain his health. For that reason the children of today have heard of his shows only as bedtime stories.

Gentry Brothers Shows always catered to refined audiences, especially ladies and children. To the little ones of yesterday their coming was likened to that of Santa Claus. Their name was a household word.

Gentry Brothers present a performance different from all others. They are pioneer shows that created a niche all their own in the show world.

Really they are an old established educational institution. In the routine of acting animals are the ponies, dogs, monkeys, pigs and goats. Each plays an important part in the performance.

Distinctive acts are the military series; collies in a chariot act with monkey driver; dogs that walk a high wire and another that swings on a rope while standing on its hind feet.

Two performances each day are given at 3:45 and 8 p. m., in Eastland on Tuesday, October 11.

Gentry Brothers this year are carrying as an added feature attraction that famous kid of Our Gang Comedies, "Freckles 'Hoo' Ray, who appears at each performance to greet his fans and entertain them.

Vet Showman Comes Back

Harry B. Gentry, veteran showman who after a retirement of 16 years comes back to Eastland on Tuesday, October 11, with his Gentry Brothers Famous Shows which he created in 1888.

Calico Odyssey Stirs Soviet Nation

MOSCOW, Oct. 5. — The odyssey of a roll of calico, carefully chronicled by first-rate Muscovite journalists, is being read by the whole nation.

As a practical test of transportation methods here, the newspaper Izvestia shipped a roll of calico from Moscow southward 486 miles to the town of Rossosh. Unknown to railroad employes along the route, the famous package was treated like any plebeian freight.

It traveled 29 days and now that it finally has reached its destination, the tale of its adventures is being told in detail. Railroad officials along the route read and squirmed. Had they known that the package would be nationally famous they might have smothered the way.

Ten days the calico was in motion. Izvestia reveals. The other 19 days it was in station warehouses, while documents were being filled out and while workers loafed on the job. A journey, which should have been accomplished in three or four days by slow freight, thus took nearly a month.

The package was loaded and unloaded four times. It stopped for a few days at a wayside station right outside of Moscow along with some 50,000 other packages. It stopped at other stations unnecessarily, while newspaper sleuths watched and recorded.

The odyssey of this calico, as Izvestia editorially makes clear, discloses one reason why the peasants refuse to work or to sell their products. The manufactured goods which they await from the industrial centers do not come or come too slowly.

PEIPING, China, Oct. 5. — Marshal Wu Pei-fu, once the dominant warlord in China, who has been waiting here for an opportunity to launch a "come-back" campaign, has aroused political circles by distributing copies of a letter he has written to Emperor Hirohito of Japan.

Marshal Wu, who failed to regain his former power after the resignation of Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, urged a conference of the elder statesmen of both China and Japan in an attempt to reach a basis for solving the crisis in the Far East in his letter.

He urged the immediate cessation of all hostilities. He placed the blame for China's current troubles on the shoulders of the military element. Declaring that China and Japan are "brother countries", Marshal Wu expressed belief that Sino-Japanese problems can be settled by negotiation.

Chief interest in the letter is attached to the complete reversal of Marshal Wu's former attitude. He sent a copy of his letter to the League of Nations' Commission of Inquiry, which he has condemned for failing to settle the controversy. It is only a few weeks since Marshal Wu demanded a Chinese punitive expedition charged with responsibility for recovering Manchuria by force of arms. He always has prided himself on the fact that he never has been a supporter of Japanese-influenced groups in China.

In the Political Arena

By HUGH NUGENT FITZGERALD

"Reduction in cotton acreage is made easier as a result of the agricultural credit association being set up in the South," according to the publicity department of the American Cotton Cooperative association. There is a reason for it, according to the cooperative literature. They will make it more profitable to grow and feed livestock. Moreover, it is said there was an extra large grain crop in Texas this year but no market worth mentioning. At the same time, on West Texas cattle ranges there was a surplus of calves and land. West Texas had the young livestock that needed feed and the rest of the state had the feed. A cooperative solution presented itself. The answer was simple — "bring them together." That is not as easily done as said.

First we are told the farmer with feed did not have the money to buy feeder cattle, the banks were unable to lend it and the credit association with money for the farmer who has the feed and wants to buy the livestock. This from the Texas Weekly: "Although the question of collateral has not been decided upon, agricultural leaders in Texas are of the opinion that the possession of sufficient food to take care of the livestock and the proper facilities for taking care of and finishing it, are all that will be required to make a farmer eligible for a loan—the act was primarily designed to aid the farmer without enough collateral to secure loans through the regular channels."

Now this is the cooperative viewpoint: Government seed loans enable the farmer to grow feed crops. The Agricultural Credit association will enable him to market that feed the only way that it can be marketed profitably, through livestock. Also this should all work for less cotton acreage, more cotton to the acre, and lower production costs for cotton and better prices. This is the cooperative prophecy as to the future: "It is proof that the government can help the farmers and will do so when the farmers know what they want and go after it." Labor uprisings and labor strikes and boycotts are as old as history but for the first time under American skies the American farmer in the agricultural states of the West and the Northwest are organizing strikes to keep farm products or staples off the market until price levels are raised to a level above the production cost. All these constitute very significant signs of the time in this presidential election year.

Jarring Jim Bausch Turns Down Offer

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 5.—Jim Bausch, former star football player and track athlete at the University of Kansas, and winner of the decathlon at the Olympic games, now is a life insurance salesman.

Although offered large sums to turn professional wrestler, Bausch decided not to enter the game. He probably will remain out of athletics, unless he decides to compete in track and play basketball for the Kansas City Athletic club.

Gale Delays Sorting Of Cape Cod Letters

HARWICHPORT, Mass., Oct. 5.—Just as it is a tradition of the theater that "the show must go on," so it is a tradition of Uncle Sam's air mail service that "the mail must go through."

But the latter tradition was recognized in this Cape Cod village. A recent gale disrupted electric light service. There being no lights, the mail couldn't be sorted at Harwichport post office. So patrons had to wait until the next day for their letters.

Find 25 Bogus Coins In St. Louis Park

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5. — Pork keepers and persons who went for an early morning stroll in Forest Park here found 25 half dollars scattered over the golf links and other parts of the park.

Close inspection of the coins, dated from 1900 to 1918, proved them to be bogus. Most of them were turned over to police who expressed the opinion counterfeiters had thrown them away.

R. N. Cluck and three young women—Misses Laura Rupe, Bessie Pearce and Lucille Clements—who entertained the gathering with musical numbers.

Mrs. Cluck and Miss Rupe sang with ukelele accompaniment and Miss Clements presented two vocal solos with Miss Pearce at the piano.

Mr. Skiles reported upon the work of his committee requesting general discussion of the pedler issue. Mr. Drumwright reported for the dry-goods committee likewise named to investigate local market possibilities.

E. O. Elliott, chairman of a committee to consider leasing the Palace theater for certain hours on Saturday to give free shows to farmers, reported that K. N. Greer, theater manager, had offered to give a rate of 10 cents per admission for the period that the merchants considered entertaining the farmers. This period, it was explained, is between 10 a. m. and 3 p. m. on Saturdays.

No further action was taken on this matter.

After this program the gavel was returned to Mr. Bearman who presided over the general discussion which resulted in the two motions.

The dinner was held at the Mobley hotel and thanks for the splendid meal—a turkey dinner—was expressed by Mr. Bearman. Prior to the meal and between the talks G. W. Collum and his high school orchestra played.

The program was prepared by a committee headed by A. D. Anderson and the arrangements for the meeting and the sale of tickets was in the hands of another group headed by H. L. Dyer.

These tiny tender leaves of "spicy" Turkish tobaccos —and just enough of them!

Turkish tobacco sometimes runs hundreds of little leaves to the pound. In cigarettes it is used much as seasoning is in food, for flavor and better taste.

You know that seasoning has to be used right... just enough of it, not too much.

Chesterfield puts in just the right amount of Turkish tobacco—the best kinds—Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun. These are not merely blended, but cross-blended with ripe, mellow Domestic tobaccos.

Enough Turkish, not too much—that's one reason why Chesterfields taste better—why they have a delicacy of aroma you do not find in other cigarettes.

CALL of the WEST

BEGIN HERE TODAY
STAN BALL accuses ASPER DELO, timber king, of crooked practice and of having men shot who try to check up on his activities. Ball says he is making a check for cattle interests. Delo says he will prevent it in person. Upon leaving Delo's office Ball saves DONA, Asper's daughter, from kidnapers. Learning her name he tells her he is STANLEY BLACK and slips away.

DUDLEY WINTER'S loves Dona. He agrees to make Asper give up the wild idea of going to Three Rivers and running Ball off the company property. Dona goes with him. They find a manhunt in progress with Ball as the objective. Asper is badly wounded from ambush but cannot be kept in bed. Dudley produces a marriage certificate that they had been prevented from using by Dona's being unsure of herself. They tell Asper they are married. Ball overhears this announcement, while in for food. He is caught by SWERGIN, Asper's timber boss, who has been a leading figure in the hunt. Ball is taken to a cabin while Swergin goes out to gather a mob for a lynching. He surprises his captor and escapes.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII
THE moon had flooded the very last patch of timber on the upper reaches of Folly Mountain. Dudley stood on the bottom step and looked up at Dona. His handsome mouth had widened in a smile of indulgence. Dona could not see his eyes because of the shadows but she was sure they held a flickering banter at her hesitancy. After all, Dona had publicly announced that she was his wife. And she was a modern girl—the slender, active beauty who could ride, play tennis and swim, yet who could grace a luxurious easy chair with tantalizing languor.

"Hates to give up her freedom," Dudley thought to himself.

"I won't give up!" Dona told herself, but she arose and allowed Dudley to slip an arm around her.

"We must stop in and see Dad," she said aloud.

Dudley gave her a little squeeze but Dona pulled away from him.

They found Asper awake and apparently waiting for them. "I should think you love birds would be freezing!" he greeted them.

"We've been watching the moon uncover Folly Mountain," Dona said in a low voice and her words sounded strangely tight.

"Just a bit of night air," Dudley grinned.

"Well, run along now. It's getting late. Time for an old fellow like me to get some sleep." Asper's eyes held a hint of moisture.

Dona bent and kissed him. "You're not an old fellow, Dad! And, as your nurse, it's my duty to take care of you. Is there anything you want?"

"Not a thing. You're not to bother about me. I'm going to sleep like a spruce log tonight. Won't wake up a single time." Asper closed his eyes and settled back against the pillows.

"Well, then—good night." Dona took her father's hand and gave it a final squeeze.

Dudley caught her arm and led her from the room. Outside the girl halted. Noiselessly she closed the door behind her.

"I'll move my things to your room," Dudley spoke with a tone of mastery he had never dared use before.

"You can't do that!"

"Why not?" Dudley demanded.

"We're married, aren't we?"

"You know we're not married," Dona flushed. "We will have to go down to Seth Doby's and find Sam Dean before we can be married."

"I never thought you'd stick for all that bunk!" Dudley was beginning to be impatient.

"Well, you know it now!" She could not keep an edge from her voice.

"All right. We'll drive down there tonight."

"You know I won't leave Dad." The girl felt she was gaining ground.

"You won't be able to put this over," Dudley warned her.

DONA took a step toward him. "Dud, please be good to me! I know I'm a little fool but I want everything to be right. You will, won't you?"

He frowned sulkily. "I'm the fool, I guess," he growled and turned on his heel.

Dona watched him go to his room. He shut the door with a snap and again slipped out into the moonlight. In the shelter of the cherry brush at the end of the building she sank down and gave herself up to her emotions. A shadowy form on the hillside caused her to make an effort at control. A man was coming toward her. She could see that he was tall and slender. With a little gasp Dona fled around the corner.

She did not want to return to her room so she wandered down to the corral. There she found Malloy silently smoking a cigaret and gazing out into the night. He nodded to her but did not speak. Dona climbed up beside him and sat with her chin in her hands. She wanted to ask the silent cowboy a question. It was on the tip of her tongue when a man came running down the hill.

"Malloy did not make a move to get down from his perch though the approaching man was evidently very excited. A flare of moonlight splashing through the uncut spruce revealed their hurried visitor. Swergin, hatless and angry, was approaching.

"Get out the men. Saddle up all the horses!" he shouted.

Malloy did not move but he did give a shrill whistle that brought two men from the shadow of a wall. "Hear what the boss says?" he drawled.

THE men scattered to rouse the rest of the camp. Swergin halted before the two on the fence. "Get down from there and get busy on them horses!" Swergin bellowed. He did not seem to see Dona.

Malloy slid from his perch into the corral. Wild excitement broke loose. Men ran about saddling up while Swergin shouted orders. Ball had visited the camp and was close in. Every man was to use his rifle. The bandit was to be run down. Dona sat watching the picture. She wished the hunters luck but she did not move to join them. Why she could not have told.

The corrals were a swirl of dust. Riders galloped out through the open gate and thundered up the slope. Swergin was the last to go. Dona had not climbed down from the fence. Now she looked about and saw, with a start, that Malloy was again seated beside her, smoking calmly.

"Why didn't you go?" she demanded.

"There's enough men up in that scrub timber to capture an army—let alone one man," Malloy answered, blowing a ring of smoke out from under his wide hat.

"If you don't want to be loyal and help run this murderer why don't you quit?" Dona spoke sharply.

"I reckon as how I will quit one of these days. Yes, soon as I get square with this outfit I'll haul my freight," Malloy drawled.

"If my father owes you anything you can get it at once," Dona flared.

"I aim to collect when I get ready," Malloy's grin was wide and he tossed the butt of his cigaret far from him. It lay there glowing in the dew-drenched grass.

"Will you saddle my roan for me?" Dona demanded. Her question was punctuated by rifle shots from the slope above.

MALLOY gazed in the direction of the firing for a full minute, then he turned to face Dona. "No, I won't saddle up for you." His mouth was tight and his eyes glowed evenly.

"Then I'll saddle him myself." Dona slid from the top pole.

"And I won't let you do that," Malloy spoke grimly.

"Why?" the girl snapped out the one word.

"There ain't no place up on that mountain for a girl tonight," Malloy replied simply.

"But I'm going to see that Ball is captured," Dona spoke firmly.

"He'll likely be killed," Malloy's voice had sunk to a hard drawl.

"Swergin will bring him in; he's a deputy sheriff." Something in the lank cowboy's words put Dona on the defensive.

"Swergin always packs a rope," Malloy drawled.

"You seem to think it funny to talk half-sense. Saddle my horse! I'm going with those men." Dona stamped her little foot.

"Sorry, Ma'am, but I won't let you ride out tonight." Malloy placed his lank form in front of her as he spoke.

Dona tried to pass him but he pushed her back. "If I have to do it I can pack you up the hill!" he warned.

Realizing that he meant just what he said, Dona gave in. But she did not return to her room. Malloy seemed disturbed by this and sat watching her grimly. From up the slope came the thunder of hoofs. A group of the riders were returning. They were crowded close together and traveling at a trot. Malloy slid from the fence.

"You run on to bed," he ordered gruffly. His voice was anxious in spite of its drawl.

Dona realized that he was trying to get her away before the men arrived. She was determined to stay to see what had happened. "You can't tell me what to do," she flared and stepped back from the open gate.

Malloy shrugged his shoulders and stood waiting. The men trotted up and as they came it was plain that the form of a man was lying limply across the saddle of the foremost rider.
